I Am the New Year

I AM THE NEW YEAR.

I am the one unspoiled bit of beauty in God's Universe.

I am Romance, and Glitter, and High Resolutions, and—Dreams.

My only Handicap is the dead weight of old Habits and hard-set Ways of Doing Things that I must carry over from the Past into my new ministry to your heart.

My one Fear is that some day you also will settle down to the conviction that the New is always an illusion.

My single Hope lies in your chance Faith—

Faith that what has been proved Impossible by long experience can at last be attained;

Faith that failure is but an Incident and not the End of the Journey;

Faith that some day, Mankind will be free from the Shackles of his own forging, Childhood will have its chance, and Love will achieve its God-like Destiny.

Faith that He who said, "Behold, I make all things new," had somehow grasped the Secret for making His own Dream come true.

Faith that those who share with Him the Adventure of His Self-Commitment shall find the Secret of Overflowing Life.

I am God's plan for Girding the Loins of His intrepid Co-workers in the long, but joyous march to the Goal of His Beneficent Purpose.

I AM THE NEW YEAR.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

NEWS FROM FLORIDA.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill spent Christmas with her family at her home in Henderson, North Carolina.

Miss Marguerite Davison, Extension worker in Alabama, Tennessee, and Kentucky, spent her Christmas vacation at her home in Boston. Before returning she expects to speak in a number of churches in Massachusetts in the interest of the Home Boards.

Rev. and Mrs. William A. Keith, of the Collegeside Church in Nashville, received a real Christmas present—a little daughter. Barbara Margaret arrived to bring Christmas happiness to the family. The home of Rev. Leslie J. Barnette in Coral Gables, Florida, was made happy by the arrival of a little son.

Officers of the Southeast Youth Fellowship met at First Christian Church in Norfolk, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week. Only a few were present, but for three days they gave serious consideration to the responsibilities young people have for building a new world, fashioned on the teachings of Jesus.

EASTERN VIRGINIA NEWS.

Rev. B. H. Watkins, Lynchburg, Virginia, has been called to the Wakefield, Virginia, charge.

Rosemont, Richmond, and Suffolk churches went "over the top" in their offerings for Ministerial Relief.

Rev. J. E. McCauley of the First Church, Richmond, Virginia, has been elected president of the Ministerial Union of that city.

Dr. J. G. Truitt reports one new member received into the Suffolk Church the third Sunday, 339 white gifts presented at the "White Gift" service, and 339 contributions to the Ministerial Relief Fund.

Rev. G. A. Pearce changes his address from Wakefield, Virginia, to 1118 Rodgers Street, South Norfolk, Virginia. Mr. Pearce is engaged in business but will be glad to render pastors any assistance he can on Sundays.

The First Church of Richmond presented, by its young people, on the third Sunday a pageant "White Gifts for the King." The church also graciously and abundantly bestowed "white gifts" on the pastor and his family.

Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, pastor of the First Church, Newport News, Virginia, reports the 5 o'clock vesper services quite successful. The church gave a beautiful Christmas pageant the third Sunday, and received into fellowship five members.

Christian Temple presented its White Gift Service the second Sunday, an imposing program of Christmas music the third Sunday morning, and a pageant, "Quest of the Holy Grail" at 5:00 P. M. By way of variety the church presented its pastor, Rev. H. S. Hardecastle, with a new car.

NEW YEAR SONG.

They say that the Year is old and gray,
That his eyes are dim with sorrow;
But what care we, though he passes away?
For the New Year comes tomorrow.

No sighs have we for the roses fled,
No tears for the vanished summer;
Fresh flowers will spring where the old are dead,
To welcome the glad newcomer.

He brings us a gift from the beautiful land
We see, in our rosy dreaming,
Where the wonderful castles of fancy stand
In magical sunshine gleaming.

Then sing young hearts that are full of cheer,
With never a thought of sorrow;
The old goes out, but the glad young year
Comes merrily in tomorrow.

Mrs. E. H. MILLER.

The Holland Church presented on Sunday before Christmas at 5:00 P. M., the cantata "The Lost Star" by Lehman and Dale. The pastor, Rev. Carl R. Key, preached during December, a series of advent sermons: "A Name and a Promise," "Good Tidings," "The Star of Hope," and the "Spirit of Christmas."

The Minister's Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference held its monthly session Monday, December 21st, at Suffolk Christian Church. Dr. John G. Truitt presided and conducted the devotionals. Rev. Carl R. Key read a paper on "The Minister and the New Year." Rev. O. D. Poythress gave the "Bible Study" from Thess. 3. One new member, Rev. J. H. Dollar, was received into the Association. Ten dollars was appropriated to the Ministerial Relief Fund and a like amount to a superannuated member.

First Church, Norfolk, received ten members at Christmas time, presented a pageant, rendered a cantata, had a children's program, held an informal service Christmas Day at four P. M., made an offering for Superannuation, filled "Kiddie Bags" for the city mission, gave some baskets to local people, sent a box to our mountain mission, and sent gifts to each child in our Orphanage. Recently, silver offering plates have been purchased, a garage built, and church windows repaired. The Thanksgiving offering for the Orphanage met the quota required. All current bills are paid, and the church is ready to meet the challenge of the New Year.

FROM HENDERSON.

The Yuletide Season was a time of interest and enthusiasm for the members of Henderson, N. C., Congregational-Christian Church. Several weeks before Christmas, Mr. F. M. Howard, the counselor for the Junior Christian Endeavor society, began practice with his group on a program of Christmas recitations and hymns. This program was presented Sunday evening, December 20th, at 7:30 o'clock. In connection with this program, a "White Gift" Service was held at which time each one who brought a gift presented it before an improvised manger. This entire program was one of interest and was, indeed, inspirational.

On Monday evening following the presentation of this program, the Christian Endeavor group visited the County Home and carried a part of the fruits, nuts, etc., which had been received. On Wednesday evening, this same group, with others, went caroling and visited four homes, leaving Christmas baskets.

In addition to the above activity, the church held a series of Pre-Christmas services conducted by the pastor. These services began Sunday evening, December 13th, and closed Wednesday of the same week. At each service an offering was received for Superannuation. The final opportunity to contribute to the Superannuation Fund was given Sunday, December 20th, at which time the contribution reached $13.00. This amount was sent to Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, and it is to be noted, that the Superannuation Fund is an item of interest to the Henderson Church and that the amount sent in is more than was apportioned to the church.

J. EVERETTE NEESE,
Pastor.

CHRISTMAS AT ROSEMONT.

Christmas was happily celebrated this year at the Rosemont Christian Church, Norfolk, Virginia. On the Sunday morning before, the pastor preached on "Peace and Good Will," and at the evening service the minister brought a message on "Our Gifts to Him," at the close of which we had our annual "White Gift" service. It was great to see the people come down the aisle and lay their gifts on the altar just in front of the manger scene. There were gifts for the needy in the community, for missions, ministerial relief, for the church joy fund. The gifts from the church during the Thanksgiving-Christmas season missions and benevolence amounted to about $300.00.

The choir made a record for itself. Our music, both vocal and instrumental, was the best our church has ever had, and was very much enjoyed, and greatly appreciated.

On Wednesday night before Christmas, the pastor and his wife conducted their "Christmas Good Wish Service." This was a gracious hour of fellowship among the members of the church and Sunday school, and neighbors. Everyone seemed to enjoy this service greatly, perhaps because it was such a departure from our usual custom.

On Christmas morning at 7:30 o'clock, the young people of the church, and a number of the older ones, enjoyed a most helpful service of praise and thanksgiving, and then went to their homes to observe one of the happiest Christmas day of their lives.

The pastor was remembered with a lovely gift, as were a number of other members of the church. The children were given gifts by the school and the department superintendents, the general superintendent, the organist and choir director, and perhaps others, were given gifts as a token of the church's appreciation of their service.

Mrs. B. F. Gibson, teacher of the Ladies' Bible Class, who prefers that her class not give her a Christmas, present was presented with $34.00 for missions, which she sends on to the support of the cause she loves so much.

The Christian Endeavor society conducted a lovely service Sunday before Christmas at 6:45 P. M. This service was led by Miss Kathryn Murden. The closing scene was the bringing of gifts for the needy in the community, and laying them in the platform at the front, and singing, "I Gave My Life For Thee."

On Sunday morning, January 3, 1937, twenty-two members of the Sunday school were given expressions of appreciation by the school for having been present every Sunday during 1936. One of these who made this wonderful record was Mrs. B. F. Gibson, familiarly known to her friends as "Grandma," who recently celebrated her 83rd birthday. Another was Stanley Mills who has not missed Sunday school in seven years. Another was Albert Morrison who has not missed in four years, and three others, Mrs. John Swink and her two sons, who have not missed in about four years and a half.

The church hopes to continue its previous record, yea, it hopes to improve it, during the year 1937.

J. F. MORGAN,
Pastor.

THE BENEDICTION.

The benediction is a blessing pronounced upon a person or a group of persons. The blessing may be given at any time, but usually when expressed in the form of a benediction it is used as a closing act of public worship. The writers of the Scriptures set the example for us.

As we come to the close of the Epistle to the Hebrews, we find this exhortation, "Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen."

Jude, the brother of James, gives his exhortation and expresses his hope in a brief message which closes his message to the world in this manner, "Now unto him that is able to keep you from failing, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God, our Savior, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."

Paul closes his second letter to the Thessalonians with this salutation, "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

Ministers usually close their services of public worship with one or the other of these benedictions or some benediction arranged by himself to suit the occasion. The purpose of it all is to pray the blessings of God upon the efforts made and upon the individuals met to be benefitted by the efforts.

We have now come to the close of another year. The days are behind us. The opportunities have been ours. These opportunities will come to us no more. What has been done is done; if good, then to our credit, if bad, then to our shame. The facts of life cannot be altered. The mistakes, however, may be corrected. If during the year, we have failed—failed to take advantage of the opportunities that were—failed to be courteous, to be kind, to be generous, to be loyal, to be faithful, then in the goodness of God we may be given other days with additional opportunities wherein we may change the ledger sheet a bit for us, and if by chance we have been of hindrance, of harm, or of hurt to others, we may be given the opportunity for expressions of regrets and pleadings for forgiveness. By His grace we may find pardon, and in such a pardon find added strength and ability by which we may be able to live more circum-spectively and more profitably to society. At any rate, when we come to the end of the year, we realize that we are about to part with a friend, one who has given us a chance, one who has visited us with all kinds of opportunities—the night with its darkness, the day with its light; friends with their encouragement and loved ones with their affections. As we part with this friend, the old year, we feel like saying with Paul, "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all."

The shadows of the old year have not entirely gone before the lights of the new year come shooting across our pathway, and we feel that as we have known the year that has gone, that already we know the year that is coming, and with a kind of friendliness and optimism, we greet this new year whole-heartedly. We discover that we are still in the midst of friends and the most of our loved are about us, and feel like joining with the apostle, Jude, and say to them, "Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Savior, be Glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever."

When a year comes to a close, we feel that Nature pronounces her benediction. When a life comes to a close, we feel that Nature's God gives His benediction and His blessing. If man be inspired by the presence of God along the journey of life, he shall surely be consoled by the blessing of God when the end of life comes.

"The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all."

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

The Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN is wishing to every reader a very happy New Year, and in this wish he is joined by all the other editors and workers on the paper.

If this wish is to come true, it will be necessary for each of you to plan for its fulfillment. This will mean a definite and conscious attempt to find fellowship with God and enter heartily into the experiences of others so they will come to their best. It will mean a definite search for the best within your own heart, and the exaltation of the spirit above the body. It will mean a constant consecration to ideals that are high and holy, and a real will to make ideals live in life. It may mean hardship, and must mean self-forgetfulness. It will mean that you give of your best to the Master and to mankind. It will mean all this, and much more.

It is a Happy New Year that you are wished, and to aid in its realization THE CHRISTIAN SUN renews its resolve.

FORGETTING THE PAST.

A glimpse at the past as we take down the old calendar and put up a new may have certain values for those who are leaders in the Church. It may give us courage to plunge into the work of a new year with enthusiasm.

Every local church may well follow the example of a merchant by taking inventory annually. There are figures concerning finance, membership, and attendance that can be tabulated and compared. They indicate progress or failure. They show what the church people think is important. Then there is a certain "spirit" of the church that can be considered. Is there more love, consideration, kindness, helpfulness than a year ago? Think on these things. Balance the accounts. Search

NEW YEAR.

Over the threshold a gallant new-comer

Steppeth with tread that is royal to see;
White as the winter-time, rosy as summer,
Hope in his eyes, and with laugh ringing free.

Lo! in his hands there are gifts overflowing,
Promises, prophecies, come in his train;
O'er him the dawn in its beauty is glowing,
Banishing shadows of sorrow and pain.

Oh, welcome New Year! with your stainless white pages,

Though we may blot them ere long with our tears;

So it has been through the long passing ages,

Worn with the footprints of close crowding years.

Welcome sweet Year! may the full-handed hours

Find us like servants, trusty and true,
Using with earnest devotion our powers

To be worthy our Master and worthy of You.

for the weak points with a view to strengthening the Church.

A minister may well check up on himself in the same way. Has life become richer? Is prayer more real? Is service sweeter? Are ministries of service increasing? Do new ideas find a place in one's thinking? What kind of food do those get who listen to the sermons? Are we really faithful to the Master, or do we just think so?

Churchmen may also take stock of themselves. Leaders of every kind should know what they do as well as what they want others to do. Is there any freshness about the program to be presented, or is it hoary with age and carelessness? Does the job you have in the church thrill and challenge you now as it did years ago? Are you enthusiastic for your cause, and yet well aware of how your part fits into the whole program of the Church? How well are you succeeding?

Your Editor believes thoroughly in an inventory, and is making a very careful one concerning his job. Both the Board of Publications and the Executive Committee of the Southern Convention will have that report before this goes to print. There are some indications of progress, so he thinks, but there is much more chance for the future.

When the survey is complete, mistakes and failures noted, successes recorded and inspiration received, then forget. Do not let history become a millstone about the neck that impedes progress. Follow the example of the great Aspostle who laid aside every weight and ran with patience the race to the goal, forgetting the things that were behind, and straining towards the future.

OUR FUTURE.

Many of our churches made progress last year. Business is definitely on the upgrade. Hope springs up wherever the future is considered. This year is expected to be better than the last, and the last was better than the one before. We are climbing out of the Valley of Despond. Before this year closes many will have reached the Mount of Vision where God's radiance points the path of progress.

As no person can depend upon God to send prosperity without personal effort, so no church can expect to succeed without work that is well planned. In church as well as in nature, results follow causes. It is the business of church leaders to plan and work for certain results. If they do this well, the future is assured, for God is always ready to bless our loaves and fishes so the hungry may be fed.

There is no apparent reason why 1937 should not be the best year in the history of Congregational and Christian churches in the Southeast. Economic conditions are improving. Wages are increasing. Farmers have money. The merger of our churches is complete. Congregationists and Christians know each other now. Our programs are blending. The churches have good pastors, and fine members. Our institutions are functioning normally. Our people are growing wiser and richer. Religion has a definite place in life. Our young people and women are well organized and are working. Our conferences and conventions are busy. We live in a day of progress, and this gives promise of being our best year yet. Let's make it so.

F. C. L.

GROUPING OF CHURCHES.(A Problem in Efficiency.)By D. R. FONVILLE, Attorney-at-Law.*

[Delivered to the Piedmont Ministerial Association in session at Elon College, on November 9, 1936, and by unanimous vote, requested for publication in "The Christian Sun."]

Is there a need for greater efficiency in the operation of the average church? How can more efficiency be realized? Suppose a merchant kept his store open for business for only two hours to five hours on one day a month. Suppose you occupied your home, enjoying its comforts and advantages for only two or three days out of every month; suppose a manufacturing plant operated only two days a month, and then stood in magnificent idleness, the remaining 28 days, and suppose further that the managing director or superintendent of that plant lived some 20, 50 or 100 miles away and spent only a few hours each month at the plant and that that brief monthly visit was his only place or point of contact with his employees.

These suppositions are suggestions by way of parallels, to some extent at least, of the way some of our churches are operated. It is concerning a background of such conditions that some of the severest criticisms of the Church have arisen. Some friendly and devoted students of the Church in our day have characterized as inexcusably wasteful and inefficient the conditions and the program, or lack of a program, upon which many of our churches are operated, especially as that program is related to the work of the pastor and the use of the church plant.

It has been said that no other business on earth could be carried on as the church's business is often-times carried on and continue to function for a single year. But it might be said that the church is not primarily a business institution. True, but certain business principles must be used in any successful operation of a church.

It is a fair question to ask of any given church, "To what extent is this church functioning and really using the time and the opportunity to reach the human lives for which it is responsible with a vital message and a challenging program?" Indeed, how can it discharge that responsibility or give any adequate response if the plan and conditions surrounding the question of that church are totally inadequate to the task?

Especially is this true of many of our country churches, where the preacher comes once or twice a month, often from quite a distance, spends a few hours or a day or two at each appointment, preaching once or twice on Sunday, visiting a few of the sick perhaps, trying to keep up with the church's finances, and in some measure presenting to his church some of the worthy appeals of the denominational enterprises—usually those in which he has perhaps a sentimental interest.

He may come to his work poorly prepared educationally. He may be forced to work at some job—such as farming, teaching, salesmanship, in order to make a living for himself and his family, because of the total inadequacy of his pay.

I need not continue a recital of the conditions under which many of our preachers labor. Many of them are keenly aware of the inadequate pay they receive. The conditions of their employment, living at one place, serving a number of widely scattered churches, often require that a large part of what they do receive be consumed with needless transportation costs. And many of them deplore the conditions which make it utterly impossible for them to have the opportunity to touch in a deep way the human and spiritual needs of their people.

One result has been that many of their people have come to think of their minister as only a preacher. He is that. That is, and must ever be, his supreme task—the preaching of the Gospel—bearing glad tidings. But few men, whatever their gifts or abilities as preachers, can touch deeply the lives of their people by a dependence solely on a half hour, an hour, or even a two hour sermon, once or twice a month. It takes more than that for most preachers to reach and mould the lives of their people.

The problem of how to secure more efficiency and provide a greater opportunity to serve has been a matter of great concern to many of our people, both laymen and ministers, church leaders and those charged with official responsibilities in our own denomination and in other denominations.

Our Congregational-Christian policy in its organizational life has a weakness not felt to the same degree by some other denominations. We have no bishop or presbytery or central control that has been empowered to form a circuit, or a parish, establishing certain geographical limits and directing some minister to go and live among and serve churches in that geographical areas. This method has doubtless certain objectionable features. But it seems that it does make for a more efficient and a more satisfactory service, both to preacher and to people.

Lacking that authority and control, in many places a large measure of success has been attained in solving these very real problems by the voluntary groups of several adjacent churches into a pastorate, provision being made for the minister to live in the community, where he can be reached at all times, where he enters intimately into the life of the community, where the people—those in the church and those outside the church—come to know him not only as a pastor, but as a citizen, as a friend, as a man whose life daily reflects the truth of the Gospel which he preaches.

His best sermon may be preached to an audience of one on some weekday, perhaps by the roadside, at the barn or in the field. Christ made some of His most significant statements to a single individual. Witness His clear claim to Divinity made to the woman at the well at noon-day; His declaration to Nicodemus of the necessity for the new birth in a quiet conversation one night on a housetop.

He did not wait till a Sunday morning and until He got up in the church pulpit to declare to sin-sick and troubled souls the great truths of salvation. He went about among the people doing good, healing, teaching, preaching.

I may be wrong—but it seems to me, that in many churches, the place of preaching has been over-emphasized. In other words, it has come to absorb practically all the interest, to the neglect of worship, of teaching, of healing, of ministering to the varied needs of men in body, soul and mind.

I know some of the practical difficulties of putting this plan into effect. Sometimes there is lack of a spirit of cooperation among the nearby churches. Certain neighborhood jealousies may be in evidence. Sometimes there is a pride of opinion and stubbornness. Sometimes ecclesiastical politics to be reckoned with, for human selfishness, sad to say, is not always confined to laymen. These stand in the way. But these are the things that have always stood in the way of advancing God's Kingdom on earth.

This plan has worked in a number of cases with conspicuous success. It can be worked wherever there is an intelligent appraisal of the field and the qualifications of the ministry are adequate to the field—and where the mind of people and of pastors earnestly and sincerely seek to know the will of the Master and are willing to be led into larger, richer, and more efficient service.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Take an inventory. That is the order at the end of the old year and the beginning of the new. In the final summary the accounts are analyzed to determine the profit and loss for the past year. If a substantial profit is shown the outlook is encouraging; if a loss has been sustained the situation calls for serious reflection. Many business men read the balance sheet with pleasure when the profits are satisfactory; others are disappointed because they have failed to meet their expectations.

This observation is made in the interest of taking a spiritual inventory at this season of the year. Every church member should have some interest in the spiritual resources of the church. Every normal person has spiritual gifts and religious possibilities. Too many measure their ability in terms of financial resources. Sometimes money is the least and last thing to be considered. Here is a man who emphasizes his poverty. He thinks if he were rich he would be able to do great things for his church. Is this inventory he overlooks his personal ability and discounts the value of living a normal life in the church. Every man has himself; every woman has her own life; and no one else can live this life or express the glory of spiritual fellowship for another.

Life is a precious gift. Every day is a new day. Every opportunity is fresh from the hand of God. When the survey of the assets of life is carefully made one is amazed by the human resources available for those who seek the way of higher living. If life needs improvement think of the books, magazines, schools, teachers, and churches to show the way and offer unlimited opportunity in every worthy field of faith and adventure. Vast storehouses of information are within easy reach of the poor as well as the rich. Historians point with pride to the glorious achievements of the past; and philosophers and prophets scan the horizon to discover the new fields for the future.

This should be the greatest year of human history for the advancement of human life. Men know more about the deeper secrets of matter and spirit. If man could have the faith to adventure in religion, and baptize his faith in a new spirit of devotion and consecration, a new era would be recorded far surpassing any spiritual achievements of the past decade. But society is pleasure bent and passion mad. Unlike the wise men who studied the stars to find a way upward, the present generation is digging in dirt or searing some hard-surfaced highway for new thrills in speed or soothing opiates in physical indulgences. In the meantime the soul—the spirit—the eternal—the immortal—these are being neglected and abused.

Put down the spiritual gifts and the spiritual debts and opportunities on the first line of the first page of the inventory for January, 1937. And when the last item is written upon the last page, write underneath that the trail and the trial of the spiritual. God is Spirit. Man is mortal, but he is more—he is spiritual. And these spiritual equities must be reckoned with somewhere along the pathway of human life. Begin this accounting the first week of the new year. Make it happy, by making it spiritually important.

I. W. JOHNSON.

ELON, 1937.

In the recent issues of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Rev. Robert Lee House of Portsmouth, Virginia, has written two exceedingly interesting articles concerning the college and its future. In the first article, Brother House suggests that every church in the convention seek to obtain for itself first-hand information regarding the college. As a means of securing this information, he suggests that each local church send a delegation to the college to attend the Sunday services and observe other features of the institution. The college welcomes such a plan and will extend an invitation to groups from different congregations to be its guests for the Sunday services and Sunday dinner in the college dining room.

The other suggestion was that in each local church there be formed an Elon College Club, membership in the club to include the alumni of the college but not to exclude anyone who might wish to become a member of such a club. The purpose of these clubs would be to sponsor special college days in Sunday School and church, to give news items concerning the college to the Sunday School and congregation, to keep the college before young men and young women who are likely to attend college, and to acquaint the college with such prospective students. Such clubs would be of great value to the college, and anything that benefits the college will benefit the church as a whole. I am taking the liberty to list briefly the two ideas given to the church by Brother House, to give the college's endorsement to both plans, and to offer the facilities of the college to assist in putting these plans into operation. By following these suggestions, interest in the college throughout the entire church would undoubtedly be increased.

I wonder what church will be the first to visit us at the college, and which will be the first to form the Elon College Club. It seems to me that the Portsmouth Church might lead in both of these movements. It would be fine New Year's resolution on the part of every church in the convention to determine to find out for itself the real value of Elon College and then to give that information to its entire membership.

The college was founded by the church, the church has piloted the college through the years, and again may the church take the steering wheel and guide her ship of scientific and religious training into streams of efficiency and fruitfulness for the entire brotherhood.

L. E. SMITH.

FROM THE SUFFOLK BULLETIN.

The Finance Committee made a good move when they inaugurated the type of "White Gift" service which we had last Sunday. The largest number of individual gifts given within the present pastorate was reached when a total of 339 "White Gifts" were laid upon the altar as pew after pew of the congregation filed by the altar in single file. It was a beautiful and significant sight, and many a person present thinking deeply upon what it meant breathed a prayer of gratitude for the most excellent cooperation, and for the blessing it would be to aged ministers, widows, and orphans! While the offering, considering the number who contributed, was not so large as offerings go, it was $152.51, and represented a spirit of cooperation which goes far beyond that.

Our offering for the Orphanage this year is $821.12, to this add the S. S. monthly offering amounting to $300, making a total of $1,121, which is more than last year by $509.12.

During December also members of our Church contributed $280 to the Christian Missionary Association, totaling during December for outside enterprises of $1,253.63. Besides this the church has taken care of its own most graciously, and has not forgotten "Others."

Dear Boys and Girls,

I hope you have had a wonderful Christmas. If you were good last year Santa Claus was probably very good to you so that you received many of the things you wanted for Christmas. I hope you not only received presents but that you gave to others and that you took part in the Christmas services of your church, for then you were making other people happy.

Did you know that Wednesday of this week is what some people call Old Christmas? Ask your parents or your Sunday school teacher why this is so.

Did you write a card or letter to Miss Shirley Powell, 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, telling her you liked the picture for this page? Would you like another one for regular? If so, write her, and I feel sure she will make it for you.

Here's a great big wish for you to have a Happy New Year.

Sincerely,

F. C. LESTER.

HOW CALENDARS GROW.

Old Father Time is really the old River Nile. It flows in far-away Egypt; and once in a while overflows its banks. Egypt's first king, Menes, said, "Between the time of the Nile's floods shall be called one year! All my people here in Egypt, give attention now and hear! We shall divide up our days, seven for each week, and then four weeks for the months," just as every calendar now says.

King Menes had watched a new moon come and grow larger and larger and then gradually away it would go. That time, then, the moon's coming and going, into a month he made: and, after he had watched the Nile's habit of flooding, he measured the twelve months into a year with great ease. The months were made as even as they could be into weeks. The days were not hard to arrange, since the sun seeks to bless each day with a sunrise and a sunset. The sun meas-

THE BOY I KNOW.

I know a boy who has a watch,
But never thinks to wind it;
And when he ought to be on time
He's always just behind it.
And when he has a task to do,
He says, "Wait till tomorrow;"
And when he cannot find his things,
He simply says, "I'll borrow."

That boy may make a business man—
I know he wants to do it—
But he must mend his careless ways,
Or he will live to rue it.
That boy must do his work today
And plan work for tomorrow;
Good habits everybody knows
Are something boys can't borrow.

ures out every day into hours for all people just in the very same exact way even yet.

The first calendar, or record of time, grew beside the River Nile and it gave a fine shade. It was a palm tree which as a calendar, or a time-record, the Egyptians of old made. That palm tree had twelve shoots, or branches, so, of course, they believed that it grew in that way to help every one to remember the months, from January clear around to December. On one kind of palm tree the fruit, dates, always grows; but that is not the kind which is used like our present-time calendars' dates to show. A palm tree is named that because its leaf looks like the palm of a person's hand. The dates on them were named so because they grow like fingers, and from that word, "dactyl," they were named, we understand.

The word, "calendar," developed in Rome where a fine lot of good changes were made for Old Time's plan of days, weeks, and months—which over the year ranges. The people in Rome called the first of every month the "callend." Then, for rent, taxes, and interest, every man would always carefully his due money spend. From that word of theirs for a part of the month, one was made up for the calendar.

The word, "almanack," means "to count from the beginning," away back to King Menes and more. King Menes is supposed to have been Noah's grandson, the son of Ham, named Mizraim, in the Bible, in Genesis.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE MOST NOTABLE OUTPOUR.

It is well to take a backward look, now and then. Without doing this it is impossible to estimate, or even discover, what our real assets are. Every good merchant, and business man, takes an inventory at some period, usually at the beginning of the year. This enables one to glance backward and determine in which direction one is going and from what sources have come gains, or losses. The following sentence from a noted scholar and author arrested our attention, "The missionary movement of the past century has been the most notable outpouring, in the main unselfish, in the service of alien peoples, which the world has ever seen." The author of that sentence is acquainted first hand with world conditions and is conversant with the contributions that various movements and institutions have made to the world in the last century. After admitting that missionaries are human and that there have been mistakes and blunders on the part of those who go out as missionaries, and those who send them out, this distinguished student of world affairs declares, "On the average, however, missionaries have been, in education and native ability, superior to the general run of their colleagues in similar professions at home—ministers, teachers, physicians, nurses—in moral character and devotion have ranked as high and perhaps higher than any equally large group of men and women in the race's history." And then the author, from whom we have quoted, proceeds to tell something of the achievements of missionaries, and the real contribution they have made and are making today. Just read this summary: "The nineteenth-century missionaries, in order to make their message intelligible, have in the course of a century given a written form to more languages than had previously been reduced to writing in all the history of the race. They have preached the Christian gospel as they have understood it in more tongues than have ever before been used to give voice to any one set of ideas. They have translated the Bible, in whole or in part, into more languages than any one book has ever before been put, since books were first written, and they have distributed it by the millions of copies. They have been the schoolmasters of whole races and nations. They have introduced modern medicine to more peoples than have ever before known any one system of medical practice. They have fought opium, prostitution, poverty, famine, superstition, poor labor conditions, polygamy, concubinage, and low concepts of life and have helped whole peoples to new paths. Best of all, through them hundreds of thousands have found in Christian faith and experience the beginnings of a new life with God, and Christian communities have been brought into existence and are perpetuating that faith and experience among their own people. On the Protestant side of the enterprise, these younger churches are being knit, with representatives of the older churches, into a more inclusive world-wide fellowship than ever Christianity in its Protestant form has known before."

The above is taken from Missions Tomorrow, whose author, Dr. K. S. Latourette, is recognized as an authority in his chosen field of Oriental History, being the D. Willid James, Professor in Yale University. These are not the rantings, or writings, of a fanatic, or an emotional evangelist, but the logical deductions and descriptions of conditions as they really obtain and serve to make the reader realize that the most notable outpouring of life in the service of other peoples, which the world has ever seen, is that of our missionaries for the last one hundred years.

A TRIBE OF GOD.

In his letter to the Romans Paul writes, "And it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my children; there shall they be called the children of the living God" (Romans 9:26). This prophecy is surely coming to pass in Africa. For many generations her people have been abused by all other nations. They have been harassed by merciless slave traders, exploited by ruthless traders and industrial organizations, and divided up among the various nations of Europe. With the downfall of Ethiopia, Liberia is the only bit of independent territory in all that great continent. But God has blessed the Africans with a spirit of hope and optimism so that they have endured persecution and oppression, patiently awaiting the day of deliverance. That day is dawning now, for out of every tribe in Africa, God is calling forth a people for Himself and through these people Africa will be delivered out of her age-old bondage.

DR. JAMES DILLARD—A BRIDGE BUILDER.

Many CHRISTIAN SUN readers are acquainted with Dr. James H. Dillard, who has often written for our columns. It is known to many of our readers that he came from Nansemond County, Virginia, having his birthplace and earlier years near Holy Neck and Holland. Possibly no man living has made a greater contribution, on the whole, to education in the South, and certainly none to Negro education, than has Dr. Dillard. How well prepared CHRISTIAN SUN readers must be, therefore, to read with deep interest the following, taken from the December number of The Virginia Journal of Education. It is difficult indeed, to realize, or even believe, that Dr. Dillard, Secretary of the Jeans Foundation, who is still active and vigorous in the field of letters and learning, has 80 years behind him and we join his thousands of friends in wishing him many, many years yet of usefulness and service. And now read from The Journal of Education:

Dr. Stokes, who was called upon to speak informally, said that he had always thought of Dr. Dillard as one of our generation's greatest bridge builders. This dinner, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of Albemarle County, showing its appreciation of the services of Dr. Dillard, long a leader in education who had served as a Professor at Tulane University and Rector of William and Mary, was an example of how he had helped to build a bridge between scholarship and commerce, between the University and the town of Charlottesville.

He has been preeminently a bridge builder between the Anglo Saxon and Negro groups of America. It was easier for our generation, and will be increasingly easier for future generations, to bridge sympathetically and understandingly the gap between the two great racial groups in America because of the bridge which Dr. Dillard has built. Over this bridge he has carried what is best in the white man to the black man and what is best in the black man to the white man.

Similarly, he has been a bridge builder between the North and the South. A Southerner by birth, tradition, affection, and residence, his connection with many national boards, such as the General Education Board, has taken him much to the North. He has been able to interpret the best Southern opinion to the North and in return to carry the best Northern opinion to the South.

He has been a bridge builder between the South of the antebellum days and the South of today, carrying the culture and traditions of the old South into the modern era and adjusting them to meet the conditions of a more democratic society.

He has also been a bridge builder between Africa and Europe. As a member of the second Commission on Native Education sent to Africa his personality and point of view were helpful in leading the Europeans there to an understanding of the black man in their midst and to making Africa understand America better, just as on his return his address made the United States better understand Africa and her serious problems. He helped to make the Jeanes School almost as much an African as it is an American institution.

He has been a bridge builder in many educational fields. For instance, although himself by training and profession a teacher of classics and of literature, he became an exponent of the simple realities in education. He placed emphasis on those fundamentals which every child needs, trying again to make the three R's—along with character, the spirit of service, and some simple useful work—a worth while basis for education. He tried to make the head and hand go together, each helping the other, and was opposed to all educational fads.

He has been a bridge builder between private philanthropy and public education, making the grants from the great Foundations as useful as possible to the Southern States in building up their own systems of public education which should little by little meet most of the educational needs of the South. Dr. Buttrick, when president of the General Education Board, stated that Dr. Dillard could make a dollar go further than any man in the United States. He was a master in so adjusting matters that a small gift from private sources would stimulate the county or a community to develop better schools for all its people.

He has built many a bridge between town and county. Living himself in cities or towns, such as St. Louis, New Orleans, or Charlottesville, he has yet had his major interest in rural regions, bringing them the civilizing influences of town life and taking from them back to the cities the fundamentally important emphasis on closeness to nature and to the soil.

He has always been a bridge builder, a mediating force between Protestant and Catholic. Loyal to the Episcopal Church, he has seen what was permanently worth while both in Catholic and Protestant traditions and has been a factor for toleration and for mutual sympathy between all divergent religious bodies.

Were there time I might describe to you many other bridges which Dr. Dillard has built, such as the important bridge between education and religion, between the minister and the teacher. Even tonight as we see him at eighty years of age, we realize that he has still the spirit of young manhood, combining the wisdom of maturity with the enthusiasm of youth.

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS.

This is the time for us to "check up" on our accomplishments during the past year. This is not for the purpose of "patting ourselves on the back," but in order that we may see the lines along which we must strive harder during the coming year.

Most of our conference groups each year set up "Goals" which they seek to accomplish during that year. This is an excellent plan and has great value even if all of those "goals" are not attained. The very fact that they have been thought about, and considered, and worked toward, is worthwhile.

Dr. Lobingier says that each church group should set up definite goals at the beginning of each year—and be sure to check up on them at the end of the year, or much of the value has been lost. He considers that one of the best reports comes from a negro church in Texas which will send in items such as: "Secure 15 chairs for Sunday School; buy 20 hymnals; paint the walls and floor of the church" for their goals. Then the final report will read something like this: "Secured 10 chairs for Sunday School; bought 12 hymnals; painted the walls of the church." That little group knows what it needs and is definitely working along those lines.

Not only in our conference groups, but in our local church organizations, we should have a list of things we hope to attain during the coming year. If your local young people's group does not have such, it would be worthwhile to use your next meeting for that purpose, the whole group helping to draw up your "New Year's Resolutions." If you will set down in black and white the definite things you hope to accomplish during 1937, you will be surprised to find out how much easier it will be for your group to progress this year.

Make your resolutions cover the various phases of your work. Do not be afraid of stating them in definite terms. "To strive to read good church literature during the coming year" is a good idea but far too indefinite to be of much help. To have each member take some religious magazine or paper, such as the Pilgrim Highway, The Christian Sun, or The Missionary Herald will be the basis for much more definite work.

Try to strike a happy medium in these "Resolutions"—that is do not make them so impossible that you will be discouraged at the end of the year when you see how few of them you have accomplished. On the other hand, do not list only things which you can do with very little effort and thought.

OFFICERS' HOLIDAY CONFERENCE

The officers of the Southeast Youth Fellowship and the presidents of the conference groups were invited to meet in Norfolk, Virginia, for a Holiday Conference on December 29-31. The purpose of this conference was to make definite plans for carrying out Youth Fellowship work in the Southeast. Since final plans for calling the conference were made at a very late date, the attendance was

A NEW LEAF.

He came to my desk with quivering life—
The lesson was done.

"Dear Teacher, I want a new lesson," he said,

"I have spoiled this one."

I took the old leaf, stained and blotted,
And gave him a new one all unspotted,
And into his sad eyes smiled,
"Do better, now, my child."

I went to the throne with a quivering soul;
The old year was done.

"Dear Father, hast Thou a new leaf for me?
I have spoiled this one."

He took the old leaf stained and blotted,
And gave me a new one all unspotted,
And into my sad heart smiled,
"Do better, now, my child."

small. However, five of our conferences were represented in the group.

A meeting of the Youth Fellowship of the Southeast is held every two years in conjunction with the Southeast Convention. Therefore, plans were made for such a meeting in Jacksonville, Florida, on April 21th. Officers will be chosen at this meeting to serve for the next two years. Plans were set in motion for securing speakers for this meeting and making other necessary arrangements.

Projects were discussed and suggested plans of action drawn up for each of the departments. A study was made of the Southeast Youth Fellowship to see whether or not it now exists in the most effective form possible. Several changes in the set-up and revision of the Constitution will be recommended to the Southeast Youth Fellowship at the Jacksonville meeting.

RESISTING DISHONEST AND VICIOUS ADVERTISING.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
JANUARY 19, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Proverbs 12:22.

The topics for January were designed to answer the query "Whither, Bound, Youth?" Youth everywhere should set up a goal. Some time should be devoted to the worthy way of resistance. Youth must resist some things that make a strong appeal in order to build a strong character.

The most widely known products are those most widely advertised. Youth cannot afford to let dishonest and vicious advertising make its appeal to their hearts and lives. Resist such advertising. It is the one way to be protected and not deceived in purchasing our products.

For Discussion—

1. Is an advertisement harmful when it presents liquor as desirable?
2. How about harmful drugs and patent medicines?
3. Consider the overdrawn pictures painted through telling only part truth.
4. Should advertisements withhold information vital to the purchaser?
5. Is it fair to advertise a worthless article at an absurd price?
6. Should advertising promote the sale of products made under unfair working conditions.

Suggester Hymns—

"Lead on, O King Eternal," "A Charge To Keep I Have," "I Would Be True," "Yield Not To Temptation."

S. E. MADREN.

NEW LEBANON.

The work of a new conference year has started off nicely. We are happy indeed to welcome our same pastor, Rev. J. L. Neese, for another year.

A very impressive service was held on Thanksgiving Day with the largest number in attendance we have ever had for a service of this kind.

Just before the close of this service, a Thank-offering was taken for missions.

On December 20th, we had a Christmas service. This service was conducted by members of the First Christian Church of Reidsville, N. C.

Both pastor and members look forward to a great year in the work of our Master.

NEW LIFE IN CHRIST.

LESSON II—JANUARY 10, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Verily, verily I say unto thee, Except a man be born anew, he cannot see the kingdom of God.—John 3:3.

LESSON: John 2:1-3:36.

Jesus and Social Life.

It is significant that according to John's gospel the first official appearance of Jesus at the beginning of his public ministry was at a wedding. It would seem that it was prophetic of the new sanctity which Jesus would give to marriage as an institution, of the central place which Jesus gave to the home, of the transforming influence of His spirit upon social life. It is indicative of the fact that He came not to destroy but to fulfill, that He would save the world not by withdrawing from the world, but by introducing a new spirit into the world. The home is the basic unit of society, and a miniature of the kingdom of God on earth. Jesus would cleanse home life, purify its atmosphere, inspire it with new ideals, infuse into it a new spirit.

There are, of course, many lessons embedded in the story of His miracle at Cana of Galilee. There is for instance, His tact and courtesy; His recognized authority; His transforming power; His ability to do more than is expected; His custom of giving always better and better things. One is glad that this story stands at the beginning of Jesus' ministry. There is a human, wholesome touch about it, as well as revelation of His divinity. It makes us feel that Christ is concerned with the simple and normal experiences of life, that He can enter into these experiences and enrich them and elevate them and give them new meaning and new beauty. Jesus at a Wedding Feast, and what He did there makes good reading.

Jesus and Institutional Religion.

John also represents Jesus in another significant relationship when he gives an account of the cleansing of the temple at the beginning of His ministry. The temple stood at the center of the religious life of the Jewish nation. It was the symbol of religion to the pious Jew. It had a sacred character and a useful mission, but it had been abused and prostituted to lower ends. In at least one phase it had become commercialized. Instead of being a source of inspiration, it had become the scene of exploitation. Accordingly with fine insight and with courageous zeal Jesus cleansed the temple, driving out those who were making of it as He said, "a den of thieves." The tone of religious ideals is the true index of the life and the security of the nation. No nation can prosper unless at the heart it is cleansed and purified. The strength of any nation is the height and the vitality of its religious or spiritual life and ideals. If Jesus should come into our country or our world today, He would undoubtedly visit first the church, and cleanse it of the baser and the lesser things that keep it from being a channel of spiritual healing and power to the nation.

Jesus and the Individual.

But John has a sense of values and a sense of perspective. The ultimate ministry of Jesus was through and to individuals. He would change the world through individuals who had been changed. A saved society through redeemed souls was the heart of His program. Thus it is that when John got together his material to write his gospel, he embodies the immortal story of Jesus and Nicodemus. Here is a man representing the Jewish religion in a very pious form—he was a Pharisee—coming secretly and sincerely to this young rabbi because he was quite convinced that He had the secret of a richer, fuller life. Here was something different. Here was religion, written not in tables of stone but in life. Here was religion not in terms of law but of grace and truth. It speaks volumes for Nicodemus that he would humble himself and come to Jesus to learn of Him His secret.

Jesus comes at once to the heart of the central problem of religion. He said in picturesque language that religion is not primarily a matter of ethics or even of reformation; it is primarily a matter of transformation or regeneration. Except a man be born anew, or from above, he cannot enter, he cannot even see the kingdom of God. It is only as men are renewed from within by the divine life from above that they can discern spiritual things, or grow in spiritual grace. He says three things about this new birth from above. It is necessary—except a man be born from above he cannot see or enter the kingdom of God. It is mysterious—it is like the blowing of the wind, it cannot be explained simply by description. And it cannot be seen, but its effects can. It issues in changed character and conduct.

Our modern world has made great strides in scientific achievement and accomplishments. Men sometimes feel that there is no limit to what they can do. It needs to be said again and again however that only one thing can create new manhood. There is still a place for and a need of the spirit of the living God. Science, education, even religion itself cannot save either an individual or the world. The hope of this age and of every age is a redeemed humanity. This comes not by the will or by the power of men, but only of God. Our modern world needs the message of the redeeming grace of Christ, the new life which can come alone through Him.

Jesus and God's Love.

Included in today's lesson are the immortal words about God's love for the world expressed by His gift to the world through Christ. John 3:16 is perhaps the most familiar verse of scripture in the Bible. It tells of man's lost condition without Christ; it tells of God's love for the whole wide world; it tells of His gift to the world; it tells of the promise and pledge of the new life to be found in Christ; it proclaims the salvation which comes through Christ. And against this background Jesus goes on to draw a picture of the ultimate fate of those who spurn or reject this great love of God. The most terrible indictment against men is that because they love darkness rather than light they will not accept God's gift.

OUR RALEIGH CHURCH.

United in our spiritual quest, we of the United Church find inspiration in the heritage of our common faiths. We believe that our lives, both collective and individual, must be guided by the law of love as revealed in Jesus Christ and as interpreted in the light of modern knowledge.

The inescapable demands of Christianity challenge us to mold our society after the pattern of the Kingdom of God. This means a complete commitment on our part in building a more Christian world wherein the forces of war, racial injustice, and exploitation will be steadily diminished. The religious resources for this task are found in the worship of God and the service of man.

We receive an added impetus by coupling the prophetic zeal and apostolic sympathy of the Congregational-Christians with the ethical rigour and the "Inner Light" of the Friends. Anyone sharing these convictions is cordially welcomed to our fellowship, the simplicity of our creed is matched only by its sincerity.—Bulletin of United Church, Raleigh, N. C.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

“PRACTICING THE PRESENCE OF JESUS.”

“Be still and know that I am God.”
—Psalm 46: 10.

How can we practice the presence of Jesus without getting away from everything and being quiet? Only in such quiet can our hearts be attuned to His heart, and our ears ready to hear when He speaks to us. “How rare it is to find a soul quiet enough to hear God speak!

“The lovely things are quiet things,
Soft falling snow,
And feathers dropped from flying wings

Make no sound as they go.

“A petal loosened from a rose
Quietly seeks the ground;
And love, if lovely when it goes,
Goes without a sound.”

Prayer—O God, help us to take time from our cares and duties of our everyday lives to see Thee, to hear Thy voice and to do Thy bidding. In Jesus, we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

A FISHING TRIP.

“But Jesus stood on the shore.”—
Jno. 21: 4.

Read verses from one to six. It is a story of a fishing trip told in two parts. The first part is, one to three, and tells of fishing failure. The second is, four to six, and tells of success. In between these parts something happened. These fishermen looked up and Jesus stood on the shore. Jesus made the difference.

Christ has never offered Himself as the difference between success and failure in material things. But He has offered Himself and He has been always found true as making the difference in our spiritual experience, in our personal character, in our struggles against temptation, and our hope of glory. It is the whole question of “Greater is he that is within you than he that is in the world.” It is a question of an indwelling and abiding Christ.

Prayer—Thou who hast the power to transform men, transform our lives as we go about our work this day. In Christ’s name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

ALWAYS GREEN.

“I am like a green fir tree.”—
Hosea 14: 8.

This figure is very expressive. It goes so far and means so much. The fir tree, we are told, is deep rooted in Mother Earth and stands high midst other trees. It is always green and everlasting in its growth.

That must have been how Hosea felt about it in his experience with God. The God who is the God of the fir tree makes it possible for man to be deep-rooted in faith and principles, to stand high in honor and esteem, to be a refreshing delight always to his fellowman, and to live forever.

Prayer—Our Father, grant unto us Thy eternal spirit and we shall go on forever for Thy glory. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A MOST NEEDED THING.

“Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in me.”
—Jno. 14: 1.

“What Christian most need today is to hear the Master’s words, ‘Let not your heart be troubled’; and to find comfort and assurance through Jesus Christ, in the God, the doing of Whose will He made the supreme issue of His life and work.”—Harlan Luther Freeman.

Prayer—Our Father, we come to Thee through Jesus Christ our Lord and beseech Thee to give us strength, light comfort and the hope which is begotten of Thee, all of which we need so much. In Christ’s name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

“UNCLOTHED AND CLOTHED UPON.”

“So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.”—Ps. 90: 12.

There is a way to talk so that what we say about others may be that which we will be pleased to hear again. There is a way to live so that our lives may contribute to the finer senses and uplift of others. There is one upon whom we may call and for whom we may live, who, in giving ourselves to Him, will add charm to our countenance, wisdom to our thinking, purity to our speech, make unpleasant duties a pleasure, sacrifices a joy, and fill our lips and life with praise. When Paul said, live so, “not that ye would be unclothed, but clothed upon” that ye might have victory in immortality, that is the kind of life he was enjoining.

Prayer—Our Father, how marvelous are Thy ways! How great is Thy love ever hovering over us! What beautiful preparations Thou has made for us! Do Thou grant us to understand. Give unto us passionate desire. Woo us into Thy ways. Amen.

SATURDAY.

“But to do good and communicate forget not.”—Heb. 13: 16.

“Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another.”—Heb. 12: 10.

“So many tender words are true
We mean to speak, Dear heart, to you;
So many things we meant to do—
But we forgot.

“The busy days were dull with care;
The long nights fell, and unaware You passed beyond life’s leading prayer,
While we forgot.”

Prayer—Dear Father of love, “Be with us yet, lest we forget.” Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE MIND OF JESUS.

“Let this mind be in you that was also in Christ Jesus.”—Phil. 2: 5.

The week’s meditations were begun by an exhortation to quietude as an essential to a consciousness of the indwelling Christ. And now we are closing our week’s meditations with the same thought.

The art of right living is the finest of arts. To have the indwelling Christ, means to put within us the possibility of mastering that art. The Lord has given us the Sabbath of rest as a special period set aside for acquiring that art. How far the world is drifting away from it! Pleasure, ambition, greed for money, pride and selfishness make us restless and drive us away from quiet and from that consciousness of Christ.

If we, like Christ, could dismiss these things from us, the roots of our unrest would be removed. Take Jesus and learn of Him, and when we learn these secrets from Him, then there will come rest and happiness to our souls.

Prayer—Heavenly Father, that river flowing from the throne of God we would know. We come to Thee. We come to Jesus this day. We pray that the mind in Him may be in us and that we shall be for Thy glory forever. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE COMING KING.

By REV. F. ERVIN HYDE.

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulders; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."—Isa. 9:6-7.

Evil days had fallen upon the kingdom. After the long and prosperous reign of Uzziah the nation was plunged into a reign of terror. Yet out of the darkness of such a night shown a great light. And across the years the prophet saw the coming of a new day and a new king.

Centuries later Caesar Augustus issued a decree to the effect that all men must go to their own city to be taxed. So into Bethlehem as the evening sun was setting there came a man and woman. The former is of the house and lineage of David. The inn was full. A stable was provided. And there was born the Child of Whom Isaiah had prophesied. They took Him and wrapped Him in swaddling clothes and laid Him in a manger.

Shepherds left their commonplace tasks to go and worship Him. They told strange stories of how while they watched their flocks, an angel appeared unto them telling of their Savior's birth, and how the message was accompanied by the heavenly choirs singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill toward men." They laid their gifts upon the ground. For awhile they knelt in adoration. Then they arose and went on their way rejoicing.

Then came the Magi from the East, bearing their gifts of gold, and frankincense, and myrrh. These they offered to the infant-King. For a while they knelt and worshipped then no doubt went forth to serve Him the rest of their lives.

Three score years passed. Then one day there cometh He who was born to be King, preaching and saying, "Repent for the Kingdom of heaven is at hand." Men saw sample days of the Kingdom. They marvelled at His power. Numerous signs accompanied His ministry. For a while it seemed as though the world would accept His Kingdom. Then came the crisis. He is rejected and crucified. His followers accepted the task of transforming the world into His Kingdom. Reverently they prayed the petition He had taught them. "Thy Kingdom come." Patiently they awaited the day of His power.

And with the increasing years there came an increasing number of people who saw in Him the hope of the world, who owned His sway, and claimed Him as King. They recognized Him as heaven's Son. The gift of God to a lost world. The measure of God's love for a fallen race. John 3:16 must always stand out. Glorious gospel isn't it? What then shall we say of Christ?

"And His name shall be called Wonderful." So it is. Wonderful must be His first title. He was wonderful in His actions, for look at miracles. He was Wonderful in His endurance, for contemplate His suffering. He was Wonderful in His life, for who shall declare His generation. He was Wonderful in His death, for He saw no corruption. He was Wonderful in His Resurrection because He raised Himself from the dead. He was Wonderful in His ascension because He carried out fallen natures into heavenly places.

He is also to be called "Counsellor," for He is acquainted with the will of God. His life seemed to be a commentary on the will of God. He always yielded to the will of God. He came to show us the way to God. No one who wholly follows the Lord ever goes astray. He becomes the glad comrade of the way for all who will walk with Him.

He is to be called "The Mighty God." He possessed and exercised all of the divine attributes. "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us." Temptation could not defeat Him. False accusations did not weaken Him. Death and the grave could not destroy Him. He fought no losing battle against fear and failure. Truly He is "The Mighty God."

But more He is "The Everlasting Father." He is the Author of eternity. Time does not limit Him. He belongs to the ages. "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today, and forever." He is "God from everlasting to everlasting." And as the everlasting Father, He is the Author and Finisher of our faith. He is the author of the plan of salvation. To know Him is to possess eternal life.

And last but not least, He possesses the title, "The Prince of Peace." "On earth peace and goodwill among men," sang the angels on the day of His birth. His way is the way of peace. Love is the law of His Kingdom. As a King, He preserves peace. And we who would follow Him must needs walk in the pathway of peace.

Then we note that the government is to be upon His shoulders,—His only. That is not true today. As yet we do not possess the mind of Christ in industry, in business, in education, in racial relationships, in government, in international affairs. Yet some day His way will triumph and our world will become "the Kingdom of our Lord and His Christ." And He shall rule "wherever the sun doth her successive journey's run."

And glorious things are spoken of Christ's government. It is an increasing government. He began to rule in the lives of a few followers. But through the years the boundaries of His Kingdom have been enlarged. It has been added unto daily. Already upon every continent, and on many islands of the sea have been planted the standards of the Christian religion. His faithful ambassadors traverse the globe. Yes, the day is coming when "every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess Him as Lord of Lords, and King of kings."

Then, too, He is equal for the task. No matter how great the task is, it is not too great for Him. No matter how heavy the burden, it will not be too heavy for Him. It is to be a peaceful government. "Of peace there shall be no end." Are we not ready to receive such a King? Then let us pledge anew our allegiance to Christ as King, and let us seek to make this world into His Kingdom.

NEW YEAR'S PRAYER.

Through every minute of this day,
Be with me Lord!
Through every day of all this week,
Be with me Lord!
Through every week of all this year,
Be with me Lord!
Through all the years of all this life,
Be with me Lord!
So shall the days and weeks and years
Be threaded on a golden cord,
And all draw on with sweet accord
Unto thy fulness, Lord,
That so, when time is past,
By Grace, I may at last,
Be with Thee, Lord.

—John Oxenham.

A house is built of stones,
Of sills and posts and piers;
But a home is built of loving deeds
That stand a thousand years.

—Nixon Waterman.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The children at the Christian Orphanage had a very nice Christmas. The weather could not have been more ideal. It was clear and warm enough to be pleasant. We had no sick children. Our First Church, Norfolk, Virginia and our Franklin church had called sometime ago for all the names and ages of the children and both churches sent a present for each child. Every child received a present. Some received as many as four where some of their kinspeople sent in some. Our good and loyal friend, J. M. Darden, sent them 150 pounds of candy and a box of organes. Our good friend, J. D. Howard of Norfolk, sent us a 50 pound can of candy.

My assistant, Mr. Wagener, put up a Christmas tree in each building and the children and matrons bought the trimmings for the trees, including electric lights and when the presents were all placed around the trees they turned on the lights and they were really beautiful. Everybody was happy and appreciative for the presents they received. We had no accidents during the week and nothing happened to mar the joy of the Christmas season. Your Superintendent was happy too. He had all his children and grandchildren home for Christmas dinner with daughters-in-law and sons-in-law, twenty-one in all.

We will close our financial report for 1936 next week and we will then give the final income total for the year.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON,
Superintendent.

In Memoriam

BYRD.
Miss Sophis R. Byrd passed to her reward on December 7, 1936. Miss Byrd had been ill for three months and with the passing of the days she realized that her earthly time was indeed short. She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. R. A. Hinton and Miss Maggie Byrd; and one brother, Joseph C. Byrd, all of Harrisonburg, Va.
Miss Byrd, since childhood, had been a faithful member of the Antioch Christian Church, near Harrisonburg, Va. Not able to attend regularly, she was interested and did what she could, praying earnestly for the success of her church. Smiling, she willingly offered herself to God to go to the mansions of rest when He desired her to come. Fading to live again.
W. J. ANDES.

SMITH.
Mrs. A. L. Smith, of Newport News, Virginia, passed away at 9:00 P. M. on December 16, 1936. She was 55 years of age. Her sickness was of short duration but her going was expected from the time she was stricken.
Mrs. Smith loved her home, her church, and her family. For her love of the church and her anxiety for her children she made a lasting contribution to the life of the church she loved by giving a son, Rev. J. Howard Smith, pastor of the United Church, Lynchburgh, Virginia, to the ministry. An older son, Harvey, is in the military service of his country. Two daughters, Mrs. Orion McLamb of Goldsboro, N. C., and Mrs. Irmalee Kerlin of Newport News survive, with the husband, A. L. Smith. One son preceded her in death.

Funeral services were conducted from the First Congregational-Christian Church, Newport News, Va., by her pastor, the writer, assisted by Rev. R. L. House of Portsmouth and Rev. B. S. Via of the M. E. Church.
May the Father lend His comfort to the bereaved.
J. H. DOLLAR.

HOLT.
Whereas it has pleased Almighty God in His infinite wisdom and mercy to remove from our midst one of our beloved deacons, James G. Holt, who departed this life November 17, 1936, after a long period of faithful service, having served our church as deacon most acceptably since 1894. We, the deacons of the First Congregational Christian Church of Burlington, N. C., wish to express our appreciation of him in the following resolutions:
1. That we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well and give thanks for the life and faithful service he rendered;
2. That in his going our Church has lost a most loyal and devoted member, one among our best, but our loss is Heaven's gain;
3. He was of the quiet, unassuming character which made life a pleasure to all those who were associated with him true and faithful. He drew friends to him who trusted him. His place on our board and in our Church is vacant and our hearts are made sad, but while we as friends mourn our loss our hearts go out in deepest sympathy to his family and we commend them to the loving care and comfort of a dear, loving Heavenly Father.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon our records and a copy be sent to the family of the deceased.
J. M. FIX,
EGBERT TRUITT, Committee.

ANDES.
On January 23, 1936, God sent his death angel to claim our beloved brother and faithful minister and member of Antioch Christian Church, Rev. A. W. Andes. We wish to express our appreciation of him by the following resolutions:
1. That while we cannot understand the Divine power of the Almighty in removing from our midst our dear brother and faithful minister off the field for which he was so much needed, we, whose hearts are broken, lift our hands of faith and feel for the Master's hand and walk with him until we do understand.
2. That we express our appreciation for his noble and inspiring life and character, his self sacrificing service, his Christian Stewardship and loyalty to God's Kingdom and the Church.
3. We recognize that his life was a life of high ideals, wise counsel, trustworthy judgment and Christ-like spirit of loving friendship, which was the confidence and esteem and appreciation of the poor, the rich, the young and the old, and made him a trusted friend of all who knew him.

4. That we as a church extend to this bereaved family, our deep and abiding sympathy in their hour of sorrow and commend them to our Heavenly Father who never makes a mistake and can heal all our sorrows.
5. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of our church and copies be sent to the family and to "The Christian Sun" for publication.
Respectfully submitted,
EARL A. SHOWALTER,
VERDIE SHOWALTER.

Ring Out, Wild Bells

Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky,
The flying cloud, the frosty light;
The year is dying in the night;
Ring out, wild bells, and let him die.

Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring, happy bells, across the snow;
The year is going, let him go;
Ring out the false, ring in the true.

Ring out the grief that saps the mind,
For those that here we see no more;
Ring out the feud of rich and poor,
Ring in redress to all mankind.

Ring out a slowly dying cause,
And ancient forms of party strife;
Ring in the nobler modes of life,
With sweeter manners, purer laws.

Ring out the want, the care, the sin,
The faithless coldness of the times
Ring out, ring out my mournful rhymes,
But ring the fuller minstrel in.

Ring out false pride in place and blood,
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good.

Ring out old shapes of foul disease;
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;
Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace.

Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be.

REPRESENTING THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials, Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME LXXXIX.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 14, 1937.

THE WEST COLONNADES.

These Colonnades furnish a favorite gathering place for Elon Students, and at Commencement or other College Events, Alumni and Friends of the College love to linger in their shade.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE CHURCH FOR THE SUPPORT OF ELON COLLEGE.

The church is responsible for the support of Elon College, because the Church gave birth to Elon College and thus Elon is a legitimate Child of the Church Family.

We may say that the Church Family is made up as follows:

Mother is the Church of Christ.

Daddy is the Ministers and members.

The 7 avenues through which the Church functions, and the 7 children:

1. Christian Education.
2. Missions, Home and Foreign.
3. Orphanage.
4. Religious Journalism.
5. Sunday School and Endeavors.
6. Superannuation.
7. Southern Christian Convention, the "Big Brother" of all.

To neglect the support of any one of the "7 children" would be inhuman, unchristian, and criminal as you can readily see.

No child has done more for the Mother Church than the Daughter, Christian Education. This daughter, better known as "Elon," has been loyal, faithful and active in the "Church Family." She has helped to train and educate over 8,000 for a wide range of business and professional pursuits, and especially for the important feminine profession of home-making. No field of human activity needs Christian Education and Christian character more than the home. The home is the unit of the Church and of civilization and it determines the destiny of each.

We speak of great men, but what this old world needs is great women—home-loving mothers of Christian character. The true mother holds the key to the door of "Thy Kingdom Come On Earth As It Is In Heaven." Yes, Christian Education is the mediator that stands between the child's body and soul and reaches down and lifts him into the Gates of Heaven.

This child, Christian Education, plays a wholesome and wonderful part in our Sunday Schools and Churches. Visit the Sunday schools and Churches of the Southern Christian Convention, and in the great majority of them you will find Elon well represented—in the Sunday Schools as teachers and as leaders, and in the choirs and in the pulpits of our churches.

Elon's wholesome and Christian influence has not been confined to the home, churches and her auxiliaries, but has reached out into all phases of human activity. Professional work in all lines has been enhanced and business has been taught a "New Deal," "Do Unto Other as You Would Have Them Do Unto You."

Elon College, the Child of our Church, as we observe, has been and is on a forward marching mission, transforming the weak and the helpless, into Christian strength and power.

This Child, Elon, needs help—help not for self as such, but help that she may continue her work and even march on to greater and more glorious accomplishments in the future.

We repeat, the Church is under moral obligation to come to her rescue cue, because Elon is her legitimate Child and because this Child has and is doing her Christian work well in the Church Family.

This help must come from the members of our churches. Some can give more, and some can give less—but all can give.

A word to those with children of very moderate means. Probably you would say, "It is ridiculous to share my hard earned pennies with Elon College, when I am not hardly able financially to send my children to the public school, much less, sending them to college." We would remind you that you do not have to matriculate your children, as students at Elon College to be students and receive the lessons and wholesome influences taught at Elon College. Send your children to Sunday School, and there you will find Elon representatives as teacher and leader and send them to church and there they will be taught and inspired by Elonites, in the choir and in the pulpit.

Love determines our actions. Are we as members of our great church in Love with this loyal and faithful Child, Elon? Answer this question in the affirmative and this deserving Child will continue to grow, give and live. Answer in the negative and her unselfish and loving hand will pale and close, her body will wither and fall and her bright and glorious life will pass out—leaving a sweet memory that will be an inspiration for all Time.

May we as a loyal church, feel our deep responsibility for our own, and give her paternal love in thought, in word, and in deed, that she may continue to grow, give and live throughout the eternal ages.

ELON COLLEGE 1890-1936.

1890.

The town—A little depot, a six by eight post office, a ten by twelve store, three homes, and three "shaeks."

The college—The campus a virgin forest of oak and hickory, 22 acres, almost untouched by the woodman's ax or spoiled by the arts of man. "Old Administration Building," with unfinished tower, bare walls, chapel without seats, kerosene lamps, fireplaces, andirons, oak and hickory logs "Old East Dormitory" in process of building and up to the second story. The old campus well and the "old oaken bucket," cedar poles and tin dippers—pigs penned and cattle stalled on the campus!—a faculty of seven, faithful, efficient, sacrificial members—a student body of sixty-seven, less than a dozen of college rank, poor in purse, proud in spirit, determined in effort, ambitious for achievement.

The town—A beautiful village; nice homes; well-kept lawns; paved streets; well-equipped, modern High School plant; fine water system; row of stores; orphanage with handsome buildings and modern equipment.

The college—A campus with massive brick walls, ponderous iron gates, large oaks, flowers, shrubbery, memorials, a scene of entrancing beauty. Twelve buildings, five arisen from the ashes of "Old Administration" burned in 1923—Alamance Building, Whitley Memorial Chapel, Carlestone Memorial Library, Christian Education Building, Duke Science Hall—almost the last word in college architecture, beauty, modern equipment, and utility—a faculty of thirty-three members, university and degree men and women, qualified and eager to serve—a student body of 442 members, our finest and best, inspiring with faith and hope to share in the making of a new world—a history—46 years of service into which has gone the labors, struggles, sacrifices, failures, and victories of the faithful. These things have not been in vain. Their prayers and tears have come up as a memorial before the great Judge and Dispenser of all things. With all foundations of the past and the prestige of the present, the future beckons Elon College with larger service and greater achievement.

THE PUBLIC AND ELON.

For ten years it has been my privilege to work in the interest of Elon College. At this time of the year I am contacting high school seniors and arranging our prospective mailing list for the 1937-'38 freshman class.

I am sure that during the ten years I have contacted prospective students that there has not been a time when the interest in Elon was more favorable than now. The student body has grown until it has about reached a limit until other facilities for rooming can be arranged. The students as a whole are well pleased and go back home with good reports which naturally has a lot of influence toward getting others from their community. It is not now the aim of the administration to increase the enrollment, but to get a more selective group, if possible, for the incoming freshman class. By selective we mean those better prepared to do college work, higher moral ideals and more able to take care of their college obligations.

Some time ago I went to walk with a group of about forty high school sidered Elon the best equipped small college in this section and said, "I should like very much to see some of you go there this year." We have three freshmen from this school.

There are other cases similar to this that I could mention, all of which go to show that the public school officials of this section have full faith in Elon and its work. Some of the best friends we have never attended Elon a day nor have ever seen inside of a Christian church. They know it because of their friends who attended Elon and know if its work.

The friends, alumni and church peodesignated as the period in which the college part of the conference apportionment is to be raised. When a local church raises its quota for the college, it has raised 40 per cent of its entire conference apportionments. The college is greatly in need of these funds this spring. We are doing our utmost to balance our current budget. If the churches will raise their apportionments, our efforts in this particular will be successful. The country is more prosperous; money is circulating more freely. With the proper plans and organization to put these plans into effect the majority of our seniors. It was my first trip to this school and naturally I was a stranger to the principal as well as the senior class. After going to the office and telling the principal my business and getting his permission to talk with his senior class, I was impressed with the fact that he did not turn me over to the room teacher but went along to introduce me to the class. In his introduction this principal told this group of seniors, "You know where I went to college. You know that year after year I have sent students there. I have changed my mind and never plan to send another to my college." Here he told of how his college had grown to be so large that they could not give personal attention, there being little contact between professors and students. He added that he con-ple as a whole have full faith in Elon, and with their loyal support, I have no doubt that the present indebtedness will be paid during the time allotted for that purpose. The Church has an important part to play in this matter, and I am sure that it will not fail Elon at this time.

SUGGESTIONS FOR CHURCHES IN RAISING ELON COLLEGE FUNDS.

Every local church has what it calls conference apportionments. The conference to which it belongs has asked it to raise a certain amount of money for various causes and institutions of the church. One of these institutions is Elon College.

January and February have been churches can raise the amounts asked for for the college.

Here are some suggestions as to how the local church might go about raising its apportionment:

First, set apart a week to be known as Elon College week. Begin on Monday and in every gathering during the week give out information regarding Elon College. Let the pastors, Sunday School superintendents, Sunday School teachers, and officials be optimistic for the college and urge generous giving on Sunday. Let all offerings except envelope offerings in Sunday School, church, and Christian Endeavor go for the college apportionment. Provide every individual with an envelope in which to make his offering.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

OUR COLLEGE.

For more than forty years members of the Christian Church in the South have been able to say with pride "Elon College is our own." For a hundred years the denomination had struggled along without a college in the South. There were only a few dreamers who believed in 1888 that this Church could establish a college, but they were heroic souls and undertook a task which gave to the present generation a heritage for which we can be justly proud.

No one dare say that Elon College has been, is, or ever will be, perfect. Institutions are not made that way, neither are human beings. But whatever Elon College is, it is ours. It belongs to the Church known as Congregational-Christian. That means that every man, woman, and child whose name is inscribed on the roll of a Congregational or Christian Church in the Southern Convention has a share in Elon College. They may not have paid a cent for this heritage, but it is theirs all the same.

It will be a fine day for our churches when boys and girls in our homes are taught from childhood that Elon is their college. There may be other colleges bigger and better, like there are other parents more intelligent, generous, and kind, but as we do not wish to exchange our parents so we would not part with our college. We need to love it and serve it. The boys and girls should feel that it is a high honor awaiting them when high school is over to enter the doors of our own Church College.

WORDS OR DEEDS?

It is easy for one to say nice things about a going institution like Elon College. We have heard it from friends near and far—from those who have studied at Elon, and those who have visited for a day. The institution is worthy of the praise of those who have lived and labored there as well as those who stop for awhile.

It is an institution outstanding in the denomination. It is an institution recognized by the state as worthy of a place among its colleges. It is an institution owned and operated by the Church and for the Church.

But words are sufficient in this day, or any other, to sustain an institution of higher learning. Men and women of intellect and consecration are needed for faculty and officers. This Elon has. Students in search of knowledge much work long hours through days and nights, months and years, in order to make a college. Elon has students said to be equal to the best. A church college must have people in local churches who know of their institution, what it is doing, and what it needs to do, and who not only know but share in the work of that institution. This means that members in all our churches need to feel that they are in a very real sense a part of the institution of higher learning owned, and supported by the Congregational-Christian churches in the Carolinas and Virginia.

Kind words concerning our college are needed and appreciated, but even more than this, the college needs and will appreciate the patronage of students and gifts of the members of the churches. Contributions which are made to Elon College will do more than pay debts long since due. These contributions will open the doors of education to young men and women who dream of life, a dream that can be the better fulfilled because our Church has such an institution. A dime or dollar contributed to Elon College will aid young people in their preparation for building a better world, for the making real the dreams of youth, for the onward march of the Kingdom of God.

THE CONVENTION'S EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM.

The time has passed when the development of church enterprises may be left to chance. During the first hundred years of the history of church work within the Southern Convention chance seems to have played a large part. The organization of local churches was mainly the result of individual initiative. Organizations were effected wherever somebody thought best, and opportunity seemed to offer. Other denominations seem to have followed much the same policy. Perhaps such a course was justified when there was so much pioneer work to be done.

The day of the pioneer, however, has passed. We have come to the day when the development of Protestant Church life in this country demands the most exact appraisal of the worth of institutions; and the most careful planning for their future development. We of the Southern Convention need to take cognizance of this fact.

We are too small in numbers, and too limited in financial resources to leave our future to chance developments. There is an urgent demand for us to make a careful survey of our field. We need to know what are the opportunities and what are the needs of the organizations and institutions that we have; and then to plan the wisest course by which to measure up to our opportunities and to meet the needs.

If there is to be a worthwhile future for the work of the Southern Convention, surely that future is bound up with an adequate educational program. We grant too large a liberty to the individual, to leave that individual uninformed and uneducated. We are too largely dependent upon individual responsibility to neglect any phase of the educational process. Certainly we cannot afford to trust our educational interests to a system that has no top.

Elon College is the cap-stone of our educational system. It offers the opportunity for the education of those who are to carry on the work of our church, both as ministers and as layworkers. But it does infinitely more than what it does for our own membership. It is impossible to set any bounds to the sphere of influence of such an institution. We may trace the bounds of the Convention, and say within these limits Elon College exerts the larger influence and renders the greater service. But immediately one thinks of Elon men and women who are rendering a conscientious service in sections far removed geographically from Elon College.

It appears, to this writer at least, that the course we follow in our support of Elon College determines in a large measure whether the Church as represented in the Southern Convention shall exert an ever enlarging influence, or whether we shall become a group that has passed its zenith, and whose remaining days are marked by a gradually decreasing usefulness.

STANLEY C. HARRELL.

The churches of our faith in the Southeast need Elon College for the same reason that the churches in Massachusetts founded Harvard, namely, that we may have an educated ministry. This is not the only value of a college but it is primary. Our churches need a Christian college where young men may be encouraged to prepare for the ministry. We shall have no students in the graduate schools of religion where they can secure the adequate preparation for religious leadership, if we fail to have a college with such an attitude toward preparation for the ministry that candidates for the ministry can be recruited. Elon dom in dealing with students to lead them in the educational readjustment of their life so that they have not lost touch with the church of their parents. This delicate task of readjustment in an age of transition is being carried forward with marked success by Elon College and the future of our churches in the Southeast depends upon a college which has absolute fidelity to truth as increasing learning enlarges our horizons, combined with a profound belief in the essentials of the Christian religion. It has been said that a successful teacher of religion today must be able to "tell the truth without shocking our grandmothers

"THERE SHALL BE MUSIC WHEREVER THEY GO."

THE COLLEGE BAND.

Elon has a small, but excellent band. It furnishes music for public occasions, as well as giving opportunity for the expression of musical talent.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE UNITED CHURCH IN THE SOUTHEAST.

When the merger was proposed, many of the Congregationalists had their first favorable reaction because of the excellent work and reputation of Elon College. It is a tradition among the Congregational Churches that it is the business of the church to promote the development of colleges. Harvard University is a monument to that early solicitude among the first of our churches in New England. Ever since the merger these who were formerly Congregationalists, have viewed with joy the evidence of the strengthening of Elon College. As a former member of the Congregational Conference of the Carolinas, I share in this joy and am glad to state the reasons for my faith.

College has long had this atmosphere and by its courses in religious education has promoted in a marked degree the preparation of students for the ministry. There are now more than 122 men and women in the ministry and in the missionary field who secured their education in Elon College.

Churches also need lay leaders for work in church and school and such leaders are most certainly prepared in a college like Elon. All pastors have had the experience of having fine young people leave home for college whose history prior to leaving home made it seem likely that they would be the leaders of the church of tomorrow only to find that when they returned from college, they were out of sympathy with the work of the church. Elon College has had the wis-and without disgusting our granddaughters."

Granting the necessity of having access to such a college as ours, there may be some who might say, "Why not depend on colleges other than our own church school?" This is sometimes said by those who deprecate all emphasis on denomination and who insist that economy would be secured by avoiding the provision of a college for our own churches. To this there are two obvious replies. First, only in a college which we ourselves promote can we be certain of the kind of education which we desire for our young people. The other answer is that we cannot afford to shirk our responsibility for doing part in the field of Christian education. We cannot

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Elon College is the property of the Southern Convention. It is the prerogative of the Convention to enact financial plans for the support of the institution. Several plans have been adopted during the existence of the College. The most recent plan to supplement the regular income of the College directs the several Conferences to make definite apportionments to be raised by the churches. These apportionments may be raised during the Education Period and sent directly to Elon College; or, the churches may raise this money, send it to Conference to be transmitted to the College upon order of the President of the Convention. All funds raised by the churches for Elon College are credited on the Conference Apportionment for said College.

In this plan every church has a definite goal to reach and this apportionment is made in an effort to solicit the support of the constituency of the Convention. The College sustains the same relation to every member of the church, within the bounds of the Convention, and there is no escape from a personal responsibility to provide sufficient funds for carrying on its work.

Some day men of great wealth will count it a privilege to contribute large sums of money for such institutions as Elon College. At this time the institution is small, and, in recent years, its financial outlook has not been very encouraging. By several processes the indebtedness of the College has been greatly reduced, but it is still struggling to meet its annual budget. Under these circumstances, men of large means are not inclined to make large contributions unless they have a deep personal interest in this type of education. Until the men of large means can be reached, the College must depend upon the membership of the local churches to make small contributions. If the churches could be aroused to respond to this call, and meet this challenge with generous gifts, it would encourage the people who are able to make large contributions to come to the aid of the College.

Financial conditions in Virginia and North Carolina have improved during the last year. It should be easy for the churches to raise their full apportionment for Elon College during the year 1937. Now is the logical time to raise this apportionment. Every church will not find it practical to use the same plan. But some plan should be used, and a sincere effort should be made to raise the money. Too many churches make no real effort until the end of the Conference year, and then it is too late to reach the goal.

Use the plan best adapted to your local church. But approach the matter with an open mind, and a generous heart, and it is possible to raise the Elon College Apportionment in full. It will strengthen your local church and assist a very worthy institution. L. W. JOHNSON.

THE EDUCATIONAL ISSUE.

January and February have been designated as the months in which the college is to make its appeal to the Sunday Schools and churches of the convention for the support of the college. The present financial plan of the convention suggests to each local church a certain definite amount to be raised for the college and that this amount be raised during the months of January and February. These amounts have been apportioned to the local churches by their respective conferences. These amounts constitute a part of the churches' apportionments required by the conference. If the church will raise this portion of its annual apportionment, it will help the church itself in raising its conference apportionments and will be of great value to the college.

The college is making a desperate effort to balance its budget this year. We are making fine headway, but of course, it is impossible to realize enough profit from the operation to pay the entire cost of operation. The deficit is supposed to be made up from two sources; first, earnings from endowments. Our income from our permanent funds have been assigned as security for our loan, so not any of the endowment earnings are available for current demands. Second; from the local churches of the convention. This has been the plan for the support of the college for many years. The convention has asked the churches for a total of $12,500 for the college. By careful calculations it seems now that if the churches would raise this amount for the college during the months of January and February, we would be able, even though our endowment funds are tied up, to balance our current budget this year. This would certainly be an achievement.

I trust that the local churches may put forth every possible effort to raise this part of its annual budget during this period. If the churches could realize what it would mean, I feel certain that they would do it. At any rate, the college extends to every individual and to every local church its grateful appreciation of what they have done in the past and for what they will do during the year 1937.

May this be the greatest year for our church and her institutions that we have yet known.

L. E. SMITH.

DO WE KNOW OUR CHURCH?

The Christian Church is not as large as many denominations. It is not known nearly so far. The public has never known or been able to interpret the genus of the Christian Church. This is true because we have never known our church ourselves as thoroughly as we should. We have been charged with lack of affection for our church. If such charges are true, it is because we have never thoroughly known our church. To know a church is to love it, and if we are to know our church, we must be taught its principles, its history, its purposes, from childhood. We have our Sunday Schools, our church school, and our colleges, but we have never taught our children the distinctive characteristics of our church. We have never had a textbook prepared setting forth the origin, the history, the principles, and the program of our church.

We have received and given the impression that one church is as good as another—that there is no particular reason for personal devotion and individual loyalty to our church. We have grown up in this more or less indifferent atmosphere. We are daily reaping the benefits of such negligence.

There should be prepared a course of graded instruction whereby all ages and all classes in our homes, Sunday Schools, churches, and colleges could be thoroughly informed concerning the church to which they belong. This course of study should be taught in the home, in the Sunday School, in the church, and in Elon College. The ones of our denomination should have a knowledge of their own church. Members of our student body who are not members of the church would appreciate knowing something of the church that had taken them and given them freely of what it possessed.

This is to urge someone who has the will to set himself to the task and prepare such course, that our church may begin to live anew in our homes and in the hearts of our people.

L. E. SMITH.

RELIGIOUS ACTIVITIES OF ELON COLLEGE CAMPUS.

Elon College is a church institution, supported by the Congregational-Christian Church for the purpose of training young men and women morally and religiously.

Moral and religious training are encouraged in every possible way. Each Sunday morning at ten o'clock, Sunday School is conducted in the only the faculty and students, but for the entire community.

Regular worship services are held each Sunday Morning at eleven o'clock in Elon College Community Church. The sermon is brought either by our beloved pastor, Dr. L. E. Smith, or by a visiting minister. The messages are always inspiring and uplifting. Music for the hour is furnished by the Elon College Choir. The conducted by some visiting speaker.

A further moral and religious influence is found in the activities of the Student Christian Association. This organization is composed of young men and women who are interested in the spiritual and moral growth of the students on the campus. The development of social consciousness and international understanding in addition to personal development. The members hold monthly meetings. In the meetings they discuss some vital question. Some of the members of the Student Christian Association conducted a night school at a negro church near Elon. They reported a successful school and much interest. This is only one of the many activities that the association has done.

One needs to stay on our campus only a day before they begin to feel the religious atmosphere that exists at Elon College.

HOW ELON COLLEGE SERVES THE VALLEY CHURCHES.

To find the Churches of the Valley of Virginia Conference in their geographical location is rather a difficult task. One has only to realize that one church out of the twenty-two churches is a city church and the remaining churches are mostly located in the foothills of the Mountains. A more difficult task would be to estimate, fully and accurately, the good that these churches have accomplished in their respective communities. Yet a more and greater task awaits him who tries to thoroughly evaluate the good that has come to these churches through and from Elon College. These churches compose the Valley Conference and therefore the Conference has been benefited by Elon College.

This value cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. Although if an attempt were made to estimate the value in a pecuniary degree, the result would show a profit realized on the part of the Valley Churches at the expense of the College. What little money we have given to Elon in the past years would not, by far, equal the money that we have realized through the influence of Elon. Those who have been Elonites or who have been influenced by the Elonites are far better off than if they had never contacted Elon. Young men and young women have gone there and after a few years of study, they returned to the Valley better prepared to live. They taught school, preached the Word of God, made their community and other communities more sanitary by the removal of unsanitary

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE NORTH CAROLINA MISSION CONFERENCE.

Dear Friends:

I am sure you read with interest Mrs. L. E. Smith's recent announcement in THE SUN that Dr. H. Shelton Smith of Duke University will meet our people of the N. C. Mission Conference at Elon College, January 21, 1937, at 10:00 A. M. for a day's study concerning the American Negro.

Now, Dr. Smith, one of our own Southern boys, needs no introduction to our people. We know of no one more able nor better qualified to discuss the American Negro. We also know that there are great demands upon Dr. Smith's time and talents, and we feel very grateful that he was able to set aside this day for our conference.

We are hoping and expecting every church in our field to be represented. Invite and urge your friends from neighbor churches to come. Each person is asked to bring enough lunch for his or herself. The Elon ladies will graciously provide hot drinks. The ministers are especially invited.

Sincerely hoping that we may have a large delegation and a most profitable and pleasant day at Elon, January 21st, I am,

Very truly,
MRS. O. H. PARIS,
President.

Fonville, Secretary, Burlington, N. C., C. D. Johnston, Elon College, N. C., J. M. Fix, and Dr. James H. Lightbourne, Burlington, N. C. We work in closest accord and cooperation with our general Board of Ministerial Relief, Dr. Lewis T. Reed, Secretary, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York. At the annual session of the Board, Burlington, December 15th., it was voted that the receipts from the churches and individuals for this fund be published from time to time in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It is very gratifying, indeed, to note that so far the churches responding to the appeal for the Christmas offering, as requested by the Convention, have gone much beyond that of the same date in previous years, and it is to be desired that all churches will give the congregations an opportunity to contribute to this most worthy benevolence. Receipts will be sent to the contributing church and acknowledgment made in THE SUN of all money sent. On behalf of our Board the deepest gratitude is hereby expressed to all those contributing.

THE CHURCH COLLEGE.

Every institution of the church is to be evaluated by the contribution it makes to the church. It should ever be borne in mind that Christ is the Head of the church and is building His Church. His demands of the church are exacting. He is the center. That is to say He places the church, His church, above every earthly consideration and is depending upon the church to build the kingdom of heaven on earth.

In the light of these basic truths, it is impossible to over estimate the merit and the worth of the college to the church. The one thought of the college, or the sole thought that should control the minds and hands of those in charge of the college, should not be what the church could, or should, do for the college, but what is the college doing for, and contributing to, the church? In brief, what is the contribution of the college to the church? What has the college contributing to the church? To ask that question is to answer it. From the beginning until this day the chief concern of those most deeply interested in the college has been that of making the right sort of contribution to the church. This is most apparent and obvious in the ministry. If a strong, capable and consecrated minister goes out from college and gives good account of himself his parishioners are ready to admit that here is a product of the college and he reflects honor and credit upon the institution. On the other hand, if he falls down in his ministry, has defects in the use of proper language in the pulpit, or in the social circles, or if his intellectual and moral standards are not without reproach, immediately the fault is laid to the college. The strong minister reflects credit upon the institution; the weak discredit. Thus showing from positive and negative side that the world evaluates the college through the individuals who have received their training, or the lack of it, in their church college. On this basis, church and college with us become one. In the Sunday school, as well as in the pulpit the school itself, or the class taught, evaluates the institution from which the superintendent, or teacher, if a graduate, has come. This is stated as a mere matter of fact well known to everyone. The church college, therefore, is always on trial and is being tested by, and through, the life, conduct, victories and defeats of those who have received their training at the church college.

Those in charge of the institution are well aware of these things, and this motive has been a predominate one on the part of the trustees as well as presidents and faculty of our Elon.

tory, more or less complete, of the gains and progress to the church from the conduct and the life of the college. So far our Elon has proven its worth and merit by the contribution it is making to the church and on this account, it behooves the church, to support and sustain the college by every means within its reach. If we wish, and are to have, a strong church, then we must continue to have a strong and well supported Elon.

J. O. ATKINSON, SR.

IF NOT ELON—THEN WHAT?

To those of us who have felt Elon College to be a part of ourselves, it seems unthinkable that there should ever come a time when the College should cease to be. But if that should

Secondly, we will have broken faith with those young people, who will not be able to secure a college education except that Elon minister to them in this way. To be sure, some of our young people will seek other schools but their lives will fail to be enriched by the heritage our church can give through Elon College. But there are many others who will never go on, just as many of us who have been nurtured there would never have gone on but for our own Elon holding beckoning hands and a kindly welcome; for a College is more than buildings and equipment, it is a spirit which calls to spirit. How poor our lives would have been without Elon! Dare we rob others of the inspiration and help that we have so freely enjoyed? We can keep faith with our young

INTERIOR VIEW OF LIBRARY.

One might well believe the writer of Ecclesiastes after viewing a modern College Library. Elon is most fortunate in having a Library Building that is the peer of any in the college world, and the already well-equipped library is being enlarged year by year. Contributions of books and rare periodicals are always gratefully received.

From its inception till this good hour, the contribution that Elon has made to the church cannot be estimated in terms of material, or spiritual, values. While the church has tried to help Elon, the sole claim to the help on the part of the college is the fact that the college itself is helping to build the church, to make and build the church by working together in the spirit and fellowship of Him, Who said, "I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Only Christian men and women, or those professing to be so, are thought of in selecting a faculty as well as a Board of Trustees and others charged with the responsibility of conducting the college. So we shall evaluate the college and realize something of its worth and merit only as we make an inven-ever be, there will be some things we will have to face.

First, we will have broken faith with those who have founded and builded Elon, and the vision they had. With no funds they dared dream of an institution which would offer to our youth, under the protection of the church, a chance to equip themselves for life, one which would give to our young men entering the ministry a preparation in the fundamentals of life. We can say with reference to their giving to make Elon, what Paul said to the Corinthians: "For to their power, I bear record, yea, and beyond their power they were willing of themselves." They believed we would carry on what they had begun, and we keep faith with them only by carrying on.

people only by keeping open to them the opportunity of a fuller life through our College.

Thirdly, we will have broken faith with our churches. Since the establishment of Elon College our churches have about doubled their memberships and practically all of them were ministered by Elon-bred men. We believe that our church should offer to our young men giving their lives to the gospel ministry a place where they may be fitted for service. We cannot keep faith with them if we do less than this. We need the spirit of those pioneers of our church who were willing to sacrifice and to give because they were possessed with a burning desire to establish the College. We need the same spirit today to keep it alive and active. C. H. ROWLAND.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

OUR THANKS TO ELON COLLEGE.

For many years Elon College has meant a great deal to the young people of the Southern Convention. For the past two years, the young people of the whole Southeast have been included in the group training which has met there for the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training. Not only in the summer has the college furnished this group with rooms and provided them with food in the college dining room, but also several Holiday Conferences have been held at Elon College.

There is no better atmosphere or more ideal type of building for such a conference or training school than that found on a college campus. The young people of the Congregational-Christian Church in the Southeast have indeed been fortunate, for Elon College has been most generous in this respect.

It is doubtful if the Southeast Youth Fellowship could have developed to its present extent had there not been that real fellowship among young people from all of the states in the Southeast group at the Elon Summer Schools. Elon College has furnished us with the background for developing and encouraging our Southeast Youth Fellowship work.

This is an instance when the Church and the College has really cooperated, for the results have been beneficial to both. On the one hand, as has been said, the College has provided the means by which the young people of our church could become acquainted and the Youth Fellowship work improved. On the other hand, many of our young people outside of the North Carolina-Virginia section have for the first time become familiar with Elon College through attending the Leadership Training School. The favorable impression they have received at these summer schools has resulted in much good publicity for Elon.

The young people of the Congregational-Christian Church in the Southeast would like to take this occasion to thank publicly Elon College for its generosity in allowing us to use its buildings and meet on its campus. We greatly appreciate the relationship of Elon College to the youth of our Church and will do all we can to further its growth and development.

EMILY M. CARLETON.

CHRISTMAS CONFERENCE.

The officers of the Southeast and officers representing the various Youth Fellowship conferences in the Southeast who found it impossible to attend the Officers Conference at First Christian Church, Norfolk, Virginia, missed the most inspirational officers conference I have ever attended anywhere. Tuesday night through Thursday afternoon found those in attendance spending every moment possible in the discussion of effective plans by which the Youth Fellowship organizations in the Southeast may do their best work. Although there were only a few who could attend, much work was done. The Jacksonville meetin, a meeting to which you and I should look forward with much enthusiasm, was planned. The Jacksonville meeting, as you perhaps already know, is the meeting of the Southeast Youth Fellowship which each two years meets in conjunction with the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. Other definite work at this meeting included the discussion of Finance, Social Action, Missions, more effective Leadership Training, the practicability of projects, and in brief the entire Youth Fellowship program.

A word should be said about the host church. I am sure that there could not be a more considerate host church anywhere. Every convenience that provided for enjoyment and service was given to the officers in attendance, and as one who shared in the fellowship of the conference, I want to express my sincere appreciation to the church for opening its doors for the Officers' Conference.

My closing word is in the form of a request. The Jacksonville meeting, dear reader, is going to need you, and the least that you can do for your Church and your Fellowship is to attend. So make plans now to be in attendance at the Southeast Youth Fellowship Conference, at Jacksonville, Florida, April 21, 1937.

The Board of Christian Education has on hand both Bibles and New Testaments for distribution wherever they are needed. The donor wants all Sunday School pupils to receive one on their tenth birthday. Student Summer Service workers are being scheduled for next summer. If your church needs these young people for a week or two, please make the request soon. Hundreds of books are on the shelves of the Board. You can borrow them simply by requesting what you need. Write to the Board of Christian Education, 505 S. Main St., Norfolk, Va.

BUILDING CHARACTER THROUGH SELF-DENIAL.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
JANUARY 17, 1937.

SCRIPTURE :Matt. 16: 24, 25; Rom. 15: 1-3.

Most people are willing to deny themselves for a cause they love. Self-denial for the cause of Christian ideals depends upon our degree of devotion to Christ. Jesus made an all inclusive statement when He said, "If a man will come after me, let him deny himself."

Character building is the process of Christian nurture. Make character strong by self-mastery. He who seeks to save his life shall lose it, but if he loses his life for the cause of Christ, he finds it again. Sacrificial living must be the test of true living.

A class had been having lessons for a year in making a better world. Then one Christian Endeavor president made this statement: "The worst obstacle has turned up inside myself. I know all these things are good, and we did vote to have them; but I just don't want them enough to crowd my schedule with them, and most of the officers feel the same way."

Such a statement leads us to ask ourselves, "How much do we want a better world?" Consider the cost. What does it cost to have better race relations? What is the cost to work for peace? What does it cost to fight alcohol?

Discovering Ourselves—

1. How can you bring out the fact that Jesus' disciples were choosing the kind of person they wanted to be?

2. Can one build character by choosing what one should leave out as well as what one should put into life?

3. Why does any person give any anything that he might have?

4. Why did Jesus choose some things rather than other things?

5. How much and how great is the sacrifice which he makes?

Suggested Hymns—

"More Like the Master"; "I Gave My Life for Thee"; "More Love to Thee."

JESUS, THE WATER OF LIFE.

LESSON III—JANUARY 17, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst.—John 4: 14.

LESSON: John 4: 1-54.

Romance in the Everyday.

One never knows what is going to happen in the everyday experiences of life. Here was a Samaritan woman going at noonday to draw water from a well, and meeting there a man who transformed her life, and through her brought light and life to a whole village. One ought to live on tip-toe. One never knows what is going to happen, especially where Christ is concerned. To minds that are alert and to hearts that are responsive, life offers tremendous possibilities, and unsuspected romance.

Breaking Down Barriers.

It was not considered good form for a Rabbi to speak to a woman, or for a Jew to have any dealings with a Samaritan, but Jesus stepped across, or rather broke down these artificial and vicious barriers. To him a human being was a human being and a potential child of God, regardless of sex or nationality. At the very beginning of His ministry, He would have us understand that God is no respecter of persons. That a man's a man for all that.

Illiteracy in Religion.

When Jesus started to talking about "the gift of God" and "living water" the woman did not know what he was talking about. She thought of life in terms of material things. She was spiritually illiterate. There are, alas, today, so many people in our modern world to whom the language of spiritual things is an unknown tongue. They see only things; they do not see behind things.

Unsatisfied Hunger.

"Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again." Earthly things cannot permanently satisfy. There is that in man which cannot live by bread alone, that is, by material things. There are in many hearts a deep, unsatisfied longing or hunger, and these hearts have sought here and there in vain for abiding satisfaction. Man is more than a body, or even a soul. Man is a spirit, and only spirit can satisfy spirit.

Life's Abiding Satisfaction.

"Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst." Thus Christ puts in a homely way an abiding, spiritual truth. He has the secret of life's abiding satisfaction. He is that answer to the universal longing of the human heart. He meets human life at its deepest and most insistent point, and gives abiding and abounding satisfaction. One must, of course, drink again and again of the spiritual life of Christ, but Christ satisfies.

The Barrier of Sin.

"Sir, give me water that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw." Like so many people this woman wanted religion for what she could get out of it. And like so many people she wanted spiritual life on her own terms. Jesus said, "Go call thy husband, and come hither." It stabbed her to a sense of her deep need. She would have preferred not to have had that brought up. It would appear that she had been essentially sensuous and sensual, and she had gone from bad to worse—she was now living with a man who was not her husband. There can be no measure of God's grace in the heart unless sin is given up and cast out.

Dodging the Issue.

"Our fathers worshipped in this mountain, and ye say that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship." It is much easier to discuss theological problems than to face moral delinquencies. Many who seem to be so concerned with intellectual problems of religion are simply trying to cover up their moral shortcomings. Jesus is courteous and sympathetic, but He is firm and uncompromising at this point. His grace is for sinners, but only for sinners who will face and forsake their sins.

God is Spirit.

"God is a Spirit"—the true rendering is "God is Spirit." He is more than an idea; He is a Spiritual identity. He exists, and He exists as a person. He feels, He thinks, He wills. He has no bodily form, but He does have substance or essence. As Spirit, God is everywhere, He is not limited to one place. As Spirit God is approachable by man's spirit. Because man has been created in the image of God, he is fundamentally a spiritual being, and he can have communion with God.

True Worship.

True worship is not primarily a matter of place or posture; it is primarily a matter of inner spirit. Men can worship anywhere if they worship in spirit and in truth. "God is Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth," said Jesus, and then He added these stirring words—"for the Father seeketh such to worship Him."

The Messiah.

"The woman saith unto him, I know that Messiah cometh, which is called Christ—Jesus saith unto her, 'I that speak unto thee am He.' It was to a poor, unregenerate Samaritan sinner that Jesus confessed that He was the Messiah, the Christ of God. He could not have done that at the beginning of their conversation, but He had led her along, gradually unfolding to her the truth, until as she responded, He made the great declaration. Not to proud Pharisee or Scribe or Sadducee, was the revelation made known—they were too proud and blind to see it, but to a lowly woman of inquiring mind and responsive heart.

The Harvest.

"Look on the fields for they are white already to harvest." Anywhere, everywhere, anytime, all the time there is need for workers for the harvest is at hand. Wherever one is he can serve Christ.

A Witness.

As soon as the woman came into a new experience with Christ, she felt and obeyed the impulse to tell others. It is the natural and normal Christian impulse. Christianity began and spread in just that way, the telling by one individual to other individuals of the new life which they had found in Christ. Perhaps one reason why we are not more eager and more zealous in telling others is because we do not have anything to share with others.

From Heresay to Personal Experience.

The people of the city came out to see Jesus and to hear Him on the invitation of the woman. And many believed on Him because of the sayings of the woman. But after Jesus had spent two days in their village, more believed on Him because of first-hand experience. "Now we believe, not because of thy sayings, for we have heard Him ourselves, and know that this indeed is Christ, the Saviour of the world." One can be helped to an experience of Christ by others. One can experience Christ only for himself.

The Good News.

Of course, the heart of this immortal story as recorded by John is the "good news" of God's love and of His redeeming power. Here was a woman, an outcast woman, a Samaritan, a sinner, a derelict of humanity, the object of divine concern and compassion. Jesus lavished Himself upon her as if she were the most important person in the world. And because she responded, she found new life in Him, and also brought new life to a whole village. Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift.

UTILITARIANISM OF JESUS' TIMES.

"Why was this waste of the ointment made?"—Mark 14:4.

To speak of utilitarianism, or materialism, so outstanding in these days, is no new subject. It seems to have been in human nature from the beginning. In Jesus' time it is expressed by Judas who was the materialist of the apostolic group.

That there is much waste in the world one will deny, but it is certain that the unselfishness does not belong to this category. Spiritual values, love's gifts to life always pay dividends, not only to the donor, but to the donee and to the generations following. If everybody loved Jesus and served Him, the children of the present generation would be quite different and of the next much happier.

Prayer—O Lord, forbid that we shall measure things by the guiding principles of unselfishness. Amen

TUESDAY.

POORER OR BETTER—WHICH?

"Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ."—Gal. 6:2.

The world would be a lot poorer without Mary's gift of the ointment when she with penitent tears anointed the feet of Jesus with the precious spikenard and wiped His feet with her hair, one of the prizes of her life.

Perhaps there is someone within the range of your acquaintance today who is approaching some crisis. Maybe there is an act of love you can do to help him.

Prayer—Our Father, in these holy hours of prayer, give us triumph over ourselves and enable us to scatter sunshine and helpfulness along each day's journey. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

GROWING LILIES OUT OF SEASON.

"He shall grow as a lily."—Hosea 14:5.

To grow as a lily, or as the flowers of a "Watered garden," is the description Jesus gives to a christian who daily seeks the eternal waters from the throne of grace. You recall that Jesus compared the flowers to the gorgeous and costly vestments of Solomon, and said that these little flowers were more beautiful.

It is strikingly significant that Jesus should liken the true Christian life to these flowers. It is explained that the lily referred to is the Lupin, and that this is a flower of the desert which grows in alkali soil where nothing else will grow. It is a flower most gorgeous that covers the unsightly portions of the earth. Jesus means that the scarry tissue of off seasons, or the dry, hot, desert places will be covered over, and the wounds of the past will be forgotten.

Prayer—O God, grant unto our lives the transcendent beauty of Thy grace, and make our lives as watered gardens for the world. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

OUR LIMITATIONS.

"Till we all attain unto . . . the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."—Eph. 4:13.

The most of us are humbled with a sense of imperfection and incompleteness. Paul says, "I have yet not attained . . . but I press on," Jesus brought to us the vision of a perfect man and admonished us to strive unto it. He prayed that we might attain unto it. With the mantle of Christ's glory, Paul preached "Grow in grace" "unto the perfect man."

We cannot have Christ in the inner man without being sensible of limitations and imperfections. This is our salvation. Realizing this, the urge of the soul stirs to the passion for completeness, and therein we find the greatest proof of our faith.

Prayer—Our Father, who has made us for Thyself, give us the faith and the courage to strive for Thee, that we may grow unto completeness and be like Jesus. May each day find us making more progress toward the goal of perfection. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

GOD'S "ENABLING ACT."

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6:33.

This country began with faith in God as the supreme purpose of life. Our forefathers inscribed that faith on our money. It is still there. But we are trusting everything else but God these days. People are thinking that they know better than to commit themselves to a godly life; they trust themselves. They think the pleasures of the beach, or the resort, are better than the pleasures of Christian worship and service; they trust pleasure at their hands. They think that money is better than impoverishment which they fear might accompany Christian living.

We hear a lot about security. What is security? "It is in righteousness and the kingdom of God," saith the Word. But even God's laws fail when people put their liberty first. Christ's sermon on the mount is the greatest document on security that has ever been written.

Prayer—O Lord, teach us Thy way of life. Help us to know how to do when we say, "Thy kingdom come." Guide us and guide the world into this more abundant life. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HARMONY AND EFFICIENCY.

"Thy will be done."—Matt. 26:42.

We often meet the problems of life with the spirit of annoyance, and we plod our way through things dolefully. Perhaps we are submissive enough to say "It is the will of God." Maybe it is! But does that always answer? Sunshine and flowers are also His will, and these are the kind of things that we are to produce in life. If we live on the positive side of life rather than the negative, the spiritually filled soul will throw off troubles like a healthy life throws off disease. Such living is in the realm of His presence and His will. That means harmony and efficiency.

Prayer—Our Father, we come to Thee, O give us Jesus in our every day life, then we know that every cloud will bring us blessings, and life will be a flow of love, holiness and service. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"THE UPLOOK."

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hill from whence cometh my help."—Ps. 121:1.

Henry Drummond used to say, "When the outlook is bad, try the uplook." He said the outlook is often bad. It was for Job. But Job tried the uplook and won out. By the uplook he was enabled to make the outlook, though bad, good. What a wonderful thing it is to look to Jesus, to set our affections upon the enduring things that are above!

Prayer—Our Father, we would not fail when the way grows hard. May our lives be so set in the God-side—the sunshine side—of life, that every outlook may be bright. In Jesus' name we ask it. Amen.

CONVENTION'S RESPONSIBILITY FOR ELON COLLEGE.

The writer was not born nor bred in the Southern Convention; his licensure and ordination to the ministry were in the Southern Convention. His introduction to the Southern Convention was made by Dr. J. P. Barrett, Dr. W. W. Staley and his father. The introduction was not formal. But it was comprehensive. The introduction to the Southern Convention was not an introduction to the causes and institutions of the Southern Convention. This was made very clear. There were no equivocations or reservations at this point. As a minister of and in the Southern Convention, I was responsible as such to and for the causes and institutions of the Southern Convention. Logically the basis of this relationship was, and is, the responsibility of the Southern Convention for its causes and to its institutions.

From this inductive understanding there has not been departure nor thought of departure. It rang true then; it has rung true through the intervening years; it rings true now. And it has had and it has now the ring of the axiomatic.

Chief among the institutions to which this introduction was made was Elon College. And it was made with pride. Doctors Barrett and Staley had a justifiable pride in Elon College. For Doctor Staley, disloyalty to Elon College would be like treason to his country; unthinkable and impossible. The writer's father became imbued with this sense of loyalty to and responsibility for Elon College. A framed photograph of the Elon College campus and buildings soon graced the walls of his study. And soon his beloved Howard Hardcastle was matriculated at Elon College. And so was the understanding cemented and solidified; and it yet holds firm and solid. The responsibility is there.

How could it be otherwise? Who first dreamed of Elon College? Who confirmed this dream by a determination to found the college? Who selected the site and authorized its location? Who plotted the grounds and raised the walls? Who first sent their sons and daughters to it? Whose are the names associated with it? Who sorrowed when fire glutted its administration building? Who nobly resolved to build bigger and better on the ruins? Who rejoiced with pride when the present splendid buildings opened their doors for service? Who now is responsible to keep those doors open and to perpetuate this service? Why is such a question implied? Has it been raised by the least or the greater among us? Is there anyone with presumption sufficient to raise it? Could any other answer than this be given?—The Southern Christian Convention!

JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE.

THE ALUMNI OF ELON COLLEGE.

The chief asset and glory of Elon College is her Alumni. Possibly there are alumni who would not be considered an asset, or a source of glory, to the college, however, Elon with every other college must rise, or fall, in the estimation of the public, with the rise, or fall, of her alumni. Since the college opened its doors for the reception of students in the fall of 1890 until the close of 1936, she had given diplomas to 1066 graduates. These are in every profession and vocation, common to our day and time, and are on the whole giving a good account of themselves in the pulpit, in the pew, at the bar, in the classroom, in the medical profession and in business. Elon has never had occasion to be ashamed of her alumni.

The conscientious graduate of a college knows full well that he has not discharged his obligations to his Alma Mater by paying all dues and fees demanded of him, or her, by the college and is fully aware that the four years schooling at the college has entailed obligations and privileges, which can never be fully discharged, so far as the same is related to Alma Mater. We cannot estimate the worth and blessings of life in terms of dollars and cents and four years of college training in the formative period of life opens up avenues which lead to the life more abundant. In this way the college confers not only learning, but life upon the conscientious student and graduate. Culture is not enough. Scholarship is not enough. Learning is not enough. The college confers all these on the conscientious graduate and more than all these; it confers the inestimable and incalculable values of achievement unattainable without the College.

As President of the Alumni Association, I have been gratified at the deep interest of the alumni in all parts in their Alma Mater. These alumni, engaged as they are, in the busy affairs of life may not openly express their gratitude nor lavish upon their Alma Mater gifts that would indicate their loyalty and devotion, and yet I am persuaded through contacts made and kept with fellow alumni in all directions, that the loyalty and devotion of our alumni do not suffer from, but are enhanced by, comparison with alumni of other institutions. Our alumni love their Elon and they do well to love her, because they realize that there are unselfish and devoted men and women in charge of the institution at all times, who through real self-denial are giving the best that they have that they may send out graduates, who will not only reflect honor upon Alma Mater, but will give good account of themselves in the various walks and activities of life.

I BELIEVE IN ELON COLLEGE.

I believe in Elon College because of the high standard of morals taught there. When your sons and daughters go to Elon you can feel sure that they will have every protection thrown around them to help make them real men and women. All of my children, five in number, have attended Elon College. The atmosphere at the college was so very wholesome that when one of them finished, he went from Elon to Yale Divinity School, Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut, to prepare himself for the Gospel Ministry. Elon not only teaches a high standard of morals, but takes a vital interest in the spiritual well being of those who come to her campus.

I believe in Elon College because of the type of men and women employed on its teaching staff. Every teacher of the College is thoroughly prepared, having been trained in the leading colleges and universities of our country, and are always eager to impart information to the young men and women who come for instruction.

I believe in Elon College because it was founded by the men of my church, some of whom gave the best of their lives that Elon might become an institution that the Christian Church could well feel proud of.

May every member of our church stand by Elon in this crisis.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE CHURCH.

afford to be parasites and shift our responsibilities upon the shoulders of others.

All these considerations make it evident that every church in our area should make it a part of its work to contribute annually to the cost of maintaining Elon College and should also continually seek to send its most promising youth to our college for their education. Our money and our youth should be sent to the college in a continual stream of supporting strength.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

This report closes our work for the Orphanage for the year 1936. I am happy to say we have reached our final goal of $20,000.00 and had $16.00 to spare.

I am grateful, indeed, for the loyal support we received all during the year. I had faith in our friends in all the churches to believe they would see to it that we reached $20,000.00.

If we have failed to report any item that has been sent in during the year or at Christmas, we want you to know it has been an oversight. We would be glad if you would call our attention to it so we can make mention of it.

With this report, we bid the year 1936 goodbye and turn our faces toward new duties and new undertakings for 1937. Our goal for 1937 will be $20,000.00. Let us begin now to strive to reach it.

HOW ELON COLLEGE SERVES.

conditions, became leaders in civil and religious life, and have raised in a quiet and mannerly fashion the level of civilization from a disorderly and careless flippancy to an orderly, careful and inspiring life. Perhaps this might be said of other communities where Elon has never been known. But Elon has left its progressive, sane and stable influence in the Valley Churches which no other institution of learning has affected. Can one count this by dollars and cents? One, after all, cannot evaluate in realities and actualities the results of a College in the life of a group of people. Some values can be measured but not all of them.

Elon Continues in her noble way to serve the Valley Churches. Today there are six ministers in the Conference with five of them having graduated from Elon. Most of the members of the Standing Committees of the Conference have either attended Elon or have paved the way for members of their household to attend. Elon in the past has served the Valley Churches by training their present leadership.

Youth of today holds the keys to the future. The present leadership will pass away and the youth of today become the leaders of tomorrow. No longer is it possible to lead and become a leader of men, if you have no training. Upon Elon falls this responsibility. The youth of our Conference are organized, with most of the leaders being Elon graduates. Other young people are greatly interested in Elon. Would it be unfair to the adults to say that the Youth of the Valley are more interested in Elon and the achievement of an education than most of the adults? A survey of the field will reveal this. Elon serves the Valley churches through the training of the Youth, the future leaders.

Christianity is an extensive enterprise. It believes in making disciples of all nations. The women of our Conference are more energetic and active than the men in this endeavor. The Executive Committee of that valiant group is composed of women who have attended Elon or who have made it possible for members of their household to attend. Yes, the servitude of Elon College extends into the Missionary Cause.

Elon College serves to unify and to develop the faith of the Valley Churches. Physically the churches are far apart but when the sound of the College Song is heard, they unite their voices to sing the glorious melody. They seem to be more unified when the cry "Help" is heard from the beloved institution. They bend their feeble efforts to give what little money and support they can. If their faith is small, so will their collections be small. But when they hear of men who are doing their best and giving their all for some enterprise, their faith increases and so does their giving. The faith of the Valley Churches is beginning to increase in Elon and its leaders. Elon becomes the center of their activities because of the Orphanage, Mission office and College existing there. We believe that these institutions exist because they are a part of the cause of Christ. We, further believe that Christ is the center and giver of life.

The services of Elon has been unselfish and lovingly rendered to the Valley Churches. It has given to the Valley more than it will receive. Surely the blessings of God will rest upon Elon because of its services. Remembering the words of Christ, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," the power of Elon is undeniably great.

During the months of January and February, may the Valley Church make Elon unquestionably greater.

W. J. ANDES.

SUGGESTIONS FOR RAISING ELON COLLEGE FUNDS.

Second: assign a legitimate part of the apportionment to be raised by the Ladies' Aid, by the Sunday School, by organized classes, and by the church itself. Have committees in each group to work to see that its share is raised.

Third: appoint a college committee who will make personal solicitations during the week, taking pledges and leaving envelopes with every individual member with the request that he place his offering in the envelope and bring it to the worship service on Sunday.

Fourth: give the Ladies' society or the Ladies' organization the entire field of the church and Sunday School and ask them to raise the college apportionments.

The amount will never be raised without an effort. One of the leading pastors in the Eastern Virginia Conference said to me, "The entire conference apportionments in our present financial plan for the church can be raised, but it takes a lot of hard work to raise it."

If either of the above plans are followed diligently and enthusiastically any local church will raise its conference apportionments during the period assigned, but, of course, if nothing is done about it, but little can be expected.

ELON COLLEGE OFFERS EXCELLENT MUSICAL ADVANTAGES.

The Elon Singers on the Rostrum of the Whitley Memorial Auditorium.

Wherever the Elon Singers have gone, they have made for themselves a hearty welcome. On many occasions they have added to the enjoyment of programs both at the College and on tour. A Prayer For Youth.

By W. CLARK ELLZEY.

O Lord, give me the will to use my mind,
That Christ may think through it in my small place,
And help to bring His kingdom to the world;
Purge from it every thought that's base.

O Lord, give me the grace to use my heart,
That through it Christ may love all men I meet,
And show them that God himself is Love,
And that through serving Him all life is sweet.

O Lord, give me the courage to use my voice,
That through it Christ may speak today to men,
And teach the truths of everlasting Life,
That shape the world for Him to come again.

O Lord, give me the strength to use my hand,
That through it Christ may heal a brother's woe,
And help my neighbor through his awful pain,
And lift the load of him who's fallen low.

O Lord, give me the love to use my life,
That Christ may live again where I may be,
And thou shalt have the glory, but the joy
Shall be forever mine, in serving Thee.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

The bulletin of our Suffolk Church says that that church gave to outside enterprises during December $1,251, and, "besides this the church has taken care of its own most graciously." That sounds like news from a real church, and gives them a good start for the New Year.

MRS. WILLIAM T. SCOTT HONORED.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Congregational Church entertained the women of the church and several specially invited guests at a lovely tea in the vestry of the church between 4 and 6 o'clock, Monday afternoon, the guest of honor being Mrs. William T. Scott, who has moved to this city recently. She is the wife of Rev. William T. Scott, pastor-at-large for Congregational Churches in Georgia and Florida.

The rooms were beautiful with elaborate Christmas decorations.

Miss Lorelei Tait played two beautiful numbers on the violin and Miss Leize King, contralto, sang a group of appropriate songs in a very artistic manner. E. G. Pattishall, the organist of the church, accompanied both violinist and singer at the piano.

Refreshments were served from a table covered with a handsome lace cloth and decorated with candles. Silver services graced the ends of the table. Mrs. Edwin C. Gillette, Mrs. H. Samuel Fritsch and Mrs. Everette Leshner poured.—Jacksonville News.

POUNDED.

As I was leaving Mayland Church, Sunday evening, Brother E. A. Hillyard asked me to stop at the store Monday morning. I spent the night with Mr. and Mrs. John Spitzer. When I was leaving she presented to me a box containing a generous amount of good things to eat, including a chicken ready for the roaster, eggs, etc. At the store I found quite a space of the counter piled with articles too numerous to mention, which greatly increased our supply in the pantry. I called in the homes of Brothers J. D. Hillyard and Jacob Layman. Both of these good men were unable to attend the service of the church on account of sickness. In these homes we were remembered with fruits, canned goods, etc.

At my last service at Mt. Olivet, several packages of good things to eat were brought to our car. It was hinted that there would have been others, but the weather and condition of the roads prevented the people from coming together. The day before Christmas the mail brought us a dressed turkey for our Christmas dinner, the gift of Mrs. T. W. and William Durrer.

For all these and other remembrances, including cards and letters from our friends in various places where we have served, we are most grateful, and pray God's richest blessings on all who have contributed towards making our Christmas brighter and happier. May He bless all people everywhere.

FULLER'S CHAPEL.

Fuller's Chapel Church is located near Henderson, North Carolina. The church does not have a large membership, but it has a number of very splendid people—good substantial citizens. The church at large is acquainted with Pattie Lee Coghill. This is Pattie Lee's home church. Her family is still a member of the church and among the leaders of the congregation. Rev. E. M. Carter is the pastor.

The church's quota in the campaign is $420. I joined Brother Carter Tuesday, January 12th, to complete the campaign in Fuller's Chapel. When the leading members thought of the total amount to be raised, they declared it could not be done. However, Brother Carter and I went quietly from house to house, talking to them about the college and its needs and the joy of giving to save an institution that had served it so heroically through the years and coveted the chance to continue such services on through the future. When the day's work was over, we found that we had $299 in signed pledges and $180 in verbal pledges. (A number would not sign a pledge but gave their word that they would pay. You may count on such people, as they count their word just as binding as their signature), and $62 paid in cash on the pledges made. Counting signed and verbal pledges, Fuller's Chapel has pledged a total of $479 which puts it far over the top. The pastor was happy and the good people of this historic church were also happy. There are other members who were not seen, but who will contribute.

It is the plan of Rev. J. Everette Neese, Conference Chairman in this new campaign of the Eastern Conference, to continue this drive until every church is reached and the entire conference goal is raised. The campaign has been made in Liberty Church, Vance County, and is practically completed. The campaign has been partially made in Henderson Church with over half of its quota subscribed.

We are not working for large subscriptions, but a large number making small contributions. This is the plan on which the debts of the college must be paid. It is the hope of the campaign organization that every church will be thinking, planning and praying for a successful campaign in its membership.

GARMANS' SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

On Sunday, January 10, Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Garman and the Old Zion Christian Church, Norfolk, Virginia, celebrated their silver anniversary as pastor and people. Twenty-five years ago Mr. and Mrs. Garman came to Norfolk from Pennsylvania and began work with a very small group of people. Today there is a church of 300 members.

During the pastorate Mr. Garman has preached 5,025 sermons, led 2,100 prayer meetings, made 22,666 visits to the sick, given 500 lectures outside of the church, has baptized 1100 people, married 800 couples, held 1300 funerals, has had 3,000 conversions, and has received 1,800 members. Day and night, through heat and cold this minister and his helpmate have faithfully served the people in their section of Norfolk.

At the morning anniversary service Mr. R. F. Allgood was ordained to the office of deacon. In the afternoon, ministers and friends in Eastern Virginia and from the nearby churches were invited to share in the service, and quite a number were present. At the evening service Rev. Mr. Garman preached his anniversary sermon.

At the afternoon service greetings were received from Christian Temple, the Norfolk Congregational-Christian Minister's Association, Eastern Virginia Ministers' Association, Dr. Rowland P. Wagner, and Dr. Charles Eldred Shelton. Revs. H. S. Hardcastle, S. W. Phillips, J. F. Morgan and F. C. Lester gave their greetings in person. The Rev. Mr. Taylor from the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church, Rev. Kenneth E. Burk from the Burrows Memorial Baptist Church and the Rev. Mr. W. W. Grover of the Presbyterian Church shared in the service. An orchestra, under the direction of Professor Fluxue, from the Central Baptist Church gave a splendid musical program. Mr. Walter Starnes presided, and in addition to the greetings, music by the local choir, a mixed quartet and a male quartet helped to make a very fine program which was enjoyed by some two hundred people.

The Church presented Rev. Mr. Garman with twenty-five silver dollars, and gave Mrs. Garman a lovely diamond bar pin.

Among the local people sharing in the day's services were Deacons W. W. Starnes, Walter Pearson, C. S. Anderson, Rev. W. W. Williford, M. E. Carmine, C. E. Heath, Sr., C. E. Heath, Jr., and C. P. Meyer; the choir composed of Miss Mary Sneed, Mrs. Walter Sparrow, Mrs. L. A. Heath, Mrs. C. Foreman, L. A. Heath, W. H.

Walker, E. M. Daniels, Mrs. A. D. Cooper, Mrs. C. E. Heath, Joe Gillerland, E. Skinner, G. Swartz; Mrs. Florine Starnes, organist, and Miss Ruby Lytle, pianist. The male quartet was composed of L. A. Heath, Joe Gillerland, E. Skinner, and G. Swartz.

Mr. Garman says that the congregation has changed three times since he has been there, but some of the original members were present for the anniversary, among whom were Clyde Anderson, Mrs. Lucy Anderson, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Walter Sparrow, Mrs. Robinson and Mr. Sidney Sousa.

January 10, 1937, was a happy day for pastor and people at Old Zion Christian Church, and THE CHRISTIAN SUN family wishes for them many more happy and successful years in the Master's service.

L. E. SMITH.

ELON COLLEGE LOSES A FRIEND.

Among the many friends of Elon College, a number are outside of the actual membership of the Congregational and Christian Churches. Mr. H. W. Jackson, President of the Virginia Trust Company of Richmond, Virginia, though not a member of the Christian Church was a staunch friend of the College. Death came to him unexpectedly. His friends, associates in business, and members of his immediate family were greatly shocked. He was in fair health Wednesday. Thursday he was at home spending the day quietly. The end came while he was sitting in his chair. He was called to answer the telephone but did not respond.

In his death, Elon College suffers a great loss. Mr. Jackson not only cooperated in the plans of settlement looking toward the safety of Elon College, but personally asked the creditors to cooperate in the movement to clear the College of its debts. He volunteered that this bank would lend a sufficient sum of money to put the proposed plan of settlement of the college debts into operation.

About two weeks ago he invited me into his office for a serious conference in the interest of Elon College. In the conference he said, "I want you to save Elon College and to save it for the Christian Church. The Christian Church built it, it needs it, and it should have it. There are at least two men I know, Mr.——, and Mr.——, who can help the college largely. No doubt there are many others who can, but you should see these two men as early as possible and have a serious talk with them about supporting the college and remembering it in their wills. For, said he, "not one of us has any lease on life." Little did either of us think that the end for him would come so soon. Mr. Jackson was a man of unusual ability, great sympathy, and strong faith. He was genuinely Christian gentleman. He was a business man who put his heart into his transactions and was always governed by pure motives and the highest of principles. His family will miss his affection and devotion. The Virginia Trust Company will miss his executive ability and wise council. Elon College will miss his personal interest and his true friendship.

The college expresses to all who knew him, and particularly to his loved ones, its sympathy and prayers in this irreparable loss.

NEWS FROM THE VALLEY.

It has been some time since there has been any news from the Valley.

The members of Antioch Church near Harrisonburg, Virginia, are indeed glad to have Rev. William J. Andes as our pastor for this year. We are indeed proud of him because he is one of our own boys, and all are glad to welcome him home.

Work has started off good. For the months of October and November we were given a series of sermons on "The Cross."

From November 8th to 22nd we had our revival. These services were in charge of the pastor who preached stirring sermons each night to large crowds. Special music was by a Junior choir under the direction of Rev. William Andes. A fine service was held November 22nd when seven joined the church, five young people on profession of faith and two by letters of transfer.

A special Thanksgiving service was held November 26th, with the sermon by the pastor, the church being closed for a service of reconsecration in which everyone had a part. Our special Thanksgiving offering for the Orphanage was $58.50.

December 13th, we had a special Christmas sermon by the pastor.

On December 28th a cast of forty characters presented before a large audience a Christmas pageant, "The Message of the Manger." Mrs. A. W. Andes was in charge of the pageant. An offering of $16.59 for Superannuation was taken at this service.

January 10th, our pastor preached a touching sermon on "The Book of Life," taking his text from the book of Revelation. He asked that in the next three months all church members read the books of St. John and Revelation.

We hope that the good work started may be continued.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

OUR CHURCH PAPERS.

Something more than a thousand families in the Southeast have been receiving THE CHRISTIAN SUN during recent months. There are twice as many more families who have received it in years gone by, and there are probably three times as many who would profit by reading the paper.

Some have difficulty in deciding what paper to take. Advance is our denominational paper that gives fine reading concerning the united Church program and excellent articles on modern movements in the field of religion. Years ago we had in the Christian Church The Herald of Gospel Liberty, and the Congregational Church published The Congregationalist. Both of these were weekly papers. Advance is now the combination of the two and is a monthly magazine.

There are other papers which include The Missionary Herald at Home and Abroad and The Pilgrim Highway which appeals to certain groups in our churches.

But apparently there is a place for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. This is the only weekly publication of the Congregational-Christian Church in America so far as the editor is informed. It is intended primarily for the churches of the Southeast, although it goes across the country. It endeavors to promote the institutions and organizations of the Southern Convention and of the Southeast. But it has a larger job than organizational promotion. It endeavors to develop Christian life in the individual and in society. It is our weekly endeavor at religious journalism. However feeble the attempt, it is what we are now doing.

If the paper is to have value, it must go into the homes of our people and be read by them. Editors and publishers may get some thrill out of the mechanical work, but the value grows out of the reading on the part of men, women and young people in the homes of our churches.

A REPORT.

At the end of the first six months the editor made a report to the Publications Board and to the Executive Committee of the Southern Convention. Subscriptions received, were as follows:

	New	Renewals
July	25	38
August	6	49
September	14	147
October	38	85
November	68	106
December	34	66

This makes a total of 185 new subscriptions and 491 renewals, or a grand total of 676 subscriptions received during the six months. This is about one-third of what we ought to receive and what it will be necessary to receive in order to make the paper pay its own way.

There is one way to get these needed subscriptions, and that is for the pastor and people in the local churches to busy themselves about securing new and renewal subscribers to their CHRISTIAN SUN.

The present editor's contract expires March 1, 1937, and he does not know what will be done after that time, but he is exceedingly eager that THE CHRISTIAN SUN continue its weekly visits into the homes of our people and that its welcome will be widely extended so that the boys and girls of today will be prepared to carry on the work of the Church tomorrow.

CONGRATULATIONS.

The editor wishes to congratulate President L. E. Smith and Mr. John T. Kernodle, publisher, for the fine

special issue of the paper they got out last week. He is sure that the people enjoyed both the pictures and the articles concerning our College.

There is a promise of more pictures to follow. These articles and pictures make real to us our share in the promotion of higher education as it is being carried on at Elon College. Elon deserves our loyalty and our support. We are now in the period to think of our relationship to the college, and it is sincerely to be desired that every church shall seriously consider its responsibility to this institution of the Church.

F. C. L.

OUR NEW SECRETARY.

The Administrative Committee of the Church Extension Boards has recently appointed Rev. Thomas Alfred Tripp of Mustic, Connecticut, as Associate Director of the Town and County Department succeeding Rev. Abram W. Sparks. Mr. Tripp is a man of wide experience in rural life and work. He was born in Missouri, reared on a farm in Oklahoma and graduated from the Agricultural College of that state. He also studied at Northwestern Teachers' College and at Oklahoma University and taught in Oklahoma A. and M. College for two years. He preached for ten years in the Oklahoma Conference, his pastorates including rural and city churches from circuit riding to state capitol and college parishes; and served as Interdenominational Secretary of Religious Education in Illinois for several years. Subsequently, he graduated from Yale Divinity School, having had the advantage of the special rural training offered there. He has a fine personality and will, we believe, prove an excellent addition to our working force.

Mr. Tripp will be available for field service immediately following the Midwinter Meeting. He will be prepared to go to a community and remain as long as may be necessary in order to assist the pastor and the local people in revising and strengthening the program as may seem desirable.

While the missionary states and districts will be given first call upon Mr. Tripp's services, he will be available, as he is able, for other calls, and those who wish to communicate with him should do so at No. 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

WHAT MIAMI BEACH CHURCH STANDS FOR.

By REV. ELISHA A. KING.

[On December 6, 1936, Dr. Elisha A. King celebrated his fifteenth anniversary as pastor of the Community Church at Miami Beach, Florida. Dr. King is the first and only regular pastor of this church, and his service there has been a notable one and it is most unusual for a man to spend so many years in a pastorate of that type. At our request he has furnished us with the sermon which was preached on that occasion, and while it was prepared especially for that local situation, it has value for all as an interpretation of the purpose of a church.—Ed.]

After a minister has been pastor of a church for fifteen years, in this age and generation, he has surely won the right to speak of the institution and the work he has wrought into the life of the community. I shall resist the temptation to review the past except to say that during these years, I have seen most of our fair city built, have seen fortunes made and lost, have seen men and women come and pass away. I have married many, baptized their babies and have conducted many funerals. I have made thousands of calls, raised many thousands of dollars, preached regularly in this pulpit with only one exception on account of sickness (not counting vacations, of course), have given nearly five hundred talks over the radio, missing only two engagements, and so forth. During this period I have visited New England, the Pacific Northwest and Mexico, the Mediterranean countries, including Russia and the Holy Land, and have made a tour through Scandinavia and Europe. All the experience and material secured on these tours I have shared with our people at home in talks and illustrated lectures. These items do not begin to cover my interests or my activities, but this is all I care to say about them now.

In keeping with my recent sermons calculated to emphasize the importance and value of religion, I shall speak to you today about the "Meaning and Purpose of This Church."

I.—Its Organization.

When Miami Beach was first laid out, there were a few people in this region that thought there should be a Christian Church here. In the Providence of God those who thought of this first were Congregationalists and in the course of time Dr. Luman H. Royce came down from New York and built the church and parsonage before there were any church members. Dr. Royce found a small number of people here, really only 27, who were willing to organize into a church and take over the property together with a large debt. This debt was liquidated in 1925.

II.—The Community Church Plan.

It will be necessary here to say a few words about myself; otherwise this talk would be pointless. My early public life was spent as a trained leader in the Y. M. C. A. where all my relations were interdenominational. I graduated from the International Y. M. C. A. College of Springfield, Massachusetts, was a student in Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, (Presbyterian) and graduated from the Oberlin School of Graduate Theology, (Congregational). Other influences that shaped my ideas were the inter-denominational relations in a comparatively long service as president of two State Christian Endeavor Unions and both County and State Union Sunday school organizations. I became deeply interested in the Church Federation movement and that of the Community Church. Thus in thought and training, I have the outlook of an inter-denominational mind. Furthermore, I passed through the era of Higher Criticism, Evolution, and Modernism without ultimate catastrophe and learned to be sympathetic with modern thought without losing my Christian convictions.

I was not only invited, but urged to come to Miami Beach and cast my lot with a new and untried experiment, that is, of developing a Christian Church in a National Playground. I had no personal desire to accept the responsibility, but a sense of duty led me to the adventure. The church had no money and only a handful of members and a very small community. What could one do? It came to me as a sort of inspiration that here was the opportunity I had long hoped for to develop a real Community Church in spirit and in fact. As well as I can remember I told the trustees and deacons that I wanted the church to be for all the people here, Protestants, Catholics and Jews and everybody else. I wanted to be the pastor of them all and I wanted the church parish to include every man, woman and child in the city. This statement of purpose pleased the little group of men upon whom rested the responsibility for the business side of the church and on the strength of that declaration they began a financial canvass which gave us a working capital of $4,000.00.

III.—What Was This Community Plan?

As I am not dealing with the material history of the church, I will confine myself to the religious purpose of the church.

It was quite necessary to adopt some slogans and printed statements to inform the people of our purposes, and these are what we used:

1. "The Community Church is a church of the open door, the open mind, the friendly spirit and the community heart. Many denominations are worshipping and working together here for the common good."

2. Our Fellowship is not dependent on identity of theological opinion, nor of outward circumstances, nor of denominational name, but growing from a common loyalty to Jesus Christ; a common passion to serve the world; a common purpose to do justly, to love kindness; and to walk humbly with our God.

3. As to the purpose of the church we put it this way; "We hold it to be the mission of the church to proclaim the Gospel to all mankind, exalting the worship of the one true God, and to labor for the progress of knowledge, the promotion of justice, the reign of peace and the realization of human brotherhood throughout the world."

In my first sermon, fifteen years ago, I said, "Christianity is for the great whole of humanity. Christianity is practical. We are not here to use the community to selfishly build up the church, but we seek to Christianize the social consciousness, instilling into the people's minds and hearts, the ideas of sacrifice and service for the good of all. We are not here chiefly to win people through the Church to a Heaven beyond death, but we aim to bring as much of heaven as possible into the life that is here and now. The words to conjure with are these, mutual understanding, cooperation, brotherhood. We are here to live the Christian religion in our church, our homes, in business, in social life, everywhere and at all times."

4. Very early in our history, we published the following invitation to join this church:

There is a Christian Church with a broad-minded, friendly Christian spirit standing in the midst of a world of business and pleasure witnessing for the highest and best things life has to offer. Why not join forces and help to create here in Miami Beach a great Church of the Spirit?"

As the years passed, we had the hearty approval and cooperation of men of such varied points of view as William Jennings Bryan, Clayton Sedgwick Cooper, William Lyon Phelps, Roger Babson and others. Mr. Bryan was the means of giving me my first congregation that filled this church. Mr. Cooper wrote the following editorial voluntarily:

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"No smoking!" These words are painted on peanut warehouses, wood-working shops, and many other types of industrial and business places in the city of Suffolk. The words are found on many buildings in every town and city, in the United States, where there is a great fire hazard covered by insurance companies. The moral issue is not involved in the sign referred to; the whole matter hinges upon the probability that smoking in, or near such places, increases the danger of fire.

Now this sign is interesting and significant. Such a prohibition naturally reduces the sale and use of cigarettes and cigars. Therefore, it affects the tobacco farmers, manufacturers and merchants. Why should insurance companies forbid smoking on the premises of any industrial plant or any place of business? Why should the laboring man and the capitalist be prohibited from smoking? Is this order in keeping with the spirit of modern progress and personal liberty? If it is just to forbid smoking in a warehouse stored with peanuts or lumber, why is it unreasonable to forbid drinking intoxicating liquor on any premises? Is it inconsistent to forbid smoking because it endangers physical property and, at the same time, advocate the sale and use of intoxicants, if the said intoxicants, in any way, may endanger the health and life of any person? Is protection of property more important than the safety of human bodies?

This is the smoking age. One is compelled to endure smoking in spite of any personal dislike of tobacco smoke. People who smoke sometimes forget that other people may not be able to endure smoke without some discomfort. It is fashionable in many places to smoke in the dining room while eating. Some people enjoy this; others do not. It means a severe headache for many women who are not accustomed to breathing tobacco smoke in a closed room. Why not have a smoking room in private homes for the convenience of people who smoke? Is it possible to put up "no smoking" signs in our parlors, if smoking is not agreeable to the host, hostess or guests in the home? When people deliberately smoke in your home without asking any questions, what can be done about it?

This writer is not a radical on the subject of smoking. He does not smoke. He has no desire to press his opinions on other people. He does not wish to curb or interfere with the wishes of any other person who wishes to smoke. But frankly he does not want people to smoke in the home where he lives. Our home is not a place for smoking. The odor remains in a room for several days. Then it is unpleasant. This attitude has no relation to the personal rights of other people in their own homes. But apart from that personal word, is it not possible that smoking endangers the health of our young people today? The moral question is not raised, at this point, in these questions. If smoking endangers a peanut warehouse, what is the possible physical danger to the person who smokes? Should people who smoke have the privilege of smoking in the face of a person who becomes uncomfortable after breathing the air of a smoke-filled room? What are the limits to the liberties of people who wish to smoke?

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

There are two types of education in this country, the type that is supported and maintained by the state through taxation, and the type that is supported and maintained by private fortunes or religious denominations. They have been erroneously designated as public and private schools or colleges. The tax supported system of education is public. The privately endowed system of education is likewise public.

Some years past, it was considerably less expensive to attend a state school. Expenses are borne by the state through taxation. In recent years state institutions have conducted vigorous campaigns to secure funds with which to constitute permanent endowments and in many instances have raised large "Scholarship Funds." Even though their current budgets have been increased from private sources, yet the expenses to the individual student have been increased. The church supported school, also called a privately endowed institution, is likewise a public institution. It administers to the public in every way that a state institution does. In the church school special efforts are made to induce the young men and young women of the membership of that church to attend its own college. The purpose is not simply to see that these young people are trained for the responsibilities of life, but to see that their training includes information about their own church which they would hardly secure from other sources. In this way the church school makes its distinct contribution to the particular denomination that has founded and supported it. However the church college does not extend its efforts only to the prospective student of its own church constituency, but it is equally solicitous of general patronage. All young people striving for an education are invited to its campus. Education on the campus of a state school is usually considered secular. Education on the campus of a church school should be definitely Christian.

At Elon College we have our department of Christian education. In this department the college seeks to acquaint the student with the scriptures, with the history of the church, and the most practical and the most advanced methods of conducting the activities of a modern church along lines calculated to interest the public in the church' program. Its ultimate aim is to prepare the individual to make his contribution to life along definitely Christian lines and to assist him in making his approach to life and to the problems of society thoroughly Christian. In other words, the college itself teaches religion and it is not left to student groups or student pastors imported and supported by different denominations to bring religious instruction to students enrolled.

The program of Christian education puts religion in the college curriculum itself, and does not leave this important function in training for the service to voluntary sources.

The church school has justified its existence. The years that lie ahead of us will require, more than any that lie behind us, a leadership that has been broadened by instruction in religion and enriched by the spirit of Christianity.

L. E. SMITH.

HOW MY CHURCH RAISED ITS CONFERENCE APPORTIONMENTS.

There is an American proverb which says that "A Church can make or break its Pastor" and in conjunction with this proverb, I would say that "A Pastor can make his Church just what he, himself, wants it to be." If he has high ideals and profound respect for the various institutions of his church, his church members will, also, have them. Not all of them, perhaps, will respect the church's institutions, but a workable group will, and with this group he can make considerable progress.

There is only one logical and straight forward move to be made in the raising of conference apportionments. Out of experience, I have found, almost without exception, that unless the pastor is interested in the raising of conference apportionments, his congregation will show no initiative whatsoever. The members of the church seem to feel that if the pastor is not interested in the institutions of his church, they should not be, and as a result, nothing is done about paying these apportionments. Then, too, many pastors will not encourage the payments of conference apportionments at the time designated throughout the year, because they are afraid that when the end of the year comes their salary will not be paid.

The plan by which I follow and the one I would suggest to you, in the event that you do not already have one, is that during the various periods of the year—the periods in which we are asked to place special stress on contributions to certain institutions—you put forth special effort to raise the amount apportioned to your church for the agency under consideration.

For example, after conference the first appeal to our church comes in the form of a Thanksgiving for the Orphanage. At Henderson, we had a special Thanksgiving Service at which time an opportunity was given to those who had not already made their Thanksgiving contribution (the raising of the apportionment had already been stressed and worked by the Sunday School). The offering was not the full amount by any means, but was a good start and the other will be raised at a special service later in the year.

Christmas is the time when all Churches are asked for a contribution to Superannuation. At the Henderson Church we had Pre-Christmas Services and received, each evening, an offering for superannuation. The final opportunity for contributing to this worthy cause was given the Sunday before Christmas and when the contribution was counted it was over the amount apportioned to the Henderson Church.

In January we propose to place special stress upon the Educational Institution of our Fellowship and shall endeavor to raise the College apportionment.

Plans are already under way for the Easter program. Mrs. Neese is writing the Easter play. Pre-Easter services are under consideration and the members of the church already know that during the Easter period the apportionment for missions is to be raised.

After the Mission period will come Rally Day at which time a special program will be planned and an offering will be taken for Christian Education.

Thus when the end of the year comes, we will have to raise only a small amount to take care of conference and convention apportionments.

You can do this, too, but it takes work; after all, who entered the ministry to get out of work? I am sure that none of us did, so by the help of God and by systematic work, conference apportionments are no longer a burden to the Church but a real joy and privilege.

ELON COLLEGE IN 1937,

By a STUDENT.

Elon started the New Year, 1937, with a bang! Most of us came in on trains or buses Monday night to be ready for Tuesday's eight o'clock class.

Being away from school for two weeks surely makes one appreciate the place. All over the campus, boys and girls could be seen shaking hands and calling out a cheerful greeting. Everyone was glad to see everyone else—we are just one great big family.

At our Wednesday chapel period, Dr. Smith talked to us and inspired us to do better with our new year, which we have before us, than we have done with the year gone by.

A minister from Burlington spoke to our student body on Friday morning. He pictured to us how much we had for which to live. He told a very humorous story of a negro who was being chased by a large bear. Drawing near to a well he decided to jump in. In the well, while falling, he looked into the mouth of an alligator. Realizing that death awaited him above and below, the man reached out and grasped a tiny branch which grew from the side of the well. Just then a tiny mouse began gnawing the branch which supported the man's weight—but the darkie reached out plucked a flower from the bush and sucked the honey from its bud. This story drew a laugh from our students, but the minister made his point clear: No matter what circumstances we are in, we can find something sweet. No matter how hard the task, we can see sunshine if we look far enough.

Sunday morning for our eleven o'clock worship service, Dr. Smith preached. One of the boys who sat near me at the table for lunch declared this sermon to be Dr. Smith's best. Dr. Smith told us of a young man who recently came to his office, and of the regret the young man had for two years wasted in an institution. Dr. Smith urged us not to waste our time but to take advantage of today's golden opportunity. He pleaded with us to abide by the Golden Rule and not by the rule of gold. Dr. Smith stated that we were here at Elon College to get what no one could give or sell to us. We ourselves must earn our education. Dr. Smith closed his sermon with a gift of one more year in which to make good. He believes in giving one more chance.

This evening our vesper service will be lead by Miss Marcela Ackenhauser of Cincinnati, Ohio. She is planning a candle-light service.

THE COLLEGE CAMPAIGN.

The college campaign continues—I mean the campaign to raise $250,000 to clear the college of its debts and to augment current accounts for a term of years.

I realize that there is another campaign on for the college in the churches at this time. It is a campaign to raise that part of the conference apportionments allocated to the college. This campaign is exceedingly necessary. I wish that the church at large could realize how very necessary it is to raise the college's part of the conference apportionments at this time. If so, I am sure that there would be no effort spared to secure the necessary amount.

The other campaign is equally essential. I am convinced that the full amount of $250,000 can be raised. It will take time, but the job can be done. I trust that the pastors will keep the churches informed that all may know that sometime within the coming months the campaign will be completed in every local church. All we need to do this job, is confidence, enthusiasm, and cooperation upon the part of everyone.

When the Williams Company completed the campaign so far as they were concerned, a total of $64,000 had been pledged. Since that time, we have secured in cash and pledges approximately $16,000 more, which makes a total of about $80,000. At present, we are pushing the campaign in the Eastern North Carolina Conference with gratifying successes.

THE WAY OF THE WITNESSES.

"The New Testament," says a recent writer "tells the beginning of a revolution not yet finished." That revolution was and is peculiar in two particulars. First, it emanated not from man, but from God. Secondly, its our weapon in witnessing. That was the great "mystery" about which Paul writes, especially in Ephesians, a mystery "which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God," but now is revealed in the face and words of His Son, who said, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me . . . unto the uttermost parts of the earth!" There you are. Not with any section or sector of humanity, but with mankind God is henceforth dealing. There was a "chosen people." And there is a "remnant." But this remnant are to be the torch-bearers in all the dark places of the world so that the true Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world may be made manifest in its saving power.

And nothing is needed quite so much in this world today as real, genuine, constant, honest-to-goodness witness-bearers of Him Who said of Himself, "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life." The one weapon with which Satan and the forces of evil are to be driven out of the world is "the word of their testimony." This is what was employed to dislodge the Evil One from heaven. Yes, Satan, was once in heaven and he caused war and strife and bitterness there among the angels. But, says the Word, "They drove him out by the blood of the Lamb and the world of their testimony." They simply bore witness to the redeeming, all-sufficient power of the blood. And so the way of the witness is the way of God in carrying to completion the revolution which He instituted on earth through His Son. Now the New Testament is a true story of the beginning of this revolution. It tells of persons who went out or who were sent out, under the guidance, and compulsion of a new, strange, irresistible Power. That word is the power of God unto salvation of everyone that believeth. The way of witnessing is the way of God, and the way to God.

It has never been a crowded way; not even a popular way with church members. Many content themselves in the church just to have some part in some bounty or benevolence.

Such distributors of bounty and benevolence don't build the church, don't enlarge the church, don't add to its membership, nor broaden its domains. Jesus the Christ is building the Church enlarging and increasing it. This He is doing by "Way of the Witnesses." He chose to build in this way. This is why the only growing church is the missionary church. It is the witness bearing church. It bears witness by word of testimony that Jesus Christ is the Son of our loving Lord. At home and abroad, in fields close by and afar off, the way of the witness is the way of God—the way He has chosen to reach and redeem mankind. J. O. A.

A MISSION APPRAISAL OF 1937.

Among the glorious aphorisms with which the Ignatian Epistles abound, there are many as relevant to our day as they were to the days of Ignatius:

"Find time to pray without ceasing."

"Every wound is not healed with the same remedy."

"The times demand thee, as pilots the haven."

"The crown is immortality."

"Stand like a beaten anvil."

"It is part of a good athlete to be bruised and to prevail."

"Consider the times: look to Him who is above time."

"Slight not the workers."

"Let your stewardship define your work."

"A Christian is not his own Master, but waits upon God."

"Consider the times" is essential counsel to the foreign missionary enterprises as it enters this new year. Such consideration involves two things. The first is our duty to see things as they are in truth, with objective and dispassionate accuracy. No one is free from preconceptions and mental bias in his approval to any subject and neither friends nor enemies, believers in, nor critics of foreign missions come to the consideration of the present issues with empty minds. Those who have most at stake, however, are the men and women who are putting their lives into the work. We can least afford to be self-deceived. Of all people we are the ones who are most concerned to know the truth and to see things in and about the missionary enterprise in themselves, as they really are.

But it is not enough in considering the times to look at things as they are in themselves. We can see the present situation veraciously only as we see it in its relations and perspective. No time is isolated from its antecedents and its consequents. In one sense to be sure, every time is separate and unique and supreme to those who live in it and in it alone. It is their one opportunity to fulfill their task. It is indeed the past which they are completing and the future which they are preparing, but they were not here in the past, and will not be here in the future, as they are here now. Today is for them the accepted time. In this view, the old Student Volunteer Movement watchword, "The evangelization of the world in this Generation," is both reasonable and necessary. There is no other way that the world can ever be evangelized. The world for us is the world of our generation. The only agency that can evangelize it is the Church of that generation.

I stand at the end of the past; where the future begins I stand;
Emperors lie in the dust; men may live to command;

Over my head the stars, distant and pale and cold;

Under my feet, the world, wrinkled and scarred and old;

Back of me all that was, all the limitless past,

The future awaiting beyond, silent, unattended, vast;

I at the center of all that has been or that is to be—

The task still unfinished and now God and man are depending on me!

But though each time stands alone and needs to be considered by itself and in itself, it needs to remember that what it is to itself, other times have been to themselves and that each time must consider its own significance, not to itself alone, but to and in the long movement of all the generations. How can we know until the end which were the most crucial and critical of all the times? We are both right and wrong in claiming the uniqueness and crisis-significance of our own time; right because it is our time and our one opportunity, wrong because our strength and wisdom for our own future requires a calm and discerning appraisal of other times. It is easy to fall into a panic and regard our own day of disorder and confusion as the supreme and critical day. It is good to think this to the extent that we are made earnest and resolute by the thought, but bad to the extent that we grow feverish and fearful and forfeit our sense of proportion and perspective and lose our calmness of judgment and our confidence as to the future.

We listen to "the challenge of the present crisis." We are told that "We are living, we are dwelling in a grand and awful time," that "Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide." But we forget that all these declarations are quotations from another age. They are no more real and true than they were to the men of three generations ago.

THE BISHOPS' CRUSADE.

The largest simultaneous Methodist project in recent years will be the "Bishop's Crusade" to awaken the churches to their responsibility of winning the unchurched masses in America. Plans for the evangelistic movement, to include the entire South, will be drawn at New Orleans, January 5th to 7th. Rallies in key-centers from coast to coast will then be held in the interest of foreign missions and the forward movement of the churches.

E. Stanley Jones, Bishop Oxenham and others are to be present at New Orleans to plead for more evangelistic fervor.—from Missionary Review of the World.

MIAMI BEACH CHURCH.

"The voice of the city cannot strike the highest note without the voice of the Church. Regardless of whether we are professionally religious or not, we would not care to live in a town without a Church. Our American ancestors built their towns about the little red school house and the steeples of their places of worship. We have here already a fine modern Community Church. Our Church is broad in spirit and is worthy of staunch support. Here in a free church, we have a chance to show the great fact that religion is a bigger thing than sects, and that the spirit of Christianity is more important than the letter either of the Bible or of the creeds. The Church, moreover, supplements the school in the region of the heart and spirit. The friendliest city is composed of people who think of others as well as of themselves, and have not forgotten that the Golden Rule is still operative in successful careers."

Roger Babson added these words to encourage one of our financial campaigns:

"One of the very best things at Miami Beach is the Community Church. It is not only the Soul of the City but has been a silent but potent factor in making Miami Beach what it is. For this reason every parent, every property owner and every one else interested in the prosperity of Miami Beach should liberally support the Community Church."

I present these slogans and statements to give you some insight into what we were trying to do, and how some people of wide vision have encouraged us.

IV.—The Working of the Plan.

From the very first the church made its appeal to the thoughtful people of the community emphasizing those religious beliefs common to all Christians. Denominationalism has not been stressed. The outlook of the minister has been liberal, but always evangelical.

In joining this church the applicant for membership is expected to give his general approval of the following statement of faith and covenant:

"The church welcomes any to its membership who love the Lord Jesus Christ and who propose to live according to His law of Love and Service.

"While declaring in a general way our steadfast allegiance to the common faith usually held by Evangelical Christians, we feel it incumbent upon us to specifically state that we hold it to be the mission of the church to proclaim the Gospel to all mankind exalting the worship of the one true God, and to labor for the progress of knowledge, the promotion of justice, the reign of peace and the realization of human brotherhood throughout the world.

"While we believe that the Christian Bible contains the will of God and while we undertake to live according to its teachings in so far as we understand them, we nevertheless believe in the freedom and responsibility of the individual soul, and the right of private judgment, both of which are in keeping with our basic principle of democracy in faith, polity and fellowship."

V.—The Covenant.

In uniting with this church we ask you to enter into the following covenant with us: You promise to give yourself to its service, to work for its upbuilding, to support its activities and to walk with all its members and with all men in a spirit of charity and faithfulness.

In this age we believe this statement includes all that is essential.

VI.—The Personal Appeal.

During the fifteen years of my occupancy of this pulpit, I have kept a careful record and file of every sermon preached and in looking over that list, I find my preaching has been largely Biblical, with special emphasis on the life of Christ and of Paul, with such other themes as present affirmative side of the Christian life.

When I say my preaching has been Biblical, I mean that not only have I preached from the Bible as a source-book, but I have expounded the Bible. I have preached on the various Bible books, have expounded most of the important Psalms, the drama of Job, the Prophets, the life of Jesus in extended series of sermons, the life of Paul and have expounded many of the New Testament books. I have observed Universal Bible Sunday each year since it started with illustrated lectures (as I am to give tonight) and have taught many Bible classes, and have written many published articles about the Bible.

I have refrained entirely from negatives. I have a conviction of long standing that it is better to affirm than deny, and I have preached only that which I have personally believed. And I have excluded from the pulpit party politics and unnecessary controversial questions. In one sentence let me say I have sought to exalt Jesus Christ, have presented the Christian Church as a necessary and valuable institution, and have sought to emphasize those things that bind Christians together rather than separate them.

And now I wish more than ever that some of you would join this church and help to make it all the more a happy Church home for man and woman, children and youth, thus witnessing for Christ in a world of pleasure, business and secularity. If I mistake not, the Master calls you.

LET'S KEEP UP WITH THE TIMES.

Not all of us agree that we want to "keep up with the times" in the sense of participating in all the new fads and fancies which appear. However, if we would be broadminded and tolerant, it is necessary to be informed about current trends and practices.

Everyone, no matter what his profession, will accomplish more and succeed quicker if he keeps in touch with the developments in his particular field. In this way, he can take advantage of the experience of others. He can choose the best from various sources.

The same thing holds true in the field of religious education—in connection with those who are interested in Youth Fellowship work. We should be eager to find out what other youth groups are doing; what the latest developments are in the field of religious drama; where we can find poetry to use in our worship services; what fields of social action are open especially to young people. The list is endless.

Miss Lucy Eldredge has suggested that we present at least one book, or bulletin, or article each week as a suggestion to you. Some of this material will be new, some of it may have been published for several years but still be authoritative in its field.

Rev. J. Everette Neese, of Henderson, N. C., the Supt. of Publications for the Southeast Youth Fellowship, is going to begin soon to present such an item to you each week. In the meantime, suggestions will come from the editor of this page and from the office of the Board of Christian Education.

When any of you read something which is particularly helpful to you, won't you write us about it, so that we may suggest it to others?

LEADERSHIP THE NEED OF MOST CHURCHES.

Why do we sometimes become disinterested in our church society programs? Is it because the programs have been planned so diligently, or is it because they have not been arranged under the right type of leadership? Program Committees often apply their most circumspect attention to a program, and then the program will not be attractive enough to stamp an everlasting impression on the minds of the audience. This interest is lacking because the programs have not been supervised by trained leaders. Leadership is essential in every church, in all societies, organizations, and in every walk of life. A teacher of mathematics must be trained to teach that particular subject. Is it not just as important to train your Sunday School teachers?

You might ask yourself, how can I train myself to do better work in my society or in my church? First, I would suggest the summer training conference, and second, The Standard Leadership Curriculum—twelve course-units leading to a final diploma, offered in training schools, local church classes, and by correspondence. Information concerning Leadership Training Courses may be obtained by writing to the Congregational Education Society, Department of Leadership Training, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass., or the Board of Christian Education, 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Va.

Superintendent, Leadership Training, East. N. C. Youth Fellowship.

THE PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM.

This is Bulletin 57 of the Pilgrim Fellowship, which contains information about current helps for young people in preparing programs—Christian life Topics with thought-provoking comments under each—suggestions for material for special days, etc. Order from the editor of this page, or the Board of Christian Education, 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia. Free to leaders!

LIBERTY YOUNG PEOPLE.

We have an active group of young people at Liberty (Vance) Congregational-Christian Church. They have shown a loyal spirit to the pastor and to the church. They respond willingly to any thing the pastor asks them to do for the church.

A very helpful program was given on Thanksgiving Day at the Vance County Home. The Sunday evening before Christmas, a play, "Gifts for the Christ Child" was presented. Christmas baskets were presented to some needy families in the community. The Sunday evening following Christmas, they gave a candle-light service in keeping with the spirit of the season. In addition to the expenses of the society, they make contribution to the Orphanage, missions and the church.

These young people have launched out into the New Year with a resolution to give one program a month outside the Christian Endeavor. They also have a determination to build up a more effective Christian Endeavor and create an interest among the young people of the community.

To work with such a group makes the task of a pastor a pleasant one.

WHAT DO I KNOW ABOUT MY CHURCH?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
JANUARY 31, 1937.

SCRIPTURE—I. Tim 3:14-15.

Jesus said to Simon Peter, "Upon thee I will build my church." The Church was established upon a witnessing faith, one that declared Jesus as the Son of God. The Church must be built at the cost of sacrifice. Jesus gave His life for it. This fact makes the Church a living testimony to the power of God.

Each individual has been given another chance through the Church. New life is offered; and a new hope has been given. The Church also challenges us to a great task. "Arise and walk" has a meaning for us if we accept the challenge.

The Church which Jesus founded began with "good news" found its way into our country. Various denominations are seeking to promote the cause of the Kingdom of God. This topic should lead us into a better knowledge of our church and also cause a greater loyalty to its cause.

For Discussion—

1. What is my church? Why is it called a church?

2. How did the Church begin? What relation does my church have to the Church which Jesus founded?

3. What does the church teach?

4. How does the church give power?

5. Make a list of the best church hymns.

6. Why believe in the Church?

7. What loss would there be to a community without a church?

8. What would happen to America if for twenty-five years some dictator should prohibit all teachings of Jesus?

Suggested Hymns—

"The Church's One Foundation," Lead On, O King Eternal," "Onward Christian Soldiers."

TWO MIRACLES OF MERCY.

LESSON IV—JANUARY 24, 1936.

GOLDEN TEXT: The very works that I do, bear witness of me that the Father hath sent me.—John 5:36.

LESSON: John 5:1-6, 71.

This lesson embodies the account of several miracles, two of which form the Printed Text for more specific study. Perhaps a word on miracles is in order then, by way of introduction. First of all, a miracle is not a violation of natural law; it simply goes beyond natural law. In other words, a miracle is "an event which cannot be accounted for as produced by any of the known forces of nature and which is therefore attributed to a supernatural force." It deviates from the known laws of nature, or transcends our knowledge of these laws. An element of faith is basic to belief in miracles, but a man does not have to lay aside his reason. Miracles do not defy law; they simply obey laws that are beyond our ordinary knowledge.

In the second place, it should be said that we should not argue from the fact that because Jesus performed miracles He was the Son of God. The truth is rather that because He was the Son of God He could perform what we call miracles. So responsive was He to the spiritual universe, so fully was He in harmony with the Father's will, that He could release or utilize forces that ordinary human beings could not use. I believe in miracles, so-called, because I believe in Christ. If a man really believes in Christ the supreme miracle, it is not difficult to believe in the miraculous things which Christ did.

And it might be added that it is wrong to think of Jesus as a mere miracle-worker. He tried to avoid giving this impression. He felt that it might obscure His real mission. And it should be noted that He never used His miraculous power for selfish ends. His miracles were miracles of mercy. They were evidences or tokens of God's concern for His children. The less one knows about God the more he is concerned to defend the miracles. The more He knows about God the less concern has he for miracles in the commonly accepted terms.

A Miracle of Healing.

One Among Many. "In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk . . . When Jesus saw him lying." Christ sees us as individuals, never in a mass. People are not an oblong blur to Him, but infinite persons. The Master knows about you and cares for you.

"Wouldst thou be made whole." Jesus cannot do much, indeed He cannot do anything for a man until the man desires to have something done, until he feels a sense of need. And more. For Jesus really said, "Will you will?" rather than "Do you want to?" Christ can do anything when a man reinforces his desire with his will.

"I have no man . . . to put me into the pool." Poor fellow, how desperately alone he was, how much he needed help. There are multitudes today who seem to have no one who cares for them. There are many lonely souls. In the mad rush of each looking for himself, they have been overlooked.

"Arise, take up thy bed and walk." It was a summons to the impossible. It was a challenge to faith. It was a call to action. It went to the heart of the man's problem. And it was a brief embodiment of the Christian message. Men were created by God to be upright, to stand and to walk. Christianity puts men on their feet, gives them self-respect, sets them to doing things and going places, makes them new.

"And straightway the man was made whole, and took up his bed and walked." When in obedience to the divine message he did what he could, he received divine help. He availed himself of the divine resources and he did the impossible. He who tries to obey Christ's commands will have Christ's help.

"Now it was the sabbath on that day." Jesus used the Sabbath for high ends. It is a far cry to the way some moderns use it, even professing Christians."

A Miracle of Feeding.

"There is a lad here." Only an ordinary boy, but he held the key to the situation. In your home, in your class, in your town, there is here a lad and there a lad who holds the key to the welfare of his fellowmen in the days to come. We had better see to it that that lad gets the right outlook on life and is inspired by the right ideals of conduct.

"But what are these among so many?" We have a tendency to belittle and to despise our limited talents and means. It is not, however, a question of what you would do if you had what you would like to have; it is a question of whether you are willing to allow Jesus to have and to use what you do have.

"Make the people sit down." Let all things be done decently and in order. Religion can of course be too formal and stiff. But there is a beauty of holiness. And there is a place for system and order and efficiency in church work.

"And Jesus took the loaves . . . and having given thanks. He was grateful for such as he had. The thankful heart sees many blessings where the ungrateful heart is blind to all of them.

"And when they were all filled." The word indicates that they had had more than enough. Christ does not do things by halves. He satisfies completely. He does more than we expect, exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think.

"Gather up the broken pieces which remain over that nothing be lost." Waste is sin, whether it be waste of money or food or time or life. There is a divine economy.

"So they gathered them up and filled twelve baskets with broken pieces." After the disciples had ministered or distributed to others there was enough for them. The more we share the more we shall have. He who looks out for others will not suffer himself.

"When he perceived that they were about to come and take him by force to make him king, he withdrew again into the mountain himself alone." He wanted to be king, but not by force. He would rule, but only by love. It was perhaps the old temptation which had come to him at the beginning of his ministry. He must go alone again and win the mastery. A King, but the King of Love. And the way of love was the way of a Cross.

AN APPRECIATION.

As president of the college, I want to express my personal appreciation to everyone who contributed an article in the interest of Elon College as published in the special college issue of THE SUN last week and that may appear in future issues.

I wish also to express by gratitude and the appreciation of the college itself to the editor, Rev. F. C. Lester, and to the publisher, Mr. John T. Kernodle, for the splendid appearance of the paper. It is a job very well done.

L. E. SMITH.

A CORRECTION.

The excellent article, "The Responsibility of the Church for the Support of Elon College," was from the pen of Dr. J. E. Rawles of Suffolk, Virginia. Through an error, it was credited to another of Elon's good friends, Col. J. E. West.

MONDAY.

THE MOST SATISFYING EXPERIENCE.

"When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy father which is in secret."—Matt. 6:6.

One of the most memorable experiences with the Lord Jesus Christ was that of the disciples, when behind closed doors in the upper room they were praying and discussing Jesus and He appeared in their midst.

This was a physical demonstration of what our Lord taught in the sermon on the mount when He said, "When thou hast shut the door . . . the father which seeth in secret will reward thee openly."

The world's greatest saints are those who have felt the Spirit of God when behind closed doors alone with the Maker. We have been reminded, O so often, that the voice of God cannot be heard distinctly when midst the noise of the world. Only when that is shut out can it be heard.

Prayer—O Lord, help us to make this moment of prayer one when we can shut out the world and shut God in that we may know Him. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WHAT SHALL I DO?

"What shall I do with Jesus."—Matt. 27:22.

R. P. Shuler, in Praying Hands, brings us face to face with the living question of today. He says: "Questions everywhere. What shall we do with the aged? What shall we do with the unemployed? What shall we do with war? What shall we do with the world's injustices? What shall we do with the spirit of unrest, discontent, strife and hate? None of these questions are answered satisfactorily."

And then he goes on to say that these are not the most important questions, although they are very vital. But the important question is the same it has always been, "What shall we do with Jesus?" The answer to the other questions is involved in the answer to this one. Practice what Jesus taught in individual life and, as bitter waters cannot flow from the sweet spring, neither can evil flow from the life of an individual, or a nation, whose heart is set on God.

Prayer—O Lord, forgive us. We have lost our way. Turn us back and to Thee through Jesus Christ, Thy Son and our Savior. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

"This is life eternal, that they might know Thee the only true God and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent."—Jno. 17:3.

Everything depends upon what we think. Character is influenced, conduct is directed, and destiny is determined by what we think. If this be true, the most potent factor in life is what we think about God.

Christian character with God in the center is what Jesus called "eternal life." It comes to one and all who know Him. Cecil Aker, exclaimed "How foolish to say that it makes no difference what we think about God just so we live right, as if it were possible to think crooked about a matter and still go right." Jesus declares, "I am the way, the truth and the life. No man cometh unto the Father but by me."

Prayer—O Lord, our gifts alone will not suffice, unless we give ourselves. Help us to give ourselves this day. Amen.

THURSDAY.

SURMOUNTING DIFFICULTIES.

"O that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away and be at rest."—Ps. 55:6.

This is a cry of multitudes whose burdens seem too grievous to be borne. Some have turned to Him of whom it was said, "Cast all thy cares upon Him for He careth for you," who Himself said, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest," and they have found rest. Others have only felt their burdens and have cried for relief and there was no relief.

Life's tasks and responsibilities cannot be escaped. They are imposed upon us for the development of the world unto something better; and were that not so, they would be necessary for the development of character. The experience of all great Christians is that they had responsibilities and difficulties, but they surmounted them and they did it through divine power that sustained them unto the end.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to play the man. Give us cheerfulness in all our troubles. May we conquer the business of the day and keep ever before Thee a devout soul. Amen.

FRIDAY.

WHAT DO YOU STAND FOR?

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5:16.

What do you represent in the estimation of others? What do others represent to you? When you see others you think of their disposition, habits, attitudes, character and the ideals for which they stand. How beautiful it is when some one is known as "good."

Jesus came that we might have life and that life is to be something that in all that we do and say, others may think of Jesus. If there were no hereafter, a life lived like that would contribute so much to the world that it is worth dying for to accomplish it.

Prayer—Our Father, guide us in purpose and in deed that we may always have somewhat of that goodness that is like Christ. Amen.

SATURDAY.

UNDERGIRDING POWER.

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."—Ps. 55:22.

"He will gird thee with His power, In thy weary, fainting hour: Lean then, lovingly, on His word; Cast thy burden on the Lord."

Prayer—O God, Thou art the God for us. We dedicate our lives to Thee. Come Thou and be in us and with us all the way, and no burden will be too grievous to be borne. Amen.

SUNDAY.

CONTINUOUS PRAYING.

"He ever liveth to make intercession for you and me."—Heb. 7:25.

"He spake a parable unto them to this end, that men always ought to pray."—Lk. 18:1.

If continual prayer embraces the work of Jesus in eternity, how much more important it is that we mortals should pray continually; how significant it is that we are limiting His blessings upon us by neglecting that communion with Him!

A recent writer in "The Upper Room" furnishes us an appropriate instance in which we are reminded that if everything that goes to make up our lives were to forget us and stop, where would we be? Suppose the sun should forget to shine for us, the birds to sing, the flowers to bloom, or loved ones to help us?

So with our Master, Our personal experience with Him depends upon our prayers. Our achievement in Christian character and Christian grace depends upon that. His own success in saving the world depends upon that,—our unceasing prayers.

Prayer—O Lord, teach us to pray. Teach us what true prayer is. Teach us how to live it. Make it not only easy for us to pray, but impel us with the importance of it. So would we rise from earthly things to the heavenly. Amen.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE CARPENTER'S SON.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Is not this the carpenter's boy?"—Luke 4:22.

It must have been a great occasion. Jesus was going to be in his old home town, and preach in the synagogue of his childhood. The boys he grew up with would be, now men, and in their places to hear what he had to say. Age-old curiosity would be stirred, and all the sceptics of the city would be present. Old people who had had a kindness shown them by the young Carpenter would be there, and many children who had watched Him work from the door of His shop would hear Him that day. For a fame had reached Nazareth concerning His works at Capernaum, and in Jerusalem, and in Judea.

At the Jordan John had called Him "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world"; He had turned water into wine in Cana; and already He had made His first cleansing of the temple in Jerusalem; and He had had His discourse with Nicodemus; and had told the woman of Samaria that He was Himself the Messiah. He had healed the nobleman's son. How much of this news had reached Nazareth we do not know. More than commerce went along their trade routes, and many times the name of Jesus must have been mentioned by those traveling merchants, and their friends. We know that much of His rapidly growing fame had already made its way back to the home town.

Luke, the beloved historian, says, "And He came to Nazareth, where He had been brought up." Many a person present here today can sense something of the meaning of those simple words. His mother would be waiting for Him there. There would be the same old kitchen, the worn familiar tables, and the same sweet fragrance of a food He could never forget! The old steps of stone at the entrance, and the memory of sitting on them as a boy in the warm sunshine when there had been a chill in the spring air. "Where He had been brought up,"—where His mother had taught Him His first lessons and where He had learned to love the familiar hills. Here His brothers and sisters told Him all the news, and His mother held many things in fond memory. And when the Sabbath came, "He entered, as His custom was, into the synagogue on the Sabbath Day, and stood up to read." The eyes of all were fastened upon Him. "And there was delivered unto Him the book of the prophet Isaiah,"—it is still a great book! That same book is read by thousands all across the earth. It was an old book then. It is a new book now, fresh from a hundred presses. And it is also an old book now,—as old as the hope of the world and the hunger of the hearts of men! Well that self-same book was handed Jesus. "And He opened the book, and found the place where it is written, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He hath anointed me to preach good tidings to the poor: He hath sent me to proclaim release to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord."

It was one of the oldest and dearest texts. How often it had been read in their synagogue! How it had stirred the hopes of their hearts! They were perhaps glad Jesus had chosen that text. They thought well of it. They had a great surprise and shock when He said: "Today hath this Scripture been fulfilled in your ears!" How could they believe their ears? This for which all Israel had hoped and prayed, this which was too long sought, and too good to ever expect really to come actually true,—and now Jesus says it has come to pass, and that He is its fulfillment! "And all bare Him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of His mouth. And they said, Is not this the carpenter's son?" Let me pause to insert here this question in Mark is "Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary?"

They were right in thinking one's parentage and home had much to do with one's after years. But when they figured that because one had a carpenter for His father, and a carpenter's wife for His mother, and an humble home for His childhood training, that great and ancient promises could not be fulfilled in His life. One's home does not have a great deal to do with one's chance of being of service to his fellowmen; but the best part of a home is not its furniture, but its faith; not its chairs, but its children; not its keepin' gup with its neighbors, not its keeping up with its neighbors, and learning the meaning of 'neighbor' from Jesus Himself!

In that home was a mother who knew the Scriptures, who attended regularly the synagogue, and who taught her children the true and faithful promises of God. Was a day windy they knew God was unchangeably good and righteous, and merciful and just. Was a day sunny they thanked God for His gracious providences. The times and tides might come and go God guided and guarded His own. Instead of being tied down by whatever difficulties life offered they were transformed by the faith they had in the eternal God. A home with that sort of vision can furnish its sons and daughters with a heroic daring that is not hindered by any fretful circumstances of the hour. And whether that home be the home of a carpenter, or a king its children may thank God equally well for their rich heritage.

There was one thing the people who asked, "Is not this the carpenter's son" overlooked, namely, that Jesus was the Son of God. Or to put it so that you and I may find an example for ourselves: They overlooked Jesus' relationship to God. That is something entirely too important to be overlooked in sizing up the life of another, or in planning the outcome of one's own life. I like to put it like this: One must keep open the channels of God's blessings upon his life. God will pour His blessings upon us unless we block the channels. "There is a river, the streams thereof shall make glad the city of God." Any life fed by the streams of God's blessings cannot but be fruitful and happy. The rivers of God will make glad the city of God by making glad the citizens of God! The men who drove Jesus from their synagogue that day did not realize that the channels of God's power, and blessing upon Him were constantly kept open. And they did not realize that they were blocking that channel for their lives. To have a useful and happy life, able to bless and be a blessing, one must keep open the eternal streams of God's influence upon that life. Jesus did that. And inasmuch, and inasfar as anyone of His followers have done the same today God has been able to use them, and bless them.

Finally, Jesus was not only properly related to His home and His home to Him; and not only was He properly related to God; but He was ever aware that He must keep a proper relationship with His fellowmen. Home, God, neighbor,—these three in right relationship together make heaven on earth!

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

I read the articles published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of January 14th in regard to the college with a great deal of interest and appreciation. The writer joins in with hearty applause for all the good things said in behalf of Elon College. The writer, too, loves Elon College and appreciates the good work it has done through the years in training the youth of our denomination to be leaders of our churches and communities throughout the Southern Convention. Especially do we realize the work it has done in training young ministers to fill the pulpits in our denomination. If our people would stop and consider what this training of our young people has meant to our denomination since Elon College was opened for the admission of students and consider the membership the denomination had at that time and the increase it has had since, I believe they would come nearer realizing the work of Elon College to our church.

To be interested in a business or anything else, we must invest something in it. The people who are most interested in Elon College are those who have invested money and thought and time in Elon College. The writer is interested in Elon College because he has educated seven children in that institution and through the years has contributed hard earned money to help the college continue its great work.

Dr. L. E. Smith, our beloved president, has done a wonderful piece of work since he became president. The reduction of the indebtedness of Elon College from $700,000.00 to less than $160,000.00 did not just happen. It has taken his best thought, his best business ability, his strength, and his time. People who have been in as close touch with him as the writer can realize the load he has carried and the sacrifices he has made to accomplish the things he has accomplished in this short time. It is all right to say complimentary things for his encouragement, but what Dr. Smith needs most at this time are contributions in money to help him finish his task. If he has reduced the indebtedness to less than $160,000, the church would not do its duty if it failed him at this critical period. The church should come to his rescue and see to it that money is furnished to finish the task. If every member of the Congregational-Christian Church in the Southern Convention of the Southeast would make even a small sacrifice, either by individual donations or through the church, enough money would be raised and the college would be paid out of debt so that it could from now on balance its budget. The writer wants to appeal to every member of the Congregational-Christian Church to make some sacrifice at this time, during this college period, to raise the quota which is asked for in your individual church. See to it that this is done, and, when the next convention meets, if Dr. Smith tells us that the college is out of debt, all of us who have contributed, and made a sacrifice to do so, will be able to rejoice that the undertaking has been accomplished. It is a privilege that we have to help our college at this critical time, and it should be a joy to each of us to make contributions to help.

Marriages

MOORE-RAGSDALE.

Mr. Fred Shepperd Moore of Dundas, Lunenburg County, Virginia, and Miss Iris Irving Ragsdale, Virginia, were married at my home, Virgilina, Virginia, on December 31, 1936. They were accompanied by friends and relatives from both Dundas and Nathalie. The groom is a successful farmer and a most excellent gentleman, the son of Benjamin F. Moore. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. John W. Ragsdale and has been a successful teacher in the schools at Halifax and Lunenburg counties and at the State Teachers' College at Farmville. She has been a leader in Sunday School and Christian Endeavor work of Liberty Church and is especially talented in directing young people's programs. While the people of her community and church regret to lose her valuable services, all of them wish for her Heaven's continual blessings.

After a few days in Washington, D. C., Mr. and Mrs. Moore will be at home to their friends at Dundas, Virginia.

In Memoriam

ARRINGTON.

Lavoone Arrington, only daughter of Brother and Sister Bussie Arrington, died in the fourth year of her life on Sunday, November 22, 1936, at the hospital in South Boston, Virginia. Lavoone was a bright, interesting child loved by all. Her illness was brief, only lasting a few days. Besides the parents there are four brothers. The parents are greatly grieved over the death of their child, but their faith in the Savior sustains them in the hour of trial.

The funeral service and burial were at Gravel Hill Church, near Buffalo Springs on Monday afternoon, November 23rd.

GRAY.

On January 8, 1937, the death angel came and bore to her eternal home the spirit of Mrs. Irma W. Gray, a loving wife, a devoted mother and a faithful Christian.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we humbly bow in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.

2. That wherein the Womans' Missionary Society in Suffolk Christian Church has sustained a great loss, we believe it is Heaven's gain.

3. That we extend our sympathy and love to the family, and commend them to God.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication and a copy be entered on the records of the Womans' Missionary Society.

JOHNSON.

On the morning of December 16, Brother J. G. Johnson passed from this life to his eternal reward. He has been a faithful member of Mt. Carmel Christian Church for many years, serving as deacon for a long period of time. His influence was largely felt in business and religious life. I found him a strong supporter in every forward movement of the Church.

He leaves behind one sister, Mrs. E. W. Ballard, seven children, who are holding very responsible positions in life, and a host of friends.

Funeral services were conducted at Mt. Carmel Church by the pastor, H. E. Crutchfield, assisted by the writer, his former pastor. His body was laid to rest in the church cemetery. We mourn, but not as those who do not have hope.

ELISHA BRADSHAW.

JONES.

On November 10, 1936, the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Society of New Elam Church lost one of its loyal members, Mrs. C. T. Jones.

Her life was spent in the service of her Master and His will was her desire. In her presence was always the will of good cheer. Therefore be it resolved:

1. That by the death of Mrs. Jones this church has lost a faithful member and an ever ready helper;

2. That we extend to her family our heart-felt sympathy that God's richest blessings might abide with them and that they might find shelter in His fold;

3. That a copy of this be sent to the family, a copy be inscribed on the minutes of the Sunday School and Society, and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

SUNDAY SCHOOL and RAWLES.

David P. Rawles was born in Nansemond County, July 10, 1860 and closed a life of usefulness, January 2, 1937. Mr. Rawles spent his last days at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. R. Byrd at Newport News.

Mr. Rawles became identified with the Christian Church early in life. He was a charter member of the Franklin Church. Subsequently, he was identified with the Liberty Spring Church and for thirty years was a member of the First Christian Church of Portsmouth.

A faithful and devoted husband and father is survived by his wife, Mrs. Carrie Cobb Rawles, two sons, H. D. Rawles of Newport News and R. C. Rawles of Richmond; three daughters, Mrs. M. R. Sumner and Mrs. C. T. Welsh of Norfolk and Mrs. H. R. Byrd of Newport News.

The Funeral Service was conducted by the writer and assisted by Rev. H. S. Hardecastle and Rev. J. H. Dollar.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

ROBERT LEE HOUSE.

WHITT.

Thomas Whitt was born in Halifax County, Virginia, September 20, 1854, and died at his home near Nathalie, Virginia, December 25, 1936, being 82 years old. He was the son of James and Minerva Whitt. He leaves a wife, who before her marriage was Miss Mary Whitt of Cluster Springs, Virginia; five brothers, Lewis of Petersburg, Virginia, James of Nathalie, Virginia, Joseph, Robert and Henry of Virgilina, Virginia. One brother and two sisters are deceased.

Brother Whitt for twenty-one years was a member of Liberty Christian Church. He was an honest and upright man, good citizen, and neighbor and a real Christian gentleman, loyal and sacrificial for his church. During the past year, on several occasions, he told the writer he would not be here in the flesh much longer. He spoke of death without fear. His faith grew stronger as the time approached to leave loved ones here and dwell with his Savior.

The funeral was held at his church, by the pastor, in the presence of the people among whom he had lived and with whom he had worshipped for so long, on Saturday, December 26th, and his body placed away in the church cemetery. Though gone from us his influence remains.

Keep striving. The winners are those who have striven
And fought for the prize that no idler has won;
To the hands of the steadfast alone it is given,
And before it is gained, there is work to be done.

Keep climbing. The earnest and steadfast have scaled
The height where the pathway was rough to the feet;
But the faint-hearted faltered, and faltering, failed
And sank down by the wayside in helpless defeat.

Keep hoping. The clouds hide the sun for a time,
But sooner or later they scatter and flee,
And the path glows like gold to the toilers who climb
To the heights where men look over landscape and sea.

Keep onward—right on, till the prize is attained;
Face the future with courage, and obstacles fall,
By those, and those only, the victory's gained
Who keep faith in themselves and in God over all.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

It is none too early to plan for the Easter program, which should include the reception of new members and an offering for Missions.

Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Johnson of Suffolk, Virginia, left on the 25th for a ten-day trip to Florida. They will visit Jacksonville, Miami, and other cities.

A good report comes from the Day of Missions held by the women of North Carolina last week at Elon College, North Carolina, with Dr. H. Shelton Smith as leader.

Rev. Millard Stevens reports that he is enjoying his work with the Union and Providence churches near Burlington and in Graham, N. C. He has fine people to serve, and the prospects are good for success.

Churches throughout the Southern Convention will be busy this month and next with programs and gifts for Elon College. This is our opportunity to share in the training of young people for life's work.

Rev. O. D. Poythress has as one of his 1937 goals, an average of one new member each Sunday. He reports the attendance at Sunday School and at preaching services and the weekly offering much better since the new year.

Dr. J. G. Truitt reports two members received into fellowship of the Suffolk Christian Church this month. Revs. H. S. Hardeastle of the Christian Temple and O. D. Poythress of the South Norfolk Church each report three new additions.

Rev. B. H. Watkins, formerly pastor of the Lynchburg Church, has accepted the call to the Wakefield charge and is now on the field. He was received into the fellowship of the Eastern Virginia Ministers' Association at its last session.

Your editor tries to put into the paper all of the news that comes to him concerning our churches, their ministers and work. He is eager to get more news and will appreciate it very much if those near and far will send information concerning what is going on.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN family is wishing Dr. J. O. Atkinson, missionary secretary and long time editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, a very happy stay in Florida where the sun shines brightly and flowers bloom in the winter. His office secretary reports that he is making a gain in health, which will be good news to all CHRISTIAN SUN readers.

The editor enjoyed a brief visit to Elon College last week. President L. E. Smith is a busy man but not too busy to be cordial to his guests. Copies of THE CHRISTIAN SUN for 1851 and during the Civil War proved to be interesting reading in the College Library. Mr. C. D. Johnston is still going strong with his family of 90 children at the Orphanage.

The bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are busy holding inspirational and evangelistic services across the country. Baptists likewise. Our convention and conference officers might well consider the leadership of these other churches and give us something that will enable us to keep our place in the progress which the Church in America is to make.

The program committee for the Southeast Convention reports that they are having difficulty in arranging the program for the meeting to be held in Jacksonville, Florida, on April 20, 21, 22, but they promise that information will be ready in the near future. It is now time for us to be planning to attend this Southeast Convention. Put it on your schedule, and be sure to be there.

"These services were attended by large congregations each night and I believe were most helpful," says Rev. R. A. Whitten, one of the speakers at the Week of Prayer Services, held under the auspices of the Winchester Ministerial Association at the Presbyterian Church the week of January 11th. Other speakers were Revs. Geo. E. Owen, Robert B. Nelson, C. Worthington Lowe, S. L. Flickinger, E. T. Clark, Herman McKay, George W. Stover, W. W. McIntyre and W. L. Dudley.

The editor acknowledges receipt of bulletins from Rev. Joe Earp of the churches of Hines' Chapel and Apples Chapel in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. Brother Earp is pastor also of our Ingram Church. Pastor and people seem to be working together happily. Since the annual conference a young people's Christian Endeavor Society has been organized at Apples Chapel. Hines' Chapel has put a new roof on the building, and Ingram did a good job in "pounding" the minister.

The Ministers' Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference held its regular meeting on Monday the 18th at Court Street Baptist Church, Portsmouth, Virginia. The program for the day was postponed until the February meeting, and the association attended the inspirational services being conducted by the Portsmouth Ministerial Union. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder of Washington, D. C., was the speaker. He delivered two great messages marked by clear reasoning and spiritual force.

The Board of Trustees of Elon College will meet at the college on Tuesday, February 16th. The Southern Convention at its session last April voted as follows: "That the Mission Board, Board of Christian Education, The Trustees of Elon College, Trustees of the Orphanage, The Board of Publications, The Women's Mission Board and the Board of Superannuation hold their annual meeting simultaneously, in February, at Elon College and that at least one session be held jointly, at which time the problems of all boards be considered as a whole.

On Sunday afternoon, January 31, the Christian churches in and about Burlington and Graham, N. C., will have a get-together meeting to consider cooperative work in the field of leadership training, fellowship, etc. These churches include Elon College, Shallow Ford, Bethlehem, Berea, Long's Chapel, Union, Providence, Hopedale, Carolina, Haw River, Graham and Burlington. All of these churches are in Alamance County, which means that they are close enough together to engage in cooperative work easily. The ministers have agreed that representatives will be present for the first meeting. Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, of Burlington will speak on purposes and plans, and it is expected that an organization will be formed to carry on the work in the future.

ELON ALUMNI BANQUET.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Elon Alumni Club of Eastern Virginia, in Suffolk, Tuesday night of last week plans were made for the annual banquet to be held on Friday night, February 19th, at seven o'clock, at Hotel Elliott in Suffolk.

AN OPEN LETTER TO PASTORS AND CHURCHES.

My dear Colaborers in Christ:

I want to express the college's appreciation of all the help that you have extended the college. If you have given time counsel, or money, your contribution has helped and is appreciated.

I trust that you have read the articles in the special college edition of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I am sure that you have found them helpful as well as inspiring. These articles express in a definite way the background, the history, the needs, and the ideals of the college. The college has made such significant contributions to the church and its various agencies that the wisdom of the founders of the college is evident. We have an institution of which the entire church should be proud. We are doing a type of work that commends the college to the church and all departments of life. It was necessary for brave hearts and courageous souls to challenge the church in establishing an institution of higher learning for the young people of the church. Today the church is challenged to carry on to larger proportions and greater efficiency the institution that has been bequeathed to us by those who have gone before. Will we accept the challenge?

We have at Elon College, including endowment, material values totaling one and a quarter million dollars. We owe less than $160,000. This is the property of our church. In addition to the debt and the carrying charges instant thereto, we need $82,000 for our current budget. Funds from the campaign will take care of our debt, and we hope will retire the same not later than 1940. The current budget must be provided from two sources: first, net income from the students which will amount to between $60,000 and $65,000. This will leave a balance of from $15,000 to $20,000 to be provided. Income from our endowment funds amounts to about $7,500. This amount, however, cannot be used for current accounts. It has been assigned to the Virginia Trust Company as collateral to our loan. About $2,000 of the endowment is produced by property owned by the endowment funds known as off-campus property at the college. This income is absorbed by the college itself in the matter of room rent from students and faculty members. The remainder of endowment earnings is required for interest on the loan. Until our debts are paid, we cannot expect help from permanent funds for current accounts. If our budget is to be balanced, it will be necessary for the churches of the convention and the friends of the college to see that the convention's askings for the college totaling $12,500 are met. Distributing this amount to the churches as has been done exacts no hardship on any particular church. These amounts are a part of conference apportionments, and when raised, discharges that much of the church's responsibility to its conference.

I am certain if you, Pastors and Churches, could see the college as it is, appreciate the work that it is doing, and understand fully its needs and appeals, you would spare no reasonable effort in seeing that this amount is raised before March 1st. You have no idea what joy would come to the College if every church would raise the amount asked for the college by the convention. You would be blessed in the raising, and the college would be blessed in the receiving.

Yours truly,
L. E. SMITH.

THE HOLLAND CHURCH.

The Holland Christian Church at a recent conference, adopted the following tentative program for the conference year:

1. Participation in the Fine Arts Festival to be held in Suffolk, January 20, 21, 22, by Dr. H. Augustine Smith.

2. Pastor's Training Class the first six Friday evenings during the Lenten Season.

3. The observance of Lent by the use of "The Fellowship of Prayer" as our Devotional Guide and a series of sermons on the Ten-fold Test of Religion as found in the Book of James.

4. The observance of Holy Week by Vesper Services each evening and Communion observed on Good Friday evening, Dates: March 21-26.

5. Special Easter Service to include the entire church school, Easter Sunday, March 28th.

6. Children's Day to be held the second Sunday in June. Date: June 13th.

7. Send representatives from the church school to the Leadership Training School to be held in the summer at Elon College.

8. Vacation Church School beginning Monday after the second Sunday in July, continuing for ten sessions.

9. The month of August for the pastor's vacation.

10. Religious Emphasis Week, September 12-17th.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

The college was glad to welcome representatives of the Missionary Societies of the Congregational and Christian Churches in North Carolina and the Missionary Societies of other denominations last Thursday for the one-day School of Missions. The Negro in American Life by Corrine Brown was used as the textbook. Dr. H. Shelton Smith of the School of Religion of Duke University was the speaker. Between 300 and 400 women were in attendance. We were very happy to have the group.

Dean J. D. Messick of the college is giving a series of lectures over WBIG, Greensboro, each week on Wednesday at 5:30 P. M. These addresses on Character Education are being enthusiastically received by educators throughout the state.

Beginning Sunday afternoon, January 24th, the Music Department of Elon College, under the direction of Professor C. M. Barbe, will give a series of programs over WBIG each Sunday afternoon for ten weeks.

Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor of the First Christian Church, Norfolk, and editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, was a welcomed visitor at the college, Friday of last week. Mr. Lester is in good health, fine spirits, and expressed joy in discharging his many duties. He is certainly giving the church a worthwhile paper. It is hoped that the membership of the church at large will support him by subscribing to THE SUN immediately if you are not already a subscriber.

The Board of Trustees of Elon College will meet in mid-year session Tuesday, February 16th, at 10 P. M. The meeting will be held at the college in the President's office.

By vote of the Southern Convention in its recent session, all boards of the church are to meet at Elon College in connection with the meeting of the Board of Trustees. According to the Convention, these different boards are supposed to meet in separate session, and some joint sessions are to be held. It is hoped that by this method, all officials of the convention may receive information concerning the entire program of the church. The college extends an invitation to all who will to come. If you wish entertainment on the Harvard plan, please write the president of the college as early as possible.

To be what we are, and to become what we are capable of becoming, is the only end of life.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

IN UNITY . . . STRENGTH.

The old adage "In unity there is strength" is so familiar and so well illustrated in every day experience that it does not have to be argued. Every public speaker has endeavored to try to prove it, but all anyone can do is to point out how that it works in every kind of experience known to man.

The Church wants to be strong. If we are to be strong as a Church in the Southeast, it is very necessary for us to be united in our thinking, plans and programs. That is why the Southern Convention voted that all boards of the Southern Convention should hold their annual meetings at the same time and place with at least one joint session.

For nearly 150 years our Church has grown and we have tried from time to time to plan for certain projects and types of work. At present we have several institutions and boards that represent the working program of our Convention. If these groups are to succeed as they should, with a well-rounded program, it seems to be especially necessary for them to think together and to plan together for the work.

There are certain things in which all these boards are directly interested. Among these is THE CHRISTIAN SUN itself. Since the paper does not pay its own way the boards are called upon to make contributions for this publication. Without THE CHRISTIAN SUN, or some other method of publicity, it would be impossible for any board or institution to continue its work. Responsibility for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, therefore, rests not alone with the Board of Publications but with all of the boards of the Convention.

Another item of mutual concern relates to special offerings. The Convention has authorized special offerings for some of our boards. It is easy to see that certain occasions, like Thanksgiving and Easter, lend themselves to generous giving, while at other times it is more difficult to raise money. Too many special offerings will wreck the financial program of a local church and therefore cut off the income for all the enterprises of the denomination. This matter should be clearly considered by all who promote a special offering.

Another point at which there can and should be cooperation is in the educational promotion of the various enterprises of our Convention. Under the present set up it is likely to happen that the best publicity agent will get the most money regardless of whether the cause for which he is at work is of the most importance or not. It will be a fine day for our Southern Church when all leaders recognize the comparative value of each phase of our Church work and when we definitely work together co-operatively for the progress of each phase of the Church program.

For these and other reasons, it seems wise for all the boards to meet simultaneously and with some joint sessions at least once each year. It is therefore to be hoped that all boards will meet at Elon in February as directed by the Southern Convention, and that there will be a full attendance at each session.

A CHOIR SINGER ARRESTED.

On Sunday morning, January 17, 1937, says the Virginian Pilot, the officers of the law in our fair city by the sea went to a church and called out a member of the choir and arrested him. The officers thought that this man belonged in jail rather than in the church choir. Perhaps they felt a little thrill in calling a man from the choir to accompany them to the jail. It was a new experience for them, according to our daily paper.

What was the charge against this singer of the Gospel message? Of course the warrent would hardly read that way, but as this editor sees it, the charge should rightfully have been that this singer did not pay his share of taxes to the Government of his state and country. He was charged with the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, no doubt, for the officers had found a still and other evidence in this man's back yard. But the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in this state is perfectly legal, if given the privilege by the right persons, and if proper taxes are paid. Churchmen engage in the buying and selling, we are told. Churchmen certainly voted for the state to engage in the business of buying and selling of intoxicating liquors, which means that every good citizen of the state is party to the business.

And apparently it is a profitable business in Virginia. Millions of dollars are paid into the treasury by those who drink for intoxication rather than for medicinal purposes. According to the law in this state, this profitable business is all right for those who are given the privilege to manufacture and sell intoxicating liquors.

But if some negro (yes, he was a negro), struggling to make a living for his family, manufactures and sells a few gallons of this profitable intoxicating liquor without the permission of the right people, and if he fails to pay the proper tax in the prescribed way, the state of Virginia will transfer this singer of the Gospel from the choir of his church to the city jail, and probably feel a little elated to have done such a fine job with ferreting out criminals and bringing them to the bar of justice. If such be justice, then God save the State!

Truck loads containing some fifteen hundred gallons of intoxicating liquors pass down the street in front of my church and are protected by the law. Proper permission has been given, and legal taxes have been paid. According to the law there is nothing wrong with this liquor business. Certainly there is nothing criminal about it. The only difference in the manufacture and sale of legal and illegal liquors seems to be getting proper permission by the payment of tax, and then the payment of tax on the products produced and sold.

Since when, may we ask, has it become a crime punishable by imprisonment for one not to pay tax? Cer-

OUR CHURCH COLLEGE.

It is ours because of us it is wrought. Because of the great need for it, and not because of the ability of the fathers to pay for it, for they were a poor people, it was built. Because of our fathers' pride in their church, in its great principles, and in its fine people, and its church-loving congregations, they felt the need of a leadership equal to any of its neighbor communions, and they observed that they had colleges and college trained leadership. With a vision of which we should be proud, they dreamed of, and planned for, a church college. They had never raised so much money for any one thing before as it was going to take, and they did not know where it would come from, but they knew that unless they had a college and college trained ministers and leaders, their great principles and good churches were doomed. So small would be their influence, and so soon would other denominations tower above them in every locality, they knew they would soon be left behind. But they were determined not to be left behind. And so they wrought in their day, out of a positive need, a college. Their record of devotion to that college both in sacrificial gifts, and in attendance as far as they could see the way to go, or send, to college, is a record of which we may not be ashamed. The church should be proud of that record.

It is ours because as a sacred trust it has been handed down to us. It is ours to build greater and greater, both as to its position among other colleges of equal rank, and as to its usefulness and service to the church for which it was by our fathers fashioned. Our church can lose its place as easily today as it could in the day the college was built. All too rapidly will it be forgotten as the church of which our fathers dreamed if we do not keep alive, and growing, the institutions which are vital to the very life of our church. Too much will be lost if we are going to sleep at the switch and let the Southern Convention and all that is sacred and dear to it be lost in the maze of things. Too much, indeed, will be lost. It is unwise statesmanship that will do anything to decrease the power and influence of the Southern Convention. It is wise statesmanship that will build up, strengthen, develop all that is fine and good in our Convention, and conserve all the noble work and tradition of yesterday. What sort of an annuity would a man build up for himself if he should foolishly say I will throw away the funds I place to that credit in the earlier years of my plans,— they are out of date now, worthless, old-fashioned, futile? If our history is worth anything let us build on it! If our fathers' work was noble let us add to it, not tear it down; let us conserve it, not cast it aside,—otherwise we are not worthy of the work they did for us. Our college is one of the finest pieces of work done by our fathers for the church. Let us further that work.

It is ours because we have placed it in our current Convention plans, and our current Conference annual program's of development and activity. It is in our deliberative, active, current church program. It is a part of our mandate as a church and Convention. It is our business. Here and now it is ours. As a member of the church a part of my daily earnings go for its upkeep and growth. There is no way of evading it as a church. And we should not try. All members of the church may not desire to send their sons and daughters there, and why should they all do so? That is not at all necessary, but as loyal members of the church, it is necessary for us to help make our church college the place for which it is designed and to give it its rightful place in our church development and growth. When our college suffers, our Convention is weakened. When our Convention is weakened, our Conferences lose grip and power. When our Conferences lose influence in their respective localities and prestige with their local constituencies, our local churches are hurt, and when the local church is hurt religion and worship itself is given a fatal blow. So I repeat, anything that hurts the Southern Convention, that tones down its influence and power, that takes away one ounce of its loyalties and age-earned assets is poor statesmanship, for it eventually goes back to the hurt of full many of the finest homes,—some of them humble and poor,—that are to be found in the South. Those who desire the growth of the merger will not overlook that, for our relationships are not intended to depress, or retard; but to fortify, strengthen, and give power and growth to the best of which we are already possessed. Let us not give up, but get up, and develop our Southern Convention and all its institutions, and instead of anybody thinking less of us, they will think far more, and we will think more of our church and develop a greater loyalty among our people.

What I say for our college, I say for our church paper. We need it, and we much develop it, and devise ways and means of making it the blessing it must be for the development of our people. And what I say for it I say for our Mission Board, and our orphanage, our Board of Christian Education, and every enterprise of our Convention. Let us not look on any of these things as a burden, no more than a man would look on a hand or foot as a burden. These are not burdens, but blessings, and the sooner we look upon them as such and take care of them as though we realized their full values to us the better it is going to be.

tainly taxes should be paid, and property should be made to stand good for such payment. But what about pulling a man out of peaceful pursuits and sending him to jail for failure to pay his tax? In what stage of civilization does that belong? Not in our modern day, surely!

There are problems about the liquor business that have not yet been settled, and about which this writer cannot speak with authority, but he is absolutely certain that there is much radically wrong with the present method above described. And he devoutly hopes that the church people and good citizens who have a chance to vote concerning the matter will see that it is the intoxicating liquors that are harmful rather than the failure to pay prescribed taxes. The choir singer who fails to pay tax on a few gallons of liquors made in his back yard is no more of a criminal than a business man who purposely forgets to list for taxation a batch of stocks or underrates the value of personal property. The real wrong lies in another field. And that wrong is shared by those who make and sell legal beverages—by the citizens of the state that does it.

ON AN ABBREVIATED BUDGET.

Although with limited funds, Rev. J. Riggs Brewster of Athens, Greece, reports that three books were translated and published last year by the editorial department. They were: Merchants of Death, expose of munition makers; The Significance of Life, written by a Greek pastor, and a Christian Story. He reports over 10,000 Gospels of St. John and 15,000 of St. Luke printed and distributed with the help of the Scripture Gift Mission of London, in hospitals, orphanage, prisons and other institutions.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

It is expedient for the constituency of the Southern Convention to rally to the support of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. For many years it has been the medium of communication for ministers and laymen. Every institution in our fellowship has been championed, fostered and nurtured by appeals through its pages. Elon College could not have been established without a church paper. The Christian Orphanage is standing as a monument to the influence of THE SUN. Our missionary advance was made possible through the same channel of communication. Many of our stronger churches such as Christian Temple, First Portsmouth, First Richmond, South Norfolk, Raleigh, Greensboro and others, too numerous to mention in this column, owe their existence and history to the influence of the church paper.

Now in the face of such statements, if the writer is correct in his judgment, it is essential that the present status of this invaluable paper should be clearly presented and understood. This is not the time for a presentation of detailed facts. But in a brief way it should be said that THE SUN is at the cross-roads of its history. For a number of years it has been shifted from one plan of support to another. Many interested laymen and ministers have given much time and thought to this institution for it is an institution in the Convention. The paper rests upon a foundation of sentiment and church loyalty. Hundreds of people have found comfort in its messages and strength in its defense of the truth. Week by week it has gone forth to shine in our homes. It is dear to the heart of many of our people.

The plan adopted by the Convention to set aside definite amounts from the Convention Fund, Orphanage, Mission Board, Elon College and the Board of Christian Education to meet the deficit in publishing the paper, should guarantee the continuance of the organ of the Convention. But ministers and laymen have failed to raise and send to the Convention the full amount of the Convention Fund, and there is a deficit in that Department which has not been provided for. The Convention does not raise money. It only suggests methods and sources of raising money. If the churches do not respond to the calls of the Convention, there is no other recourse for money for the Convention Fund. That means the Convention cannot pay its part for publishing THE SUN. If the contract with the publisher is to be fulfilled, promptly, some agency will be compelled to borrow the money. This contract stipulates a certain sum per week, and this should be paid every month. The Convention should not expect the printer to carry the financial load of the contract. At this time the Convention is indebted to the printer for several issues of the paper. No Convention Fund money is in sight until November, 1937.

Now one way out of this crisis is a substantial increase in the number of paid up subscriptions to the paper. The paper is needed. It is worth the price. The people should read the paper. The report of the Editor for the last six months indicates that 676 subscriptions were paid up during that period. On the basis of $2.00 for each subscription that would amount to only $1,352.00 for six months or $2,704.00 per year. Subtracting the cost of collection it would probably be less than $2,000.00 per year. This is less than one third of the cost of publishing the paper.

If ministers and laymen will devote one month to the matter of securing new subscriptions to the church paper, 1,000 new subscribers can easily be secured. That estimate is too low. But that number would relieve the present situation and make it possible to continue the influence of THE SUN. The constituency of the Convention should rally to the support of the paper. The churches will suffer if it is discontinued.

I. W. JOHNSON.

AN EXPERIENCE FROM LIFE.

A few days ago I joined the pastor of one of our churches to make the college campaign in one of our churches. The church was a rural church. The members of the church were farmers, all of whom expressed love for their church and loyalty for their denomination and regrets that they were poor and unable to contribute as they would like.

At twelve o'clock we turned off the main highway to a humble home on the top of a hill a few hundred yards away. There were no particular evidences of poverty or riches, but abundant evidences of home life. Dinner was announced, and we were urged to eat. The dinner was delicious and and greatly enjoyed. The father of the home talked of his church and his love for his church at home and abroad, particularly of his interest in the college. He expressed his regrets of not having had an opportunity for an education. He stated emphatically that he realized the need of the college. He said that he had been unable to educate his own children, but that he understood fully that our ministers, missionaries, and laymen must be educated today if our church is to grow. Said he, "I have never owned a home. I have never had many of the conveniences of life, but I have always given to my church and given to the college." He made a pledge of $40 to the college and paid $25 in cash. His children made pledges to the college, and he expressed his joy that they had. He did not say that he had already given to college and felt that he had done his part, but expressed the hope that God would spare his life for many years yet, that he might continue his support of his church and of her institutions. He did not say, "I have got to provide for my own, therefore I cannot further support my church and her institutions." Because of faith and love, he gave generously out of what he had.

Do we read somewhere in the scriptures where the master said, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt and where thieves do not break through nor steal." There is such a thing as providing for the requirements of this life and leaving provisions for the life to come unmade. There is such a thing as losing one's life that he may find it again in richer and more joyous communions. L. E. SMITH.

CONFERENCES APPORTIONMENTS.

The churches of the Southern Convention have for the past two years been operating under the plan in which the churches have been asked to contribute, through conference apportionments, to all the enterprises of the church except the Orphanage, and this year they are asked to include the Orphanage also. Two years do not cover sufficient time to determine the ultimate soundness of such a plan. They do, however, afford an opportunity for some interesting observations.

A study of the churches that have been able to raise apportionments in full does not indicate that the plan is best adapted to any particular type of church. One frequently hears it said that a plan works well enough in the town or city church; but that it will not work in the country church. Some town and city churches have raised apportionments in full, while others have failed. The same statement applies to the country churches. Among the churches that are rated strongest numerically and financially, some have raised apportionments in full, while others have failed. The weaker churches have had the same experience.

There may be a few churches that have sufficient financial strength to subscribe and raise a benevolent budget large enough to cover all the askings, without any special emphasis or appeal. But for the most of the churches included in the Southern Convention this is not the case. If such churches are to raise apportionments in full, there is only one way whereby they can do it. That is for the church to make a liberal offering for each benevolent item during the special period allotted to it in the church calendar.

This would mean that the membership would be informed as to the work and needs of the Orphanage, and make a liberal offering at Thanksgiving. This, together with the once a month offering from the Sunday School, would in most churches raise what the church is asked to give for the Orphanage. At the Christmas season the churches are asked to make an offering for Superannuation, if the same plan were followed as has been suggested for the Orphanage, the Christmas offering should raise the asking for Superannuation.

At the present time we are in the midst of the College Period of the church calendar. The churches are asked to give more for the college than for any other apportionment. There is a good reason why the apportionment for the college is larger than any other. The membership of our churches must be informed as to the service that is being rendered through Elon College. They must be led to see how the college serves all the other enterprises of the church. And each and every member ought to be given an opportunity to make a contribution to Elon College during the College Period. This is equally as important for the good of the church as it is for the welfare of the college.

STANLEY C. HARRELL.

ATTITUDE OF LIBERTY CHURCH, VANCE COUNTY, FOUR YEARS AGO, AND NOW.

It is quite interesting to note the difference in attitude which the people of Liberty have toward Elon College now and four years ago. For some reason, not easily explained, many of the people of this church had turned against the college and refused to support it in anyway. Four years ago arrangements were made with Dr. L. E. Smith to come to Liberty for an appointment. A very loyal member of the church asked this question, "Is Dr. Smith aiming to speak on the college? If so, I do not want to hear him." Knowing the strong sentiment against the college, the writer asked Dr. Smith not to say much about the college that morning. Dr. Smith did not say very much about the college, but he made a very favorable impression through his personal contact.

Since that time, Dr. Smith has been in the community several times and spoken concerning the college. The people are very favorable now toward the college, and several went there to school as a result of the growing interest on the part of the people.

Four years ago the Sunday School did not give the fifth Sunday's offering to the college. But now each fifth Sunday an offering is made through the Sunday School; and, besides, Miss Margaret Alston has been appointed college secretary for the church to keep the interest of the college before the people.

The young people who have visited Elon from this community are pleased with the spirit manifest there. One person said after spending a weekend at Elon, "I did not know such a spirit existed on Elon campus. Everyone seemed so friendly."

Difficult as it seemed at one time, Liberty will raise her quota in the campaign to clear Elon of its debt. Four years ago this church would not have rallied with such strong support. This change of attitude has gradually come about, largely, because of the personal contacts which Dr. Smith has made in the community on various occasions.

If such an attitude toward Elon could be felt in all our churches, the college would soon be free from debt.

A VALLEY PREACHER'S CHRISTMAS.

A Christmas mingled with sorrow because of the loss of father and husband and with joy because of the kindness of so many friends was experienced at the Andes' home in the Valley of Virginia. Since our loved one had departed to be with God, we prayed for Divine Guidance in the years to come in which we live. Then with the church people of our denomination and other denominations greeting us with cards, gifts, letters, visits and generous poundings, our hearts were enraptured with this glowing spirit of friendship.

On the third Sunday in December, your writer was at Leaksville and Newport. After each service each congregation filled the pastor's car with many vegetables, fruits, jellies, meat, flour, groceries, a broom, a rearview mirror with a clock attached for his car, and other useful articles. One's spirit is raised and he feels as if these most worthy people are getting very little in return for such a glorious pounding. From Bethel came a nice gift in money and many boxes of vegetables and fruit. From Antioch came meat, cakes and other nice gifts. Concord brought several useful gifts as well as food material. Other friends outside of our churches sent and brought their pounding. How can their pastor, or how could their preceding pastor, my father, ever thank these wonderful people for their kindness and generosity? Through THE CHRISTIAN SUN, I wish to thank everyone for what they have given unto us. My mother, brothers and sister join me in this hour of gratitude. May God's richest blessings be upon you.

THE DEPARTMENT OF RELIGION AT ELON.

The function of the department of religion in Elon College is four-fold:

1. To give each individual student a fuller acquaintance with, and a fuller understanding of the English Bible.
2. To guide each individual student in the formation of an adequate and satisfactory philosophy of life, through intelligent Christian influence and teaching.
3. To prepare individual students for effective participation in the work of the church, and in general Christian service.
4. To prepare a select group of young men for seminary training, that they may become helpful and effective Christian ministers.

The courses offered in this department include studies in the Old and New Testament, History of Christianity, Non-Christian Religions, Modern Religious Experience, and Religious Philosophy. They are designed to aid the student in achieving a vital religious attitude toward life.

The fundamental doctrines of Christianity, as found in the teachings of the Christ, are interpreted and shown to have real meaning for the present day of scientific progress and discovery.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A BOOK WITH A MESSAGE.

"Another missionary book," you say, and "I am not given to reading missionary books." Very well. Ever read the New Testament any these days? If so, would you care to see it anew with some real light thrown on its writers and doers, Peter and Paul and James and Luke and John and Philemon and the others? And would you like a new outlook on what those men did and are doing, the world in which they lived and wrought and wrote, and the vision they caught, and get something of that vision. Then here you have it. The distinguished divine of England, and Oxford graduate and lecturer to colleges and universities, Rev. Edward Shillito has done it—given us a word vision of events as revealed to the writers of the New Testament and through them to us—who will read and comprehend. His book, the one now before us, is The Way of the Witnesses. These writers and doers of the New Testament carried on. They not merely wrote of a new era and of a new Power. They were themselves in that era, makers of it, custodians of a newly released Power. Look out! Dr. Shillito speaks in his book of these men: "They speak of themselves as the first-born of a new creation. They are writing a new book of Genesis; 'God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts.' Once more God had said, and this time it was not to Moses but to them, 'Let there be light'; and once more a new beginning had been made. As they gave account of themselves they were a new race; not the latest of an old stock, but a people which had once not been a people. They knew Christ now; and Christ for them was not one of a long line of teachers. He was the living Redeemer, and united to Him they became the first-born from the dead, who held the promise of a new humanity." In brief Dr. Shillito declares the New Testament writers belonged to the same era and the same school, namely, that the disciples of Christ had heard Him say two words which they must obey, "Come unto me"—"Go tell all nations." There you have it. Just those two words summarize the life and teachings of our God "Come to me"—"Go tell." Ye shall be my witnesses.

The greatest need of the church today is just that. It has been the greatest need of the church in every age since our God came, "Come unto me," "Go tell others"—be witnesses not of your life or power, but of His life and power. The witness bearing of one individual who has accepted Christ to another individual who has not accepted Him—that is the crying need of our time, of the Church today. These writers and doers of the New Testament realized that supreme fact and went out to tell. "They were constrained and driven by a Power which took up their brief life into one eternal purpose, and made them organs of the Holy Spirit. They had to go. There is a drawing force in the lives of these children of the ancient world, terrible in its power as the prairie fire, mighty as the storm which St. Peter knew on the lake, or St. Paul knew when the ship which carried him to Rome and to death, was driven up and down in Achaia." One will certainly get one's time and money's worth to secure and read the book—"The Way of the Witnesses." The Friendship Press, 150 Fifth Ave., New York City, Cloth, $1.00, paper 50c.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. J. M. RABY,
Treasurer,

CONCERNING THAT 'NEW LEAF.'

Do we need to turn it over?

Assuredly, Yes! Missionary interests in the local church are not at flood tide.

What should be inscribed thereon after it goes over? Many things, among which are the following:

1. Making missions a main proposition instead of an option corollary in personal enlistment under the standard of the Author of the Great Commission. This means that pastor and church officials will have a definite program for mission study, informational and inspirational culture and missionary benevolences instead of letting things go hit or miss in pulpit and departmental life. "Check"?

2. Climbing out of the ruts of "the usual missionary meeting," banishing the Faithful Traditionalists or else converting them and lining up under the most efficient plans issued and promoted by the missionary educational departments of your own denomination as well as the United Mission Study courses which now are fully up with the van in approved pedagogical principles and methods. Again, "Check"?

3. Parsing "missions" in the masculine as well as the feminine gender—in fact common gender is the ideal. Too long have "the sisters" shouldered the responsibility for cultivation of the home field. Hark ye: Your Department Editor recently had occasion to organize the adult foreign mission study department in a community inter-church School of World Friendship. Attempting to equalize leadership responsibility among the cooperating denominations, here is a tabloid transcript of what she encountered among "the brethren":

No. 1, university professor of such broad culture that it was reported, "You cannot tap him on any subject on which he is not thoroughly informed." He said, "O" (with a slight laugh), "mission study is entirely out of my line. I shouldn't care to attempt that."

No. 2, university professor of broad horizon: "You see my wife's leading one of the younger classes and one in the family is enough."

No. 3, "I'm missionary in spirit but my present work is too arduous for me to undertake anything more."

No. 4, "I don't know a man in our church who is qualified to do that. We leave mission study entirely to our women. They do plenty."

No. 5, "Our minister is teaching a class. That represents our church."

No. 6, "I always think of that as a woman's job!"

And so with one accord, they all said, "I pray thee, have me excused." Those six sessions suffered in interest and attendance because of lack of masculine cooperation, though it must be said to the credit of all these dissenters that they were giving to missions personally or through their families.

Pastors are not wholly blameless in this state of affairs. In her perpetual quest for "effective ways of working" at summer conferences and in local communities, the Editor has asked clergymen and Sunday School superintendents without number for their organizational and promotional plans. In only a very few cases has she met with a response indicating a definite plan or well attested methods. How can "Thy Kingdom come" by hit-or-miss kangaroo activity?

TRAIL BLAZING FOR 1937.

Everyone admires a trail-blazer but comparatively few have the courage or are ready to pay the price required to be the true pioneer. The price is usually high in endurance, danger and discomfort whether the trails blazed be in geographic feats, in science, in spiritual realms or in Christ—enjoy the fruits that grow up where the few have led the way in breaking ground and planting new areas.

When God directs His pioneers to go forward it is always in the face of difficulties, never on the easy downhill road. This was true when Abram was called to go from Ur of the Chaldees into Canaan; when Moses was told to lead Israel out of Egypt; when Joshua was commissioned to enter the Promised Land. Jesus Christ set the greatest example in sacrificial pioneering when He temporarily laid aside His eternal robes of deity and came from Heaven to earth in the garb of a servant. When He commissioned His disciples to "Go into all the world to preach the Gospel," and when Paul and Barnabas were sent forth from Antioch, it was to pioneer in the face of hardship, difficulty and persecution, but with the promise of victory.

The rewards to pioneers are real and abiding. They are seldom found in wealth, not always in fame for great success achieved, but they are experienced in the satisfaction of achievement, in the knowledge of blessing brought to mankind and in the Master's "Well done."

What trail-blazing will be undertaken and accomplished in the face of the present-day colossal physical difficulties and the spiritual adversaries that form the great opportunities of the year 1937?—from Missionary Review of the Word.

THE AMERICAN BOARD.

The Prudential Committee of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions has accepted the invitation of the South Congregational Church of Concord, New Hampshire, and the New England Regional Committee to hold its next annual meeting October 23-25, 1937, at South Congregational Church in conjunction with the New England Regional Meeting of Congregational and Christian Churches.

The American Board, which is the oldest foreign missionary society in the United States, is in its 128th year and has 481 missionaries in active service, with nearly 6500 National Christian workers. It is the channel through which the Congregational and Christian Churches of America work in their world-wide parish of over sixty million people.

To thousands of men, women and children of many races living in the distant corners of the globe the world parish of the Congregational and Christian Churches of America is the one permanent link which connects them with America and forms an unbreakable bond of international friendship. The American Board has 26 hospitals, 44 dispensaries, 9 colleges, 36 theological and training schools and 1,068 lower schools. There are 804 organized churches with 107,629 members, among them the largest Congregational Church in the world at Bailundu, West Africa.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

THANKS TO MRS. WISSEMAN.

Three times in the last few months, the editor of this page has written Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, busy wife of one of our busy ministers, and asked her for information and material. In all three instances Mrs. Wisseman has replied promptly and sent the material which was requested.

How much easier it would be for the officers of the Southeast Youth Fellowship to carry on their work, if everyone would respond to letters which are written to them! There is nothing more discouraging than making plans for some enterprise, writing for information about it, or writing to others asking for their cooperation—and then waiting for replies which too often never appear. If you are a Key-Worker and receive a request for a report from your group for the Youth Fellowship of which you are a member—sit right down and answer it. If you are a Youth Fellowship officer and receive a request for material from some local group—try to send it immediately. If you are a minister and are asked to cooperate in "putting over" some phase of work with young people, please do not disregard it. There is a soft spot in my heart for Mrs. Wisseman, who did not find herself too busy to respond to requests for help with young people's work.

The following article is one thing for which we are all indebted to Mrs. Wisseman. She asked me not to sign her name—so instead you are being let in on the secret here!

FRIENDS OF ANOTHER RACE.

All peoples have a tendency to judge members of another race by the worst rather than by the best that race has produced. How many of us when the name "Italian" is spoken, think of the low class "Dago" at the corner fruitstand rather than Columbus, Raphael, Michel Angelo. As Christians we should try to find the best; and so when I think of the negro race I try to find the best, I try to remember that even though many negroes steal, lie and are shiftless, that it is not true of all of them. I am thinking of two negro friends of mine. The first is Alice. She comes each week to scrub my floors. She is as simple and ignorant as anyone I have ever seen and yet my floors are a joy after she has scrubbed them. And her child-like faith is more of an inspiration to me than that of any white person I know. Hardships and poverty have ever been her lot but she is never bitter and her simple trust in God is both beautiful and touching.

Then I think of Mrs. A., wife of the president of a negro college. Educated and cultured. A charming woman. Never bitter because of injustices she has to suffer on account of her color, never boastful of the things she has accomplished. A wonderful example of the negro who has been given opportunities. Each of these women help me to be a better Christian. Shall I say that because their skin is black that I see no good in them? No more than I shall refuse Jesus because He was a Jew.

"In Christ there is no East or West,
In Him no South or North;
All Christly souls are one in Him
Throughout the whole wide earth."

EASTERN VIRGINIA YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

The mid-winter rally of the Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship will be held at the Suffolk Christian Church, Saturday afternoon and evening, February 13, 1937. The program will open at 2:30 and will include a twenty-five cent fellowship supper. The preliminary announcement says that the program will be inspirational and educational and that there will be fun and fellowship. A large attendance is expected.

THE FELLOWSHIP RECORDER.

Last month the North Carolina-Virginia Youth Fellowship published a bulletin called "The Fellowship Recorder." It contains the statement of purpose of the National Pilgrim Fellowship, as well as the goals of the particular Fellowship it represents. A Christmas message is contained in it, as well as program suggestions for that season of the year.

A list of the officers of the North Carolina-Virginia Youth Fellowship entitled "Just Us" is given. The necessity for having a list of active Key-Workers, representing each local group, is explained and the present list of Key-Workers given.

Among the news items, two things stand out. One is the fact that Burlington has now become a member of the North Carolina-Virginia Conference. The other is that the Conference, at its annual meeting in November, voted to give the Youth Fellowship twenty-five dollars. That shows that the value of the Youth Fellowship work is realized and appreciated in this Conference and that the older people feel they should have a share in supporting it.

Mary Armfield, of Greensboro, Superintendent of Publications, it to be complimented on the appearance of the Fellowship Recorder.

FINANCIAL COST OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES.

(The Economic Approach to the Liquor Problem.)

LESSON V—JANUARY 31, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Wherefore do ye spend your money for that which is not bread? and labor for that which satisfieth not?—Isaiah 55:2.

LESSON: Proverbs 21:17; 23:20, 21; Matt. 24:45-51; John 6:26, 27, 35.

The sub-title to today's lesson is very suggestive—The Economic Approach to the Liquor Problem. It suggests that we still have a Liquor Problem. Somehow or other the claims of the "wets" that the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment would solve the liquor problem have not been substantiated. A great many sensible people knew that. But the masses of American people were either too gullible, or too indifferent, to do anything about it, so much of the results of almost a century of effort on the part of the temperance forces was lost. We have got to start all over again in our efforts to get a sober nation. For make no mistake about this matter—the consumption of beverage liquors will increase rather than decrease unless we do something about it. The power of the vested liquor interests, the power of high-pressure modern advertising, and the power of habit-forming inherent in alcohol will see to that. You see we have simply been sowing some seed during the past few years since the Eighteenth Amendment was repealed; we are going to have an abundant harvest in due time. The liquor problem is one of America's major problems in my opinion.

The sub-title of the lesson also suggests that one point of approach to the liquor problem is the economic approach. This does not imply, of course, that there are not other phases of, or approaches to the liquor problem. Certainly those of us who take the ideals of Christ seriously, would not be willing to admit that simply because the sale of liquor has been made legal, it has become moral. Judged by the standards of Christ the liquor traffic is inherently wrong; it is a denial of everything for which Christ stands. But there is point in the economic approach to this problem. As a matter of fact, one of the most powerful factors in the drive which resulted in the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment was the emphasis upon the economic factor in the liquor traffic. Big business itself was one of the most powerful allies of prohibition, for big business had come to see—reluctantly in many cases—that the use of alcohol was economically unsound. The man who drank was not as efficient as the man who was sober. Nor was he as safe. Long before we had national prohibition, many large industrial organizations, and business firms had set their faces against the liquor traffic, and had forbidden their employee to drink alcoholic liquors. They knew that it was a matter of cold cash, of dollars and cents, and they did something about it. They knew, too, that beverage alcohol is not a food but a poison, that it breaks down instead of building up. They knew that money spent for liquor would be diverted in many instances from legitimate trade and business. Let no man fool himself at this point. The Eighteenth Amendment was not made possible because of a few idealists, or many idealists were able to persuade the public that it was morally wrong to trade in, and drink beverage liquors; it was made possible in large measure because business had learned that it was bad economics. Thus it is good strategy for temperance advocates to attack this evil from the economic standpoint as one of the major objectives in their campaign. If the American people could see graphically and truthfully exactly what the liquor traffic is costing them in actual dollars and cents, to say nothing of the terrific and tragic loss in character and life—and compare these figures with what actual profit there is in the business, they would see that the liquor traffic is perhaps the world's poorest business, unless perchance it be the war business. And they are the same breed, both of them are children of the devil, born of hell itself. That is strong language, but the writer believes that it is the truth.

In The Christian Standard some time ago there appeared a striking and significant cartoon. It was entitled "Sold for $125,000,000. On a large auction block there was a representation of "American Home." Standing before the block was a hard-faced, big-bellied man labeled "Brewing Interests." Behind the block stood Uncle Sam in the act of striking the block with his hammer indicating that the sale had been consummated, that the American Home had been sold to the Brewing Interests for $125,000,000. And standing back of Uncle Sam the majestic figure of Christ. One wonders if He is not saying, perhaps audibly "Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not?" Or "Work not for the food which perisheth."

Let me quote here two statements, one from the "drys," the other from the "wets." The Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York said "Each year shows an increase in the consumption of alcoholic beverages shows a decrease in the consumption of milk. During the week ending March 16, 1935, the Milk Research Council released figures showing a decrease in milk consumption in this city (New York City) of nearly 100,000,000 quarts since repeal became effective. What has happened to the market for milk is happening to food, clothing, shelter. Liquor registers a loss to every line of honest trade."

Here is something more significant. "On January 15, 1936, according to the New York Times, the state liquor authority announced plans for promoting its temperance campaign by means of a state-wide speaking program. County ABC Boards have been asked to prepare a list of local civic organizations, and the authorities propose to write to these groups offering services of the five commissioners and the various deputies as speakers. Their addresses will seek to educate the public, and especially the young people, along temperance lines" . . . As the first step in its temperance work, the Board has published a pamphlet "The Effects of Alcohol."

And still more significant. Mr. E. L. Gregory, chairman of the Washington State Liquor Control Board, has written, "We have felt that because of the many influences that are tending toward a break down of liquor control, a manual of the kind we have prepared is quite essential for the information of the public. We are tempted to ask if you have any objection to its use as a guide for us to follow in this state." In other words our respective states are selling poison with one hand, and with the other hand, are distributing literature telling people to be careful not to drink too much of the poison. When a group of men authorized to distribute liquor are forced to recognize that the whole business is working for evil, and must somehow be tempered, is it not time to consider wiping this whole iniquitous business out of our nation altogether?"

Let us not be discouraged by the loss of the battle; the campaign goes on to ultimate triumph. Does anyone dare to believe that the liquor traffic can ultimately win against the Kingdom of God! Therefore let us be steadfast, unmoveable, abounding in every good work for temperance.

MONDAY.

FIDELITY TO OTHERS.

"Why do we break faith with one another?"—Matt. 2:10.

If we can read this text right this morning, it is believed that we will have a new fidelity in our lives. The brotherhood of man is the theme of our Lord Jesus Christ. According to His parable on stewardship we have a trust in others which we dare not break.

We have family ties, friendly relations, the trust of love in unfriendly relations, our church vows, our marriage contract, business agreements, peace responsibilities, the moral obligation to so live that others may be the better for knowing us; more than that, we have a responsibility to so live that others seeing us may know Jesus. Failure to keep faith in any or all of these is so easy, but, when we do break, it wrecks happiness. If we love God and realize that He is our Father and all are brothers through our Lord Jesus Christ, our fidelity would be an honor.

Prayer—O Lord, forgive us of our failure to keep the faith with Thee and with our fellow men who trust us. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE LORD STANDING BY.

"The Lord stood by him and said, be of good cheer."—Acts 12:11.

Saint Paul was suffering a very unjust imprisonment against the background of a long and strenuous missionary campaign. He had risked his life for it. He had been beaten and left dead for his ministry. He had been shipwrecked, and many other hardships followed his way. And now he must face the worst at Rome. But the Lord stood by and cheered him.

To have good cheer for the sake of good cheer means nothing. But when it comes under the championship of a cause, or under the power of a purpose, or when one is carrying a heavy load, it means everything, and if it is from God it means victory in eternal things.

Prayer—

*"Not for the sake of selfish joy, dear God,
This gift of cheer, I ask;
But that I may tread the way He trod
And do His earthly task."*

WEDNESDAY.

LETTING YOUR LIGHT SHINE.

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5:16.

"Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"—Matt. 6:46.

We hang out our shingles when we enter a profession, and that is quite right. Why not hang one out when we profess Christ. One may be a hypocrite by professing too little, as much as he may be one by professing too much. Professional men who do not practice their profession, soon have no profession. So with Christians.

Prayer—Dear Father, help us to live faithful as becometh Thy children. This we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE BEST DEFINITION OF RELIGION.

"Pure, unsoiled religion in the judgment of God the Father means this: To care for orphans and widows in their troubles, and to keep one's self from the stain of the world."—(Mof-fatt) Jas. 1:27.

It is right said that "a man of character will keep himself from the stain of the world." Purity is the base of power and that power takes one into the world without becoming a part of the world. This is the judgment of God the Father, and it is the judgment of our fellow man the world over.

Prayer—Our Father, we crave Thy truth. May we embrace it and be better servants of Thine than we have ever been before. Amen.

FRIDAY.

CONTENT WITH MEDIOCRE.

"What do ye more than others?"—Matt. 5:47.

Not what we ought to be, but as good as the average . . . Not doing what we ought to do, but about as much as any one else. Getting by fairly well, why worry?

The test of life is not measured by what others do but by what we ought to do. It has been said that "the measure of a man's success is the difference between what he is and what he might be." Paul forgot the things that were behind and also thought nothing of what others were doing. He saw only his duty, and pressed on to that.

Prayer—O God, forbid that we should be satisfied with just getting by. Make us satisfied with no less than our best till we come into Thy presence forevermore. Amen.

SATURADAY.

"SELF-LIMITED WISDOM."

"Dost thou limit wisdom to thyself?"—Job. 15:8.

"Without me ye can do nothing." Jno. 15:5.

Amos R. Wells once said, "Conceit is the deadliest of disease." And he went on to explain that it destroys teachableness which is the source of wisdom, and he who shuts himself up within himself from the source of wisdom shuts himself up in a very small "box" of segacity, and is of all men most pitiable.

It is good to decide that we know very little and that what we know does not amount to very much, that what the world has for us is much more than what we know and therefore believing in our capacity to learn, apply our hearts to wisdom that we may know as much as we may acquire and be of the largest service possible.

In this we are warned against denying other people's statements, against belittling other people's opinions, from ever thinking that the other fellow can't tell us anything.

Prayer—O Lord, the meek shall inherit the earth. Make us meek and lowly Thou who dost hold the foundation of wisdom, we come to Thee. Give unto us as Thou wilt. In Jesus' name we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

"GOD'S WILL AND OUR HOLINESS."

"For this is the will of God, even your sanctification."—I. Thess. 4:3.

We some times scorn the word "saint" when applied to a human being. It sounds like an over-pious song and smacks of hypocrisy. And yet the Bible is full of appeals to sanctification, to be perfect, to being like Him and to leading a holy life. What does it all mean?

At least it means this: Sanctification, perfection, or holiness are not characteristics achieved by ourselves. They are blessings bestowed upon us by the Heavenly Father through the power of the Holy Spirit, and they are bestowed as a reward for compliance with a condition that brings them; which is through the atonement, through belief in Him and humbly serving Him.

Prayer—Our dear heavenly Father: We pray that we may have the power within us to conform to Thy Will and to be like Thee. Sanctify us through Thy grace and we will be Thy servants forever. Amen.

PRACTICING THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

By REV. ALFRED W. HURST.

"Not everyone that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my father who is in heaven."—Matt. 7:21.

We have recently concluded the celebration of the Christmas season and with more than usual enthusiasm due to more hopeful economic conditions. The streets of the city where I live have been crowded and have echoed constantly with the singing of Christmas carols, calling all to come and adore Him, Christ the Lord. But now that the Christmas season is past one is compelled to meditate on some words spoken by the Lord of Christmas after He grew to manhood and which we paraphrase, "Not everyone that singeth unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my father who is in heaven."

Now "everyone" includes the entire populace for surely no one has been able to keep from singing. The carols have been heard at school, church, home, over the radio, on the streets, at civic clubs, in busy stores, and wherever people congregate. But even an overwhelming majority singing "Lord, Lord," would not alter the truth of Jesus' statement. It is not they who say or sing "Lord" who truly observe Christmas but they who do the will of God.

In our text the words "saith" and "doeth" are placed in juxtaposition. There has been much talking about the lordship of Christ during the Christmas holidays. But have we really meant it? Politicians are in disrepute because they find words cheap but performance too costly. We often ask whether a person really means what he says and whether his word is as good as his bond. We could easily bring Christmas into disrepute by singing with our lips what we did not mean in our hearts. There may be many who like Scarlett in "Gone With the Wind" have a religion that is only "lip deep." We have all heard of people whose beauty is only skin deep, and of the old saying that "pretty is as pretty does." But Scarlett's "lip-deep" religion suggests that "Christian is as Christian does." With Jesus, deeds took primacy over creeds. Or, conversely, creeds which did not issue in deeds were hollow. St. Paul expressed it in a memorable saying that has gone around the world in every age and still circulates as one of the truest of words, "If I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, but have not love, I am become sounding brass, or a clanging cymbal." And doubtless he would say that even if we sing Christmas like the angels of Bethlehem, but do not express the spirit of kindness and good will in our daily living, we are "sounding brass and clanging cymbals."

Let us concede that there is tremendous power in words. But their power depends upon the depth and sincerity of thought and purpose back of them. We have heard it said of people that they were "talking through their hat." There is little power in such words. Words touch life with a magic power only when they come "through the heart." In the history of religion, the use of magic words and formulas and incantations was a common phenomenon. These magic words were used in an effort to force Nature's hand, "to compel her, willy-nilly, to do anything we may require of her." Man felt that perhaps these magic words might prove the secret key which would save him the trouble of ordinary cooperation with Nature. These incantations had no necessary relation to morals as we think of them. "A demon could, by standing on his head between five fires for so many thousands of years, achieve power over Brahma and all the gods. The proper charm would cause the sun to stand still in the heavens and death to stay its course." The right magic device or word "might enable men to storm the heaven and dethrone the gods." Sometimes the words were meaningless and again it might be the name of the divinity. The name of the god was regarded as part of his personality and was used by primitive men for personal and often selfish purposes.

One does not like to think that the "name which is above every name" has been used during the holidays in the commercial world for selfish purposes and for greed of gain, although the commercialization of this sacred season is thoroughgoing and regrettable. But the name of the Christ has been on every tongue in song and story. Jesus would remind us that there is no magical power in the mere recital of his name, and that we can not find the secret key to life's fullness by avoiding the trouble of ordinary cooperation with the Giver of Life. "Why do you say 'Lord, Lord' and do not the things that I say?"

To people who sing Christmas carols "through their hat" Christmas comes only once a year and life continues as before. Of such the Master would say, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they sing." But we believe there were multitudes who sang with the spirit and the understanding and to whom Christmas is an abiding experience. Realizing that "actions speak louder than words" they have come through the Christmas season with life renewed at its springs, prepared to make a permanent and energizing spirit. Such people are not content to say "Lord, Lord," but allow Christ to establish His lordship over the domain of their lives. They have dedicated themselves to do the will of God, their lives directed to the ends that God approves. By good works will their Christmas faith be made perfect.

To "crown him lord of all" is to make the mind and spirit of Christ the ruling force in one's life. It means to make Him the Master of one's whole being, body, soul and social relationships. To do the will of God is to know what it is for the blade of life, "now and again, to take hold and cut with the grain."

During the Christmas season the writer received many cards, thoughtful and beautiful. Among them was one which contained some impressive lines from Phillip Brooks which make more concrete what we mean by practicing the Christmas spirit, how we may make Christmas permanent by establishing the lordship of Christ over our lives.

"Then let every heart

Keep its Christmas within:

Christ's pity for sorrow,

Christ's hatred for sin.

Christ's care for the weakest,

Christ's courage for right,

Everywhere, everywhere,

Christmas tonight!

For the Christ-child who comes

Is the master of all.

No palace too great,

No cottage too small."

To "keep Christmas within" is to keep it and be kept by it forever. You who have kept Christmas in this manner are prepared to make 1937 a new year free from the callousness and bitterness and cowardice of the old.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The Christian Orphanage was very highly honored last week. The Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN paid us a very pleasant visit. We discussed THE CHRISTIAN SUN and its needs and talked over days gone by when he was my pastor. Being Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN seems to agree with Brother Lester.

Our good friend, Rev. Everette Neese, now pastor of the Henderson Church, with a number of his members, was attending a meeting at Elon College last week and took time to bring his people over to the Orphanage and let them see it. Some of them had never visited the Orphanage before.

Rev. Mr. Smith, pastor of our Lynchburg Church, and a number of his members also came over to visit the Orphanage. Some of his members had never been here before.

We also had visitors from Hines' Chapel Church and Reidsville Church.

We certainly enjoyed having these good people visit us. If we could get more of our people to visit us from time to time and see what we are trying to do here for orphaned children, I feel sure that our people would be more interested and could go back home and interest their churches more in supporting this work. We want to extend a cordial invitation to our church folk to visit the Orphanage and see how the money that is sent here from time to time, is being used.

Superintendent.

SCRIPTURE HUNGER IN VIRGINIA.

A group of Christian workers last year opened a Sunday School in an abandoned church near Beldor, Virginia, in the Blue Ridge mountains. Last May, accompanied by a minister, they held a service at the mountain home of a cripple, when 66 were present. This cripple promised, if he knew when the minister would return, to have 10 present. Two weeks later, 104 came. The visit, a week later, was rewarded with an attendance of over 150. People came from various directions, while only one house is visible from the place where the meeting is held.

One family living more than four miles away has not missed a service since the work began. The parents and two of the children walk, while the three smaller ones are placed on an old mule, which the father leads.

The best pew is a flat board about six inches wide, and many in the audience are seated on round poles about six or seven inches in diameter. The workers say that they have never seen such a hunger for Scripture truth.—Moody Institute Monthly..

R. A. WHITTEN.

W. B. MADISON.

Mr. William B. Madison was born March 9, 1858, and departed this life December 12, 1936, at the age of 78 years.

On November 25, 1878, Miss Sallie M. Jones became his industrious and devoted bride. To this marriage six children were born, four sons, J. C., J. W., J. H., and Claude Madison; two daughters, Helen Madison and Mrs. Estelle Brame. J. H., and Helen, and wife preceded him to the land of rest. In addition to the surviving who lament their loss are nineteen grandchildren, four great grandchildren, neighbors, and a host of friends.

Brother Madison was born of the Spirit in the year of Our Lord 1880 at Mt. Oak School House. To this profession of faith he remained faithful and grew in the knowledge, faith and grace of his Lord and Christ. He was a student and lover of the Holy Bible.

Brother Madison's father, was a pioneer preacher for the Christian Church in Rockingham County, N. C. In 1883 when Howard's Chapel was organized, Brother Madison became a charter member, was elected deacon and secretary, and remained continuously in these two offices for 53 years.

From Prohibition's birth until his death, Brother Madison was a stalwart friend and strong advocate of this grand movement. He was the first in Rockingham County to cast his ballot for the cause of temperance. When opportunity afforded he was always ready to speak a favorable word for the promotion of Prohibition.

Brother Madison loved his local church, gave generously and regularly to its finances, attended many church conferences, Sunday School conventions and other religious gatherings as an evidence of his interest in the advancement of righteousness and the Kingdom of God in hearts and lives of men and women on earth. He was a lover of missionary work.

In his private life he was kind and considerate of others, held his Bible reading and spiritual activities daily, rendered a helping hand to his neighbors and had the welfare of his family always at heart. He will be greatly missed.

Funeral services were conducted in his memory at Howard's Chapel in charge of Rev. J. L. Neese, assisted by Revs. O. A. Elmore, Paul Rakestraw and the writer. Interment was made in the local cemetery. Peace to his soul, and eternal joy be his portion now and forever.

SUN'S PULPIT.

How, then, can we practice the Christmas spirit throughout the year? We can share Christ's pity for sorrow whenever we stand face to face with human needs and trouble, refusing to pass by on the other side. We can share Christ's hatred for sin in our own lives and in society about us. We can share Christ's care for the weakest remembering that to make Christmas permanent we should identify ourselves with "the least of these" our brethren. And finally, if we would make Christmas more than singing through our hats, let us share Christ's courage for the right, facing honestly the implications or right living in our own lives, and throwing our influence on the side of righteous causes, remembering that perhaps it is more difficult to be "more daring than devout."

Thus can we make Christmas a permanent possession, an energizing and transforming spirit to make the coming twelve months a truly new year.

E. Stanley Jones tells of a little girl who went up to a film actress in a hotel and said, "You're an actress, aren't you?" When told that she was, the little girl replied, "Then why don't you act?" Perhaps that needs to be said to every one this post-Christmas season. "You sang the Christmas carols, didn't you? Then why don't you act?"

"Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven."

"O holy Child of Bethlehem,

Descend to us, we pray;

Cast out our sins and enter in,

Be born in us today!

We hear the Christmas angels,

The great glad tidings tell;

O come to us, abide with us,

Our Lord Emmanuel!"

LIKE A TOWER.

Out of earth's maze of sorrow,

Rising higher like a steeple—

Like a church's simple tower,

Is the courage of the people. . .

We can see it—clear and vivid,

Miracle of sweet profoundness—

High with meaning, never failing.

'Tis a marvel, and is boundless

As the beauty of the earth.

Yea—this courage of its people!

Results of National Preaching Mission.

By Rev. E. STANLEY JONES.

To sum up the results of National Preaching Mission just concluded is not easy, for a spiritual movement does not readily come without statistics. There are subtle changes of attitude in life which defy compilation, but when we check with our objectives, we see certain indications of what has been accomplished. Not that we have any complacencies about what we have done. The greatest thing accomplished has been in showing possibilities for the future.

First, nerve has been put back into the Christian movement. It was on the defensive and there was much defeatist mentality. We think this has now been changed and the swing of victory has now come back at least into the large sections of the Christian movement.

Second, evangelism has been put back into the center of the life of the Church. It had slipped into the hands of the semi-queer; now we think that evangelism has been made possible for the average run of our laity.

Third, we have been bridging gulfs which have been growing up between the Christian Church and the outside world and within the ranks of the Church itself.

Fourth, we have tried to fill up the gap between the Church and the youth. We succeeded only partially in this, for with some very splendid exceptions, the sectional meetings with youth were the smallest of our meetings. It showed that the Church was not quite able to deliver youth, but where we met youth on its own grounds in the schools, colleges and universities, there the response has been far greater than we had dreamed. The youth of America are ready for reality if they can get it.

Fifth, we have tried to bridge the gap between the Church and labor. In Europe organized labor is going largely anti-Christian. We have tried to prevent that from happening here in America. Wherever we have an opportunity to meet organized labor, the response has been most gratifying. Labor is prepared to respond to the repeal of religion if it sees that we have an adequate program for the reconstruction of the total life. We have urged labor not to go communist or fascist, but to go Christian.

Sixth, we have tried to bridge the growing gap between the social gospel and the individual gospel. We have tried to show that these two gospels are really one, for life is one and the gospel must take in the whole of life. There must be no mere gesture in either direction, but a whole-hearted acceptance of the need for change in both the individual and the social order.

Seventh, we have tried to bring together, to bridge the gulf between the conservative and the radical theologically and socially. Both the fundamentalist and the modernist have found themselves around a central loyalty to Christ and could unite at that place.

Eighth, we have tried to bridge the gaps between the denominations and to head the Christian movement toward unity. We think that we have succeeded in a large measure in doing this, and that the next great step is for the different denominations to get together. A divided Church in a divided world has little moral authority.

Ninth, we have tried to show the possibility of a group of men and women with different gifts and emphases producing corporate results with no one trying to star. We feel that our team has accomplished that in a splendid way.

The response to the Preaching Mission has surprised everybody. Twenty-five thousand ministers have been touched; two and one half million people have attended the meetings, outside of those who heard over the radio; tens of thousands have stayed in the after-meetings for personal surrender to Christ; audiences as large as twenty thousand have attended; but the greatest thing is not what has been accomplished, but what we see can be done by a united, aggressive, Christ-centered Christianity. The future is big with promises.

Eight Reasons Why We Should Support Our Church.

THE CHURCH—

Provides the place, leadership and fellowship for the worship of God.

THE CHURCH—

Is the protector of our communities, property being more valuable, human life safer and virtue more secure where Christian institutions exist. The House of Worship is a witness to God every day in the year, a symbol of all that is good, a call to all that is holy.

THE CHURCH—

Is the conserver of the values of the past, the creator of ideals in the present, and the torchbearer of tomorrow's progress.

THE CHURCH—

Is the great mother of children, consecrating them by baptism, educating them in her homes and schools, training them for service, preparing them to meet the temptations of life victoriously.

THE CHURCH—

Sends a steady stream of consecrated men and women into every avenue of life, seeking to make our schools Christian, promoting civic reforms, carrying Christian ethics into economics, thus helping to answer her prayer, "Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven."

THE CHURCH—

Through its ministers and members is continually carrying on a ministry of consolation to the aged, the sick, the sorrowing, the tempted, the lonely, and the troubled—a service that never can be tabulated in reports nor paid for in gold—without which life for many would be empty of meaning, and barren of hope.

THE CHURCH—

Proclaims the everlasting gospel of Christ's redeeming love, and ever seeks to evangelize the neighborhood and the world.

THE CHURCH—

Is God's agency to call men to seek the path of right living, and to enlist men in "the Building of the Kingdom of God upon Earth." By contributing to the church we become "co-workers with God." What a privilege!

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

TRAINING SCHOOL.

The Sixteenth Annual Leadership Training School for Newport News, Virginia, will be held February 7th to 12th. This school is shared by the Disciple, Episcopal, Lutheran, Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational-Christian Churches.

Rev. H. S. Hardeastle, pastor of Christian Temple, Norfolk, Virginia, will teach the Bible course on "The Teachings of Jesus." Other courses will include: "Understanding People," "Guidance in Christian Home Making," "The Church Facing the Alcohol Problem," "Children's Division of the Church," "A Study of Older Children," "Christian World Friendship Among Young People," and "The Stewardship of Life."

This school has been largely attended from year to year and will probably be again this time. Our church in Newport News is doing as fine a piece of work in leadership training as any in this section.

MOUNT GILLEAD CHURCH.

On Tuesday, January 26th, by invitation of the pastor and previous arrangements, we met at Louisburg, North Carolina, and proceeded to the pastorate of Mt. Gilead Church. The purpose of this visit was to complete the canvass on the part of the college campaign that was begun last spring. The quota for the church was $195. Rev. S. E. Madern is the pastor. Twenty-five dollars had been pledged previously.

We went into the homes of the members of the church. I was delighted to meet such a splendid group of people. Wherever we went, they knew about the college and expressed gratification of what had been done. They were greatly concerned for its future and without an exception were anxious to do what they could. When the day's work was over, pledges for the college from this rural church amounted to $250 with $27.50 paid in cash, and assurance that the balance would be paid according to pledges made.

We may feel a bit discouraged at the college at times, but every time that I have gone into the field to talk with people about the college, about what it has done for the church, about how the church needs the college, and how it should be a privilege for us to sacrifice to continue the college that was founded by our forefathers at greater sacrifices than we could ever be called upon to make, I have found a ready, a liberal, and a joyous response, and always come back to the campus greatly encouraged and more convinced than ever that the members of the Christian Church love the college, are willing to sacrifice for it, and will do whatever is necessary to meet the needs of the college.

May God bless our churches and prepare the hearts of our members for the appeal that the college will eventually make for contributions that its very life may be saved.

THORSBY INSTITUTE NEWS.

The enrollment of Thorsby Institute, Thorsby, Alabama, so far for this year is seventy-six, not counting ten who are taking music but are not far enough advanced to enter the Institute which carries the ninth through the twelfth grade. Half of last year's senior class are attending college. Twenty-two were graduated last year.

It is our wish that more of the Congregational-Christian Churches would interest their young people to attend this Academy which emphasizes character development along with intellectual development.

A recent visitor at Thorsby Institute and Thorsby Congregational Church was Rev. R. H. Gammon, D. D., of Oak Park, Illinois, Field Representative of the Congregational Education Society. He preached at the Congregational Church on Sunday, January 17th, and on Monday spoke at chapel. His talks were very inspirational and were especially helpful to young people.

The Thorsby Congregational Church which has always been closely allied to the Institute has enlarged recently its building to provide more rooms for Sunday school classes and a social room for various needs. Rev. Lawrence Stanley, the pastor, has spent many days personally in helping build this addition.

SOUTHERN UNION CAMPAIGN.

We are succeeding nicely with our collections for the rebuilding of the dormitory at Southern Union College, Wadley, Alabama. We appreciate every thing that has been done and hope we can have the continued cooperation of all our people, both in the Church and out of the Church.

An unofficial estimate places the amount needed at six thousand dollars, three thousand of which is already assured. We have in mind some four or five hundred dollars additional.

As it will be impossible for me to see everyone in person, we hope every one who can will please send a contribution as early as is convenient for them to do so. I shall visit as many churches, communities and individuals as I am able to visit, and trust every one will help in this great undertaking.

Remember, we accept any thing you may wish to contribute and will give credit for produce at market value.

Will the pastors of all our Christian churches in Georgia and Alabama please let me know what time their respective churches hold their services so I can arrange to meet with them.

Brethren, we need the dormitory, and we must rebuild it. It will be a tragedy not to do so. It will cost some six thousand dollars to rebuild, but it will cost us infinitely more not to rebuild it. I am depending on every friend of the college to have a part in this great service.

G. D. HUNT.
Campaign Director.

ALABAMA NOTES.

After living in Southeast Alabama a little longer than a year, I will write again about the work here. I am pastoring a group of three churches here and driving 150 miles once each month to central Alabama and pastoring the Seman Church. Since coming to this field, we have built a six room parsonage at the Blackwoods Church near Holland. The church and community is very proud of this building and the pastor and family are very happy to live in it.

The Ladies' Society which was organized by the pastor's wife, has been doing splendid work. They have made it possible for the church to give more for missions than in several years. They have paid a part of the church budget. They have challenged the ladies' society of the Christian Hill Church to a reading contest to last for a period of several months, the society reading the most books will win, the other society to sponsor a social for the winning society.

The Young Peoples' Society and the Sunday School have been ever green at Blackwoods, some needed repair has been done on the church building, and in every way there seems to be progress.

The New Hope Church has purchased a much needed piano and new hymn books, which add so much to the church music. They also have plans to put new seats in the church before the summer revival. This church had no Sunday School, but one has been organized and has been going ever since.

At the Christian Hill Church there has not been any new additions to the building, but here we have a small group of consecrated people at work. The Ladies' Society here is very active, also an ever green Sunday School and young people's society.

The Seman Church, organized in 1933 by its present pastor, has made much progress since its organization.

All four of my churches have had an increase in membership in 1936, and I believe that they have all been spiritually revived. The Lord has blessed wonderfully. Three of the four churches mentioned in this letter have paid the missionary apportionment in full. I hope that 1937 will bring more progress for the churches. A. C. NELSON.

MASSANETTA SPRINGS CONFERENCE.

Massanetta Springs, located as it is in the heart of the historic Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, four miles east of Harrisonburg, fifteen miles from the famous Skyland Drive in the Shenandoah National Park, offers not only an ideal vacation spot, but the program of the Conference conducted by the Presbyterian Synod of Virginia is second to none in America. Outstanding Christian leaders of every denomination, both in this country and abroad, annually speak on its platform.

As a vacation resort it has unequalled attractions, such as the famous health-giving spring; athletic sports, including golf links and swimming pool; the wonderful underground caverns; points of historic and scenic interest such as the birth place of Woodrow Wilson at Staunton, the tombs of Lee and Jackson at Lexington; Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson; the famous Skyland Drive atop the Blue Ridge Mountains which furnishes scenery which some have said rivals that in Switzerland.

The dates of the Conferences at Massanetta Springs for the 1937 season have been fixed as follows:

Christian Endeavor Convention, June 17-20.

Camp for Intermediate Boys and Girls, June 21-27.

Presbyterian Young People's Conference, June 28-July 4.

Methodist Young People's Conference, July 5-11.

Baptist Young People's Conference, July 12-18.

School of Sacred Music, July 19-25.

Sacred Music Festival, July 22-23.
Elders and Deacons Conference, July 24-25.

Woman's Auxiliary Training School, July 26-August 1.

Lutheran Church Workers Assembly, August 2-8.

Baptist Assembly, August 9-15.

Bible Conference and School for Pastors, August 16-29.

The prospects for the Conferences were never brighter. The beautiful new swimming pool proved last summer to be a great asset. The popularity of Massanetta has been proven by the application of a number of organizations wishing to hold conferences on the grounds this coming summer. Among the number is the large Young People's Conference, of about 700, of the Virginia Baptist Convention which formerly met at Virginia Beach.

It is planned to put on a larger, more complete and more ambitious Bible Conference program this year than ever before.

THE LONELY SOUL.

"Times are better, and everything seems better, materially, and yet," said a fine young man, "there are people all around us who are lonely—people who are missing something they haven't, and they don't know what it is."

Are you lonely, soul? Have you sometimes known the tug of loneliness—uncontrollable, sweeping loneliness that comes over one like a flood, and is gone again?

Loneliness is the cry of the soul for fellowship with God or man. Is there one soul on earth who has not sometime felt rather keenly an aching loneliness of soul and said in his inner self:

O God,—does
No one know
The hunger of
A hungry soul?
Does no one know
The aching loneliness
Of feet that stumble on
In blundering darkness
Because they've missed
The way You trod?
And, God—if they know—
These who pass us by
With neglect and scorn—
Why don't they give us Love instead?
*Why don't they hear our cry—
Why, God,—why?*

Great souls know what it is to be lonely—they know what is it, the loneliness of a heart that has given up the old and is reaching out for the new, standing alone in the realm of the unexplored—lonely—hungry for the encouragement and the fellowship of those who understand and who care.

Most of us, perhaps, know what it is to feel in some desperate crisis of life something of a loneliness akin to the Christ when He said, "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?"

And man was born for fellowship . . . and loneliness hurts; yet he lets the cares of life choke out the little bit of comradeship with others and with God till God reminds and woos him back again through the aching tug of loneliness.

Saint Augustine said, "Thou hast made us for Thyself, and our hearts are restless till they find their rest in Thee." And whether we be lonely from having indifferently lost our affiliation with His Church, and His people, and His Book, and His Throne of Grace, or whether sin has broken off our fellowship, as surely as we face and remove these causes as surely will our God give comfort and a sense of joyous comradeship to the Lonely Soul, for:

"The earth lights never lead us

Beyond the shadows grim;

And the lone heart never resteth,
Till it findeth rest in Him."

LOUISE HYDE.

DR. JAMES R. CLINTON.

Dr. James R. Clinton, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Philadelphia, arrived at the college last Saturday evening, January 23rd, and remained on our campus until Saturday, January 30th. Dr. Clinton had a very busy week. He preached at the eleven o'clock service, at Vespers he gave "His Mother's Sermon" from "The Bonny Briar Bush" by Maclaren. Both services were inspirational and helpful. During the week he spoke at chapel, at evening services, taught classes in the college, and held numerous interviews with students.

It is a rare privilege to come in touch with a spirit like Dr. Clinton's. He has a fund of information, a genial disposition, a kind word, and a helpful suggestion for everybody. He endeared himself to faculty, students, and townspeople alike.

Dr. Clinton came to the college under the auspices of the Home Boards of the United Church. We are grateful to those who sent him and bespeak for him a fruitful tour as he visits some of the churches in the Southeast.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CELEBRATION.

This week Christian Endeavor is celebrating its fifty-sixth anniversary. Young people around the world will think again of the February 2, 1881, when Rev. and Mrs. Francis E. Parker of Portland, Maine, met with the young people of their church and organized them into a working group which later became a world-wide Christian Endeavor Union.

We take some church pride in the fact that this was a Congregational minister and a Congregational Church. Congregational and Christian churches have led in many enterprises and have made a real contribution to world Christianity. Among these contributions stands Christian Endeavor.

Some believe that Christian Endeavor has reached the crossroads and is now at a critical point in its progress. Many of the leaders in this young people's group are no longer young. They began in youth, but age has crept up on them. The younger generation has seemingly not responded to the calls of Christian Endeavor as an older generation did when they were young.

Today we talk a great deal about Church unity and interdenominational cooperation, but the fact is that most denominations are now building strong denominational programs, and several of them have almost lost their contact with Christian Endeavor because they have substituted a denominational organization. This process is touching our own Church and is liable to withdraw our own young people from interdenominational contacts unless the leaders of the Church are careful to train the younger generation concerning the values of cooperating with other church groups. One of the strange things of our time is that we talk about international peace and make greater preparation for war, and that we talk about interdenominational unity and cooperation while we discontinue the cooperation we had practiced and build denominational walls about our churches.

Christian Endeavor may not be the best thing for young people, but until we are sure we have found something better, it is pathetic to see this organization deserted. So far as this writer can see, Christian Endeavor can meet the needs of most church groups, for it seeks to minister to all phases of personal life and endeavors to build a fine sense of church loyalty. For this reason, he will attend the Christian Endeavor rallies, banquets and other types of celebrations for Christian Endeavor's fifty-sixth anniversary and will wish Christian Endeavor leaders unusually good success in the years that lie ahead.

READING BOOKS.

These long February evenings make possible the reading of books for many of our farmer friends and others whose day is governed by the light of the sun. What is more fun than to sit about the rousing fire and read a good book?

Books are our friends. They may be old friends or new. They come to us with messages for every mood. The culture of the world lies hidden within their pages. Characters of every kind are to be found there. Strength for the daily duties come from friendship with the wisdom of the world that is to be found in books—new books, old books, all kinds of books.

Abraham Lincoln and the people of his day had some trouble in finding access to books, but that is not true today. At minimum cost the postman will deliver them to any door in city or far out into the country. Book Clubs sell books at small prices, libraries lend them without charge, book-stores supply the the wants of all, even drug stores have books to lend, and the dime stores supply quite a variety. Our Board of Christian Education can furnish many books on religious education and kindred subjects. The Congregational Library at 14 Beacon Street, is well supplied with religious books to be read by our church people. Books are plentiful, for, as an ancient writer said, "Of the making of books there is no end."

Fortunate are those children who live in families where books are familiar friends, known and read of all. Especially happy are they if the books are selected with care and read for the joy that comes from beautiful language studded with golden thoughts. Ideals grow out of reading, and ideals make life good or bad. Don't be afraid of books. You can't read all, so select the best, read them, love them, and life will be happier because of them.

CHILD SLAVERY TODAY.

It is thirteen years since Mr. Winston Churchill told the House of Commons that he intended to abolish child slavery in the British possessions of Hongkong within one year—and still the evil continues. A special commission has now been sent out from England to look into the whole problem. It is doubtful whether there is anything within the realm of slave systems so revolting as child slavery—the sale of thousands of little girls say of five years of age, at half-a-crown—bought for "appreciation"—bought for sale again at eight to ten years of age, for drudgery—or worse, without the glimmer of an understanding of what awaits them. The cruelties imposed upon them are of such nature that publication of them would be prohibited in the British press.

A wealthy Chinese gentleman, who has decided to devote his life and means to the abolition of this gigantic evil, declares that there are more than 4,000,000 pitiable little slaves within China proper; probably there are about 10,000 in British Hongkong and Malaya. It is the job of this new commission to discover their numbers, whereabouts, and to propose to the government means for putting down the unholy traffic going on between Chinese in China and Chinese inhabitants in British territories.—The Chronicle.

A GROWING MENACE TO OUR COUNTRY.

By REV. GEORGE N. EDWARDS.

Since the government took up the attitude "not of fighting but of fostering the use of alcoholic beverages" for the purpose of public revenue the liquor traffic set free the laws by which it had been outlawed, has taken long strides to recover its old grip on the life of the nation. A wide and concerted effort is now being made to turn this people into a nation of drinkers of hard liquor or continue as users of wines and beer.

The outstanding success of this effort in these three years since prohibition was repealed is evident from such official figures as these: The amount of distilled spirits withdrawn from United States bonded warehouses within 1933, the last year of prohibition, was 6,000,000 gallons; in 1934 it was 42,500,000; in 1935 it was 82,500,000. The malt beverages thus withdrawn in 1933 was 6,500,000 gallons; in 1934 it was 32,000,000; in 1935 it was 42,000,000. This is significant, not only in showing the tremendous increase in the use of liquor, but in showing that the increase in the use of beer, ale, etc., is far less than the increase in the use of spirituous liquors, flatly contradicting what was promised by repealers in the fighting days of '33.

The total drink bill of the nation before prohibition days was figured at about two billion dollars annually. Careful estimates made in the last years of prohibition indicated that the total had shrunk to half of that. The annual bill is now estimated at three and a half billions.

The places where liquor was sold under prohibition were blind tigers, private clubs, back alleys and the hip pockets of the bootlegger. Now the trade has leaped into prominence again in liquor shops, beer parlors, and in some states open bars on the main streets. In the days before prohibition there was 177,500 saloons; now over 417,000 licensed places of various names selling, and in some great cities are to be found the old bars and brass rails and, what we never saw before in this country, barmaids selling and women lined up to drink.

The specious plea that repeal would lessen the volume of drinking has been proven false, as most thinking people expected it would be. In addition to the vast amount of legalized liquor now being sold, bootlegging not only continues but according to Joseph H. Choate, Director of Alcohol Administration, it has doubled. The Treasury Department requires 4,000 men to enforce the liquor laws and says the total staff should be 4,500.

So much for the success of the business which was to be radically curbed by the laws which permit it. By every art of advertising and salesmanship the "trade" has avowedly set out to make every family in the United States a user of their wares.

Now a few evidences of the effects of the increased use of alcoholic beverages. Applications for insurance with the Northwestern National, for instance, show an increase of 110 per cent in the occasional and moderate users of alcohol. The great Bellevue Hospital in New York shows an increase in cases of acute alcoholism from 7,649 in 1934 to 12,378 in 1936. Keeley Institute for inebriates not only has a large increase in its cases but it reports a 14 per cent increase of women patients. Seventy-seven per cent of them are housewives, the rest school teachers, nurses and others; that is, those women who are responsible for our homes, our children, and our health. Penal institutions show that commitments for liquor law violations doubled in 1935 over 1934. Prison directors, instead of finding a diminution of inmates, are pleading for more space. Minneapolis shows in two wet years as compared with the last two dry years an increase in murders of 71 per cent, of felonious homicides of 75 per cent, of assaults, 94 per cent.

The country everywhere is aghast at the terrible number of serious and fatal motor accidents. One of the most important factors is the presence of drinking drivers. The increase of such accidents in Washington, D. C., is reported as 47 per cent; in Pittsburgh, 450 per cent. Thirty-seven thousand people, perhaps more, met their deaths last year, and hundreds of thousands more were injured through motor accidents in this country. Our own state is no exception, and, as was published a few days ago, one of the three largest groups of accidents was due to intoxicated drivers.

You can't control by law the effects of alcohol once it gets into a man's system, nor can you control the exploitation of the customers of those who have secured the privilege of selling it. The results are the same whether the liquor comes from a modern looking package that paid taxes or from the pocket of a bootlegger. Legal alcohol is just as intoxicating as illegal. When you can easily get more of it, it is more dangerous.

I have seen a liquor advertisement representing their products as a tiger held in leash. It is just that. It was a most apt illustration of the kind of thing you are dealing with. It does no good to put pads on his claws, or to cover him with a blanket, or feed him with milk; he is still a tiger.

We don't want a sleeping tiger, nor a blind tiger; the only safe tiger is a dead tiger.

These figures collected largely by John Haynes Holmes from public sources may seem of little consequence to those whose only concern is to have plenty of drinks whenever they want them and wherever they are, without regard to the public welfare, until their turn comes to suffer. But a Christian citizen is concerned about his country before it gets back to the depths of debauchery from which it had arisen. He is concerned not only with increasing taxes, but increasing moral and physical degradation, with the perils of youth in an alcohol ridden community, with the danger of an electorate dominated by the liquor interests as it used to be. We appeal to our people to see to it that neither the liquor habit nor the liquor traffic gets a strangle hold upon us, nor upon our communities, nor upon our country.

FROM THE COUNCIL FOR SOCIAL ACTION.

No citizen of democratic America can read the front page dispatches on Spain appearing day after day, week after week, in his newspaper without being stirred by pity and injustice. The wastes of war in terms of human suffering seem more than one nation can bear.

What is America's part in that waste? In that suffering? We all earnestly wish we knew the answers. Our knowledge seems less, even than our feeling in the matter, and our concern is less than human justice would demand.

To answer these questions, the current number of SOCIAL ACTION is devoted to the discussion of Spain's present problems. The history of the long struggle of democracy against feudalism is vividly drawn, the place of the church, of the land questions, of the over-officered army, of representative government—their contribution to the present crisis is made plain. Mr. Herrings's recent visit to Spain lends first hand authority to his discussion, in this pamphlet, of the elected government now in jeopardy.

This is the kind of information upon which Christian people can base intelligent opinion. "Feeling" we are bound to have; adequate information may make valid our emotional response. Certainly both elements are necessary for adequate action.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

In company with Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Harrell, my wife and I are on a ten day's trip to Florida. We left Suffolk, Va. at 12:30 P. M. last Monday, and spent Monday night in Wilmington, N. C. Tuesday we reached Brunswick, Ga. and spent the night in a cottage at the Palmetto Camp as guests of the owners, Mr. and Mrs. Y. T. Yates, formerly of Suffolk. It was a pleasure to renew the fellowship of these good friends and their kindness was very much appreciated.

On Wednesday evening we reached Orlando, Florida, and saw Dr. J. O. Atkinson, who was our host for breakfast Thursday A. M. He has gained six pounds in weight and improving otherwise under the guidance of the Orlando Sanitarium and the blessing of our heavenly Father. The doctor forbids him to talk above a whisper, and this injunction is helping him to recover his strength and recuperate his vocal chords. It was a joy to share his friendship and charming fellowship again.

After a little sightseeing around Orlando, the next objective was Lake Wales, and the Singing Tower erected by the late Edward W. Bok. We reached there during the music recital. About two thousand tourists were there to enjoy this sweet hour of inspiration and spiritual uplift.

The Tower is on a beautiful hill—the highest point in central Florida. Standing on this hill one looks to the East and the West, the North and the South to see orange groves and forests, placid lakes and inviting fields, where the air is filled with music of the beautiful bells and singing birds, and the gentle breezes waft the fragrance of sweet scented flowers. Surely this is a place of transcendent beauty and inspiration. As the thousands of people from many states stood reverently with uncovered heads, one thought of the silent influence of the donor of this great monument to the people of this great country. It is worth the trip to Florida to have the experience we feel today. How easy it is to waste time and money, two of man's most useful opportunities. How soon people who use their money only for themselves are forgotten. Edward Bok is living in many lives through this institution. Here flowers may bloom, and birds may live and sing with no danger of death by the ruthless hand of the hunter.

A few more days in Florida and we will return home, in the providence of God to take up again, we trust, our respective work. This trip offers a great opportunity for sight-seeing, study and inspiration. This is a great Country. It should belong to God. It should not be marred by sin or scarred by war. If people would live in the light of His Word and feed their souls upon the Word of life, peace would abide in our midst and the desert would blossom as a rose.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE CHURCH.

At a public meeting held in Elon College, Thursday of last week, a question was asked of the leader, Dr. James R. Clinton of Philadelphia, by a student, "Do you think that the church will survive?" Dr. Clinton's reply was, "The church has survived," and indeed it has. It has faced criticism, ridicule, persecution, and a multitude of attacks from all kinds of organizations and governments, and yet it is here. It has survived and will continue to survive. It was conceived of the Holy Spirit and born into the hearts of men. The gates of Hell will not prevail against it. Differences, discords, insincerity, and hypocrisy from within will hinder and injure, but they cannot prevail. Social, political, and wicked forces from without may do their utmost, but still the church will abide. It is the body of Christ. It is the pillar and ground of truth. Its present and future is necessarily entrusted into the hands of men. The responsibility for the efficiency and triumph of the church in our day is largely in our hands. We are to ascertain its truth, its value, and its ultimate goal for the world, and then it becomes our responsibility to proclaim the same to our day, to bring programs, to lay plans, and to prepare leaders for the effective execution of these programs and plans. The Holy Spirit will His part. He will inspire, energize, and direct, but it is our responsibility to employ the possibilities that have been placed in our hands in preparing human leadership for man's part in saving the world.

Great leaders do not just happen. They are prepared. Into the heart and life of every great leader have been poured earnestness, anxiety, prayers, sacrifices, and the very life of others. The Church of God will live. That which is of immediate concern to us it, "Will the part of the church that as been entrusted to us live?" Will it live efficiently? Will it live joyously? Will it live triumphantly? It will if we, by the help of God, will live up to the light that we have and will, in turn, pour that light into the hearts and lives of others. Our church cannot fulfill its mission adequately and completely without a trained leadership. We will not have a trained leadership unless we do the training. Others are not interested enough in the church that is ours to give the kind of training to our leaders that is necessary for the progress and the triumph of our church. Of course, they may learn history and science and English and theology on the campuses of independent colleges and of state universities, but what do they know about the needs of our church? How can they train leaders for our communion?

Of course it costs money to maintain an institution of higher learning. It would not be an institution worthy of our great church if it did not cost money. It costs money and things more valuable than money to be a Christian. I fear that too many people are trying to be Christian without cost to themselves—trying to be Christian on spare time, spare money, and spare service. Salvation was never offered to man on the principle of sparing but on the fact of sacrifice. If there had been no cross, Christianity could never have been. Christianity cannot be today without a cross. Plenty of this world's goods, laying up against the needs of the future, living in comparative ease, are not evidences of rugged Christianity and are not calculated to acquire Christian graces or religious power. The Christian Church is abundantly able to provide for its future and direct the training of its constituency. It is hoped that we will not count our worldly goods more valuable than our spiritual heritage.

In our institution of higher learning, we have offered to us a medium through which we may make our church live more efficiently than by any other medium offered. By seeing that our constituency is trained for courageous leadership in the days that are ahead, we will make the part of the church that we represent live on gloriously and victoriously. I trust that no church and no one will forget the college in these days of opportunity.

FOOTBALL—A CHAPEL TALK.

Dr. Fielenwider was our guest speaker in chapel last week. I hurriedly scribbled down a few of his interesting remarks. There were gathered in a home a group of the younger set of a small town. They had been playing games, but had exhausted their supply. A young boy came to the rescue and suggested that they play "Ugly." First, all gave their sweetest smile. Then everyone gave his ugliest frown. The boy tapped the shoulder of a girl near him. "You're it," he said. She turned to him, "You're crazy, I'm not even playing." But all of us are playing in the great Game of Life. Even though we do not realize it, every one of us is in the game.

Our speaker had caught our attention with the word game. Then he compared our game of Life to the game of football. Making a touchdown is not the only thing to a football game. Of course, we play for the touchdown—but a lot lies back of this: first, one must undergo hard training; he must give up eating and his dates; he must submit to training. The whistle blows and the kick-off of life is made. Hard training makes one better prepared.

Second, one must block interference; he must down the man who carries the ball. Every outstanding man has opposition—our trust must be placed in God.

Third, we must have the ability to hit the line hard. The cheering crowd at a football game yell "break that line." President Theodore Roosevelt's motto was "Hit the line hard." Always put your best into the game.

Then, much depends, in a game, on having a good coach. A coach highly recommended in the Great Game of Life is Jesus Christ. He is a Coach whom one may take for life eternal without fear of making a mistake. His followers may be sure of a Touchdown. Under his training Character is builded.

WINTER PARK.

The small printed bulletins of our church in Winter Park are attractive and give considerable information from which the following has been gleaned:

- No stranger shall remain ungreeted.
- No unfortunate shall go unfriended.
- No invalid shall be unvisited.
- No needy person shall go unassisted.
- No bewildered soul shall go unadvised.
- No home of mourning shall be neglected.
- No act of needed mercy shall be omitted.

At the recent annual meeting, the name was changed from First Congregational Church to The Congregational-Christian Church of Winter Park. The pastor, Rev. Victor B. Chicoine, says that it was done gladly and with enthusiasm.

Newly elected officers included: Trustees—W. H. Schultz, B. A. Kent, Earle Shannon, E. R. Baldwin. Deacons—Morris B. Myers, Rodman Lehman, Wilbur Johnson, George Chindahl. Deaconesses—Miss Eulalie Grover, Mrs. J. A. Howell, Mrs. N. B. Newell. Clerk—Rodman Lehman. Treasurer—William W. Newell. Music Committee—Richard Wright, chairman, Mrs. R. O. Ward, William Johnson. Nominating Committee for 1937—F. M. Edris, chairman, Mrs. William Johnson, A. E. Cline.

Miss Muriel Lester of London spoke there last Sunday morning. Rev. William Denny of Rollins College spoke January 17th, and on the evening of January 24th, the church had an excellent choral worship service composed of anthems, solos, and organ music.

This is a college town church and has many cultural advantages. There are excellent programs every week through the winter season.

Seven members were received into membership on January 10th.

THE WEATHER.

(A CORRESPONDENCE.)

Florida Sanitarium, Orlando, Fla.

Mark Twain's well known dictum is wrong: "We talk about the weather and do less about it than anything I know." Well, that may do for wit, but not for wisdom. Fact is there are few subjects that we do quite as much about as we do the weather. Florida has learned, and learned well that bit of wisdom. It means millions of dollars to Florida every year—and an ever increasing number of millions each year. People, well, indisposed and sick come here to escape the weather back home and to enjoy the weather here. No wonder. While it has been raining, or flooding, or sleeting and freezing elsewhere, the days of January, they say, have all been practically perfect for staying out of doors and enjoying the whole some all altogether delightful strength-giving sunshine. Medical science now teaches us that sun rays contain chemical and physical elements and curations not to be found elsewhere. So people come to Florida in flocks and families that they may do something about the weather.

And I might as well write—either about the weather or some other agreeable topic. The physicians in charge here say I have talked, in the past, altogether too much—too long and too loud. And there are hundreds of my acquaintances, and former parishioners, who will heartily agree with him. So these strained and overworked vocal chords must have rest and sunshine. So to the delight of all those about me, but to my humiliation, I am on a "whispering diet"—allowed to talk only in whispers—and not much of that. So, if one must whisper and can't reply to silly or sensible conversation going on about one—well, one just as well be alone—and so go on out and "sit in the sun." And that is exactly what I am doing this moment, and likely to be doing for many moments, hours and days and possibly weeks to come. So I like the weather and am doing something about it. Almost every one else is also doing something about the weather—if not, about the talk. Verily the great humorist was mistaken and we really do more about the weather than we talk about it.

Fact is, we talk too much anyway. So much of our talk is so silly and needless. One may sit in silence near a group of three or four persons for half an hour and just listen. By that time one wants to go sit in the sun or hide in a closet or jump into a lake—or find some means of escape. One wonders why instead of indulging in, or listening to so much jibberish and jabbering, we do not listen at nature more and let the trees and the winds and the good earth and the great heavens tell their story some and speak to us their wit and wisdom; whence they come, the source and secret of their creation, course and destiny. They will teach us if we will listen and are willing to be taught. Just beside this cottage door that same bent, gnarled and ungainly plum tree, which for weeks and months of each year endures the ignominy and the deep humiliation of being a poor cripple, born so and bent more through the years. But now: Presto, everybody stops to wonder at it and admire! It is covered now, a display of a thousand snow flakes, sweet blossoms that would put to blush the fairest bride in comparison. So my plum tree says endure, be patient, bend under your burden, fulfill that whereunto you were brought into the world—abide your day, and await your destiny, and your glory will come, your day of beauty, bounties and sweetness shall arrive. And wonders in fact if we poor mortals do not try to talk too much to God—and so give God very little time to talk to God, "Be still, says the Word, and know that I am Jehovah, thy God. So it is good to be silent and obey my good Doctor.

DRY RUN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Dry Run Christian Church met at the home of Mrs. R. J. Burke on Thursday, January 21, 1937. In spite of the inclement weather and bad roads, the meeting was attended by a large gathering. The ladies met in the morning, and at noon there was a dinner, fit for a king, served to all present. The delightful hospitality of the members of the Burke family made it a real meeting.

At three o'clock in the afternoon a meeting was held, led by Mrs. Burke, to remind us all of the obligations we have to missions, to God and the Church. Several interesting readings were given by various members, talk on missions by the pastor, prayers for enlightenment to the meaning of missions, and a collection for missions.

The ladies of this society are very busy with handwork and needlecraft, the donations from the sale of the articles to go to the Mission Board.

The pastor and his wife were present and were encouraged over the enthusiasm shown by the members of the society. May God bless them in their humble efforts.

CALL TO PRAYER.

You are invited and urged to join in a fellowship of prayer on the World's Day of Prayer, February 12, 1937. All missionary societies are asked to observe this day which is observed in more than fifty countries and by nearly all denominations. Every society will do well to plan for this service for it is one of real inspiration and helpfulness. It makes us realize more and more that we are a link in a large and ever increasing chain which extends into every country and around the world. Together let us pray, meditate and worship on this days in the year when those in China, Japan, Africa and all countries are raising their voices and their thoughts to the same God and for the same purpose that we pray.

The call which is an invitation and should be used in preparation for the observance of the day is free.

The program, "Thou Art the Christ," is 2c each children's program; "Come Unto Me, Children of Every Land," is 1c each.

A lovely poster for advertising the meeting is 5c.

All of these supplies may be ordered from the Commission on Missions located No. 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

Don't forget to plan for your 25th Anniversary Service, which should be observed in this month also. Use your originality and plan a nice service or party just as you would any big anniversary. The more we put into this anniversary, the more we will get out of it. We want to feel happy over our accomplishments during the 25 years of service and we want to feel happy over a full and running offering. Then we want to begin to plan right now to send a large delegation to Suffolk, Virginia, for the Union Anniversary Service, May 13th.

Many of us availed ourselves of the opportunity to hear Dr. H. Shelton Smith in his review of the American Negro at Elon College, North Carolina, and at Suffolk, Virginia. All report a worth while day and one which made an indelible impression upon us. All these meetings are very helpful and mean much to the individuals, the society and the Church.

TITHING BULLETINS OFFERED AT A SAVING.

Several dollars a week can be saved by any church that customarily uses a four page bulletin each week. The Layman Company, 730 Rush Street, Chicago, offers this saving when using their four page bulletin. Two pages are printed with a Stewardship message, and two pages are left blank for local announcements. The company suggests that churches conduct a five weeks' or ten weeks' course of tithe education by using its bulletins, which are offered at a nominal sum. It offers a sample set containing 32 different tithing tracts at 20 cents.

CARNATIONS OUT-OF-DOORS.

From DOROTHY P. CUSHING, News Editor, American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

"I have carnations out of doors all the year round!"

So writes an American woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Williams Curtis of Arkansas and Washington, from her African home in Mt. Silinda, Southern Rhodesia. This daughter of the Bear State thinks many folks have a wrong idea of Africa. She works with her husband, Samuel J. Curtis, who is principal of a school, under the American Board of Foreign Mission, where eager young Vandaus find a new world opening up before them.

Perhaps the hardest thing a missionary confronts is the isolation from family and friends in the homeland. At Mt. Silinda there are seldom more than 13 Americans usually two or three are taking turns at furlough. Vandau neighbors are very close and life-long friendships are built up with them, but nothing quite takes the place of one's "kin folks."

The Christian missionary, however, is by nature an optimistic and adaptable person—so Mrs. Curtis writes, "I have carnations out-of-doors all the year round"—and forgets the rest.

"The Vandau people among whom we work are most peaceful and lovable folks," declares Mrs. Curtis, whose back door opens into the jungle where elephants, zebras, lions, e-lands and other wild things live. To the wild game hunter, it is a veritable paradise.

But this proximity to wild life has its disadvantages, as, for example, when lions or leopards wander into the mission station for unwelcome visits to cattle fold or chicken coop. Public Enemy No. 1, the snake, also drops in for a call, and one day Mr. Curtis killed with his .22 rifle a python in Mrs. Curtis' flower garden. The snake was coiled around 30 eggs and measured ten feet.

The tropical sun is trying but helmets protect the head, and when the heavy rains come, sometimes with a fall of 60 inches, shoes, leather goods, books and clothes are all covered with green mold. But the thermometer seldom reached 90 degrees.

Mt. Silinda forest, which surrounds the Curtis home on three sides, is beautiful, the kind of a place you read about in books. There are giant trees, ferns, glowing flowers, brilliantly plumed exotic birds and chattering mischievous monkeys. From the point of view of health, it is fortunate in its location, 3800 feet above sea level.

The jobs the Curtises are doing, more than repays them for any minor discomforts, for out of their school go Vandau boys and girls trained to be teachers, carpenters, farmers, nurses, shoemakers and Christian workers. Each year some 25 of them leave the school and go into different parts of Africa to set up new standards of living—economic, social and spiritual—the builders of a new Africa.

Strange scenes—strange for folks in the United States of America—are enacted in the Mt. Silinda hospital where one American doctor and two white nurses are kept busy from day-break until nightfall, for a nurse may spend hours each day dressing the wounds of a child badly bitten by a crocodile! Leprosy, malaria, hookworm and a dozen other tropical diseases are added to the ordinary ills to which humanity seems heir.

The worse thing you can do in Africa is to born a twin! For if you are boy twins the African believes the father will die and if twin girls, the mother. Since there is now a law against killing twins, many are brought right after birth to the mission. Christian Vandaus, of course, shake off this superstition but it takes courage of a rare sort to do it when you are surrounded by pagan relatives watching every minute for the worst to happen.

The orphanage had only packing boxes for beds until Miss Edith J. Fuller, R. N., of Kansas City, Missouri, brought back with her from furlough eight little white cribs given with blankets and nighties by American Christians. Now these tiny waifs, hostages to a most unkind fortune, are tucked snugly in at night. One of them, the nurses believe, may very well be a future African Booker T. Washington.

Mrs. Curtis is the daughter of Mrs. Annie F. Williams of College Station, Pullman, Washington, and the sister of Urban Williams, 610 Central Bank Building Boulevard, Dallas, Texas, and Mrs. Henry DeYoung, Enumclaw, Washington. She was born in Franklin, Arkansas, but when she was quite young her parents moved to Washington. She is a graduate of Washington State College and taught high school before her marriage and subsequent departure for Africa. She has three children, Elton Samuel, 9; Jeanne Elizabeth, 6; and Geraldine Louise, 1. Her husband's parents, Mrs. and Mrs. A. M. Curtis, live in Winlock, Washington.

The Curtises are the special representatives in Africa of the Second Congregational Church of New London, Connecticut.

MUD-HOLES AND MOUNTAIN-TOPS.

"Say, I thought we never were going to make it. Mud, boy, oh boy! You could hardly tell which was car and which was mud. But when we got through the mudholes, and to the top of the mountain, what a view! It seemed as if we could see half around the world. Of course we could not, but it certainly was a grand sight and made us forget the mud we had come through to get there."

Mud! and Mountaintops! Too bad one must so many times wade through the mud to reach the mountain top, but the beautiful thing about the young adventures whose words are repeated above, is that they did not allow the mud to turn them back. They pressed on, and the view from the mountain more than repaid them for the struggle to reach it.

Mud—that is all around us. Every rain brings us mud. Some of us never get away from it in our thinking. It is either the mud we have had, the mud we now have, or the mud we will have, engrosses all our minds.

There is a challenge and a thrill in the mountain top which is worth more than all the mud in the world. To be sure you may never stand on a mountain but once. But you will never forget that once; it will color all of your thinking for the rest of your lives. Jesus and His disciples never stood upon the Mount of Transfiguration but once. Yet, long years afterwards, John remembered when "We beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the father, full of grace and truth," and Peter remembered, "This voice which came from heaven we heard when we were with him in the holy mount." Did they sit and sigh for another mountain top experience? No doubt they desired it, but there was too much to be done for any sitting and sighing. No, they knew that, as someone has said, "Mountain tops are for vision, but the corn is grown in the valleys." Yes, mud grows crops, and men work in mud that they may have time and opportunity for mountain top experience, and also because they have had the mountain top experience, and through it are called to service.

There is another type of mud, however, which must be left behind ere the mountain top is ours. Bunyan told of it in his "Pilgrim's Progress." Christian, you will remember, on his way to the small wicket gate with the pack on his back, fell into the Slough of Despond because he had wandered from the path. Mud, and slime, filth and dirt were his. He could scarce, he tells us, ever have dragged himself from that viscous mud had not Evangelist come to his aid. This mud, the Slough of Despond, the filth of the world, flows ever so near to every one's path of life. So easy to take a step aside, so easy to fall in, and even if one crawls out, how the filth sticks; the odor remains, the weight of the remains clinging to our garments galls.

Then comes the Little Wicket Gate, and the cleansing bath; then comes the cross where the burden falls off. And then comes the House Beautiful at the top of the Hill of Difficulty, and the vision of the Delectable Mountains.

Who that has caught this vision would ever again fall into the Slough of Despond! Who that has heard the Voice from the holy Mount would ever lose its ringing echo. Mud? No! The Delectable Mountains are before us; in the hills is our strength, the everlasting hills of God, our place of vision, the hill country of the soul.

A Tribute to the Bible—

"This Book contains the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, the doom of sinners and the happiness of believers. Its doctrines are holy, its precepts are binding, its histories are true, and its decisions are immutable. It contains light to direct you, food to support you, and joy to comfort you. Read it to be wise, believe it to be safe, and practice it to be holy. It is the traveler's map, the pilgrim's staff, the pilot's compass, the soldier's sword, and the Christian's charter. Christ is its theme, our good its aim, and the glory of God its end. Read it slowly, frequently, and prayerfully. It should fill the memory, rule the heart, and direct the steps. It is a mine of wealth, a paradise of glory, and a river of pleasure. It is given to us in life, will be opened at the judgment, and remembered forever. It involves the highest responsibility, rewards the greatest labor, and condemns all who trifle with its contents."

"Christian Youth Rebuilding the World" is the banner of today. The Bible is the chest where the tools are kept for this great task. We cannot change the world unless we read our Bible. Each day thousands of young people observe the Quiet Hour. Some period of each day is set apart for private devotions. At which time the individual reads the Bible, has quiet meditation, and through prayer has direct communion with God.

For Discussion—

1. What are some of the benefits to be derived from daily Bible-study?
2. Is it important that we read the Bible daily if we wish to become better acquainted with Him who is our Lord and Savior?
3. Can the personal and social problems of our day be solved without a constant study of the life of Jesus?

4. Each person present should tell:

- (1) Whether or not Bible study has ever helped him solve a problem in his daily life?

- (2) What passages in the Bible have helped most?

5. How may your society establish a Quiet Hour Bible-Study Group?

Suggested Hymns—

"Break Thou the Bread of Life,"
"Wonderful Words of Life," "Tell Me the Old, Old Story."

JESUS, THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD.

LESSON VI—FEBRUARY 7, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.—John 8:12.

LESSON: John 7:1-9:41.

Today's lesson covers a great deal of material—Jesus' visit to Jerusalem for the Feast of the Tabernacles, His temple addresses, His discussion with His critics, His experience with the Pharisees and the woman taken in adultery, and the miracle of healing on the man born blind. Manifestly all of these incidents cannot be covered in the brief compass of these notes, which will consider only Christ's reference to himself as the Light of the World, and the incident of the healing of the man born blind.

Christ, the Light of the World.

"I am the light of the world"—there is perhaps no other instance in which Jesus includes in a few words such a comprehensive summary of His mission in the world. Consider these words:

Light Cheers. Sunshine after a spell of rainy or cloudy weather brightens up everything and everybody. There is something cheery about an openfire place with a fire burning cheerily upon it. Thus would Jesus call attention to the fact that he is the joy of the loving hearts, a cheering, encouraging influence in life.

Light warms. The sun's rays bring warmth. The glow of the fire gives warmth. Jesus warms the human heart, His spirit kindles a fire within, and stimulates the spirit of friendship which warms the lives of others.

Light guides. Light-houses are essential to safe navigation. Lights on motor cars are indispensable. In a hundred ways we use light for finding our way around and for guiding our feet in the paths of night. Jesus is the Unfailing Guide. He that follows Jesus shall not walk in darkness but shall have the light of life.

Light heals. We are just beginning to understand the curative properties of light, of sunlight itself and of artificial light as well. Light is a great healer. Just so Jesus is the Great Physician, the One Who can heal not only body, but mind and heart.

Light cleanses. It is antiseptic and cleansing. Expose things to the sunlight and purify them. Turn on the light and expose the works of darkness and thus clean up things. Jesus cleanses the inner life, He purifies everything that is subjected to the influence of His spirit.

Light vitalizes. Or to put it another way, light gives life. Ultimately there can be no life without light. John expressed in simple language an eternal truth when he said, "In him was life and the life was the light of men," and it would have been just as true, if he had turned it around. Jesus is the Life. Jesus gives life. He himself said, "He that hath the Son hath life." Apart from Him who is the light of the world there is no true life.

The Man Born Blind.

"Master who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?" The disciples, like many people today, thought that all suffering was caused by sin, the sin of the person who suffered. Of course all sin causes suffering, but not all suffering is caused by sin, except of course, in the sense that all suffering results from the fallen conditions of the human race. Suffering is an integral part of life. Jesus himself was made perfect through suffering.

"That the works of God should be made manifest in him"—not a general rule, but very often true. Every form of suffering, every handicap, every temptation offers an opportunity to work the works of God, to glorify Him. And every sufferer presents a challenge to others to minister as far as possible to his needs.

"He made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay." Saliva was supposed to have a medicinal value especially for all disorders of the eye. Furthermore there is value in visible aids to faith, or material symbols of spiritual processes and truths. It was an aid to faith, it used such faith as the man had as a means of increasing his faith. Modern physicians and psychiatrists know the value of the power of suggestion, of imagination, and of external and visible aids to faith as a means of healing.

"Go wash in the pool of Siloam." There was something for the man to do, something in his power to do. It is always thus. God will not do for us what we can do for ourselves. Obedience is the organ of spiritual insight. Obedience is the key to the blessing.

"He went his way, therefore, and washed, and came seeing." It must have seemed like such a simple thing to do—to wash; he had washed his eyes hundreds of times before this.

But he obeyed, he did the best he knew, he followed the light he had. And he received his sight. Faith may be crude and incomplete, but if it is coupled with a willingness to obey, it gets the blessing.

"I am he." The blind man's neighbors could not believe that it was he. The same man, but different. How often people under the touch of Christ have been so completely changed that they hardly seem to be the same person. If any man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creature; old things are passed away, behold, all things are become new.

"I went and washed, and I received my sight." It was simple testimony. But it was eloquent. And it was irrefutable. There was no final argument against the man's testimony. He himself was the stubborn fact which the carping critics could not carp away. It is thus today. There are those who can out-argue us concerning religion. But if we live Christ-like lives, that argument cannot be refuted. "Ye are my witnesses" said Christ. We are to tell in simple, straight-forward language what He has done for us, what He means to us. And more. We are to show by our lives that there is reality behind our profession.

"Whether he be sinner or no, I know not; one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see." We may not be able to explain to others, or even to understand personally all that Christ is. But if we have an experience of him, a first-hand experience these things will take proper place. The trouble with so many people is that they are trying to understand Christ with their heads without letting Him into their hearts. Receive Him first, try to explain Him afterwards.

HE THAT WINNETH SOULS IS WISE.

Lent, and Easter are coming. In one sense, the Lenten and Easter Seasons are the high points of the year, religiously. It is particularly an appropriate time for the evangelistic emphasis and appeal. And the evangelistic harvest. What are you going to do about it personally? There is, undoubtedly, someone whom you can win to Christ and the Church. Why not consecrate yourselves to this high mission during these next few weeks? Why not seek by the help of God to make this a happy Easter season by knowing that you have won a companion, a member of your class, a neighbor, some one, to personal discipleship to Jesus. You can, if you will. He that winneth souls is wise.

FALSE WITNESS.

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor."—Ex. 20:16.

This is the ninth commandment, and how easily it is to be broken! If penalty is certain for bearing false witness, we are apt to tell the truth, but in many different ways in which we think we may escape the penalty, we may be false. In private conversation, in exaggerated representations, or the reverse, by a little ridicule, by underrating, by carrying gossip, by the lift of the eyebrow or the shrug of the shoulders, and frequently, one of the meanest, by a silence that is damning, by self-estimates. One said the other day, "The commonest of false witnesses is with ourselves, when we deem ourselves eminently just and yet lack the spirit of love.

Let us remember that all false witnesses though possibly concealed from both ourselves and from others, are sure to come to the surface somewhere, and to work irreparable injury.

Prayer—Be Thou our witness, O Lord, and bless us with the loving spirit and we shall not err in witnessing. May we be eager to believe men and may it be so that they can believe us. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"LET THE SEED ALONE."

"Doth he that ploweth to sow, plow continually? Doth he continually open and harrow his ground?"—Isa. 28:24. (Read to 29.)

Are we not often too impatient with our religious experiences? Do we not expect to see results of our service too soon? And are we not prone to give up when we do not see results?

It is a foolish gardener who, having sown seed, is constantly digging into the soil to see if the seed have germinated. That he should do so shows his distrust in nature to bring forth.

Frequently it is so in our religious experience and in our service for the Master. We do not trust enough. We are not willing to wait His time. Let the truth take care of itself. Read the Bible and pray over it and then allow it to have its way. Sow the seed of service and then leave it with God. He will bring forth in His time and will give the increase according to His pleasure.

Prayer—Father, our time is Thy time. Thou art the Gardener of our souls. We yield ourselves to Thee this day. O Thou Most High, make us as fruitful as a watered garden. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

"WHITHER SHALL WE GO?"

"Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life."—Jno. 6:68.

Many are the times in life do we experience utter helplessness. And so often it is that in that hour we fail to call upon the source that supplies the need, and so failing, the future becomes uncertain and we become unhappy. It is the repetition of the uselessness of life without Christ.

Peter realized what we so often do not. The most of us like the other apostles who said, "We go a fishing." If we remember that Peter's acknowledgement of Jesus as the only source of contentment and happiness made him satisfied, life will be much sweeter to us.

Prayer—Dear Father, in thee we live and move and have our being. We pray for Thy spirit to strive with us till we shall lean on thee always. Amen.

THURSDAY.

BE RELIABLE.

"When thou vowest a vow, defer not to pay it."—Ecl. 5:4.

"Search thine own heart—what paineth thee

In others, in thyself may be.

All dust is frail, all flesh is weak,
Be thou the true man thou dost seek."—Lowell.

Sir Wilfried Grenfeld said. "Just to realize that there are friends in the world who care is a great help." It was Henry Van Dyke who said that honest toil is a trust, and it is a holy service to be faithful to it. Faithfulness even in the smallest things is praise and prayer.

Prayer—Our Father, forgive us our failure to keep trust, and help us to develop the quality of integrity that we may always be found loyal today and every day in all our relationships. Amen.

FRIDAY.

CHOOSE!

"Choose ye this day whom ye will serve"—Joshua 24:15.

Life is a succession of choices, and the character of life, its successes and failures, depends on these choices. Every choice, however insignificant, is momentous.

One of the chief functions of Christianity is to give man discriminating power in spiritual values, that he may make choices that will lead him out right. Jesus taught this very emphatically in the parable of the merchantman who sought goodly pearls, who, when he found a pearl of great price, sold all that he had and bought the best.

The greatest choice of life is allegiance to God. Shall we live for this world, or the next? Shall we live for good or evil? Shall we live for God or His Adversary? Blunt as it may seem, this is the real issue of life.

Prayer—O God, today, if we hear Thy voice, forbid that we shall harden our hearts. Enable us to go forward into the duties of today gladly and wholeheartedly accepting Thy call. Amen.

SATURDAY.

"WHAT IS HEAVEN?"

"And there shall be no curse any more."—Rev. 22:3.

This text is one of the answers to the question, "What is heaven?" Can we imagine a world with all the curse taken out of it? If so, we can see that our happiest dream of heaven will be fulfilled.

Amos R. Wells said before he died that the chief curse of the world is sin, and that the promise that there shall be no curse any more is the promise that there shall be no sin any more.

Heaven is also described as being the completion of God's righteousness which is begun here in the heart of man. It is something within that works to the without, that leavens the whole lump. So, a part of heaven is here, and its beginning is just where we begin to remove the accursed things of life and to fill the life with blessed things. We do not have to wait for the next world. Here and now, we take Jesus who is able to do this for us, and we shall know that as certain as there is no curse in His life, neither will there be any in ours.

Prayer—O blessed Redeemer, free us from worldiness, sin and shame. Sincerely we ask it. Amen.

SUNDAY.

AN HONEST SEEKER.

"Do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? For if I yet please men, I should not be the servant of Christ."—Gal. 1:10.

MAKING A PLACE.

By REV. VICTOR B. CHICOINE.

"And the sons of the prophets said to Elisha, Behold now, the place where we dwell with thee is too strait for us, Let us go, we pray thee unto Jordan, and take thence every man a beam, and let us make a place where we may dwell."—II. Kings 6:1-2.

This brief but startling speech by one of the sons of the prophets was not thought out at just that particular moment. It had been in the minds of one or more of the men before this time. They had met in small groups and discussed the question of crowded quarters, and the urgent need of a new and more commodious location. Then one day, with little regard for the past associations of the old place, but with great concern for the future, this text is spoken.

This is always the sort of thinking and speech that goes on before a revolution of any kind breaks out. It was in the thinking of the Pilgrims. They had come to the deep belief that the place where they were dwelling was too strait for them and their children, so they moved to a larger place. John Wesley found the Church of England too strait for him. It had been large enough for his father, but is was not built to match his great passion for the souls of all men everywhere. Then in turn William Booth found the Methodist Church too strait for him, and one day in compassion for the needy sons and daughters of God, he and his wife moved out to new places!

There is need, however, for caution on the part of the sons of the prophets, and for patience from the descendants of Elisha. Young folk often say: "Father, this place where we dwell together is too small for me. I must go elsewhere, and live, and build something commensurate with my ambitions and my genius." They go elsewhere, take beams of a kind, and often blunder very badly. Sometimes the sons of the prophets, deep down, have little to warrant their pushing out and far away from the home-folk!

I know of a home where the mother insisted that her son dwell within her small area of ideas, and who brought pressure to bear upon him to keep him by her side. One day this young man of intelligence and integrity came to me and talked about going to college. As I outlined a course of studies in my own college he paid little attention to me. When I had finished he said: "I have not come here to ask you which college to attend, for my mother has said that she does not want me to attend any college. I have just about enough money of my own to go to college, and I can go in the face of my mother's opposition if I use this money. And now that I have told you all, I want to know if you will tell me to go!" I told him to go to college! He took some beams, I mean great and deep purposes, went out unto his Jordan, and has builded and dwelled in a larger place!

There is the story of Zacchaeus. We can easily imagine, rich man that he was, that as his wealth increased, he had built for himself one house after another, and that finally he had built the grandest dwelling of them all on the choicest location he could find.

Then one day, on a dusty road this little man and Jesus met, and came to grips with each other and with life. Zacchaeus had met the One who was to cause people everywhere, and down through the ages, to move on and on, and to build larger and larger homes!

Jesus entered into this last house that the tax collector had erected on the spacious site that he was sure would satisfy him as long as he lived. We know that Jesus and Zacchaeus together studied over the problem of bringing new ideas into this new dwelling—and that they met many difficulties. Carefully they looked over the exterior of the building—paced off the size of the lot—and talked about still another building that Zacchaeus could build on and another lot over by the Jordan!

And now we know that it came about that the new plans and location as suggested by the Contractor from Nazareth to Zacchaeus, the Publican, appealed to the latter. For the record tells us that at once Zacchaeus began to move toward the Jordan which Jesus pointed out to him!

"And the sons of the prophets said to Elisha, Behold now, the place where we dwell with thee is too strait for us. Let us go we pray thee unto Jordan, and take thence every man a beam, and let us make a place where we may dwell." Somebody in this group of young prophets, some driving, leading spirit, started this restlessness. All of us are able to recall some one of our teachers of a bye gone day, or some book, or poem, that caused us to push out in our thought and say: "This place where I am now dwelling is too strait."

In his day, Jesus was, and still is the Person, the Book, the Poem who maintains the kind of restlessness that never will cease until there is a building over by some Jordan large enough, adequate enough, for all of mankind!

ANOTHER DISEASE.

Sponsoritis—This disease, though not quite so common, can do more to impair the real service of a Christian Endeavor Society than anything else. This term is used to describe the condition found mostly in small churches where graded C. E. is not practical, wherein five or six of the members are older and more familiar with the fundamentals and wider connections of Christian Endeavor than the others. These few then find that the entire activity of the society is left in their hands. This group does ninety per cent or more of the leading. If there is an open discussion these members do all the talking, at a business meeting they make all the suggestions, and at County District, or State affairs, it is this group which represents the society.

To an outside observer, this society is active and wide awake, its meetings are well attended and it always has good representatives at rallies, yet the greatest fundamental purpose of Christian Endeavor is being neglected—that of training for Christian service. The younger people soon develop an inferiority complex or else become indifferent to the planning of the society's activities. The older people perhaps realize the seriousness of the situation, yet are at a loss as to the way to remedy it. They cannot refuse to take part, and many times when they attempt to share the work with others they find them unwilling or unable to accept; if they refuse to suggest outside activities, the work of the society lags and there is no initiative among the younger group to plan for themselves.

The ultimate "cure," of course, is to get the younger members to realize their responsibilities, and to take an active part in the work of the society, yet the accomplishment of this result will require much hard work and even ingenuity by those in charge.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

"Every rose has its thorn." There is some thick shrubbery at my office window. The little birds often come and sit in the shrubbery and chirp. The writer came to the conclusion that if he would feed the birds that it would attract more birds and we began to scatter little crumbs and some crushed grain in the shrubbery. It was interesting to see how they increased in number from day to day.

It was interesting to watch them from the office window as they fed on the little crumbs in such harmony and peace. No jealousy seemed to be in their breasts. They sought the food and ate in peace.

Last Saturday morning, there seemed to be more birds than usual and they seemed to be enjoying their morning meal more than ever; but to spoil our real joy with the little birds, a hawk darted down into the shrubbery and all the little visitors flew for dear life. The birds were the roses, but the hawk was the thorn.

The writer is fond of birds, as well as children. The birds remind him of the children at the Orphanage. The children play together in peace and harmony. They are happy. If the weather is good, they get out on the lawn, if they are not busy, and have a good time jumping rope, skating on the sidewalk and other games.

It really would surprise you to know how little friction there is among our group of children, to be so many together. They learn to give and take, and live with each other in peace and harmony.

(Moffatt version) "Am I now seeking the favor of men, or of God? or am I striving to please men? If I were still pleasing men, I should not be a servant of Christ."

"Woe unto you," said Christ, "when all men speak well of you." There is a way to please men which is unto life. On the other hand, there is a way to please men which is to death and destruction. We read that even Christ did not please Himself. It was the Father He must please. It is the approval of God, and His approval only that is worth while.

Prayer—God grant us to know the value of pleasing God rather than man. Put far from us the desire for popularity. Hold us steadfastly to Thy pleasure in eternal life. Amen.

In Memoriam

DUNLAP.

Miss Elizabeth M. Dunlap, age 87 years, perhaps the oldest member of Timber Ridge Congregational-Christian Church, died at the home of her half-sister, Miss Susan Dunlap, December 22, 1936.

Miss Dunlap spent the larger part of her later life in Washington, D. C., with relatives with whom she made her home. Her body was interred in the City Cemetery, Winchester, Virginia, following burial services conducted by the writer, December 24, 1936.

ROBERT A. WHITTEN,

WELCH.

Mr. Cary Welch, a member of the New Hill Christian Church, departed this life on the 9th of January, 1937, at the age of 67 years. He had been a member of the church some sixteen years and loved it, to which he gave freely. He had been a merchant for several years.

He leaves a wife and one brother and several nephews and neices to mourn his going. He had a host of friends.

He was buried January the eleventh, in the church yard. The Lord's will be done. Funeral by the writer, assisted by Rev. Seymour.

J. S. CARDEN.

PARKS.

John W. Parks, aged 59, member of Mount Olivet Christian Church, Timber Mountain, and a faithful Christian, died at his home on January 18th, 1937. Interment was in the Lovett Cemetery, Parks Valley.

Brother Parks is survived by two brothers and two sisters. One brother lives at Broadway, Virginia. The other brother and sister live at the home place in Park's Valley.

ROBERT A. WHITTEN.

WILSON.

Lois Wilson, daughter of Brother and Sister Asa Wilson of Christie, Va., died on January 14, 1937, at the age of nine and one half years. Lois had a bright mind, but was frail in body. She never was able to walk. Her devoted parents did all possible for her, making great sacrifices, that she might have done for her all possible to enable her to walk. She was greatly loved both in the home and by other relatives and by the people of the community. The funeral and burial were at the Virgilina Cemetery on the afternoon of January 15th.

The parents, sisters, and brother are deeply grieved that Lois has left them and she is greatly missed; yet they are comforted by the assurance that daughter and sister is where there can be no more suffering in the body, but only joy supreme.

PASCHAL.

On November 17, 1936, God saw fit to call from our midst, one of our beloved members, Mr. W. A. Paschal. He was a member of Bethlehem Christian Church and Ladies' Aid Society.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society tender the following resolutions:

1. That in the death of Mr. Paschal, we have lost a faithful member.
2. That we extend to the family, our sincere sympathy and pray that God will bless and comfort them.
3. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the records of our Society, a copy sent the "The Christian Sun" for publication, and to the family of the deceased.

HINSHAW.

The city of Greensboro, North Carolina, received a terrible shock on Saturday morning, November 28, 1936, when it was announced that Jacob Trustan Hinshaw had died suddenly while at his work.

Brother Hinshaw was born July 25, 1868, and was 68 years old. On August 25, 1892, he was happily united in marriage to Miss Martha L. Millikan and to this union were born seven children—three girls and four boys.

He is survived by his widow, four sons, two daughters, twelve grandchildren, and two brothers.

Twenty years ago he united with Palm Street Christian Church and remained a member until the end and to its principles he was ever true, and to its every need he has been loyal.

The funeral services were conducted from his church, November 29th, by the writer, assisted by Revs. M. T. Sorrell and J. L. Neese, in the presence of a great host of his friends, and interment made in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

For twenty-nine years, he had lived in this community and was loved greatly by the people of his city. To know him was a rare privilege, to be his pastor, an honor, and to lose him, a great loss.

God bless those who mourn.

RICH.

A beautiful life was taken from us on Sunday morning, December 6, 1936, when God saw fit to remove from our midst, Mrs. Naoma Carden Rich, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Carden of Durham, North Carolina. She was 26 years of age. When a little girl she became a member of the Congregational-Christian Church of Durham, and was active in the church work, especially in the choir until her health gave way.

On December 25, 1928, she was married to Curtis A. Rich of Durham. Fourteen months later he departed this life. She contracted tuberculosis and was confined to her bed four and one half years. Even though she was bedfast, she brought sunshine into the home, and those who visited her were made stronger by doing so, as she bore her sickness and suffering so patiently. She was the baby and known by her family as "Tootsie."

Funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 at the Congregational-Christian Church, and she was laid to rest in Maplewood Cemetery by the side of her husband.

The many people who attended her funeral and the beautiful floral offerings attested the love and respect held for her. And though she is sadly missed

We know that she has gone
To the beautiful isle of somewhere
Where sorrow and cares are unknown;
To the land of sunshine and flowers
The spirit of our loved one has flown.
She was ready when the Master called,
And peacefully set her sail
To the beautiful isle of somewhere
Beyond life's stormy gale.

God has given us tongues that we may say something pleasant to fellow-men.—Heinrick Heine.

Nature's Tragedies and Religion.

Recent floods and storms in America and Europe raise questions in the field of religion. The sad facts concerning death and destruction wrought by nature are made known by the daily papers and the radio, and need not be related here. When nature drives people from their homes or drowns them in a sea of turbulent waters, questions arise in the minds of the thoughtful, and the heart hungers for a fuller knowledge of God and His world. Certain things we may surely believe, regardless of nature's tragedies, and among them are these.

I.—Storms are Caused by Natural Laws.

A Christian need not quarrel with the scientist about the cause of rain or drought. Nature works according to well-established laws. This is fine, for then man can understand something of what happens and can prepare to overcome difficulties. If there were no natural laws, one could not depend upon day and night, rain or sunshine. He could not build houses in which to live, or dykes to carry the currents of streams. God's laws can be discovered by man to the great advantage of the human race.

II.—God Is Master of All Things.

We worship a living God. He has made His world, but He has not deserted it. His laws work unrelentingly, but His breath can turn the currents of the wind. Water runs down hill always, but the sun takes it back up again. Behind the rushing waters may still be heard "the still small voice" stretched out to rescue drowning man, but that hand looks much like the hand stretched out to rescue downing man, but that hand looks much like the hand of a man now, as it did when Simon Peter said, "Help, Lord, or I perish." God could save all men from nature's tragedies, but His wisdom leads in another way. Who knows but what His heart hurts as much as ours because of these tragedies?

III.—Hardships Develop Strength.

Without struggle, there is no progress. Difficulties do not deaden, but make alive. Hardships develop strength when used in the right way. Babies become men because they fight against weakness. Men become righteous by overcoming sin. Nature's tragedies test the quality of soul. Courage that dares to keep on in the midst of danger, faith that believes when the way is dark, self-control that lasts when friends are gone, these are God's rich gifts which come to man through enduring hardships as a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

IV.—Trust in God Triumphs Over Tragedies.

When cattle and property go swirling down with the turbulent waters, the souls of men rise high to God. When troubles overwhelm us, then can we trust in God and be at peace. Only in Him can we find peace. Only through Him can one triumph. Think of Daniel in the lion's den, of the Hebrew children in a fiery furnace, of the disciples on the Sea of Galilee, of Paul on the Mediterranean, and of the thousands of Christian martyrs who witness to the Divine Presence in the midst of storms. God was no closer to them than He is to us who trust Him today.

Nature's tragedies are far less than those of men who fail in the inner chambers of the soul. When the tides are down and the rainbow is in the sky again, will there be any triumph? Will men look up and smile into the face of the Father? If so, the tragedies of nature will have become the triumphs of man.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1937.

NUMBER 6.

Henry W. Grady's Denunciation of Whiskey.

Tonight it enters an humble home to strike the roses from a woman's cheek and tomorrow it challenges this republic in the halls of congress.

Today it strikes a crust from the lips of a starving child and tomorrow levies tribute from the government itself.

There is no cottage humble enough to escape it, no palace strong enough to shut it out.

It defies the law when it cannot coerce suffrage.

It is flexible to cajole, but merciless in victory.

It is the mortal enemy of peace and order, the despoiler of men and terror of women, the cloud that shadows the face of children, the demon that has dug more graves and sent more souls unshrived to judgment than all pestilences that have wasted life since God sent the plagues to Egypt and all the wars since Joshua stood beyond Jericho.

It comes to ruin, and it shall profit mainly by the ruin of your sons and mine.

It comes to mislead human souls and to crush human hearts under the rumbling wheels.

It comes to bring gray-haired mothers down in shame and sorrow to their graves.

It comes to change the wife's love into despair and her pride into shame.

It comes to still the laughter on the lips of little children.

It comes to stifle all the music of the home and still it with silence and desolation.

It comes to ruin your body and mind, to wreck your home, and it knows it must measure its prosperity by the swiftness and certainty with which it wrecks this world.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Our Richmond, Virginia, Church is joining with the Disciples of Christ in a Leadership Training School to be held February 21-26th. Rev. F. C. Lester is to be one of the five teachers.

The Henderson, N. C. Church Bulletin for January 24th, last, says that "Twenty-three people gave $24.10 through the envelopes last Sunday." Not a bad record. It is the regular giver that keeps the church going.

The date suggested for the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training is June 21-27, 1937. If this is not a suitable date, please write the Board of Christian Education, 505 S. Main Street, Norfolk, Va., at once.

Thanks to the Woman's Missionary Society of Roanoke, Alabama, for sending in a list of subscribers equal to 10 per cent of their membership. THE SUN is glad for the society to receive the 25 per cent commission. This is mutual help. Thanks.

Rev. P. H. Brown of Chicago was a welcomed speaker in the First Christian Churches of Portsmouth and Norfolk, Virginia, last Sunday. He was once assistant to Rev. H. C. Caviness in Portsmouth and was pastor for two years in Norfolk. His many friends were glad to see him, and wish him a very pleasant trip to Florida.

Miss Alice True of No. 23 Mafston Avenue, Portsmouth, New Hampshire, is eager to secure "I Will Repay," a story by Eldridge, son of a Christian minister, "One Christmas," by Miss Mary Hitchcock and "A History of the Christian Church," by Dr. Morrill. Anyone having copies of these that they are willing to sell will do Miss True a favor by writing her.

Miss Grace Hitchcock died suddenly during the Christmas season at Binghamton, New York, as she was preparing to return with her sister, Miss Mary Hitchcock to Durban, Africa. She had worked with the Zulus, East Indians, Eurasians and Europeans of South Africa at times in co-operation with the South Africa General Mission. The Christian Church of Binghamton has largely supported her. Miss Mary Hitchcock, author of "Our Christmas," "The Holy Spirit," etc., plans to return to Africa in February.

Rev. A. R. Flowers, who is well known in sections of this and many other states for the excellent work that he has been doing among the girls and boys of limited means in helping them find their way into institutions of learning and into positions for developing themselves into useful men and women for service in the world, closed another six weeks service in and around Rocky Mount, North Carolina, January 30th.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

"Please be sure to get THIS in this week's issue," is the notation frequently found at the head of articles sent to the office of publication. Quite often the article arrives after the type for the issue is set and something else has to be left out to make room. Sometimes an article arrives AFTER the paper has been printed, and in all probability it should have gone in the current issue.

It is to the advantage of the writer, as well as the printer, if the article reaches Richmond not later than the Friday before publication. If it is later than Monday, it just has to take its chances of going in. Will you not cooperate?

A LETTER TO PRESIDENTS.

February 6, 1937.

To the Presidents of Women's Missionary Societies of The Southern Convention.

Dear Presidents:

I want to inform you of actions taken at our recent Convention Woman's Board meeting relative to our Silver Anniversary celebration:

Place: Suffolk Christian Church, Suffolk, Virginia.

Time: Thursday, May 13, 1937:

2:30 P. M., Special features.

6:30, Silver Anniversary Dinner, 50 cents.

8:00, Concluding Service, in auditorium.

The Silver Anniversary Offering: "All moneys raised in connection with the Silver Anniversary shall be raised for Missions, as a Missionary Memorial to the late Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., details of the Missionary Memorial to be decided when a larger consensus of opinion can be ascertained, and when the amount of the money is known."

It was decided that gifts to the Silver Anniversary Offering should be: (1) Special gifts in any amounts from $1.00 up, and from anybody desiring to have a part in this special celebration of the Twenty-Five years of work which our women have done; (2) A gift of $1 from every member of the Woman's Missionary Societies; (3) A gift of 50c from each member of the Young People's Societies; (4) A gift of Twenty-Five cents from each member of the Junior Societies; and (5) A gift of Ten Cents from each member of the Cradle Rolls.

Goal: To have a representative from every Woman's Missionary Society in the Southern Convention present to present at the Silver Anniversary Service the money from the Societies of her Church. This is very important because the name of every Church in the Convention having a Missionary Society will be called, and a representative should be present to present their money, and to witness the lighting of the candle which represents her Church. This service will be at 8:00 o'clock.

The Autograph Book: Every Local Society will receive pages from a large loose-leaf book from your Conference President. On the pages sent you have every member of the Woman's Society who contributes $1.00 autograph the page; every member of the Young People contributing 50 cents autograph the page (each group using consecutive sections of the page or pages); and Juniors, and Cradle Roll members having names entered when specified amounts are contributed.

A Suggestion: In some Societies there will be a few members who will not feel able to contribute the specified amount, will not the presidents of all such Societies raise in some way they may think wise enough to help any such member with the needed amount.

We are all hoping and praying that this will be the most largely attended, and the most enthusiastic and inspiring meeting the Woman's Convention has had in its twenty-five years of history. We desire delegations from every Church, and pastors and friends of every congregation to be present.

Most sincerely yours,

MRS. JOHN G. TRUITT,
President.

OUR NAVY CHAPLAIN.

The report of our Navy chaplain, Lieutenant Commander H. E. Rountree, to the Secretary of the Navy, of work which he did last year is quite interesting to those who are ministers and those who are interested in naval activities. Chaplain Rountree is a member of the Eastern Virginia Conference. From his report I glean the following facts:

On April 20, 1936, he left the U. S. S. Whitney, and on the 30th of May reported to the U. S. S. Rigel for duty. On October 19th, he was given additional duties at the U. S. Naval Hospital in San Diego, California, and reported for duty the same date.

Tabulated figures for the year are as follows: Divine services held, 91; attendance, 5,714; Holy Communion services, 2, with 52 communicants; Military services other than own ship or station, 9, with an attendance of 1,352; Civilian services and addresses, 3, with an attendance of 805; received into the church, 22; baptisms, 5; marriages, 8; funerals, 2; song fests and choir rehearsals, 17, with an attendance of 4,825; addresses to civilian groups, 6, with an attendance of 725; entertainments other than movies, 20, attendance, 4,025; sightseeing parties conducted (picnics, 2; attendance, 620; men visited in hospital, sick bay, and prison or brig, 406; letters written for men, 111; navy relief cases, 65; interviews, religious and social service, 357; visits to homes, 33.

Special services were held at New Year's Palm Sunday, Easter, Mother's Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas. The Christmas program included devotions, the baptism of an infant, an original Christmas play rendered by the children, and the distribution of gifts to the children.

Chaplain Rountree comments that "The year's work has been fairly satisfactory. It is gratifying that occasionally a young man dedicated his life to God. A very large per cent of the personnel is Christian and are members of churches both non-resident and locally."

The good wishes of his many friends will go to Chaplain Rountree as he tries to bring the Christian message into the every day experience of the men in the navy.

THE EDITOR ABSENT.

That Is An Event.

[Note: This is an editorial in the "Alamance Gleaner," Graham, N. C., for February 4, 1937. Mr. J. D. Kernodle is the uncle of Mr. John T. Kernodle, printer of "The Christian Sun."—Ed.]

These columns of the Gleaner have been nobly filled, without a break, for the past fifty-six years by the editor, J. D. Kernodle.

He has in the past covered a wide and varied field, at home and abroad. Memorable events, now history, of Kings and Queens, wars and peace, panic and prosperity, the election of numerous presidents, assassinations, floods, droughts, fires, tornadoes, torrid and frigid weather and the events of the day from here, there and everywhere, all have been related in his own individual style.

Throughout these many years, the Editor has been very fair in expressing his views. He has not added thorns where roses should be, nor has the toe of the shoe been used instead of a helping hand.

ELON CLUB ORGANIZED.

The Elon College Club of the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, was organized on January 16th, at the home of Mr. C. W. Parker. The following officers were elected: Miss Dorothy Edwards, President; Miss Doris Newbold, Vice-President; Chas. Parker, Secretary; Mrs. R. L. House, Treasurer. Thirteen members were enrolled. One other meeting has been held to complete the organization. At this time a constitution and by-laws were drawn up and adopted. Plans were made for very definite work in the interest of the College.

This enthusiastic group constitutes a vital unit in our church. We would like very much to see an Elon College Club in every church and are eager to be of any possible service in their organization.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

SHOP TALK.

This item is intended for those who are especially interested in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Others will find it more interesting to pass on to the next article without reading this. But those who are really interested in the continuation of THE CHRISTIAN SUN are invited not only to read the article but to give serious thought to the problems raised and to express their opinion, with suggestions as to how to meet the situation.

The Southern Convention elected the present editor to begin work July 1, 1936, and he agreed to accept the responsibility up to March 1, 1937. Mr. John T. Kernodle promised to print and mail papers for that length of time. The Convention agreed to pay a specified sum, both to the editor and to the printer, for their expenses. It appears that the Convention has not been able to make good on its obligation, and there is a very serious question as to how long the editor and printer can continue to do their work without payment of the specified sums. There may be others who are able and willing to render this service to the Church without payment, but those now at work at the task are doubtful that they can continue long.

There are at present about 1,200 paid subscribers. Some of them are far behind, while others are paid in advance. The past six months have shown a notable increase in paid up subscriptions, but it is far from sufficient to meet the expense of publication. To supplement this, the Southern Convention asks a payment of $500.00 annually from Elon College, the Christian Orphanage, and the Board of Missions, and a payment of $250.00 annually from the Board of Christian Education. Apparently, this will still lack some $2,000.00 or $2,500.00 of being sufficient to publish THE CHRISTIAN SUN in its present form. The Southern Convention funds are not sufficient to meet this deficit. From whence can the money come.

Another question that must be seriously considered is why do we have so few subscribers? Is it because we do not publish the right type of paper? Are our people not able to subscribe? Are we not interested in church publications? What is the difficulty? At one time it took 3,100 copies of the paper to supply the demands? We boast more members now than we did then. What is the cause for the change? Answers to these questions will be appreciated by the editor and the Board of Publications over which Dr. N. G. Newman of Holland, Virginia, presides. Suggestions concerning methods of procedure will be seriously considered when the Board meets at Elon College on Tuesday, February 16th. We seek for guidance. We want to know the way to serve.

Has the time come when the last of our weekly church papers must be discontinued? Is there a need in our church homes for THE CHRISTIAN SUN? Are there methods by which sufficient funds can be secured to assure the future of the paper? By what process can we induce members of the Church to subscribe for and to read THE CHRISTIAN SUN? These are urgent questions that need solution in the immediate future.

If you are seriously interested in the progress of your Church, please do not leave this important matter to a committee of five who receive no salary for their services, but offer to them your wisdom and your help. Immediate action is imperative!

OBSERVING LENT.

The observance of Lent has been left largely to the liturgical churches, while most of Protestantism has thought but little about it until recent years. Now many churches are considering these forty days before Easter as the proper time for emphasis not only on devotional life but on Christian activity, especially evangelism. As the Methodist Protestant-Recorder well says, "Our sign of the beginning of Lent is not ashes on the forehead but an acceleration in service."

Lent begins this year on Wednesday, February 17th. During the forty days from then until Easter, is an excellent time for our churches to emphasize stewardship in the sense of giving both money and talent to Christian service. During the last forty days of Jesus' earthly life He was busy. The magnetism of His Spirit, the urgency of His business, the devotion of life which He manifested and the sacrificial forgetfulness with which he worked, drew men to Him whether He was in the temple, on the mountain side, or on the Cross. We can do no better than to draw near to the Master and seek in our humble way to bring others into His fellowship.

Some of our Youth Fellowships have set as a goal: "Every young person winning another young person." Why shouldn't every Christian have the same goal? What better gift could one bring to the Easter service than a new life consecrated to the Master who shed His blood for the remission of sin and rose from the dead to reveal the beauty of life eternal? Surely if any church organization could stand at the altar at Easter time with an equal number of new recruits, the Easter hallelujah chorus would have a new meaning, and the joy of human hearts would resound in the heart of the Master in whose honor Christians throughout the world observe Lent.

To some of us, it seems a bit silly to rush through dances, parties, etc., in preparation for Lent and then break out with them immediately after Easter as if that were a thing particularly pleasing to the Saviour of mankind. But surely self denial, larger giving, more Christian activity and the definite endeavor to win lost people to a saving Christ will bring happiness to the heart of the Master Himself. With the reading of the Scriptures, a search for right living, and an honest effort to win converts, let us this year in our churches observe Lent.

THE GREATEST NEED OF THE CHURCH TODAY.

By CHARLES S. BATES.

[Editor's Note: The author of this article is a layman and manufacturer of Exeter, N. H., who has backed up his belief in personal evangelism by devoting much of his resources to the support of native pastors and evangelists in various lands. In the hope that its earnest plea may lose nothing in individuality, we have retained the author's emphasis in capitalization and italics. It is a direct, uncensored and unedited challenge from a layman of liberal spirit who is deeply aroused about the chief business of the church.]

The greatest need of every church today, I believe, is an organized group of members who will actively serve as Personal Witnesses for Christ, by word, to Individuals. The Pastor should be the leader, and the group made up of consecrated, spiritually-minded, devout Christians who believe this personal witnessing and personal way of making Christ known to individuals is vital and God's plan for the spreading of His gospel to those whom Jesus came to seek and to save.

It is an intimate, personal service, and the group should be organized and all the services rendered in a quiet, unostentatious manner, with no outside talk or advertising.

God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish. God's Son, a gift to those who believe in Him to save them from perishing. Jesus said He came to seek and to save the lost. Who are these lost and perishing but those who do not believe in the Son which God gave because of His great infinite love for them. "If the Gospel (good news) is hid, it is hid to them who are lost," in whom the god of this world (the devil) has blinded the minds of them who believe not.

"The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to them that believe." Where are these people who are lost? Are they in the mission fields of the world? Yes, for the whole world is a mission field. But they are not only among the heathen across the seas, but are right here among us walking our streets, sharing all the benefits of a Christian civilization. They are our relatives, neighbors, friends, acquaintances; and these are the people to whom these personal witnessing groups in the Churches should witness for Christ, should tell them what Christ has done, is doing and all that He means to them.

And isn't this our duty as well as privilege when we understand that as disciples of our risen Lord, we come under His command and promise made just before His ascension to the disciples on that occasion. "Go and make disciples. Ye are my witnesses. All power is given unto me in Heaven and Earth, and I am with you always." What a glorious command to take our part in making God's love known to the world, to individuals one by one, with the promise of His presence with power, "all power," in our faithful obedience.

Faith and obedience go hand in hand in the fulfilling of God's will for each one who serves.

The main business of the church is to win souls to Jesus Christ. We have the regular organizations and are always working to make them more effective; but when we are faced as we were at the National Council Meeting at Holyoke with the facts that over 40 per cent of our churches had no admissions on confession during the 1934 year, there seems to be not only a need of more efficiency in present organizations, but the vital need of adding to our other groups a group of "Personal Witnesses for Christ by word to Individuals," in loving obedience to our Lord's last command.

This service will reach those who attend no church, or only occasionally, who seldom if ever read the Bible, who take but little interest, if any, in any organization of the church except when marriage and death or sickness unto death touches their lives.

No preaching or teaching can reach them, only personal witnessing by one who cares, who under the guidance and inspiration of the Holy Spirit can carry our heavenly Father's message of love to them. Are we willing to do it? It's delegated to us, our duty and privilege, and unless we do it, it will not be done. "It's not the will of God that any should perish."

The infinite depth and riches of the Glory of God's love is beyond the comprehension of our finite minds. But to us who believe, it is given to know that His love is real, genuine, true, divinely pure and merciful, just and holy as revealed by Him in His Gospel of Redemption centered around His sacrificial gift of His beloved Son, our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ that whosoever believeth in Him shall not perish but have everlasting life.

These facts imply an infinite value of the soul of which the possessors thereof have little or no conception. Jesus gives us some idea of the fabulous value of a soul when He said, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his soul"; and again when He said that "There is joy among the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."

Only Jesus could say these words, for He only knows the value of a living soul and what joy among the angels of God is like.

As disciples of Christ, we are called to witness for Him to unbelievers, to those whose minds are blinded by the temptations of the world, the flesh and the devil so that they have little or no spiritual vision.

If there was ever a situation where "Words fitly spoken are like apples of gold in pictures of silver," we will be in just that situation when, as members of our church's Personal Witnessing Group, we humbly and prayerfully voice our testimony to another person, of all it means to us to have accepted Jesus Christ as our Lord and Saviour, and the Liberty wherewith Christ has made us free from the law of sin and death, the penalty—power and guilt of sin and the comfort and rest of soul and serenity of life which is ours because of our faith and trust in Him.

This Personal Witnessing has been the way of making Christ known from the beginning. It is a practicable, spiritual, resultful service, a God commanded and a God powered way of Christian service. The need for this service is tremendous, vital. The time is ripe. Action, immediate action, is the call of the hour. The organization is easily made, no financing needed. I am fully convinced that every church that organizes this group of active workers will greatly deepen its spiritual life and increase its membership.

I quote from one letter received from the Pastor of a church having this group of Personal Witnesses: "Our personal workers organization has been working some twelve years. There is rarely a Sunday when they have not brought one or more before the session for church membership. The group surely enjoys its work. There are about twenty members. The group is our most valued organization."

Shall we determine, in the words of St. Paul, to press towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus? Can there be a higher calling for us laymen and laywomen and ministers than that of personally witnessing for our Lord and Saviour to those for whom He came to bring life and immortality to light?—From January Advance.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Last Sunday, (January 31st) we attended the First Methodist Church in St. Petersburg, Florida. Rev. John L. Horton is the pastor. The church building is new and the main auditorium has a seating capacity of 2,500. Adequate facilities are provided for a large and efficient Sunday School. Sunday School meets at 9:30 A. M. Morning worship begins at 10:45 A. M. Sunday School closes at 10:30 A. M., and announcement is made that those who wish to attend the service in the main auditorium should not delay. We hurried and found the seats all filled on the first floor. The gallery seats about 1,000 and every available seat was soon filled. The church was taxed to its capacity and many were turned away. People in Florida attend church on Sunday. The rich and the poor were there. Tourists and native residents sat side by side in the Lord's house.

But that is only a part of the story. The papers and church bulletin carried the announcement that Bishop Frank Smith would preach on the topic: "The Warm Heart." It was one of many services promoting the "Bishops' Crusade." Sunday morning at 8:30 a telephone call announced to the pastor: "The Bishop is sick and will not be able to preach for you." The pastor appeared before the congregation with a look of disappointment upon his face. He explained the situation. He is a man apparently in his thirties. He caught the sympathy and goodwill of the congregation. After the great choir sang the anthem: "The Heavens Are Telling (from Creation)" by Hadyn. The pastor asked the congregation to pray for him in their disappointment and in his trying hour. He preached from the text: "He that winneth souls is wise." (Prov. 11:30). It was a great sermon. He poured out his heart to the congregation as one whose soul was deeply stirred by the Spirit of God. He made no attempt to display his scholarship, but his sermon bore evidence of careful preparation. The Gospel of Jesus Christ was the great center of his thought and appeal. This young man, who was a country boy in his youth, made a good impression upon that great congregation.

Now this experience has been carefully studied during the past week. There are several interesting questions suggested. Why do tourists in St. Petersburg attend church, while many people in Virginia use Sunday as a day for touring the State? Why are the churches in St. Petersburg, in some cases, compelled to hold two services in the morning to accommodate the people who wish to attend church, while many of the large churches in Virginia are only half filled at the same hour? There must be some reason for this condition. The ministers should know the answer to these questions. The preaching in Florida is not superior to the preaching in Virginia. Evidently public sentiment is more favorable to church attendance in that state. If St. Petersburg is representative of the whole state, other sections of our country may learn a lesson, in church attendance, by a personal observation.

Sooner or later the people of this country must return to the house of God, if this land is to be saved from decay and spiritual death. Money cannot save any nation. Legislation cannot take the place of education and spiritual worship. Spiritual power must radiate from the pulpit. Prayerful worship must be evident in the attitude of the pew. Preachers must ascend to their places in the pulpit conscious of the presence and inspiration of a divine power. And people must humbly take their places in the pew, hungry for the bread of life. It will be a great day for our churches when they are crowded with anxious people who seek to find God and walk in the way of spiritual fellowship.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF ELON COLLEGE.

The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches in its regular biennial sessions, nominates men and women from the church at large to serve as Trustees of the college. The Trustees in turn elect members from the nominees to fill any vacancy that may have occurred on the Board. The charter of the college requires that members of the Board be members of the Congregational and Christian Churches. This rule has never been violated. There are supposed to be 36 members of the Board. At present there are only 28. We have recently lost seven members of the Board by death, resignation, or failure to attend the meetings of the Board. The Trustees are supposed to be the custodians of the institution; that is, they are to look after the welfare of the college from every conceivable standpoint. The faculty recommends through the president certain policies for the institution. The Board either accepts or rejects such policies. The faculty is elected by the Board. The budget for the college is determined by the Board. The Board elects the President of the institution and its own officials.

Elon College is perhaps the largest and the most inclusive agency of the United Church in the Southeast. Its property values, real and otherwise, including endowment, amount to considerably more than $1,250,000. To be charged with the responsibility of supporting and directing an institution of this type is no small task, particularly when it is constantly faced with serious and intricate problems. Our greatest problem at present is financial. The college has a total debt of approximately $155,000. Its annual budget is $82,000. We are obligated to pay 4 per cent interest on our loan which amounts to $5,760 a year. (A small part of our debt is not interest bearing.) This makes a total of $87,760 to be raised annually. Under the authorization and direction of the Board of Trustees, we are conducting at present, a campaign for $250,000 with which we propose to pay our indebtedness, pay the expenses of the campaign, and supplement our current budget. On this basis, 60 per cent of the money raised will be required to pay the debt and 40 per cent to take care of expenses and supplement the current budget. To date, we have a total of approximately $80,000 subscribed on the campaign. $22,000 has been paid in in cash. We have a long way to go to clear the college of its debts. However, I am convinced that the $250,000 can and will be raised, which will take care of our debt and make our current fund sufficient to meet demands.

By vote of the convention, the churches of the several conferences are asked to contribute through the apportionment plan $12,500 to the college for current expenses. The convention has obligated itself in this particular by giving its note in the amount of $250,000 with interest at 4 per cent per annum. The Trustees are in a position to urge the various churches to raise the amount apportioned for the college in full, that the college may be able to balance its budget annually.

I sincerely wish that something could be done that would impress the Board of Trustees with the honor that the church has conferred upon them in entrusting in their hands the conduct of the college; also that they might realize fully the responsibilities that are theirs in being assigned the duty of shaping the policies and directing the affairs of the college. No one individual or group of individuals in our entire church has been more highly favored or assigned more important responsibilities than have the members of the Board of Trustees of Elon College.

The Board meets in mid-year session in the President's office at Elon College, February 16th, at ten o'clock A. M. This will be a most important meeting and every member should count it a privilege to be present and have a share in the discussions and the actions that will determine the policies of the college for the ensuing year. Any member of the church or friend of the college is not only invited but urged to forward opinions, criticisms, suggestions, etc., for the Board's consideration. The present administration recognizes fully that the institution belongs to the church. The voice of the church in behalf of the college will be given serious and favorable consideration.

L. E. SMITH.

THE WEEPING COMMITTEE.

Some of the newer sects and denominations of Christendom have shown a peculiar attitude in the developing of novel and unique methods for missionary promotion. Inspired by the idea that they have a distinctive message for the world, their zeal seems to far surpass that of the older and long-established churches.

The Church of God, a small body with headquarters in Tennessee, is second to none when it comes to missionary enthusiasm. At the Annual Assembly, held this fall in Chattanooga, a great missionary offering was made as a part of their official program.

At the appointed time, all of the State Conference Superintendents, or Overseers as they call them, were lined up on one side of the building. At his official desk was the Assembly Clerk, who was to read off the names of the states. On the farther side of the building stood the Missionary Committee of the church.

As the Clerk read off the names of the states, the Overseer for that state would bring forward the State's Missionary Offering and present it to the Missionary Committee. Then the members of this Committee would do a peculiar thing. If they felt that the offering was insufficient for any particular state, they would hang their heads in shame and humiliation and would weep as though their hearts would break. If the Missionary Committee felt that any state had done well, and was bringing an offering which represented Christian sacrifice and devotion, the Committee would burst into an exuberance of joyous shouting.

I am wondering how long it has been since any emotion has been shown in connection with the missionary giving of our older denominations? We perhaps rather pride ourselves that we have risen above that stage!

But I am also beginning to feel that perhaps the very thing we need is a few tears falling in behalf of our great missionary cause. Perhaps we need to throw aside our inhibitions and our restraint, and show some strong emotion in the interests of the spread of the Gospel message. Perhaps we too need a Weeping Missionary Committee.

At any rate, we evidently have something to learn from our younger sister denomination, which in forty minutes was able to raise $1,100.00 in behalf of missions at their Annual Assembly.

BEREA NORFOLK.

This church has had a feast of great pleasure. It came about in this way. On Sunday morning, October 11, 1936, Rev. Mrs. May E. Bullock, in company with Rev. Joe French and his good wife, came to our church. Mrs. Bullock, by request, assumed the privilege of presiding. She at once announced that our pastor, Rev. Joe French, and his wife were desirous of becoming members of our church, and that they wished to unite with us this morning, and they wished to know what was the pleasure of the brotherhood. Well, the announcement was so unexpected and startling that it jarred our equilibrium, and it was quite a while before any one could command the poise sufficient to say, I move they be received. But having a well balanced, composed leader, we got through after a while. And Rev. Joe French and his fine wife have become members of our church.

I am sure that many who read these lines have had the pleasure of their pastor becoming a member of their church. If so, you know at first what a sensation it awakens, or arouses, but a little while after that, a pleasure awakens throughout the whole church. Somehow it seems that our pastor joining with us just puts him on a level with us, and that we can accept him and use him just as we do one another. We can nudge him in the side or shake him a little and he will have to take it just like all the rest of us have to do. Then on the next Sunday morning, he will go up in the pulpit and tell us how to behave ourselves and how we must conduct our lives if we hope to be acceptable followers of our Lord and Master. And we are going to have just enough common sense, loyalty and faith to believe it, accept it, and be profited by it.

Our church, through Rev. French's leadership, seems to be doing pleasingly well. We have responded in some way to every call presented unto us last year. We paid twenty-five dollars more on our apportionments last year than we have for any of the past five years. We are hoping that this relationship between pastor and his parishioners may prove to be profitable, pleasant, and permanent.

Secretary.

A MESSAGE FROM WINSTON-SALEM.

Dr. James R. Clinton, pastor of the Central Congregational-Christian Church, Philadelphia, Pa., will be in a three day Preaching Mission Service at the United Congregational-Christian Church, Winston-Salem, N. C., February 14-16. Dr. Clinton will speak twice on Sunday and hold a workers' council; also on Monday and Tuesday nights. At one of these services, he will give his famous dramatic recital, "His Mother's Sermon."

Dr. Clinton is speaking under the auspices of the Church Extension Boards and is at present on a tour throughout the South covering a period beginning January 24th and including March 17th. He will visit the Mission Churches in particular, and other points as his time will permit. Dr. Clinton has just been through a Preaching Mission in Philadelphia, and took an active part in the same. His work among the churches will be after the order of the Preaching Mission.

On Monday, February 15th, it will be my privilege to take Dr. Clinton to Elon College where he will address the Piedmont Ministerial Association in a forenoon and afternoon session. The forenoon session begins at 10:00 o'clock, and the afternoon session will convene about 2:00 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to ministers and interested laymen to attend one or both of these sessions. Every minister of the Association should make a special effort to be present. Rev. S. M. Penn is the president of the Association.

THINKING BIG.

(A CORRESPONDENCE.)

*Florida Sanitarium, Orlando, Fla.,
February 6, 1937.*

We will have to revise and greatly enlarge our thinking. Everything now is done on such a huge proportion that we can't grasp them. Things have grown faster and larger than has our ability to even imagine, much less comprehend them. When the writer was a lad, he heard of a merchant prince in New York who was reputed to be worth a million dollars. So far as facts were then known and published, this great merchant was the only man in New York, or the nation, that was reputed to have made a million dollars in a lifetime trading, and was still at it. My youthful mind staggered at the thought of a man worth a million—a millionaire. And now we have with us men who a few years ago were in obscurity, working away at their tasks, now reputed to be worth a hundred million, five hundred million—we know not many millions or hundreds of millions, for the human mind can't grasp the enormity of a hundred million—can't conceive of what it would look like heaped up in a pile of gold or silver. Some one has computed that if Adam, the first, walking in the garden of Eden six thousand years ago, had picked up and laid aside, one hundred dollars a day, over and above all he spent, from that first day to this, he would not have, by a long sight, what Henry Ford, or Rockefeller has now, and in fact would not have one half as much as Rockefeller has given away to philanthropy and benevolence. But the big things do not startle or amaze or amuse us any more. This for the reason that our minds, our capacity to grow and grasp mentally, have not grown as things of our making, or of God's abundance have grown.

How many of us knew, till a recent magazine article told us of it, or can grasp now that we are told, that on this day and at this very hour, our Uncle Sam is building a concrete dam out in the State of Washington which is the most elaborate and expensive feat of engineering and building that any Government in history has ever undertaken? When digging the Panama Canal bankrupted the French Government and our Government took up the incomprehensible task, the world looked on in bewildered astonishment. Yet this one dam, that of the Grand Culee (and it is only one of some ten or fifteen others of immeasurable magnitude, our Government is now building) will cost approximately $25,000,000.00 more than it cost to dig the Panama Canal, and when finished will be more massive than the Great Pyramid of the Pharaohs in Egypt. We will henceforth have to talk of the eight, instead of the Seven Wonders of the World—whatever they are. This the greatest structure in stone and concrete ever undertaken by man is to cost $404,633,000.00 and beside it, the great Boulder Dam of Colorado and the six dams of the Tennessee Valley, are small in comparison, and while its chief object is irrigation, it will be the world's largest supply of electric energy. When ready, it will irrigate a tract of land twice the size of the State of Rhode Island, which tract is now said to be the largest compact body "of undeveloped land remaining in the United States and the most fertile." It is all inconceivable—2,500 men with great machinery going 24 hours of the day—from four to six years, maybe more. Right here in our own United States—and oh! well we are no longer amazed or bewildered at big things. Our Government now spends money in terms of billions. The human mind can't grasp a billion. It is beyond our mental reach.

And yet how small, how insignificant are all these big, mighty things of man when compared to the might, majesty and magnitude of God's hand and works. He opens a window in the heavens, and mighty floods of waters rush forth and make all the irrigation projects of man seem like child's play in comparison. God spoke and mountains were piled up in huge and endless ranges that make all that man and man's machines have piled up look puny and insignificant indeed.

In such contemplation one can but sing with the Psalmist: "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars which thou hast ordained, what is man that thou art mindful of him? And the son of man that thou visitest him?"

We are living in a great land, and a wonderful time—the most wonderful of all time so far.

While we here in Florida read and hear of rain and flood and cold and snow and ice, it is indeed good to go out and look at the groves of orange trees about us, now at their very best. It is full spring time here. The orange and grapefruit trees, many of them still loaded down with their rich, ripe, yellow fruit to be gathered, they are at the same time in full blossom. There you have a perfect picture, deep green foliage now thrilled with the life and flow of spring, the yellow fruit, luscious and golden in the glowing sun, and all studded and bedecked, and delightfully perfumed with the most fragrant of white blossoms. Florida is now at its best, and hundreds, yes, thousands of worn and weary, frail and feeble bodies, or other thousands on pleasure bent, come here to get health and happiness from God's richly bountiful land.

OUT! OUT! CURSED SPORT!

We are told that when Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek took control one of the first things he did was to abolish the great gambling business. At the same time he destroyed some thirty million dollars of revenue annually. But it had to go, for gambling is entirely out of line with the New Life Movement. Arthur C. Rinden of Foochow writes that, "I understand that the largest gambling establishment, valued at half a million dollars is now to be made into a free public school."

THE BIBLE IN TURKISH.

After seven years of intensive work the world's "Best Seller," the Holy Bible, has been translated into modern Turkish by Dr. F. W. MacCallum of Istanbul. He is retiring now, after remaining in Turkey nearly four years beyond the usual age for retirement in order to complete his task of translation. Now it is done and after 47 years in the Near East, Dr. MacCallum regards this final literary service the crowning achievement of his fruitful years over there.

MOODY AND MISSIONS.By CARL HEATH KOPF.

[February 5, 1937, was the 100th birthday of D. L. Moody, and was generally celebrated throughout the United States.]

The general impression is that D. L. Moody cared very little about foreign missions and did less. That idea is about as true as the rumor that he cared very little about social action. The point is that Moody didn't fuss about names; the rose was as sweet.

I have before me as I write, an invitation from the British Isles containing 2,500 names of men like Henry Drummond, George Adam Smith, pleading with Moody to come to Britain, "and help us."

He went, he preached, he changed lives, he awakened dead churches and ministers. On the way back his ship, the Spree, tossed in the sea for seven days, helpless to move under its own power after striking a rock.

Now what is foreign missionary work if it is not getting up out of a comfortable place and going to another country to preach the Good News? Perhaps Moody talked very little about foreign missions. The fact remains he was himself a foreign missionary.

He led a campaign for funds for a shelter for dock workers in Liverpool. He preached temperance day in and day out. Now what is social action if that is not it? I know a great many people who talk more about missions and social action than Moody did. But they do a lot less.

The Student Volunteer Movement had its origin at Mount Hermon, the School for Boys which Moody founded in 1881. Indirectly, then, God's layman is responsible for the group which has been the source of our modern Saint Pauls.

It is true that Moody never endorsed the idea of pledging one's self to go to the mission field, come what may. He preferred that men and women should keep the channels of possibility open to God's guidance. I think Moody was right.

A girl went to a Student Volunteer Convention in Princeton in 1921 as a delegate from Wilson College. She was sure she wanted to go to India as a missionary. Something changed her mind and she is now living with me at 490 Beacon Street, Boston. I am glad her decision could be changed. I think Moody was right.

It is a fair venture that more young men and women have become missionaries after graduating from Mount Hermon or Northfield than from any other preparatory schools in America. And let us not forget that the

SOME INTERESTING FINDINGS.

It seems that for some reason, a copy of the Constitution of our first Woman's Missionary Convention has not been preserved with the records of the Convention. I feel reasonably sure that a copy could be found in the files of THE CHRISTIAN SUN of twenty-five years ago and, accordingly, went to the college and asked to see the files. I not only found a copy of the Constitution there, but many other interesting facts about our Women's missionary activities of twenty-five years ago. I found that the first society organized, was on January 24, 1913, in the Greensboro Church, with five charter members: Mrs. L. E. Smith, President; Mrs. S. A. Caviness, Vice-President; Mrs. W. A. Williams, Secretary; Mrs. Arthur Pierce, Treasurer; Mrs. L. M. Clymer, Cradle Roll Superintendent. Mrs. Smith wrote an interesting report of the meeting and reported that at the next meeting they had twelve members and four honorary members.

It seems that the first society in the Eastern Virginia Conference was at Franklin with twelve members. (The Memorial Temple and Rosemont organized about the same time and it may be that there had been others a little prior to this time. If so, I would like to be corrected.) Suffolk has the distinction of organizing on February 19, 1913, with one hundred charter members, and the first Young People's Society to be organized in the Southern Christian Convention was in this church, but one year later.

The very first Conference Board meeting in the Convention was held in Suffolk, Virginia, in December, 1911. The Board having been appointed by Rev. N. G. Newman, President of the Eastern Virginia Conference, at the Conference held in the same church a month previous. The Board consisted of Mrs. W. H. Dick, Miss Margaret Brickhouse and the writer. Dr. Atkinson met with us, and at this time we worked out a constitution for local societies and one for the Conference Board. As yet no move had been made by the Convention Board which had been appointed by Dr. W. W. Staley at the Suffolk Convention in 1910 because, as Dr. Atkinson points out, Mrs. Howsare, the chairman, had moved out of the bounds of the Convention. In January, 1912, I was elected to fill that vacancy. Colonel E. E. Holland, a member of the Executive Committee of the Convention, was at that time a member of the Congress of the United States, and I remember that Dr. Staley said to me, "You have been elected by the vote of a congressman." That committee met in Raleigh in May, following, and formulated a constitution to govern that Board, and at Dr. Atkinson's request, consented to edit a page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN in the interest of our women's work. I am amazed at myself to think that I did undertake all these weighty responsibilities at a time when we not only had three small girls in the home, but an invalid mother, which latter strain we were to carry for 13 years. The only excuse I can conceive for my doing it is the feeling of the need for some organized effort among our women.

When I was in college in 1896, the Convention met in Burlington. A Board was appointed and I was interested and hoped that something would be done then, but nothing materialized. When I became a pastor's wife, I felt the need for some such work for our own women as the women of other churches had, and as no one else was willing to undertake this, I dared to step into the breach. No one is more conscious than I how poor my efforts have been, yet the hearty cooperation, the sympathetic support, made it a comparatively easy task. The time was ripe, and a hearty response was given. Our women have stood loyally during the years, and I consider it a great privilege to have had some share in this united effort.

I cannot bring this to a close without saying a word in behalf of our library at Elon College. But for the information obtained there, much of our history of those early years would have been lost. It shows again the value of our College. Mrs. C. C. Johnson is most anxious to have any records that we wish to have preserved placed in the library. We should make the College the store house of our interesting and valuable history.

MADE HEADLINES IN INDIA.

When during a three days communal riot the regular city cleaning service was stopped in Bombay, India, and filth and smell became unbearable, Dr. Clifford G. Manshardt, head of Nagpada Neighborhood house gathered young Jews, Hindus, Muslims and Christians in his school for social work and went into the streets with brooms and dump carts to clean the place up. Menial work done by young men of all castes and creeds was an astounding thing. It was a dramatic lesson in community spirit. The next day the Municipality began work again with street cleaners in that section! And the press of India put it in as front page news.

INTER-RACIAL SUNDAY.

Next Sunday, February 14, has been designated as Inter-Racial Sunday. With the new emphasis which our mission study subject has placed for us upon the Negro here in America, and in Africa, we have a background for such a service. Perhaps this year it can come to mean more than ever before—we can bring it home to ourselves and translate our interest into definite action for better understanding between the races.

As young people, our meetings on February 14 should have this emphasis—perhaps a background of Negro spirituals, a reminder of the artistic triumphs of the Negro in poetry and painting, perhaps a resume of the the lives of some outstanding Negroes, and then definite plans for doing something which will help the Negro in our own community.

NEGRO PROJECT IN ST. PETERSBURG.

The young people of the Congregational-Christian Church in St. Petersburg, Florida, have just completed a Negro Project. Aided by Miss Pattie Lee Cogbill, they set out to get definite information concerning the Negroes in their city, so that they would have a basis upon which to lay plans for helping them.

From a report given in their paper,
"The Keyhole," they have not only secured much valuable information, but they have also received a great deal personally from the contacts they have made. First, they decided upon certain things about which they needed information of a reliable kind; then each one was given a particular phase of the investigation for his work.

SCIENCE AND OUR GROWING APPRECIATION OF GOD.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR FEBRUARY 21, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: I. Tim. 6:20-21; Isa. 45:
9, 12.

Daily Scripture Readings—

Monday—When God is Discarded. Romans 1:18-25.

Tuesday—Ignorant and Blind. Eph. 4:
17-21.

Wednesday—Science Shows God's Greatness. Ps. 19:1-6.

Thursday—Who made the Universe? Isa.
42:5-9.

Friday—God in Human Form. Phil. 2:
5-11.

Saturday—Jesus' Definition. John 4:24.

Both science and religion are searching for the ultimate truth.
Science is searching for truth about the material universe, the world in which we live. Religion is searching for spiritual truth. Science helps us discover the laws which govern the universe, but it does not limit God.
It enlarges our idea of God, yet one cannot discover God merely by studying science.

Religion and science both agree that there is order in the world. With people who are truly thoughtful the scientific spirit does not interfere with the spirit of worship. The psalmist stood in awe before God as he looked into the heavens. Man may look through the telescope and see much more than did the psalmist: If he is thoughtful, does he not stand in wonder? A life that is complete seeks truth through science; yet it worships, is grateful for the bounty of life, and seeks to respond to the will of God.

For Discussion—

1. Why is it impossible for science to discover God? (See Cor. 1:18-28.)

2. What can science do to enlarge one's conception of God?

3. Can a scientist believe in a Personal God?

4. Do the findings of true science weaken the faith of a Christian in the great facts of the Bible?

5. Is it easier to believe in science or in God?

6. Can one be a scientist and a Christian?

Suggested Hymns—

"Nearer My God, to Thee," "This Is My Father's World," "God Will Take Care of You."

JESUS, THE GOOD SHEPHERD.

GOLDEN TEXT: I am the good shepherd; the good Shepherd layeth down his life for the sheep.—John 10:10.

LESSON: John 10:1-42.

The common people heard Jesus gladly—He spoke in a language that they could understand. When He put the relationship which He bore to them in terms of shepherds and sheep they knew what He was talking about, He had a point of contact with them. They were familiar with the custom of shepherds in taking care of their sheep. How at night they would lead them into an inclosure with only one door or gate which was guarded by a "porter" who would allow only a shepherd to come in or to go out; how the shepherds would call their sheep by name and the sheep would recognize the voice of the shepherd, and his voice only; how the shepherd would lead his sheep forth into green pastures and beside deep waters; how he would care for those who were sick and seek those who went astray; how he would protect them from wild animals or thieves. They were familiar, too, with the attempts of thieves and robbers to climb over the wall or the fence to steal the sheep. It was all familiar language and tender imagery to them. And when we understand the customs of that day, it is tender imagery to us today.

The Shepherd of the Sheep.

"He that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep. To him the porter openeth, and the sheep hear his voice and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out. When he hath put forth his own he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him; for they know his voice. And a stranger they will not follow, but will flee from him; for they know not the voice of strangers." It was all literally true. The shepherd knew his sheep by name, even if he had a large flock—they were individuals to him; the sheep knew his voice—they could not understand the words but they understood his care; he led them forth to pasture and to water; and they followed him—they had confidence in him.

The Door of the Sheep.

"I am the door of the sheep." "I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out and shall find pasture." Jesus is the door, the entrance, the way, to life that is life indeed. Through Him one comes to God—He is the Way. And when one comes to God through Jesus he becomes "saved"—this is life eternal to know God through Jesus Christ. He that hath the Son hath life. And he shall have liberty—"he shall go in and out."—there is liberty in Jesus Christ, not liberty in the sense of doing what one wants, everything one wants to do, but liberty in the sense of having power to do what one ought to do. Liberty, not in the sense of license, but in the sense of inner freedom, liberty through law. By a strange paradox of life, one finds more freedom as he becomes the bond-servant of Christ. And a man "shall find pasture"—Jesus is the Bread and the Water of life. He satisfies. There is no lack of inner reserves to those who go in and out through Christ the door. He shall find life, richer, fuller, more abundant life. "I came that they may have life, and may have it more abundantly." In Him was life, and through Him men find life more abundant. This life is not primarily a matter of length of days or number of things, but essentially a matter of quality and spirit. A man may have it in poverty, or lack it in wealth. But material things may contribute to it. When the Gospel of Christ finds a more comprehensive social expression much of the world's poverty and squalor and ignorance and disease will be wiped out.

The Good Shepherd.

"I am the Good Shepherd." The Christian Church has had many names for its leaders, ministers, preachers, rectors, priests, parsons, vicars, etc, but the word that Jesus chose as a symbol of His ministry to men was that of shepherd, from which we get our word "pastor." "I am the Good Pastor," said Jesus. There is something intimate, personal, warm, about the word.

"The Good Shepherd layeth down his life for the sheep." That was literally true—the shepherd did not hold his own life dear unto himself when the life of his sheep was in danger. And Jesus the Good Shepherd, laid down His life for us the sheep.

There have been, and are many theories or views of the Cross, but somehow or other humanity cannot get away from the idea that whatever else it was, it was the fulfilment of Jesus' own words, "I lay down my life for the sheep." Jesus loved us and gave Himself for us.

"I am the Good Shepherd; and I know mine own, and mine own know me." As individuals, we are not lost in the multitudes. Jesus thinks of us as individuals. He cares for every one of us as if there were only one of us. A Christian can very humbly but very boldly say "God loves me as a person." The Good Shepherd knows us, He understands us, therefore He can help us. And the true sheep know Him. They may not know all about Him—the Christian experience is a growing experience—but there is the witness of His spirit within, it bears witness without spirit that we are His and He is ours.

"And I lay down my life for the sheep." Jesus repeats the thought perhaps for emphasis. The secret of His death as well as of His life was compassion and love for people. His death was a voluntary offering—no man took it from Him. Only one compulsion entered into it, the compulsion of love. No wonder His beloved disciple said we should love Him because He first loved us.

Other Sheep.

"And other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and they shall become one flock, one shepherd." Other sheep I have—not simply the inner circle of disciples, not simply the Jews the chosen people, not simply the white race, but the whole world, the people of all nations and of all time, they were His flock. The Good Shepherd is color blind, there are no white and black and red and yellow and brown sheep—they are all simply His sheep. "I must bring them."—there is a note of urgency, of compulsion in the words. "They shall hear my voice"—each in his own tongue and language, each in his own way, but Jesus was confident that His Gospel was for the whole world.

"And they shall become one flock, one shepherd." One flock—those words ought to be blazoned in letters of fire in the sky in these days when there are so many forces making for division between nations and races. Alas for those who think of God as the white man's God. Alas for those who put the negro in another division of humanity. One flock, black, white, red, yellow, brown peoples, all one flock, and all with only one Shepherd. Christ the Good Shepherd is the Shepherd of all. He died for all. He prayed that they all might be one

"Each is given a box of tools,
A shapeless mass and a book of rules,
And each must fashion ere life be

A stumbling block or a stepping stone."

MONDAY.

HIS RULE OF CONTACT.

"His delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate day and night."—Ps. 1:2.

Here is a man who will not walk with the ungodly and he purposes never to be caught in company that might have the appearance of evil. To him God is a delight, duty is a privilege, His word is a song, and all men are brothers.

So determined is he in this course, and so much has he participated in these rules in his life that to do the will of the Lord is a subconscious reaction, not merely now and then, but always, "day and night."

The Lord knoweth the way of such a man and such a man knoweth the way of the Lord. Each will keep faith with the other, and happiness crowns the man for ever.

Prayer—Dear Father, we thank Thee for Thy law and we pray that it may be an increasing delight to us. In His name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

SPIRITUAL PREPAREDNESS.

"I store thy word within my heart to keep myself from sinning against Thee."—Ps. 119:11.

The storing of the truths of the Bible is the greatest fortress against temptation and troubles. It is a fortress not only because God has said it and given His strength to it, but because it is the truth. We are told that the most forceful and convincing lawyers at the bar are those who have their hearts stored with the Word of God and are able to apply its truths to conduct.

We must have moral and spiritual power to go forward with high vision and moral concern to a worthwhile goal.

Prayer—Our Father, we give Thee thanks that in Jesus we may turn daily experiences into moral and spiritual resources for living. Grant us this through Jesus Christ. In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE LORD CLOTHING HIMSELF.

"But the spirit of the eternal took hold of Gideon."—Judges 6:34.

Marginal notes interpret this passage as, "The Lord clothed himself with Gideon." There are other great ones with whom God clothed himself. Paul said, "It is no longer I who live, but Christ who lives in me." And who shall we name like Paul? Martin Luther, John Wesley, John Henry Jowett, D. L. Moody, and every person who has been the expression of God in the world. It has been through human agencies that the transforming power of God has flowed and changed communities and nations. What if He were permitted to clothe himself with you and me fully? What if He were permitted to clothe himself with the millions of church members in the world?

Prayer—O Our Father, Give us a perfect union with Thee today and enrich our experience for the good of others. This we ask for Jesus sake. Amen.

THURSDAY.

CAREFUL SPEECH.

"Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt that ye may know ye ought to answer every man."—Col. 4:6.

It has been said sarcasm is the most dangerous kind of speech. It is a weapon too sharp to be used by unskilled persons, and the best trained Christians need to be careful. Sarcasm has been known to do good, but those who can use it are rare.

It is a two-edged weapon, and it nearly always cuts back on the one who uses it. It is a poisonous weapon. Infection sets in the wounds it makes and it takes a long time to heal. Think before you make a cutting remark, for you may hurt some one. Make it a motto to say those things only which you would be pleased to hear repeated.

Prayer—O Lord fill our hearts with Thy love, direct our minds with Thy spirit, so that we may speak the refrain of Thy will and speak healing words, rather than wounding ones. In His name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE PRICE OF CHRISTIAN EXPERIENCE.

"Sell all that thou hast and give to the poor and come and follow me."—Luke 18:22.

This is a picture of a wonderful man, from a fine family, and with a fine background. He wanted to be a Christian, but he was not willing to pay the price. If he could be a Christian, retain what he had and go on his way, like so many thousands have done, well and good. But the requirements were beyond his wildest dreams and heaven was a long way off. He turned and went away. As he disappeared down the road around the bend, Jesus said, "How hardly shall a rich man enter the kingdom of heaven." That young man was never heard from again. In whose place would you rather be, his or, say, Matthew's, who left all and followed Him?

The pitcher who pitches a "No hit" game so easily, in the eyes of the crowd, is just naturally "a lucky guy." Not so, it has taken him years to learn how to do that. To be able to do that he has given of his mind, body and heart. So it must be with us if Christianity is going to mean anything.

Prayer—Dear Lord, make us willing to pay the price, whatever it may be to be heirs to the throne of the everlasting Lord. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE KEY TO HEAVEN.

"Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."—Rev. 2:10.

There you are. Take it and unlock every compartment of His kingdom. What kind of friend are you? What kind of employee are you? How trustworthy are you? How much of a light is His law to you? Take love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, church, worship, the Bible, personel, etc; will your faithfulness warrant the "well done?" It has been said, "To be faithless is to fail, whatever the apparent success. To be faithful is to succeed, whatever the apparent failure."

Prayer—Dear Father, we wish to be known as "good and faithful servants." Help us to be so until the end and be found worthy of Thy "well done." Amen.

SUNDAY.

BEHIND THE DIM UNKNOWN.

We glory in tribulations; knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto us."—Rom. 5:3-5.

"...behind the dim unknown, Standeth God within the shadow, Keeping watch above His own."

There is a certain victory with Christians and the fact of trouble does not conflict with that statement.

What a comforting assurance! It has been well said, "As soil is broken, pulverized and stirred for the better (Continued on page 15.)"

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

THE DAILY ADVENTURE OF THE SOUL.

By REV. JOHN CHAPMAN,
Asheville, North Carolina.

It is altogether too easy to make of life a dull existence when God has given us the privilege of true adventure. And whosoever shall compel thee to go one mile, go with him two. That first mile of life is one of bare necessity—what we must do to get along. The second mile consists entirely of the added opportunity to all who will seek and find.

Let us speak of that first mile. We are compelled by life to provide food, drink, and shelter. We are entitled to earn the bread of life. We had better do some serious thinking about that before going on to the second. Man cannot live by bread alone yet it is beside the point to preach to men of spiritual things when they ask for bread and we give them stone. The earth still yields abundantly of her increase and it is our spiritual thinking and living which fails to consecrate God's material wealth to the highest use for His children. The walls of our narrow thought may have been the best that we knew in the past but now that we know better there is no reason for continuing in the same fashion. God calls us to more intelligent living. This first mile of life will not become a reality with the program of any new "ism" but with the daily consecration of material facts to serve spiritual purpose. Let us not forget the basic problems facing the world today compelling us to go that one mile and to do it in a nobler fashion than we have been and are doing right now. But what doth it profit a man to go the first mile which has to be travelled anyway? Why stop there? Why eat, drink, sleep, and have possessions if we see no purpose beyond mere existence? There be some whose visions reach only to the gospel of the soup kitchen. They demand bread and forget who eats the bread and who is the giver of all bread. We dwell in the solemn realization of the need that a good first mile or there will be little room for the daily adventure of the soul upon the second.

What of this second mile? It is a privilege and not a hard-hearted obligation. We need to live it for there are too many dry as dust lives and long faces. Why be good if it results in being good for nothing? The world will best stop doing what is wrong when it learns to love what is right. Why toe the mark and be told what not to do if it leads to no lasting joy? Oh, if only the good were clever and the clever good. Henry Drummond said, "Souls are made sweet not by taking the acid fluids out, but by putting something in—a great love, a new Spirit, the Spirit of God." Life such as this, is daily adventure, not perpetual monotony.

How, then can the soul live with adventure? It must cease forever to be interested in itself for its own sake. The same is true of the Church. If the church is so much concerned with organization and attendance that it fails to make godly lives and serve the community, it has no excuse for being.

Again we must cease taking people and situations for granted. If the quality of life does not grow with the passing of time that every life itself becomes an impossible rut. How many a man accepts himself and his own mode of life. He is bound to be shaken from such a deep dream of peace when he begins to criticize another and then suddenly wonders what he would have done in the same situation. Perhaps he goes further to find himself less courageous than his neighbor whom he blamed. If we are going to be hard on anyone, let us be hard on ourselves and easy on others. It is even more common place to take another for granted. Be it friendship, marriage, or family life, there must be constant growth in deeper understanding and expression in actual daily accomplishment if we would escape the tyranny of getting nowhere and becoming nobody. There is no position. Either the soul grows daily in the adventure of life or it withers up. You may wonder at such a statement. To hit the truth from another angle—when life ceases to be more broadminded and deeply sacred the eternal soul God gave us dies from lack of spiritual food.

Also we must look deeper than the petty morality of man to live the goodness of God. How many of us call it a religious principle when it is nothing but a group of our pet prejudices. An Isrealite once said, "Lord, speak, for thy servant heareth." Too often we cry, "Lord, hear, for thy servant speaketh." A life with no adventure lives in a narrow groove with a mind saturated with trivial thoughts and denying attitudes. Who are we to stand around measuring the neighbors by our own standards. "Let us never be that kind of a person." We condemn some outward act as wrong when our own heart, in making such a pronouncement, is a thousand times worse. Emerson said in effect, that some people pin me to the wall and others lift me to the stars. It is positive moral slavery to indulge in petty authority. The authority of God is the light of truth. It is the strength of the eternal, not some fly-by-night remedy of man. It is the answer of a life not the meaningless repetition of words in parrot-like fashion. It is coming out in the open and facing the needs of a twentieth century and not crawling into a dark room to wish for the good old days. Despite all of the hardship and notwithstanding the pressure now, these are the good old days. They are here and ours to live. Let us not run from life as it is but go into the midst of it upheld by God's spirit. And whosoever shall compel thee to go one mile, go with him two. Man has to go that first mile. God also gave us the privilege of the second. This message is a call to see beyond ourselves, not to take life for granted, and to grow in the lasting joy of life and nothing less. No matter who we are or what our limitations, God calls us to such a way of living.

CORRECTIONS.

There were two bad mistakes in the last issue. In the first editorial, the founder of Christian Endeavor was called Parker rather than Clarke. The editor really knows who started this great movement, even if it did not seem so.

On the last page, which was an editorial, two lines of type got mixed so that the meaning was lost. The sentences should have read: "Behind the rushing waters may still be heard 'the still small voice' that speaks to the heart of man. The hand of the Good Master is still stretched out to rescue drowning man, but that hand looks much like the hand of a man now as it did when Simon Peter said, 'Help, Lord, or I perish.'"

We regret all mistakes, but especially those that give false information or fail to make the meaning clear. Please pardon us, and believe that we, the editors and printers, try to do our best, even though we may not succeed.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

DANIEL MAY.

Dear Friends:

The above picture shows the latest addition to the Christian Orphanage family—little Daniel May from Gibsonville, N. C.

Daniel's mother is dead, and it was impossible for his father to keep the children together, and little Daniel was sent to us. He is a very sweet little fellow, and when you look at his sweet innocent face, it makes you appreciate an opportunity to do something to help him. We trust that Daniel will always retain the sweet disposition he now has and grow and develop into a fine young man. He may be a senator or perhaps a president at some future time.

One of the most interesting phases of the orphanage work is to watch children develop and grow from childhood to young manhood and womanhood as the years go by.

The need for care and training of the fatherless and dependent children offers a great opportunity for the Congregational-Christian Denomination to render a real humane service. Five institutions in North Carolina spent more than $100,000 each in this kind of work last year—a half million dollars. They think it a wise investment.

“While Shakespeare is the greatest of all writers outside of the Bible, the Bible is so superior to Shakespeare, from a merely literary point of view; so superior to Shakespeare in beauty and splendor of poetry, richness of prose, in knowledge of human nature, that there is no comparison at all. That is generally believed today by all shades of people, whether they are hostile to religion or not.”

In Memoriam

BOYD.

Mrs. W. P. Boyd, daughter of the late Alfred Apple Elliott and Nannie Tuck Elliott, was born August 2, 1875 and died January 30, 1937. On November 7, 1894, she married William Patrick Boyd of Vir-gilina, Va., who survives her. There were five children and only one survives, Patrick Newman Boyd, of Virgilina.

Sister Boyd united with Union Church early in life and was known by all as an excellent Christian Woman. She was a great sufferer for years from rheumatism, yet, under great physical handicaps, she continued her work in her home almost to the very end. On the day before her death she began to suffer more than usual, but no one thought the end was near until on Saturday at 12:40 she quietly passed away to the spirit land.

The funeral was at her church on Sunday afternoon, January 31, and burial was in the town cemetery. Although the day was disagreeable a large number of people were present to give evidence of their appreciation for the life of this good woman.

NEGRO PROJECT.

Negro ministers were interviewed for information concerning the types of services they held and the particular problems they have to face. They would like more cooperation between the white and colored ministers of the city.

The schools for Negroes were investigated. It was discovered that every teacher in the Senior High School has an A. B. and two have M. A. Degrees —this is the highest standard of teachers in the whole country! The principal of this high school has prepared a course in Negro history, called "Negroes, Makers of History," for presentation in his classes. The equipment of the Negro schools is inferior to that found in other schools of the city.

Professional men among the Negro race were interviewed. The situation regarding Negroes voting in the city was investigated—one half of one per cent of the Negro population voted at the last election. The conditions of unemployment and poverty were investigated and it was found that many of the Negroes lived in wretched conditions. The recreational facilities for Negroes were found to be very scanty—their library even being closed because of non-payment of taxes—and a white woman donated this property to the Negroes on the condition that the city would pay the taxes on it.

This survey of conditions as they exist today in one of our southern cities has proven very worth while.
We commend the St. Petersburg group of young people upon their thoroughness and upon the splendid amount of valuable data they accumulated.

MOODY AND MISSIONS.

Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions was the direct outgrowth of Moody's first student conference in 1886.

D. L. Moody viewed the so-called faith missions with misgivings. Once his friend, Dr. A. T. Pierson, sought to establish an independent mission boards by raising funds on the spot at a Northfield conference. Moody called a halt, named the leaders of the established agencies, Robert E.
Speer, James L. Barton, and said,
"We want to uphold their hands and not embarrass them."

A missionary from Africa was once telling his thrilling story at the Conference and as he finished the assembly broke out into applause. Moody jumped to his feet.

"If you want to cheer this man you can do it better by supporting a lot of those men on thirty dollars a year.
I am going to support one. Mr. Sankey will take one. Messrs. A., B., and C., are going to take one each."
In a short time one hundred pledges were recorded.

Moody did not believe in foreign missions? Then let us have more of his unbelief, at thirty dollars per year each.

Chesterton says that a saint is one who exaggerates what the world neglects, and needs. That is the definition of a missionary at his best, too.
He gives a sleeping church a punch in the ribs. That is what it needs.

No Other Cloud Could Have Done It.

It was a preacher who urged me to complete the country school and then go to the high school in town. It was a preacher who inspired me to go to college when I finished high school. It was a preacher at the time of my graduation who insisted I should continue my work at the university.

It was a preacher who said the words at high noon which made my boyhood sweetheart my wife. It was a preacher who first came into our home after the doctor was gone, after the birth of our first-born. He prayed God's blessings upon us and upon the child. As each of our children have grown old enough, some wise preacher has taken her good confession and led her gently through the waters of baptism.

Some years ago my aged father was called to his reward. He had been a pioneer farmer on the plains of Nebraska and a charter member of the little church planted on those western prairies long before the railroad came. As we stood beside the open grave in the little country cemetery on a cold March day, it was a strong gray-haired preacher who read these great words, "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth on me, though he were dead, shall he live."

When my oldest daughter had finished college and completed one year of teaching, she came one day to the marriage altar. In our home, surrounded by our friends, a preacher of the gospel arose and said the words which united the lives of two young people in holy wedlock.

At every important step in my life it has been a preacher who has inspired; at every crisis in my life, it has been a preacher who counseled and who helped to show the way.

The minister deals in the intangible realities. He builds faith and hope and love in the hearts of men. He causes young men to see visions and old men to dream dreams. In his eyes he sees unfolding the Kingdom of God on earth. His faith is fixed in that matchless Leader who is the same yesterday, today and forever—No other man could have done what the minister has done.

Psalm of Life.

*Tell me not in mournful numbers
"Life is but an empty dream,"
For the soul is dead that slumbers,
And things are not what they seem.
Life is real! and life is earnest,
And the grave is not its goal;
Dust thou art, to dust returnest,
Was not spoken of the soul.*

*Not enjoyment, and not sorrow
Is our destined end or way;
But to act, that each tomorrow
Finds us farther than today.
Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.*

*Footprints, that perhaps another Sailing o'er life's solemn main—
A forlorn and shipwrecked brother,
Seeing, shall take heart again.
Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor, and to wait.*

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

The Ocean View and other Norfolk churches are to have the pleasure of hearing Dr. James R. Clinton from February 21 to March 5. He will go from there to Richmond, Virginia, for a week with our Richmond Church.

Dr. Warren H. Denison, assistant secretary of the General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, will be in Eastern Virginia, from March 28 to April 2 to hold institutes on stewardship. This will be a fine opportunity for churches, for Dr. Denison is an expert in this field.

Rev. H. S. Hardeastle, pastor of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., recently had the Boy Scouts of his church as guests of honor for the morning church service. He is offering a prize to the child ten years of age or, under, who will do the best job of reproducing the story of one of the children's sermons which he preached during February.

The churches of Windsor, Virginia, pastorate, which include Windsor, Antioch, Isle of Wight and Mt. Carmel, joined in an Elon College Day program on Sunday morning, January 31, with Dr. J. E. Rawls, a trustee of the college as speaker. The churches expect to raise their quota for Elon this year. The pastor, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, says that he is enjoying working with these churches and that the people are very generous in their gifts for his pantry.

At a meeting of the United Christian Church of Lynchburg, Virginia, on February 3 the name of the Church was changed to Congregational-Christian Church. Reports showed the church to be in good condition. Vesper services are being held Sunday afternoons at 5 o'clock instead of the regular 7:30 service during February and March. The new pastor, Rev. J. Howard Smith, promises to send in subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and to write an article for publication. Thanks.

IMPORTANT CORRECTION.

Elon College alumni in eastern Virginia will please note that their banquet at the Elliot Hotel in Suffolk, will be held at seven o'clock, Friday evening of this week and not at eight o'clock as announced last week.

MT. OLIVET (G).

Following Sunday School, February 7th, a special program was given at Mt. Olivet, Green County, Virginia, to impress upon the minds of our congregation, that February 12th was a day set apart for missionary prayers.

The committee planned an interesting program on "Missions Through Prayer." It was opened with a most reverent and impressive worship program which was followed by mission poems by the children of the Sunday School. The main feature of the program was a very interesting talk on "The Value of Prayer in Missions" which was delivered, in a very direct but entertaining way, by Mrs. W. F. Morris, a local leader in the Church of the Brethren.

It was decided, after a welcomed suggestion, that the church stay open and heated all day Friday for those who wanted to come and worship in that way. We feel the program aroused much interest and was quite worthwhile.

Our Sunday School is always larger when we put forth a little more effort and time, for "Variety is the spice of life."

CIRCULAR CHURCH.

Perhaps you would like a bit of news from Charleston, S. C., and the Circular Church. We rather felt that we had come out of the financial depression when we closed 1935 with a deficit so small as to be almost negligible and with the apportionment overpaid by $15.00. The subscription for 1937 will meet the needs of the year and we hope to come out with the apportionment twenty per cent over last year's, as has been requested of the churches for the present year.

We are now more concerned with the spiritual depression. We feel the need of a revival of the church. We are to have in February, a preaching mission in our own church in which we will be assisted by five of the prominent ministers of the city representing as many different denominations. We are happy indeed to have these men preach for us on the evenings of the week beginning February 14th. The speakers and their topics are as follows:

Rev. A. R. Stuart, "The Challenge of Christian Discipleship;" Rev. Henry F. Collins, "Following Jesus Afar Off;" Rev. C. K. Derrick, "Finding the Fountain of Joy;" Rev. John N. Thomas, "The Lost Sense of Sin;" Rev. W. R. Pettigrew, "Getting Men to Christ—Demonstrated."

Personally, I have had quite a good deal to do in the recent months in holding two meetings under the auspices of the Emergency Peace Campaign, one in November and one in January. The first was addressed by Professor William Morse of the University of South Carolina, the other by Dean Elbert Russell and Bishop Edgar Blake of Detroit. They were all very fine speakers. They stirred up some opposition from military and naval men even before they arrived, but they had a very fine hearing from the representative people of the city and more meetings of this very informing nature are asked for. The meetings were held in large rooms of each of the two largest hotels. I presided at the first and secured a very well known former mayor of Charleston to preside at the second.

GEORGE N. EDWARDS.

AS A YOUNG MINISTER SEES IT.

One of the characteristics of our age is the expression of youth. To some it may seem a bit presumptuous on the part of a young minister to criticize the policies and practices of our church which has existed for over a century and a quarter. Be this as it may, there are others who share the convictions of the writer. All agree that there is a need for unity of purpose and a deeper loyalty within the bounds of our fellowship.

However, there are certain facts that must be faced. We can never be a great church until a change is affected in our system of calling a minister. It is fatal to the best interest of both church and ministers. Each year many of our churches face the possibility of a split over either retaining the present pastor, or securing a new one, some favoring one, some another. A few of our churches have remedied this situation by calling a minister for an infinite period (and these are the churches that seem to be making the most progress). How unjust this old system is to those men who have given their best years to the churches they have served! Yet the denomination has not provided for them in any satisfactory way—Oh yes, I know we have a Ministerial Relief Fund to provide for them but it is too meager and inadequate. Such men cannot compete with the younger men fresh from seminary with enthusiasm and a modern viewpoint. Many of the older ministers, who have been either too busy or else too prejudiced to keep abreast of the times, must then be placed on the shelf—just when many of them are best prepared to preach. And under such a system it is quite possible for a man who is incompetent and untrained to retard the progress of a church before it finds him out. How long must we wait before we realize that the way to secure the best pastors is by their past records and on the basis of merit rather than through political pull? Unless a man is successful in the small pastorate, there is small prospect of his making good in the larger pastorates. Such a system allows churches to enter into the field of bidding for a man's services—and sometimes, not infrequently, some preachers are so unethical that they underbid their fellow ministers in order to secure another church to add to their parish. God forbid that such a practice shall continue!). Let's change our system in order to secure a more efficient ministry.

And if we are to be a great church we not only need to change our system of calling a minister, but we must change the scale of salaries. What a disgrace to our denomination that there are salaries that range all the way from $50.00 per annum to $3,600.00 per annum. We seem sometimes to forget that a minister is to care for the spiritual things of his congregation while they are to provide for the necessities of life for the minister. Our Southern Convention ought to keep step with other denominations and appoint a commission to try to create pastorates that would furnish a parsonage and a living salary to the men who serve in these fields. If we ran our business like we run our churches, we would have long ago been in bankruptcy. The creation of such pastorates would save many a weak church that has been forced to close its doors because they were unable to secure a minister. Our churches are largely rural. There is a new day dawning for rural churches if we will only take advantage of our opportunity.

Our church will never be a great church until we have some kind of a supervisor or superintendent, who shall act in the capacity of an advisor. Of course, such a one must be a man of wisdom and experience. He would be in position to help create our policies and advise churches in calling pastors. I am not pleading for a bishop. I remember the story of the young minister who in the early days of our movement could not preach a sermon save he took a tirade at the bishop. His congregation grew tired of it and some of the deacons framed him by choosing his text for him one Sunday. As he walked into the pulpit they gave him a slip of paper with the text John 1:1 written on it. The young man read his text, explained that he didn't know just why the request to preach on that text had come to him. He then quoted the words of the beloved disciple: "In the Beginning was the Word and the Word was with God and the Word was God." And thank heaven there were no bishops there." I find myself in sentiment with the young man—but if there was once too much control, now we know too much freedom, and one cannot help but wonder if such freedom has not proved a curse rather than a blessing. And the new generation is finding no place for the quarterly conference and few of the adults attend it. It seems as though it will eventually be abandoned in favor of the official board and congregational meetings. A superintendent could ofttime save a situation if he had the opportunity.

That such a church is needed no one can deny. And that such a church can be brought out of the present crisis is entirely possible. So as a young minister, I pray that the day may speedily come when these things shall come to pass and our church may come into its rightful place. God grant that it may be so.

F. ERVIN HYDE.

IF PEOPLE ARE FOR LIQUOR, WHY NOT FOR GENERAL ELECTION?

Bishop Edwin D. Mouszon several days ago in an address in Charlotte, N. C., among other things said: "We would remind members of the General Assembly that they are not our masters, but our representatives, and that they should do the will of the people of North Carolina. The time has come for a state-wide referendum on the liquor problem and the people invite it."

We commend this timely utterance to the attention of the legislators assembled at Raleigh and urge that they respect the will of the people. If a majority of the people of North Carolina desire the legal sale of liquor in our state, why should the wet members of the legislature be opposed to a submission of the question to a vote of the people? The fact is they are afraid of the results of such an election and they hope to thwart the will of the people by taking the liquor legislation out of their hands as if they were the masters of the people rather than their representatives.

The wets do not want an election because they fear, we repeat, the results. These men know no self-respecting North Carolinian will go before the people of this state and campaign for liquor. Furthermore, no measure can win with the citizens of North Carolina when even its friends admit that it is the enemy of everything that is good. And to this all agree.

For these reasons, the liquor folks are unwilling to risk their measure with the voters. Hence it is now proposed that the members of the General Assembly shall vote out what the people have voted in. In two elections the people have registered their votes against the legal sale of liquor in 1908 by a majority of 44,000 and in 1933 by a majority of 184,000. Yet these liquor people are urging the legislature of North Carolina to license public enemy number one to carry on his hellish work in our good state by entrenching this public enemy at certain vantage points in North Carolina where it can curse and damn the whole state. How long, oh, how long must the people be subjected to the dictates of greed and appetite!—N. C. Christian Advocate.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

FLOODS AND RELIEF.

It is almost impossible for those of us who are out of the flood areas to know anything of the terror, suffering and distress caused by the recent floods in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys. It was equally impossible for those who cleared the timber land and cultivated the soil, for the year's ration which could be obtained from it, to realize that in the years to come, their method of securing wealth would cause untold suffering and grief. Nature's way to preserve water in the soil is to keep the land covered with trees and forest leaves. But man's method seems to be to take from the soil all that he can get without restoring anything in return. Reforestation is a comparatively new word in our national language, but is one that must become more familiar as the years pass.

The destruction of property in the flood area is terrific. It will take years to restore that which is gone, and many of the citizens will probably never be able to live normal lives again. Hundreds have been drowned or killed. The human side of the tragedy is by far worse than the material, for a life that is destroyed, can not be restored, and the child who is left homeless and fails in its educational development must be a cripple for life.

Neighbors, and in fact all America has responded to this calamity in a magnificent fashion. The first call that came to Norfolk was for $4,000. This was raised to $20,000. Apparently the contribution will be $35,000 besides a number of men and women who have gone to aid in the relief work. Norfolk is far removed from the center of distress, but it has had its storms and knows something of terror. Sympathy and help have gone from many people across the Nation as an immediate response to the call of human distress.

But the greater relief must needs come through the longer process of reforestation and the conservation of soil. Perhaps certain areas will be found uninhabitable, and cities may need to be built on a hill. Wisdom must go into the long time relief program which will assure the coming generation more of safety than this one has known.

LIVES OF GREAT MEN REMIND US.

Two legal holidays in the month of February stand as a memorial to great men who have made American history. George Washington was the first president of the United States of America, and in spite of all the debunkers have been able to do, his memory still gives courage to those who hold high ideals and struggle for the welfare of humanity. His sacrifice and loyalty which went into the founding of the nation made him one of the greatest men America has yet produced.

The first American president was Abraham Lincoln. He was the first president born of American parentage and in a very real sense represents the American type of life. Coming from poverty and struggling through hardships, he made of himself the kind of man many another has wanted to be. Boys and girls may well follow his ideal of making preparation now with the belief that the opportunity will come later.

Another great American whose centenary is being observed this year, born February 5, 1837, was Dwight L. Moody, a Congregational layman evangelist, whose influence reached beyond the borders of his native land. without education himself, he built institutions that still stand and will for years to come. With a heart full of compassion, he sought diligently to bring men into the Kingdom of God.

As the great poet, Longfellow, so well said, "Lives of great men all remind us we can make our lives sublime and departing leave behind us footprints on the sands of time." So may it be.

THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

Plans are progressing well for the program of the Southeast Convention, which will be held in conjunction with the Florida State Conference at Jacksonville, April 20-22. Among the speakers already secured for the meeting are Dr. Wm. F. Frazier, Executive Vice-President of the Home Boards; Dean Vaughn Dabney, of the Andover Newton Theological Seminary, who is also Chairman of the General Council Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life; President Judson L. Cross, of Tougaloo College, formerly, for several years, Secretary of the New England Regional Committee; and it is expected that one of the strongest missionary speakers of the American Board will also be present and on the program. It is expected, also, that Dr. Arthur Raper, Professor at Agnes Scott College and an authority on farm tenantry and on interracial problems, and one of the most interesting speakers on these subjects in the south, will be on the program.

Rev. Orvis T. Anderson, pastor of the church at Fort Myers, Florida, will preach the sermon, in view of his election as preacher for the Florida Conference. The forenoon of the 21st will be given to our educational and other institutions, with short reports from all institutions, with an address on the Negro schools and colleges by President Judson L. Cross; an address on "The Church in a College Community" by Rev. William A. Keith, pastor of the Collegeside Church in Nashville; and an address on "Educational Objectives" by Dr. H. Shelton Smith. At this session, also, there will be presentation of the orphanage, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and other publications; and also presentation of the West Tampa Mission. The afternoon session, aside from the business period, there will be a discussion of "The Social Problems We Face," with the discussion of such topics as "Interracial Understanding," Rural Needs and the Rural Church," and "The Church and Social Justice."

During this afternoon, there will also be a session under the Youth Fellowship, with the program and speakers yet to be announced. This will be followed by the Youth Fellowship Supper. At the evening session, there will be an address by the visiting missionary, and also by Dr. William F. Frazier. At the forenoon session on Thursday, it is planned to have a missionary address by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, also a further address by Dr. Frazier, and then there will be sessions for women, for laymen and for ministers. Plans for the Woman's Session are in charge of Mrs. Robert G. Williams, President of the Florida Federation; and Mrs. John G. Truitt, President of the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Convention. The Laymen's Session is being planned for by Mrs. Robert G. Williams, who heads the Florida Laymen's Committee. At the Ministers' Session it is expected that Dr. Vaughan Dabney will speak and lead a seminar. The closing address will be given by Dr. Stanley Harrell, President of the Southern Convention.

It is hoped that representatives from all the states in the southeast will be present in goodly numbers, and now is the time to begin to make plans for this interesting trip to Florida and for this vital meeting of our southeast fellowship.

MID-WINTER MEETINGS.

The annual Mid-Winter Meetings of the Missions Council and all the members and officials of the Mission Boards, as well as of the Executive Committee of the General Council, was held in Evanston, Illinois, January 25-28. This Mid-Winter Meeting has come to be an important institution in our denominational life. Here are discussed problems of organization, and reports are given covering all phases of our denominational service to the Kingdom.

In recent sessions, there has been a great deal of discussion concerning matters of strategy and organization, but this year in view of the adoption of all these plans by the General Council at Mt. Holyoke, the decks were cleared, as it were, and all were able to devote themselves to the challenging problems of our missionary undertakings.

The reports indicated only a very slight change for the better in the giving of our churches toward our state, national and foreign work, but it was gratifying that the corner had been turned, however. There was a great emphasis upon spiritual values and upon courageous and hopeful facing of the future. The whole tone of this Mid-Winter Meeting was finer than any for a number of years.

An important meeting which was held in conjunction with the Missions Council was the annual meeting of the woman's state presidents, with delegates present from all over the country. Among those present were Mrs. John Truitt of Suffolk, Mrs. Fred P. Ensminger of Birmingham, and Mrs. Charles F. Rush of Charlotte, N. C. Several members of the Boards from the southeast were unable to be present. Among those attending were Dr. Fred P. Ensminger, Rev. William T. Scott, Rev. Henry S. Barnwell, Rev. C. S. Ledbetter and Rev. E. C. Gillette. E. C. G.

EMANCIPATION FROM A SECOND SLAVERY.

By C. B. R.

When Abraham Lincoln boldly declared for human freedom in the South little did he realize that there

More than fasting, yea, and more than prayer,
Lent should mean much more to us than these,
More than a table set with meager fare;
More than long hours spent upon our knees;
Truly it should be kept with prayer and praise,
Truly we should walk humbly, should abstain
From wordliness, recalling his last days,
The cross He bore, His agony and pain.

But remembering the quiet way He went About His Father's business, so should we Move out to serve Him, willing to be spent,
Giving our hearts in love and sympathy
To the heavy burdened, "to the least of these."
More than partaking of the sacrament,
Or prayer or fasting, I think we would please
The lowly Christ in thus observing Lent.
—Grace Noll Crowell.

was being born, not because of his emancipation of slaves, but because of an inevitable development due to our social and economic set-up, a new and enlarged slavery . . . a second slavery not for the South alone but for the whole Nation.

Out of the human equation of large plantation owners in the South, captains of industry in the North and East, and the barons of expansion in the West came this new slavery, and for years was accepted as ethical and as law and as order. While the colored race of the South was freed from the principle and practice of human ownership, it joined the white man in the lower ranks of society in becoming bondsman and slave to low wages dictated by employers, and the sharing of crops with landlords on terms which workers had no voice and no choice as to division of the fruits of their labors. Terms meted out to them to provide for the necessities of life made millions, colored and white, subservient to the will of others. Theirs was a new slavery.

The North and East established industries, promulgated long hours and dictated for workers a pauper's pay. The rapidly expanding West found gentleman farmer and progressive miner saying, "This is the wage, take it or leave it." Perpetual poverty had marked its millions. Little wonder that in fifty years we have filled our almshouses, our institutions for the insane, our houses of correction and jails. Disease, due to poor living conditions, has given us stunted manhood and womanhood, and their marrying and begetting more diseased children to die in poverty has been the inescapable result.

The man of prestige and power has been able lawfully and with social approval to create the forgotten man. Out of this human bondage came the spirit of hate, not the hate of revenge, but the hate of a system that numbered its paupers in millions. Out of this unrest and spirit of "bossism" came the spirit of resentment, not a resentment akin to jealousy, but a resentment against a system where the mighty became mightier, the rich richer, at the expense of toiling millions who labored without reward save their daily bread.

In the clutches of this new slavery were millions of small investors and more millions who were looking toward life's rapidly drawing curtain with no hope for succor in their declining days. Added to this horde of depressed and oppressed society were owners of small farms, and though on their own, they have not had until recently a voice in the control of markets and market places.

The farm hand, the share-cropper, and the owner of the small farm is each coming into a new light, a new day and into a new society where human rights are recognized without the pull of power, stamp of prestige or ancestral certification.

Investors, large and small, are being freed from a financial non-control that once jeopardized their life savings.

The aged and infirm are being surrounded by protection that gladdens their hearts and anchors their hope in something more tangible than maudlin sympathy.

Other millions have found new hope, new courage and a quickened spirit sufficient to push them forward, hopefully, into an era of wider brotherhood and greater security because of the kindling of new hopes in the human heart, of new fires on hearthstones of American homes.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The announcement of the State Liquor Board putting a ban on the sale of wine and beer on Sunday has provoked a strong objection on the part of some of the daily newspapers in Virginia. The contention of the newspapers is: that the people should have the right to buy wine and beer on Sunday, if they wish to do so; and that if the legal sale of these drinks is prohibited, the blind tiger will take over this Sunday business. In other words public opinion should be the determining factor.

What is public opinion? What agency is a fair representative of public opinion? How far can the state go safely in permitting people to have what they want and do as they please? If a majority of people in a community agree upon some objective, is that the voice of public opinion? If public opinion is to become the guide, in moral and civic matters, does lynching become justifiable when a majority of people in a community seek this method of punishment?

Public opinion is a variable quality. It shifts as rapidly as the wind and tide. Much of the stuff paraded as public opinion is formulated in committee rooms and sent out by private and public propagandists to create a favorable atmosphere for personal profit. Why are the wholesale and retail manufacturers of wine, beer and stronger alcoholic liquors, so much interested in temperance and so deeply aroused over the bootlegger and the blind tiger? Why are they so anxious to continue the legal sale of alcoholic drinks on Sunday? Sunday is the best day of the week to supply the tourists with drink. If every filling station throughout the state has the privilege of selling these beverages, it is reasonable to expect that the Sunday trade will be larger than any other day in the week. Sunday sales mean greater profits for the wholesalers and retailers. That is the motive and the chief reason for desiring to sell on Sunday.

The question of Sunday selling cannot be settled on the basis of public opinion. Local courts and local juries cannot take the place of the Word of God. Sunday observance, in recreation, in labor on farm and in factory, working in store or in office, must be determined by a law higher than any legislature and more fundamental than the opinion of any biased group of paid propagandists and self centered so-called business leaders. Where did the idea of rest on Sunday have its origin? Why did man begin to rest one day in seven? Who passed the first law against working on the Sabbath?

Sunday is the Lord's Day. He has given a specific commandment against working on the Sabbath. Call it narrowness if you please. Bring out the old hot adjectives in the dictionary and spread them over the preachers and church leaders who believe God is alive, and that the Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice. Let the guns belch forth a smoke screen and shoot the gas bombs all you please. An infant can destroy the morning sun as easily as all the hostile forces can destroy the law of God. Sunday was made for man. It was not made for business. It was not made for drunkenness. It was not made for intemperance. Man finds himself—and comes to his best—when he uses Sunday to worship and rest. If man must buy drink—there are six other days in the week for wine, beer and whiskey—if these drinks are to be sold. The liquor dealers will help their cause by standing for strict observance of Sunday as a day of rest. And the state will honor itself by seeking to require men in every walk of life to abstain from unnecessary labor.

I. W. JOHNSON.

REV. S. E. MADREN, PASTORATE, GOES OVER THE TOP.

Rev. S. E. Madren was born August 3, 1902, in Alamance County.

He graduated from Elon College in 1929. He was ordained to the gospel ministry by the North Carolina and Virginia Conference in 1929. His first pastorate was held under the auspices of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches at Fancy Gap, Carroll County, Virginia. He served this field for four and one half years. He was called to the pastorate of Liberty Church in Vance County in 1931. He served this church, together with other churches including Henderson Church, until this year when the Henderson Church went on full time. Mr. Madren's present field is Liberty Vance, Pope's Chapel, Mt. Carmel, Oak Level, and Mt. Gilead. Mr. Madren is one of our strongest ministers. He is doing a very splendid work, his people are fond of him, and his churches usually advance under his leadership.

At the annual session of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, definite steps were taken to see that the churches of that conference subscribed and paid their quotas to the campaign for $250,000 for the college. The quota for the conference was $20,522. This amount was apportioned to the churches on the basis of membership, value of church property, and the amount paid for all purposes in 1935-36. In the early spring, the Williams Company which was employed by the college to conduct the campaign, set up an organization for the Eastern Conference. Mr. Madren was one of the conference chairman. He did good work in co-operation with the Williams Company. However, very little was accomplished. In the reorganization for the campaign, Mr. Madren thought that it was best for someone else to act as conference chairman. Rev. J. Everette Neese was elected to this position. However, Mr. Madren volunteered his services to see that his churches raised the full quota assigned them as follows:

Liberty, $1,898; Pope's Chapel, $196; Oak Level, $353; Mt. Carmel, $231; Mt. Gilead, $195.

I had the privilege and pleasure of spending a part of two weeks with Mr. Madren in making his canvass in his churches. It was certainly a pleasure to work with him. He was full of faith and determination. Nothing seemed to disturb him or to shake his confidence in the success of the campaign. We went into practically every home represented in his five churches. Everywhere, we were received gladly and found a real interest in the church and in the college in particular. This was delightfully refreshing. Usually Mr. Ma-dren informed the prospect as to our business, the purpose of our visit, and what we would like for him to give. In very few instances did we find outright refusals. Occasionally, we found a member who was not willing to sign a pledge but who was willing to give. However, in every church, a sufficient number of definite and signed pledges were made to warrant the full quota as follows:

Liberty, $1,898; Pope's Chapel, $356; Oak Level, $444; Mt. Carmel, $242; Mt. Gilead, $252. Total amount raised, $3,192.

The total quota was $2,973, making $219 subscribed beyond the quota. This is a fine record, and Mr. Madren is to be congratulated. It is hoped that every other pastor will be encouraged by the successes in Mr. Madren's field.

It certainly was a pleasure to have the privilege of calling personally at the home of the membership of our people in the above churches, to meet the members themselves, and to talk with them about the program for the whole church and the college in particular.

It is my plan, with the cooperation of the pastors, to make the canvass in every church in the convention. This is a great undertaking and it will perhaps require two years, but I hope and pray that I may have the sympathetic and whole-hearted cooperation on the part of every pastor as I have found in working with Mr. Madren in his field.

THANKS FROM THE MOUNTAINS.

I want to express the appreciation of our mountain people to the following givers, making it possible for us to show them the Christmas cheer and joy. Each and every member of our Elk Spur, Rocky Ford and Ivy Hill Churches and Sunday Schools (Carroll County, Va.), received a treat and a present. The cash sent me was used to purchase the Christmas treat and needful things for our less fortunate members.

I am deeply grateful to the following contributors:

The Durham Christian Church and Sunday school, 3 boxes of presents and $3.75 in cash; The Carolina Christian Church, $8.71; The Carolina W. M. U., $2.25; The Men's Bible Class of Burlington Christian Church, $10.00; Hopedale Christian Church, $11.50; The O'Kelley Bible Class of the Greensboro Christian Church, $8.00; Mrs. Foster's Class of the Greensboro Church, 1 box of presents; The Neese Baraca Class of Reidsville Church, 30 lbs. candy; Southern Silk Mills, Kernersville, N. C., 1 bundle remnants; The First Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., 1 box presents and clothing; Rosemont Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., 1 box presents and clothing.

O. A. ELMORE.

EASTERN N. C. AND ELON COLLEGE.

We, of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, are in the midst of a campaign to assist in getting Elon College out of debt. It has seemed all the time that it would be a great undertaking. Now, that word "great" would not, in my own mind, mean that I felt that it could not be done. But, truly it is a great undertaking. Great in two ways. In the first, it will save the institution. And, the other is, it will get the college into the hearts of our people. It is apparent that the people know that the other departments of the church can not accomplish in their several fields without the college what they have and will accomplish with it. They are saying, "Surely we must save the college."

It is wonderful how the people are responding to the opportunity in this campaign. Practically every church where the campaign has been put on, has raised their quota, some have gone over. It will take a long time, at the present rate, to finish the work, but it is progressing in a fine way. President Smith is thoroughly enjoying the work and the people are meeting him happily. Let us hope that the churches will continue to respond and that the Eastern Conference will show to the others that it can be done. That is what Dr. L. E. Smith says: "It can be done!"

THE LENTEN SEASON.

All of us need to develop our own personal religion. No matter how effective we may think it is in our own life, still there are vast fields yet unexplored by us along this line. The Lenten period offers us an opportunity to deepen our own religious thinking and should result in a real consecration of our lives as Christians.

Some feel that they can best enter into the spirit of Lent by denying themselves something. There is only caution to be noted here—don't "give up" something which really means practically nothing in your life. Make it a real sacrifice on your part, or the meaning is spoiled.

Others feel that during Lenten season they can best get its full meaning by a period of daily devotions. If you do not already practice this, Lent is certainly a splendid time to begin. If you feel the need of guidance in your daily devotions, there are several pamphlets which may be secured to aid you. Don't let your meditation stop, however, by merely reading a few lines from a book. In order to get the full benefit of such a period, you must really enter into it yourself, and personalize it.

The Lenten period preceding Easter, should be a time for discovering and satisfying our personal religious needs. Let us each, in our own way, make some definite plans for carrying out this idea in our own idea in our own lives.

LENTEN SUGGESTIONS.

So many young people do not know the meaning of special terms used in connection with Lent, such as "Ash Friday." Most young people's groups could very profitably spend one meeting in learning about such Lenten terms. Your minister can give you help in planning this program. You will find "The Story of Holy Week" furnished by the Commission on Evangelism, 287 Fourth Ave., New York, for five cents, very helpful, too.

During Lent, you may have a series of discussion meetings, using "What It Means To Be a Christian" by Edward Bosworth, as a basis. This can be secured from Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon St., Boston, Mass., for twenty-five cents.

Religious drama always has a part in pre-Easter services. Suggestions are given in the Pilgrim Highroad for appropriate plays. In the February issue of the International Journal of Religious Education, there is a copy of a Lenten play of peace entitled "The Things That Are Caesar's" by Dorothy Clarke Wilson. The magazine may be secured for fifteen cents from 203 North Wabash Ave., Chicago, if no one in your community subscribes to it. "The Terrible Meek" (35c per copy) or "Dust of the Road" (50c per copy) are fine for play readings. They may be secured from Walter H. Baker Co., 178 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

A very helpful worship guide for young people is "Follow Me" published by the Westminster Press, 150 Fourth Ave., N., Nashville, Tennessee, for 10c. This is especially useful as a daily devotional guide.

FRIENDS.

(A CORRESPONDENCE.)

*Florida Sanitarium, Orlando, Florida,
February 13, 1937.*

Last Saturday afternoon while on a leisurely stroll along the shore of our placid sanitarium lake, here I was startled, and then more than delighted, to find myself confronted by a long time true friend, Brother J. M. Darden of Suffolk, Virginia. Learning that I was here, and had been advised not to talk above a whisper, he had driven over from Miami, 260 odd miles away, to pay me a friendly visit and see what is was all about. Fact is I can talk as distinctly as I ever could but my good physician here, and a throat specialist also whom he called in, advised that my vocal chords had been strained, and now to get to normal, they should have rest and relaxation from talking—'just a plain case of too much talk, so stop it.' Well. But back to my friend and his all too brief visit. He is himself quite unwell, though he says he is very much improved since coming to Florida in early January, and came over to see me, in the watchful and professional care of a nurse and a careful chauffeur. He must needs do me a special favor of friendship, as is his nature, and so stopped down town, went out to a lake to see if he could catch a bass or two for my delectation. A friendly boatman soon had him and his party in the midst of more thrills and excitement than was anticipated. His nurse, and others had to "pull in" his catch, sixteen large bass, ranging from three pounds to nine and three-quarters pounds each. Dr. W. W. Staley used to say that when you went fishing and afterwards said you had caught a fish weighing about nine pounds when in reality it possibly weighed only five, you had not told a falsehood, you were only trying to paint a picture of how you felt as you hooked and landed that fish. But Brother Darden to make sure had the largest one his party caught weighed and so he did not have to paint a picture. Well here comes my good friend radiant and happy with a real fish for me to have prepared and served for my supper here. Then it was to laugh! The cooks and physicians in this place of treatment and recovery neither prepare nor allow fish, flesh or fowl to be served or eaten here. Strictly vegetarian. Nothing on your table or to tempt your appetite that has had red corpuscles circulating through its system. So my dear friend goes to his hotel down town, has that fresh bass baked to the king's taste—and did we have a friendly hour together, he and his efficient nurse in great glee over their great catch, and this fine favor to me, I with pencil and pad, to keep up my side of the conversation, equally happy in recognition of favors, and marks of friendship that I never deserved. One of the most amazing, and ever increasing surprises of my life has been the marks and expressions of friendship which I could never explain, but of which I know full well I had never in the least deserved.

As the years accumulate to our account maybe one is more sensitive, as well as appreciative, to the expressions and gestures of friendship. One wonders if after all this is not the very best, and most delectable, of life—to find and to have friends we had never anticipated, and in no manner had ever deserved. And there are more friendly people in the world, and most of us have more real friends, than we suspect. There is no worse feeling, and none more depressing and heart breaking, than to feel that our friends have "turned their backs on us," and their faces from us. Wasn't it this that broke our Saviour's heart on the Cross—the feeling that His friends and those He loved had forsaken Him? And then in His hour of piercing pain and gloom, He looked for the face of the Father whom He had served with such singleness of devotion, and not finding that face of Love, cried out in His great grief and agony, "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" No wonder He gave up the ghost then and quickly breathed out His suffering—His last and His one best friend had seemingly forsaken Him. On the other hand there is no more bracing encouraging, heartening feeling, one that brings more real strength, joy, vim and life, than that of being assured that we have friends—real friends who share our misfortunes, and are blind to our weaknesses and our failures and our defects. Just to feel that somewhere there are friends who care!

The writer recalls reading, some years ago, a great book entitled, "The Making of an American." It was the autobiography of one whom President Theodore Roosevelt at the time said was the most useful and influential private citizen in our nation. Well that man, awhile after landing on our shores, decided he hadn't a friend on earth and went down to a convenient jumping-off place on a water front to end it all. Just before taking what he planned to be his fatal plunge, a lean, lank, hungry dog, his only companion, cast a longing eye, and rubbed his head in friendly token, against his master's leg. "Do you actually care for me, old pal?" and when I am gone, who will be your friend and companion?"

That token, and mark of concern for his master, saved his master's life—and gave to us and to the word, a truly great man.

These lines have led the writer on far beyond what he set out to write. Maybe our friends do that for us—lead us out and beyond ourselves to limits we had not anticipated. So many friendly letters have come from those who read Dr. Johnson's Suffolk Letter talking of his visited here—his friendly visit, God bless him and the other friends who came with him,—and that I was now on "a whispering diet"—so many letters have come, expressing concern for my condition and welfare that I am in high glee and my pen is beyond control. This "whispering diet" really means that my good physician wants me to give the other fellow a chance to get in his word now—as I have already afflicted by friends and audiences—and readers, with too much talk on friends, and when you catch up with the amount of it I have done, maybe I can and will then come back to you with rested and retired vocal chords.

J. O. ATKINSON.

FIRST THERE IS GOD!

The spiritual strength and life of a church are marked and measured by its zeal for missions. In other enterprises, we put God first. For it is only because of the love of God, and in obedience to the command of His Son, that we have missions, give to missions, carry on missions. Not man first, or the love of man, but God first, and the love of God—there is your foundation, and dynamic, of missions. The opening paragraph in The Missionary Review of the World for February, reads:

"The reason for Christian missions and all the abiding results are due to the fact that God calls us into partnership with Him. Missionary enterprises are successful in proportion as they work in recognition of that partnership."

And then follows this statement:

"From January 6-8 some three hundred representatives of sixty-six boards and societies met at Asbury Park, N. J., to confer in the annual meeting of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America. The discussions and spirit gave one a sense of the depth and strength and spiritual vitality of the missionary movement in the United States and Canada. Though budgets may be low, a movement that holds the support in prayer and personnel of so large and widespread a group as that represented at the conference must play a great part in the life of the world.

Dr. Robert E. Speer, the chairman, is entering his last year of service as a mission board administrator. From his youth, for forty-five years, Dr. Speer has served the missionary movement and his keynote speech to this conference, of which he was one of the founders, summed up his penetrating judgment. He rebuked those who care only for the present and future, and the critics who think that a man is out of date because he is most deeply concerned with what happened in Judea and Galilee over nineteen hundred years ago. These things deal with the timeless and eternal. There are many things that change. Within the memory of living missionaries, a great Church has grown up Korea, built up through the years of national trial. At the end of fifty years of mission work there are more Christians in Korea than there were in all the Roman Empire at the end of the first Christian century. So the past fifty years have been a period of great change all over the world. But there is the changeless also. "First there is God," Dr. Speer said, and those words seem to stand out as the token and symbol of a Christian's whole life. That was the heart of the message to the conference and to men everywhere. First there is God. In the world around us we see going on a struggle between the forces of light and the forces of darkness. God is calling us to take our part in that struggle. This is a challenge to carry on the great work of Christ's Kingdom around the world.

The program of the conference was divided into two major topics: (1) Has progress been made in carrying into effect the Jerusalem program for rural missions such as to deserve the confidence of Christians deeply concerned about the world's economic, social and spiritual needs? (2) Does the foreign mission movement have an essential part in making real the ideal of a Christian world community? If so, how can this fact be made clear to the young men and women of the churches in North America?

There was a general feeling that we are entering into a period of renewed dedication to the Christian ideals of a world Christian community; this calls for new methods and should lead to new discoveries of the value of the Christian faith and the richness of God's provision."

Only the non-missionary churches, pastors and churches indifferent to missions are lagging or dying. The churches that put missions first are growing for the simple reason that they see and feel with the great and noble missionary enthusiast, Robert E. Speer, "First there is God." He is abiding. He stands unmoved, ready to go with the people and the church who put Him first and keep Him there.

TO THE WOMEN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches will be celebrated at a meeting to be held in the Suffolk Christian Church, May 13, 1937. The Silver Jubilee meeting will have two sessions, one beginning at 2:30 P. M. and one beginning at 7:30 P. M. A supper will be served at the church at a reasonable price for those attending both sessions.

The plan for raising a memorial fund by accepting silver offerings in each individual society at their regular monthly meeting during January, February, or March should be stressed. It was voted by the Conference that each adult member be asked to contribute not less than one silver dollar, each young person a half dollar, each member of Willing Worker groups a quarter of a dollar and each Cradle Roll baby a dime. All of these offerings were to be over their regular contributions to their societies.

At the meeting in Suffolk each church of the Convention, through the president of the local Missionary Society, will have the opportunity of presenting their Jubilee offering. A very impressive service will be arranged, and it is the hope of the officials who are planning this Jubilee Service that when the churches are called that someone will be there to represent them. Begin now to get some member of your organization to plan to be in Suffolk, May 13, 1937, at 2:30 P. M.

At a recent meeting of the Board of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches it was voted unanimously to use this fund raised at our Silver Jubilee as a memorial to the late Dr. W. W. Staley who started the woman's work twenty-five years ago. This does not mean a monument, but in some useful, practical way for some particular work, the same to be decided by a committee selected from the different conferences.

Further details concerning the meeting and program will be furnished THE CHRISTIAN SUN at intervals.

AMERICAN NEGROES OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS.

By MATTHEW J. W. WHITE, M. D.

My wife and I are the only representatives of the Congregational-Christian Churches of the Virgin Islands, now belonging to the United States. Our work is among the Negroes who form ninety per cent of the population and I am connected with the hospital in Christiansted, Island of St. Croix, make outside calls, and find the people very appreciative.

These islands—St. Croix, St. John, and St. Thomas—taken over by the United States from Denmark in 1917, were discovered by Columbus on his second voyage to the New World, and were settled by the English in 1600.

Later they were taken and retaken by the Dutch, French, Spanish and English, each invader driving away its predecessor.

The Danes found the Islands abandoned and uninhabited, settled here, established their State Church (Lutheran), formed the Danish West

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

'I HATE TO SAY NO.'

More than 900 young people in high school and college have just participated in a poll—the Allied Youth Alcohol Inquiry that has aroused great interest among youth leaders and adult counsellors.

Here are some of the revelations:

389 think drinking by young people has increased since repeal. 196 see no change, 92 think drinking has decreased.

324 of those replying admit that they themselves drink.

Nearly two-thirds of the replies indicate that there is no personal objection felt to youth's drinking.

The majority that replied seem to believe that beer is not intoxicating.

Only 137 would refrain from patronizing places of amusement where alcoholic drinks are sold or served.

586 oppose (for themselves at least) the signing of a total abstinence pledge.

In view of the foregoing, this is the surprise, the thrill, contained in the first 900 replies to the Allied Youth Alcohol Inquiry:

Half of these young people say they will join an organization that teaches the effects of alcohol!

The poll goes far to show:

Why young people drink today. "Social pressure" and "drinking by friends" were given as the major factor influencing young people to drink. "Hating to say 'No'" was the manner in which the same factor was commonly described.

Young people know less than many adults suppose concerning the real nature of beverage alcohol. Almost everyone who has seen these returns in the few days elapsing before they are published has commented on the poor understanding youth has of the potency of beer as an intoxicant. The Allied Youth promises you more beer articles—and urges you to see that the paper regularly reaches many scores and hundreds of high school and young people with whom you have standing and influence!

Few young people receive instruction on the effects of alcohol. 218 of the more than 900 stated that they receive such instruction. This gives added support to an article circulated in January by the National Conference of Jews and Christians news service, to the effect that in New York State "few schools are carrying out the program of instruction required by the Education Law."

These are young people's answers, briefly interpreted by Allied Youth Staff members, to a question that simmers down to: "Is there an alcohol problem among high school young people, which more adequate alcohol education will help to solve?" Not only has the Inquiry to date answered a firm "Yes" to this question, but the interest of 450 young people in 900 (approximately) in an unnamed, undescribed organization teaching the effects of alcohol to youth is particularly significant.

Those who replied to the questions are not Allied Youth members. They should be. As a direct result of these findings, in many schools the way will be opened that they will be.

Today's need in alcohol education, as revealed by this Inquiry and by many other evidences:

A program that substitutes wholesome recreational standards for the drinking situations that face students.

A plan integrated with classroom teaching that will direct student investigations, laboratory practice, and supplementary work in social studies.

A service designed to aid teachers and school officials in keeping abreast of new helps and methods in the field of alcohol education.

And this—is Allied Youth! It is built to order, to deal with the needs that this Inquiry shows and that the scores of school administrators clearly confirm through their reports and suggestions to our Executive Secretary.

REASONS FOR PRAYING.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR FEBRUARY 28, 1937.

SCRIPTURE—Matt. 26:41: Luke
18:1-8.

Daily Readings—

Monday—One reason for praying—Matt. 8:1-4.

Tuesday—Prayer of thankfulness—Psa. 103:1-13.

Wednesday—Prayer connects us with God—Eph. 2:18-22.

Thursday—Prayer brings light—Acts 1:12-26.

Friday—Prayer in great need—Acts 12:1-9.

Saturday—Prayer when in perplexity—Psa. 73:1-17.

Prayer is essential. Without it we cannot be Christians. Real prayer usually begins in a sense of gratitude. A person who truly prays, does not do so because he feels that he has to, but because his heart is full of gratitude for life and love.

Jesus gave us an example of a life of prayer. His recorded prayers are not long, but many were the times He went to the mountain to pray. He prayed all night before He chose His disciples. Jesus prayed in the desert when He needed strength. At the tomb He prayed for power. He prayed that Peter's faith would not fail. In the garden Jesus prayed for courage. On the cross He prayed for the forgiveness of His enemies. The reasons for which Jesus prayed should call us to an humble prayer life.

The Quiet Hour should be a part of each individual's daily life. If you have not done so already, go from this meeting with the determination to give God a few minutes each day. Talk to Him about your present personal problems as you would to a friend. God can understand.

A PRAYER PURPOSE.

The camel at the close of day
Kneels down upon the sandy plain
To have his burden lifted off,
And rest to gain.

Else how can'st thou tomorrow meet,
With all tomorrow's work to do,
If thou thy burden all the night
Dost carry through?

The camel kneels at the break of day
To have his guide replace his load,
Then rises up anew to take
The desert road.

For thou should'st kneel at morning dawn,
That God may give thee daily care,
Assured that he no load too great
Will make thee bear.

THE POWER OF JESUS OVER DEATH.

LESSON VIII—FEBRUARY 21, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: "I am the resurrection and the life."—John 11:25.

LESSON: John 11:1-12:11.

Lazarus was dead. There was no question about that. Indeed he had been dead for four days when Jesus finally arrived on the scene. To suggest as some skeptics do that he feigned death, or simply swooned, is to make hollow mockery out of one of the most impressive historical documents in the world. It needs to be repeated. Lazarus was dead.

And there was desolation and despair in the Bethany home, the home of Mary and Martha and Lazarus. The death angel casts a shadow over the home when he comes and takes away a loved one. While Lazarus was sick the two sisters instinctively had turned to Jesus and had sent for him. Jesus had been their guest in the home again and again and there was a strong, sweet tie of friendship between Him and them. Surely Jesus would come at once in response to their summons. But to their surprise and undoubtedly to their dismay the Master did not come. "He abode two days still in the same place where he was." It is an illustration of God's seeming delays. He does not always answer immediately. He cannot always give us immediately what we want. Sometimes He cannot give it to us at all. But He is never deaf to our sincere call, nor does He ever turn us away unanswered, although the answer does not always come in the way that we expect it. We must not mistake God's delays for indifference. Nor must we give up praying because we do not always get what we want when we want it.

Jesus frankly told His disciples that Lazarus was dead. He also told them that this seeming disaster was simply an opportunity to show forth the glory of God. Indeed every seeming disaster is just that. Our God is able to supply all our need according to His riches in glory by Jesus Christ, and as Christians, we are to glorify God when the way is dark and the going hard.

Although the Jews had lately sought to stone Jesus, He said, "Let us go into Judea again." Danger never turned Him aside from duty. And we have an interesting insight into the character of Thomas, the Doubter, too, for he said, "Let us go also, that we may die with him." Thomas had spunk even if he did not have faith. There was a blind loyalty that had a value.

The Master found confusion when He reached Bethany. Martha, true to her character, when she heard that He was coming, went forth to meet Him. And she greeted Him with what seems like a rebuke—she frankly said, "Lord, if thou hadst been here my brother had not died." But if it was a rebuke, it was tempered by a statement of faith—"But I know that even now, whatsoever thou askest of God, He will give it to thee." In reply to His statement, "Thy brother shall rise again," she replied that she knew he would rise at the general resurrection. And then Jesus uttered those immortal words that have been the source of inspiration and strength to men and women of all classes and creeds: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." Here is the answer to the age-old question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" Here is the guarantee of continued, conscious, personal existence. Here is the pledge of personal immortality—the sentence is full of personal pronouns. Death has no final power over those who believe in and live in Jesus Christ. He lives—that fact has been indisputably verified. And because He lives, we too shall live. Personally the writer of these notes believes that he shall find conscious, continued personal existence through Jesus Christ, who shall change the body which he now has and shall fashion it like unto his own glorious body according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself. That statement is made with all boldness and assurance, but it is made also in all humility—it is to come to pass through the grace of the Lord, Jesus Christ, who in His resurrection pledged us our resurrection.

In response to Martha's summons, Mary comes from her Bethany home where she had been surrounded by those who had come to comfort her. Like Martha, she too, suggests that if Jesus had come sooner her brother would not have died. There is a mixture of deep faith in her chiding remark.

We now see Jesus in one of the most appealing lights of his whole earthly ministry. When He saw the grief of the two sisters whom He held in such personal esteem and affection—the Word tells us that He loved them and Lazarus—and when He saw the general sorrow of the larger company, He was troubled in His own spirit. John puts a whole world of meaning into the two word—Jesus wept. Here is evidence that we have not a High Priest who cannot be touched by a feeling of our infirmities, but One who cares, One who has compassion, One who enters sympathetically into our experiences. We ought to remember this when we stand beside the open grave of our loved ones. If we have the eyes of faith we can see the Son of God Himself, sharing our grief and bearing our burden. Jesus nowhere showed His bigness or His divinity to better advantage than when He stood there and openly wept at the tomb of Lazarus.

"Take ye away the stone"—there is always the human and the divine element in the ministry of Jesus to human need. He could have exerted His power and pushed back the stone. But that was within the power of those folks present. God helps those who help themselves, and He cannot help folks much unless they are willing to help themselves. He will do for us what we cannot do for ourselves.

"Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me."—the note of gratitude was always dominant in Jesus' life. He would have it known too that the power was not of Himself, but of God. He wanted to use that power in such a way that men would believe that God had sent Him and thus glorify God Himself. We fail to receive many blessings because we are not grateful for the blessings we have received.

"Lazarus, come forth." In reply to the famous Robert Ingersoll's question as to why Jesus said, "Lazarus, come forth"—a question designed to confuse and make sport of His audience—an old saint of God quickly replied one night, "If my Lord had not said, 'Lazarus' He would have had the whole graveyard of Bethany coming out to Him." And Ingersoll himself said that it was the only time he had been nonplussed. It was the Master of Life calling an individual back to life, back to personal life. Jesus never thought of people in the mass.

"And he that was dead came forth." That is sober, historical fact. Jesus, because he was in perfect harmony with the Father's will utilized the power of God and demonstrated that life is ever master of death. What He did in time is indicative of what He is constantly doing. Thanks be unto God which giveth us the victory.

MONDAY.

THE KEY TO THE SITUATION.

"I will give unto thee the keys of heaven—Matt. 16:19.

Believing what Jesus said to Peter about his confession that he was the Christ the Son of the Living God, we are to believe that this is the key that opens the door to every spiritual achievement.

This proved to be true in the days of the apostles. Every where they went preaching Christ they found many closed doors. Nevertheless, everywhere they went doors opened to them and the church became a reality in spite of all oppositions. This has been true throughout the entire church history.

Besides this, the church has been given these keys of the kingdom of God, and everywhere this key has been used it has opened up a consciousness of the Living God, bestowed a supreme faith, and brought about peace, righteousness and good will.

Prayer—Dear Father, may nothing hinder or spoil this day for us. Thy key, the key of success and power, make Thou our triumph. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE NEW LIFE.

"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."—II Cor. 5:17.

The international Pacific Exposition which was held at San Diego in the years 1935 and 1936, was beautiful at night beyond comprehension. In the evening we have walked along the gray dim outlines of that vast park when suddenly light flooded it in every nook and corner pouring forth a radiance of exquisite color. An inner illumination had wrought a miracle of life and beauty.

When the spirit of Christ enters the human heart a like transformation takes place. All becomes glorious within and without. High and holy aspirations are born. Pure and lovely thoughts fill the life. Love crowds out selfishness, and joy and gladness floods the soul.

Prayer—Gracious Lord, help us to live today that our lives may be spotless, like as in a mirror perfectly reflecting the glory of the Lord. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

ART THOU INCLUDED?

Am I my brother's keeper?"—Gen. 4:9.

There is a song which says, "He included me. Blessed His name forever, He included me." Yet, however much He included me, I am not included unless the love of God dwells in my heart, and I fulfill my mission toward brother.

The world belongs to such folks as Abou Ben Adhem. We read of him as follows:

"And to the presence in the room he said:

'What writest thou?' The vision raised its head,

And with a look made of all sweet accord,

Answered, 'Then names of those who love the Lord.'

'And is mine one?' said Abou. Nay, not so,'

Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,

But cheerily still; and said, 'I pray thee then,

Write me as one who loves his fellow men.'

The angel wrote and vanished. The next night

It came again with a great awakening light,

And showed the names whom the love of God had blest,

And lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest!"

Prayer—We know the love of God does not dwell in him who does not love his brother. Grant unto us the gratuities of Thy grace and make us loving ministers of thine. Amen.

THURSDAY.

LIFE'S CHEAPEST QUESTION.

"In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these."—Matt. 25:40.

We are prone to conceal our personal affairs under the cloak of irresponsibility. Cain asked, "Am I my brother's keeper?" His satanic influence says, "Go away. What have we to do with thee?" We say, "Its none of my business." And yet we sit back in our comfortable chair and criticize the human race, and everything that the human race does. It is easy for us to tell others what is wrong.

But life does not ask: "What did you see wrong?" Life asks: "What did you do about it?" Armchair criticism is a cheap thing. We cannot run away from ourselves, nor can we run away from our responsibilities, nor can we run away from God.

Prayer—Our Father, keep us to serve Thee and our fellowman with our best every day. Amen.

FRIDAY.

ABOUT US OR ABOVE US?

"Seek those things which are above."—Col. 3:1.

Peter Forsythe said: "Unless there is within us that which is above us, we shall soon yield to that which is about us."

Lamentations said: "Lift up your hearts," and James said: "And he will lift you up." The world is never made better by those who are lost in the crowd, or who seem to melt away in their surroundings. It is made better only by those who have enough of the "above" in them to lift their surroundings. Such persons are radiantly different. Saints who wrangle, however ripe their vision, do not bring food to the hungry, nor clothing to the naked.

Prayer—Our Father, in these morning prayers, give us Thy manna that we may feed others. We come to the well to drink that we may pour out to the thirsty. Fill us we pray Thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE SPIRIT OF PROMISE.

"Ye were sealed with Thy Holy spirit of promise."—Eph. 1:3-14.

Of all the titles of the third Person of Trinity is any more blessed than this, "the Holy Spirit of Promise?" He is the Spirit of hope. He is the Spirit of the glorious future. He is the Spirit of sins blotted out, of strength renewed, of purity recovered. He is the Spirit of heaven's beauty and bliss, and of the certainty of eternal happiness.

The Holy Spirit may be ours—must be ours, if we are Christians. Therefore His promises are ours. There is not one of the joyful anticipations united with the Spirit of promise that are not united also with every true Christian.

How happy, then, is the Christian life! How free from all anxiety is the Christian, how confident of the coming days, the coming eons! There is no room for doubt or gloom or any misgiving where dwells the Holy Spirit of promise.

Prayer—Come, then and dwell with us, blessed Spirit of all good. We will cast out of our souls whatever hinders Thy coming. We will welcome Thee with rejoicing, and trust in Thy perpetual abiding.—Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

WHY CHRIST SUFFERED.

"... the fellowship of His suffering."—Phil. 3:10.

The suffering of our Savior was very real. It could not be otherwise in a world of sin, and pain. When He took on the form of sinful flesh he subjected himself to the necessity for suffering. His suffering reached its climax in the garden of Gethsemane. An agony beyond the agony of physical death touched him. It was about to kill him before his time, as it were. He suffered beyond all description. There had been nothing like it on earth before, and there has been nothing like it since. Heaven and earth came together in agony. The sins of all the sinners in the wide world, and for all time, were laid upon Him. He that knew no sin became sin for us.

Our minds cannot comprehend it. It is beyond us. Beware of the vanity of any man who says he understands it, or can explain it. But one thing we know: God loves us. God saw His children all going astray. They were His, in His own image they had been created, they were of His family and they were straying from Home! In each of them there was a heart-hunger for the eternal Home. There was the inner desire for goodness, and rightness, peace of mind and soul. Sin was swallowing them up and taking them away, farther and farther from home. It must be stopped. The heart of God cried out against it. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not also with Him freely give us all things?" Jesus has taught us that God is our Father. That God loves us as a father loves his children. Suppose a father saw a son standing in danger! Oh! what risk will not a true father or mother take for their child! I tell you, my friends, it was simply inevitable that God would stack up the cross somewhere on the road that leads to eternal destruction, to block it for all who would believe.

This Jesus understood. But in Gethsemane he was about to die. His "soul was exceeding sorrowful unto death." The issue there was inexpressibly great. The pain was past our comprehension. The price was unbearable. The cause was infinite.

A battle was on! Jesus prayed to win! When he saw that in the midst of the agony of that death battle great drops of blood were of themselves bursting from his veins as immense drops of sweat, "He offered up prayers with strong crying and tears unto Him that was able to save Him from death; and was heard." Jesus was praying that he might live to see the cross of Calvary! He did not want to come upon death in Gethsemane, which now, with the blood bursting from His face, from a before-Calvary death, in order that He might fulfill Calvary! Why do you not think Christ prayed as a coward would pray against the pain of being killed, do you? When untold millions have faced death unflinchingly. I confess all of this is beyond me, but it simply does not add up that Jesus, being the kind of a Man he was should have agonized as he did to miss the cross. No, he agonized under the weight of the sin of the world! And he prayed that he might have the privilege of overcoming sin, and conquering death, for every man.

So, on the cross when the soldiers came to complete their melancholy business of killing Him he had of himself already laid His own life down! Now listen at this: "As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the sheep. And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold (it was a world wide fold that Jesus laid down His life for): them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice: and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd. Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down and I have power to take it up again. This commandment have I received of my Father." There is on eof the most remarkable passages in the New Testament. A special arrangement had been made between the Father and the Son. It included Calvary. "I came to do the will of my Father which is in heaven." Jesus had been given power to lay His own life down, and power to take it up again. There was to be established a reconciliation, a redemption, a turning-back-home, for the straying ones of the family of God. And so that is what Jesus meant when he said on the cross: "It is finished," and it was his own prerogative to say: "Unto Thy hands I commend my spirit," and thus He, of Himself, laid down His face for the sheep. There had never been anything before like it. The centurion standing by seeing it with uninspired eyes was forced to say, "This truly was the Son of God!"

St. Paul saw in this strange business of suffering a fellowship! A fellowship between the Father and Son! By them something had been undertaken that would cost suffering untold! It had been done. It was finished. The plan of salvation had been perfected. Jesus could now take up his life again. Death and the grave could now be said to be conquered! By one who had lived in sinful flesh, but without sin, they had been overcome. The fellowship of suffering had been established in order that the power of the resurrection might follow: Phil. 3:10, "That I might know the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings."

Paul's prayer was that he might join that fellowship of suffering in helping to bring the fact of Jesus' death before the folks to whom he had been sent. Paul had been promised by the Christ that he would be shown how great things he must suffer! He had been offered a place in the fellowship of suffering. The cross had established the insignia of this fellowship. It brought the goodness of God, and the love of God to our very door! It taught the Christian follower of Christ a new meaning for suffering, introducing them to the divine fellowship of suffering. The church must not forget this. It must give this message to a needy world, fraught with pain, and sorrow, and suffering.

To the widow who wants her son to go to college and cannot see the way; to the young man with a will to work but without an opportunity; to the girl, who on account of her fine standards of right is left outside and thus feels a pain that is very real indeed; to the widowed mother whose only son for whom she works to keep in college is suddenly killed; to the poor blind old woman whose only son is desperately ill in a distant hospital; to the sick daughter whose mother is thought to be dying, or nearly so in a hospital nearby; to the wife whose police husband is shot on duty leaving her and her children helpless; to the old woman has lost all in the death of her husband, in the selling of her home, and the losing of her own health; to the young husband who misses the bridge; to the young woman driven from her parental roof; to the home broken by suicide; and to little children whose hope and happi-

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

ARLINE MORGAN.

Dear Friends:

Last week, we gave you a picture of the latest addition to the Orphanage family—a fine little boy. This week we wanted to give you one of our fine little girls. Arline Morgan. Arline is not a new addition. She has been with us for seven years. She is a little girl who wears a smile all the time and does her work well. She is sometimes called “Queen Victoria.” If she develops as beautifully in the the next few years as she has since she has been a member of the Orphanage family, she will be a real queen when she is grown.

It is no disgrace for a child to be reared in an orphanage, or a children’s home, as many of them are now called. The writer really likes the name, Children’s Home, better, because it is a real home for different children.

People give to support an orphanage because it touches the heart and brings a tender feeling down in our heart that no other gift brings. We know the money we give is to help some little dependent child and give it an opportunity to make a good citizen of this great country of ours.

In Memoriam

BALLARD.

Peggy Parker Ballard, daughter of Deacon and Mrs. Holland Ballard, was born July 15, 1928, and was killed in an automobile accident near her home in Holland on January 30, 1937. Her death left the entire community grief-stricken. The members of her class in the church and public attended in a body. Interment was in Holland Cemetery.

"We mourn the loss of our little friend and helper who has preceded us into the realm of immortality. Her talents, influence and life are not lost. They will find expression in our lives and that of her parents and to them we express our deepest sympathy and commend them to the care and comfort of Our Father."—from Holland Christian Church Bulletin for February 7, 1937.

AMERICAN NEGROES OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS.

Indian Company, and in the year 1671, brought slaves from Central Africa to work the farms of the Company settlers. By 1880 there were 31,000 slaves. They lived under very severe laws and there were frequent uprisings.

In 1847 laws were passed providing for the gradual emancipation of the slaves over a twelve-year period, but the following year there was a great insurrection and many of the mansions on the grand estates were burned down. To the influence of the missionary work among them for over a century is due to the fact that the slaves did not murder the white men then in their power. The Moravian Church had sent two missionaries here in 1732.

The Negroes here have not made as much progress in their two hundred and fifty years as those in the United States, but until recently, though there have been private schools for years, there have been no free schools for the masses. On St. Croix, we now have a high school and an industrial school with an agricultural experimental farm.

The Government has here a CCC camp, a WPA for roads, a Housing Division, Homesteads, a Government-controlled and financed company for the manufacture of rum, and a good medical work; a leper asylum, insane asylum, two hospitals with four American doctors, and a visiting nurse staff under an American nurse.

AFTER 50 YEARS.

In a rented house a young Japanese pastor gathered a group of girls. That was in 1886. It marked the beginning of education for women in the Matsuyama, Japan, area. This fall, 50 years later, the Orlinda Childs Pierce Memorial School, (Matsuyama Girl's School) celebrated half a hundred years of work. Two days of festivities, speeches, "old girl" gatherings with the Governor, the Education Department head and a galaxy of other notables present, gave proper recognition to this birthday party. A significant statement, mentioned by many but specifically expressed by a Japanese teacher, herself a graduate of the school, reminded all that the school must never lose sight of what has made it unique—namely the Christian spirit of service on which it was founded. Said she: "What shall it profit a school if it gain a whole world of educational honors, if it has more students than it can accommodate, and lose its soul, that spirit which has sustained it and carried it on through difficult days to the successful present."—From November Overseas News.

WITCHCRAFT STILL HOLDS.

Ndase, a graduate of Mt. Silinda Institute, East Africa, married a Christian young man and founded a nice home. When pneumonia took the life of the young man, his pagan relatives accused Ndase of causing his death by witchcraft. They tried to take away all her possessions. Finally she took refuge with her small son in the home of Dr. William T. Lawrence where she is acting as cook.

ness are wrecked by the sins of their parents,—as a pastor within the past few weeks I have been called upon to enter the fellowship of suffering with them,—to all these the church must have a message. It must not forget the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ.

And finally should one feel security against any of the above possibilities of pain, and let his own soul weigh itself down to eternal death what profit would he have? The cross stands between that soul and death! When we realize this truth we can never cease thanking God for His "unspeakable gift!"

LOSING GOD UNAWARE.

"He knew not that Jehovah was departed from Him."—Judges 16:18-22.

The story of Sampson, that mighty warrior and strange judge of Israel, is full of instruction for us. The Delilahs of sin are round about us on every side, and we fall into their seductions all too readily. Their trap is sprung before we realize we are in it.

How shall we be sure that our God hasn't left us without our knowing it? How, unless we are constantly about the Lord's work with the Lord at our side? Had Sampson busied himself with his great task as leader of the nation, Delilah could not stolen his strength from him and Jehovah would not have departed from him.

God will leave us unaware, if we are not constantly aware of His presence, consciously and well doing His will.

Prayer—So keep us gladly doing Thy work. May our hands be too full of labor to be busied with mischief. We cannot toil without Thee. Oh, remain ever at our side. Amen.

"Carelessness is more deadly than ignorance. Its results are seen everywhere and they are never good. Yet the careless seem to outnumber the careful."

Dwight L. Moody.

It is interesting and somewhat startling to realize that D. L. Moody, a Congregational layman, at one time a member of Mount Vernon Church in Boston, preached the gospel to more people than did any other man, minister, or layman, in the entire course of Christian history. This statement was made by Dr. John McDowell, a former Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., an early student at Mount Hermon, and a protege and close friend of the great evangelist, at the annual dinner of the Wesleyan Association in Boston.

It is the least aspect of the centenary of the birth of Dwight L. Moody, born February 5, 1837, that would consider the great evangelist in the light of numbers, statistics, or a comparison with other preachers. The significance of Moody lay deeper than that, or his life and career would never have made the profound impression that it made on people as widely divergent in their temperaments and beliefs as strict Fundamentalists on the one hand, and skeptics like the late Gamaliel Bradford on the other. Also, while Moody belonged chiefly to his own age, he was among the immortals. He was great as an evangelist in the same way that others have been great as artisans and artists, explorers, administrators, teachers, and prophets. His limitations were marked. He was neither scholar, critic, nor social prophet, and he bequeathed to the world an inspiring example and institutions rather than dominant leads and ideas to meet the new day. In a sense he is already remote from our own time, though the new day may find it necessary to recover, and apply in our day, as he did in his, much that Moody represented. His distinction was in the enthusiasm, energy, and administrative ability with which he put his native capacity for insight and expression into the service of a religion that other men professed without becoming deeply concerned about it. He was a product partly of the Bible and partly of the religious orthodoxy of his day. Seemingly uncritical and conforming almost to the point of literalism, he was actually far more critical and discriminating than he himself realized, inasmuch as it was the highest and best that he chose to stress in life and teaching, and the most questionable that he tacitly accepted or ignored. This aspect of Moody in contrast with his imitators and the narrow groups that have claimed him for their own can hardly be overestimated. The Biblical and orthodox environment of his time was in outward aspect, at least, harsh and narrow. It was dominated by literalistic theories and unyielding dogmas that in their very nature have had much to do with losses that have been inevitable in the movement toward larger freedom of thought and action. But Moody was neither harsh nor narrow. He believed in hell and damnation, but he preached heaven and salvation. His look was upward, and his reach was outward. The spirit of the man and his evangelism were symbolized in that one plaintive song which best typified his meetings—Sankey's beautiful song of "The Ninety-and-Nine," based on Jesus' Parable of the Lost Sheep. It lifted the Moody and Sankey evangelism in the largeness of its purpose and the emphasis upon God's grace to a plane far above the later evangelistic eras of corner-brightening and "glory for me."

The world has changed since Moody's day. We are in the midst of vast new deals and schemes of reform, we are in huge movements of propaganda against poverty and war. But the note of compassion is too often absent from our aims and counsils. Movements alone cannot destroy injustice and establish peace. A great compassion is the only ultimate solvent of human greed and strife, the only effectual barrier against the lust of wealth and power. Humanity will never find its salvation while it is careless of its straying and lost sheep. It is in the only ultimate concern for the welfare of every individual that social salvation can be achieved. This is no less the message of Jesus than a message for today from Moody and his era of evangelism.

The Future Life

By VICTOR HUGO.

"I feel in myself the future life. I am like a forest once cut down; the new shoots are stronger, and livelier than ever. I am rising, I know, toward the sky. The sunshine is on my head. The earth gives me its generous sap, but heaven lights me with the reflection of unknown worlds.

"You say the soul is nothing but the resultant of the bodily powers. Why, then, is my soul more luminous when by bodily powers begin to fail? Winter is on my head, but eternal spring is in my heart. I breathe at this hour the fragrance of the lilacs, the violets, and the roses, as at twenty years. The nearer I approach the end, the plainer I hear around me the immortal symphonies of the worlds which invite me. It is marvelous, yet simple. It is a fairy tale and it is history.

"For half a century I have been writing my thoughts in prose and in verse; history, philosophy, drama, romance, tradition, satire, ode and song. I have tried all. But I have not said the thousandth part of what is in me. When I go down to the grave, I can say like many others: 'I have finished my day's work.' But I cannot say I have finished my life. My day's work will begin again next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare. It closes on the twilight; it opens on the dawn."

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. O. D. Poythress of the South Norfolk Church says that his attendance is increasing, and reports receiving one member recently.

A note from Mrs. C. H. Rowland says that the first missionary society was organized January 24, 1912, instead of 1913 as it was printed in her recent article on the mission page.

Thanks to the Isle of Wight (Va.) Church for sending in a list of subscribers equal to ten percent of the church membership. This gives them a commission of twenty-five percent on all money collected. Congratulations!

The four churches in the Windsor (Virginia) pastorate are working to secure ten per cent of their membership as subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Here's hoping they succeed before the change in commission, which is to take place March 15th.

A unique feature of the celebration on February 14th by the Rosemont Church (Norfolk, Virginia) of the sixth anniversary of their building was the planting of a tree on the church-grounds as a memorial to Rev. J. N. Cutchins, who was a member of that church.

The Editor is enjoying a week in Richmond, Virginia, as a teacher in a Training School conducted by our church and the Disciples of Christ. Mr. J. T. Kernodle and Rev. J. E. McCauley have cordially opened their homes to him and are displaying the celebrated Southern hospitality.

Miss Lucy Eldredge, Secretary of Young People's Work, is spending some time with out churches in Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky, and Tennessee. She makes a real contribution to a conference of young people. Southerners remember her as the first Field Secretary of the Board of Christian Education.

The Board of Christian Education, 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, is eager to help the churches by lending books on church work and religious education, or by lending Easter materials, or in any other way. The Student Summer Service workers will soon be assigned for the coming summer. If you wish them, please write at once to the Board.

Rev. Milo J. Sweet, pastor of the United Congregational Church of Chattanooga, Tenn., is giving a series of Lenten sermons on "The Christ of Today," beginning February 14th and including March 28th. At the eleven o'clock services the topics are: "The Greater Man," "Road Mates," "The New Messenger and His Message," "Recharging the Soul," "The Crusade and the Conflict," "One Soul Against the World," "The Experience of Eternal Life."

Dr. James R. Clinton of Philadelphia is conducting a Preaching Mission in the South Norfolk Christian Church this week, much to the joy of that church, Rosemont and the First Church of Norfolk. Next week Dr. Clinton will be at Ocean View, and the week following he will be in Richmond. Next Sunday afternoon he will give his famous recital on "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush." All who can hear Dr. Clinton should certainly seek to do so, for he brings a very helpful Christian message.

On February 14th, the young peoples' societies of Winter Park sponsored the appearance of Rev. Henry A. Neipp who has spent nearly 40 years in Africa as a missionary. Many African curios were exhibited. Countess Alexandra Tolstoy appeared in the same church on Tuesday, February 16th, in a lecture on "Old and New Russia." She is the daughter of Count Leo Tolstoy, Russia's greatest literary genius. A week before Dr. Elias Potter Lyon gave a lecture on "Education and Public Health in Russia." Dr. Lyon is president of the Association of Medical American Colleges. Attendance at the church service on January 31st was 433.

Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, pastor of our Burlington (N. C.) Church makes excellent use of their weekly mimeographed Bulletin. In it is the detailed program of worship, including responsive readings, daily Scripture readings for the week, and announcements of work being done by the church. A recent issue announced a Boy and Girl Scout Vesper Service, Ladies Aid called and quarterly meetings, officers of local Youth Fellowship and speaker, offering for Elon College on February 28th, campaign of membership visitation by the members, gift of flowers and a flower-calendar, and several other things. Such bulletins are very helpful, and are not expensive. It is a good way to preserve the history of the church.

Rev. W. C. Carpenter, Brookville, Georgia, sends the following personal word:

"If the Lord wills that we live and serve this field until October, it will be ten years of service with the good people of this field. God bless them. I love them all. They have proven their friendship on occasions and ways too numerous to mention. I only regret that my service to them has not been commensurate to their devotion and service to me.

"Recently, I accepted the responsibility of pastoring a church on Sunday afternoons whose future looks dark. Even the leading constituents want to disband. I bid fair for much criticism, abuse, persecution. It calls for sacrifice and self-renunciation. It may finally mean a shameful failure, but one sweet privilege stands out. It furnishes me with a glorious opportunity to show my love for the Lord and His cause, that is not found in the other churches I serve. Brethren, pray that I may not fail Him in this test."

ABOUT THE GOSPEL AND THE BIBLE.

"That is a very extraordinary fact, that, in spite of all the attacks on religion, and what is worse, the indifference to it (it is much better to have it attacked than to have people not care), never, never in the history of the world did Jesus Christ, as a person, occupy the position he holds today. He is by far the most interesting personality that ever lived, not only to you and me who have lived with Him all our lives, but to many people who are not religious at all."

"If a vote were taken today, a secret ballot all over the world, on the question: Who is the most important person who ever lived on this planet? He would win that vote by a prodigious majority. If there could be found today a single word that He had uttered that is not yet printed, it would be first page news in every paper in the world, and in every town and village in the world, and in all nations and languages."

"I am certain of this: that all preaching in Christian churches should be about the Bible, and about the Gospel. I know of nothing more fatal to the success of the minister, or the success of the church, than to substitute collective effort in any field of economics, or any social reform for individual regeneration, for Bible preaching. It is absolutely fatal, and it has never worked, and never will work."

—William Lyon Phelps of Yale.

JIS' BLUE.

Jis' blue, God,
Jis' blue.

Ain't praying exactly jis' now,—
Tear blind, I guess,
Cain't see my way thru.

You know these things

I ast for so many times—

Maybe I hadn't orter repeated like the Pharisees do;

But I ain't stood in no market place,
It's jis' 'tween me and you.

And you said "ast,"

Somehow I ain't astin' now,

And I hardly know whut to do.

Hope jis' sorta left, but Faith's still here,—

Faith ain't gone, too . . .

I know how 'tis,—a thousand years

Is as a single day with you,

And I ain't meaning to tempt you with,

"If you be—"

And I ain't doubtin' you.

But I ain't prayin' tonight, God,—

Jis' blue.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

At the meeting of the Board of Publications at Elon last week it was decided by that Board to make certain changes concerning THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Since this must be passed by the Executive Committee of the Convention before it becomes official, it is not permissible to give the details in print at present. The plan contemplates a campaign for new subscriptions between March 15th and June 1st, at a special introductory price, and a flat rate of commission that is less than the present 25 per cent. This makes it important for those churches that wish to make as much as possible on their commissions to get busy and send in their list of subscriptions before the fifteenth of March. It is very important for the paper to go into our church homes and to be read by our people. Now is the time for the church leaders to render this service both to the paper and to the members and friends of the Church.

For the Busy Business Man!

Beware of the higher cost of the lower price.

Many men holding big positions created them.

The best pickers of men don't keep picking men.

A man isn't necessarily a failure because he has failed.

Poverty—Never to have a big thought, or a generous impulse.

If some people's conscience were their only guide, they would get lost.

Every man must do his own growing, no matter who his grandfather was.

If you have a good business, advertise and keep it; if you want good business, advertise and get it.

Each day, each week, each month, each year is a new chance given to us by God. A new chance, a new leaf, and a new life—this is the golden, the unspeakable gift which each new day offers to you.

I once advertised for a stenographer. Six applicants were interviewed. Two asked, "What are the hours?" Two, "What make typewriter do you use?" One asked, "How long a vacation do I get?" And the other one wanted a job. She got it.—John Mil-lar Wyatt.

What sweeter, richer, more enduring traits can we have than patience, courage, self-control, loyalty and faith? Look at these things. There could be no patience were there no hard things to endure, no courage without danger and the attacks of fear, no self-control without the surge of insistent desire, no loyalty without the temptation to betray, and no faith that is not the triumph over the appearance of evil.—Dr. Frank Crane.

A FENCE OF TRUST.

"Build a little fence of trust

Around today.

Fill the space with loving deeds,
And therein stay.

Look not through the spacious bars
Upon tomorrow;

God help thee bear what comes
Of joy or sorrow."

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

MINISTERS AND THEIR YOUNG PEOPLE.

It is generally conceded that a big part of the work of a minister is with and for his young people. Work with the adults is necessary for progress at the present, but the work with the young people is the only guarantee for the future of the Church.

This writer has been delighted to find that the church young people want and expect the cooperation of their ministers. Some of them may not tell their minister what they want because the minister seems to be a bit "foreign" or "high hat" and not quite approachable. But if the minister will meet them on the level and either listen, or ask a few questions and then listen, without feeling called upon to "preach back," he will soon learn that the youngsters want his help.

Some busy pastors may be surprised to learn that when the Youth Fellowships meet, they call the roll of ministers, or in some way recognize those that are present. Concerning the absent pastors, there is an eloquent silence, or else a very sincere regret that they are not present to share in the work which is being undertaken. This happened at the recent Fellowship meeting in Eastern Virginia when ten pastors were present and thirteen were absent. The young people were delighted that one minister who was sick remembered to send a message explaining his absence and canceling his order for supper.

Brother pastor, there may be some young person in your church who is eager to attend the Southeast Youth Fellowship meeting in Jacksonville on April 21st, and quite a number who want to attend the Elon Leadership Training School, June 21-26, but who cannot attend without your help. A bit of aid now in the days of dreams may make a great church worker in days of maturity. If you want to live in the next generation, inspire some young persons to undertake the work of the Christ, give them opportunities to share in the larger work of the Church and see that they come in contact with others who are now busy about the work of the Kingdom. This is a very important part of the many things that ministers must do in order to be called faithful by the good Master of us all. Whenever and wherever young people of our day meet in the name of the Lord, it is very important that ministers should come in from going up and down in the earth and meet there too. Otherwise, youth may become weary in well doing and go out to make "whoopie" while it is called today without regard for what may be tomorrow.

OUR JAIL POPULATION.

The University of Virginia News Letter dated February 1, 1937, gives information concerning the jail population of our country, and especially in Virginia. This is a problem which Christian citizens need to face and to seek some solution. Rather lengthy quotations are given because they appear important.

"Crime has become one of the leading industries of the United States. Available estimates indicate it is costing the country fifteen billion dollars annually. Over one million persons were committed to county and city jails in this country last year, or one of every 120 of the total population.

"In the Commonwealth of Virginia in the year ending June, 1936, 77,977 persons were incarcerated in the local jails, one in every thirty of the population, or at a rate of four times that of the United States. This figure was an increase of 3,378 over the previous year. The alarming nature of this increase is readily apparent when it is compared with the 17,978 committed to jail in 1911, the first year for which we have statistics. Perhaps this unprecedented growth appears even more significant when contrasted with the rise in total population from 2,061,612 in 1910 to 2,421,851 in 1930. Thus, we see an increase of 360,239 persons, or 17.5 per cent, in the State's population, while the increase in jail commitments was 31,677, or 176.2 per cent, during the same period. Even more striking is the 50 per cent increase since 1930, when the jails received only 49,655 prisoners.

"The huge total for 1936 was distributed as follows: counties, 35,566; cities, 38,081; and city farms, 4,340.

"Norfolk topped the cities in total commitments with 9,761, followed by Richmond with 4,764, and Danville with 4,676.

A total of 2,528 juveniles were committed to jail in the State during the year—13 less than last year. Of these 1,531 were white and 997 colored.

"Figures for the first three months of the fiscal year show commitments to jail of 7,727 in July, 8,390 in August, and 7,470 in September—a total of 23,587 for the quarter. If this rate of increase continues, Virginia will probably send to jail this year approximately 100,000 people.

"The figures under discussion relate solely to county and city jails and farms. The daily jail population of the State will average 3,200. If there be added to these the more than 4,000 confined in the State Penitentiary, State farms, and road camps, the youthful inmates of the four industrial schools for boys and girls, the children in city detention homes, and those in boarding homes under the supervision of the State Department of Public Welfare, the total number in some form of custodial care as of a given date will very closely approximate the 15,000 students in schools and colleges of the State."

SUGGESTED REMEDIES.

The News Letter points out some reasons why this jail population is so large but does not give what appears to this writer to be the fundamental thing for discussion. It may be easier for a judge to say "thirty days in jail" than for him to think of something else to do with a prisoner, but what we need to know is why the people do the things that call for punishment of any kind. It is the business of the Church to discover the real cause for crime and to seek to eliminate it.

Children who are trained in the Church are not so likely to become criminals as those who never get the message and meaning of Christianity. The fact that only about one-third of the population of Virginia is connected with the Church may be a very good explanation of why the crime rate is so high.

We are constantly told that poverty breeds crime, and statistics are abundant that show that out of our crowded and neglected districts come criminals. In one year more young people were arrested in one section of a fine Virginia city than there are young people in that community. The church can help to clear up neglected areas and see that poor people get their share of food, clothing, and shelter.

Some of us remember the fine promises of politicians, who favored the return of liquor as alcoholic beverages, saying that the way to empty the jails was to fill the country with legal liquors. Apparently, these politicians missed their guess, for statistics indicate that there is a tremendous increase of crime, and that the death rate from automobiles runs quite parallel with the increase of alcoholic beverages. These figures are not pleasant. They make one very unhappy, but unless we face them and try to correct the conditions the chances are that we will be unhappier still. Christian citizens must take their citizenship seriously and help to build better communities so that the population will be free and independent and not incarcerated in our jails.

F. C. L.

Face to face with the moral confusion of today, and confronted by the ethical uncertainties of the rising generation, what does the Church propose to do about it? It proposes first of all to explain to young people what makes right right and wrong wrong. When boys and girls understand that major moral verdicts are ultimately supported, not simply by a verse of the Bible, or the opinion of a few local elders, but by the sober record of some six thousand years of recorded human experience, they will show a new respect for those verdicts. It is important to tell boys and girls what humanity has learned about science and mathematics, it is equally important to tell boys and girls what humanity has learned about the probable consequences of different courses of action.

—James Gordon Gilkey.

THE GLORY OF THE CROSS.

By LOUISE I. HYDE.

"God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ," cried Paul.

The deepening of our spiritual life will come insofar as you and I echo that statement—as we build upon the cross of Jesus Christ and Him crucified and risen from the dead.

The cross has thrown its shadow across the world. Poets sing of it. Musicians make it the theme of their music. Beautiful writers weave their exquisite stories about it. Crusaders wore its sign in their conquests of the Holy Land. Through the Message men come into the Kingdom by thousands. What is its appeal? What is the magnetic drawing power of the cross? Why should "one of Europe's most brilliant men" have written those immortal words:

"In the Cross of Christ, I glory Towering o'er the wrecks of time!"

The glory of the cross lies in the fact that it is the cross of Christ.

"Where is our superiority when we look at the cross of Jesus."

Run through the Gospels and Acts, and they will suggest that the Cross of Christ is a Kingly cross—it's the cross of the King. The cross of Christ is a service cross—it's the cross of the servant. The cross of Christ is an humble cross—it's the cross of the Son of Man. The cross of Christ is a deified cross—it's the cross of the Son of God! The cross of Christ is a glorified cross—it's the cross of the risen "Lord of Glory."

The cross of Jesus is the cross of complete achievement. "Once in the history of the world have there rung from the lips of a soul facing death those immortal words, "It is finished."

The cross of Christ is a cross of redeeming power. Christ died for us. Because He died, we are free from sin. Because He rose again, we're free from the bondage of sin. The only thing there is for us to do is to come, just as we are—"without one plea."

The cross of Christ is the standing place of the disciple. John, in his Gospel, gives us these words, "There stood by the cross of Jesus." It's the only place where one may stand with safety. "All other ground is sinking sand." The cross of Jesus is the place of security. It's the place of universality. The place at the foot of the cross is narrow enough for one individual. It's broad enough for the world. It's the only place to stand.

Someone has said, "The place at the foot of the cross is the place for the sinner, the place for the sufferer, the place for the servant . . . the place for me." We might add one more word to that list—the place at the foot of the cross is the place for the witness. The Apostle Paul was a powerful witness. The secret of his power in witnessing was the uplifted cross. The cross towered above and overshadowed the life of Paul. The cross was the "power of God" in Paul's life. He preached it. He suffered for it. He gloried in it. The relation of the cross to Paul's success in the ministry recalls to us the words of Jesus, "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." Only as the cross of Christ is uplifted in our lives will we become "fishers of men." Only as its shadow falls across our lives will our lives count for Him.

Let us "hold fast" the "deep eternal things" of the cross—its witness to a Father, to a Heaven, to a life beyond, to a complete redemption. Let us place the cross of Jesus in the foreground of our lives. Let us pray for "a depth in us to correspond to the depth" of the cross. Let us rally again to its side, and let us say anew this day:

"I take, O Cross, thy shadow
As my abiding place.
I ask no other sunshine
Than the sunshine of His face.
Content to let the world go by,
To know no gain or loss,
My sinful self, my only shame—
My glory all the cross."

MORMONS CALL FOR SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

Has anything like this occurred in any Protestant denomination of America?

Six thousand Mormon youth gathered in a Sabbath observance assembly to launch a crusade for the recovery of the Sabbath! The leaders of the Mormon church are shocked at the widespread desecration of the Sabbath and the growing spirit of lawlessness in America. This movement is the result. Fifteen states were represented by the delegates at the conference. The Mormons expect to push the crusade in all the states where they have considerable population. Their goal is—no sports on the Sabbath, no movies, no dancing, no feasting, no type of self-indulgence, no work that is not absolutely necessary. The meeting was called the Aronic Priesthood Sabbath Observance Assembly, and was held in the Mormon tabernacle. —from Presbyterian Banner.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Friday, February 19th, at 7.00 P. M., the Eastern Virginia Elon College Alumni Club met in the Hotel Elliott, Suffolk, Virginia, for the annual banquet. Dr. Darden W. Jones, retiring President of Franklin Virginia, presided. Mrs. Annie Calhoun is Secretary. Dr. J. E. Rawles of Suffolk was toastmaster. Several violin selections were rendered by Mrs. Milton Chalkley accompanied by Mrs. Margaret Corbitt Riddick. Vocal selections were rendered by Mrs. Claudia Jacobs and Mrs. Ethel Chapman, accompanied by Miss Virginia Jay.

Rev. F. C. Lester of Norfolk delivered the welcome address. Dr. N. G. Newman led the invocation. Impromptu talks were made by several members of the Club. The principal address of the evening was delivered by Dr. Leon Edgar Smith, President of Elon College.

The following officers were elected for the next two years: Rev. H. S. Hardecastle of Norfolk, Va., President; Mrs. J. C. West, Suffolk, Va., Vice-President; Mrs. Annie Staley Calhoun, Suffolk, Va., Secretary-Treasurer.

One hundred and fifteen attended the banquet this year. This Club—as its name indicates—was organized to cultivate good fellowship and renew the acquaintance of former Elon College students in this vicinity. It was not in the mind of the organizers of this Club to form a unit of an alumni association. It is separate and distinct from the Alumni Association. The Constitution provides that there shall be no annual dues and no appeals for money shall be made in connection with the annual banquet except the price of the banquet. The Club is not unmindful of the needs of Elon College. It is not lacking in loyalty to Alma Mater. But it was the opinion of the leaders in the first meetings that a better understanding and a spirit of good-will and good fellowship would naturally lead to contributions to the College on other occasions. The history of the Club has vindicated this opinion. The meetings of the Club has been well attended—very largely because of the understanding that no financial appeals would be made during the banquet.

There are some loyal friends of Elon College who think the Club should be more practical in its program. It appears to some that it is unfair to provide a banquet for ourselves when the College is in need. "Why not give the price of the banquet to the College and deny yourselves the privilege of a good dinner?" is a question sincerely asked by interested persons. If that theory should be carried to its logical conclusion all Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners would have to be abandoned by members of the churches. Why not reduce all meals to the minimum in cost and quality and give away the difference? Why not reduce all personal living expenses—such as light, heat, home conveniences etc., to the minimum and give the difference to charity? Why not reduce the equipment of our Colleges and take the students back to log fires, kerosene lamps, etc.?

In answer to such questions, this writer believes that a reasonable righteous banquet is an asset and not a liability. A good meal and good fellowship can do much to create good plans and liberal loyalty. Banquets have their place. They serve a good purpose. Eating is a pleasure for people who are well and hungry. There is a time to eat. And there is a time to present an offering. A real offering requires careful thinking. A banquet table is not conducive to fertile mental activity of people who have a good appetite. Do not give up the banquet. And do not overlook the offering. But keep the two separate and distinct.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE APPEAL OF CHRISTIANITY.

As I sit on my porch this beautiful, quiet Sunday afternoon, I am thinking of the difference in the appeal that Christ used to secure followers to that of most ministers, and Christian leaders. Today we emphasize the comforts, benefits, blessings of various kinds that the Church has to offer. The minister is a respected gentleman who stands in a beautiful pulpit decorated with flowers and beautiful ornaments, great choirs, etc. He states in his message, appealing for converts, that it is the best policy, etc. Many people are in the Church because of the added prestige that it gives their business. Christian people are more likely to have public sympathy when trouble comes. The modern church has most every thing in its power. Yet we often resort to worldly attractions to influence the world to come in. I have just read in a church paper the announcement of a religious conference urging attendance upon such arguments as "The beautiful new swimming pool is proving to be a great asset." In other words, you need not go to the world any more for entertainment, amusement, recreation, pleasure, etc. The Church is now offering all these to you free of charge. Can this be reconciled with the examples and teachings of Jesus? Generally speaking, we are Christians because of the things the Church blesses us with.

The early disciples were Christians in spite of the curses, discomforts and persecutions that came to them because they were members of the Church. Jesus said, "I send you as sheep among wolves"; "When they persecute you"; "If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household?"; "He that taketh not his cross is not worthy"; "Fear not them that kill the body." What is there about such statements as these to encourage one to follow Christ? Nothing. Why then did they follow him? There is only one answer—they loved Him! Paul said, "The love of Christ constraineth me." Do modern Christians love the gifts more than the giver? Would His appeal attract any followers today? The modern Church selects its leaders because of their ability, talent, influence, culture, training, etc. Jesus chose ignorant, poor, untalented, untrained, uninfluential fishermen, etc., for the fearful responsibility of ushering in His Kingdom. Would we risk so great a thing with such men? In short, is the modern church following Jesus? I sincerely fear that we are a long way from His original program. If we search the scripture thoroughly, we will find it hard to reconcile our modern program of frolics with its teaching.

I am not a critic, but I want to be sincere. Did Jesus ever sponsor any social entertainment? Very seldom did He ever attend such things. It may be all right for church folk to attend certain social functions, but are we not entirely out of place when we sponsor things, especially in the name of the Church, that are already more than provided for by the world? The Church's task is to give something that the world can't give. Instead we are shirking that fearful responsibility and playing with worldly things.

AND I PUT IT OFF.

A TRUE STORY.

It was last summer that we discovered the lovely silver-haired lady—last summer when we were hiking, looking for magnolia blossoms. Sitting erectly in an ancient, rusty Ford, she was busily sewing.

The old place was such a riot of magnolias, mimosas, and lovely old trees that I could not resist the temptation to look around. You could easily see that this had once been the cherished homestead of real people—although it had now fallen into such neglect and decay that it seemed as if the next strong wind must blow down all but the stout old rafters and beams of the house. And the children with me seemed to know the silver-haired old lady well, insisting that, “Oh, she won’t mind your looking around. We’ll introduce you.”

She was such a dear, valiant old lady, trying so hard in her erect, dignified way to cover up all the defects of clothes, house, half-wit bootlegging son and neglected relatives. She did, however, finally grow delightfully pithy about the relatives, who were always weighing “pros and cons” about the little piece of linoleum or old stove up in the attic which they might eventually decide to give her. Oh, you could easily tell that she had suffered all the pricks and hurts that a proud worth while spirit can feel when in need of help from selfish relatives who each feel that, “So-and-So should help her.” But as So-and-So” does not, the proud valiant spirit suffers in smiling silence until it is too late for any “So-and-So” to ever be bothered again.

Well, I was full of good resolutions. She and I had “cottoned” to each other then and there I was going back to see her soon—told her so. I fully meant to keep all of the beautiful resolutions, but—I put it off.

At first I put it off because I wished to get her some clothes; the poor dear soul had nothing but rags—and how lovely she would look in lavender or some soft color with that silvery hair. I fully meant to get her some sewing to do, too.

I did try—at first—to get her some clothes, an old stove of some sort (she was using an almost-gone, one burner oil stove to cook upon when she had anything to cook), and a few little things for the house. I know so many people that, although my pocketbook is almost chronically empty, I felt sure somebody would be glad to help me with the dear old lady.

But, I either found them coldly uninterested or putting it off. Gradually I, too, instead of returning with a word of good cheer, an old magazine, or a taste of something from my own table, found myself—putting it off.

Until, finally, Thanksgiving Day came. We had expected, in our Irishly, happy family to have potato soup for Thanksgiving dinner—and to be thankful for it and merry over it. We had, however, two grand roasting chickens sent to us from the country. And with an extra dollar scared up from somewhere for the trimmings for the dinner we were hilariously and selfishly happy over the whole affair (even over our inexperienced picking and dressing of the chickens.)

But, about dusk, just about an hour after our happy dinner my small son rushed breathlessly in to announce, “Oh, Mother, they found old Mrs. Manners dead on the railroad track this morning. And, Mother you did not go to see her?” And he began to cry—rough, tough, old boy that he is.

Well, I knew instantly what had happened—she could stand it no longer with no one to love and care for her, probably with no food or anything for which to be thankful. And this was her way of ending it all in this land of plenty for some, but in which charity is administered in such a way as to make even death preferable to the old and feeble who have no present nor any future.

Oh yes I meant to help her—But I put it off.

ELON DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

Since the last article concerning the Elon College Development Program in the Eastern North Carolina Conference, considerable work has been done in a number of places. The last report mentioned only two churches which had raised their entire quota; this report lists six additional ones. The writer is well pleased with the cooperation which he and the other workers are receiving from the churches and pastors of the Eastern N. C. Conference. As a unit, we all see now that “it can be done” (the conference quota can be reached). Most everyone with whom we have conversed feels as we do concerning the quota. They, almost, in one accord say, “It can be done.” Slowly, but surely, we are doing it.

The churches which have already reached their quota are as follows: Wake Chapel, Fuller’s Chapel, Pope’s Chapel, Oak Level, Mt. Carmel, Mt. Gilead, Henderson, and Liberty.

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

BROUGHT OUT TO BRING IN.

(A CORRESPONDENCE.)

Florida Sanitarium, Orlando, Florida, February 21, 1937.

The writer heard a very helpful and suggestive sermon this morning. The preacher's text was his topic, taken from Deuteronomy 5:23. "He brought us out, to bring us in." The original utterance was to Israel when Moses, in giving the Law, was impressing upon their minds and hearts that God had brought them out of Egypt and bondage in order to bring them into a land of liberty and plenty, provided they would obey the Law and keep the statutes of Jehovah. They had faced, and were yet to face, hardships, trials, tribulations, but the land and liberty into which they were being brought in were worth it all—and more. God brings us out in order to bring us in. It may be, and often is, by the wilderness way, the desolate and desert way, but if it's God hand that is leading us, we will yet come into the green pastures and beside the still waters.

Although the sermon was in the large Congregational-Christian Church of Winter Park, some two miles distant from this sanitarium, one could see how appropriate it all was to those who have been brought by the way of affliction and bodily ailment to the better land of privilege and opportunity. When we are strong and vigorous with vim and vigor, how easy indeed it is to be very, very busy with things which at the time seem so important, but which in solid reality, are worth so little to ourselves or any one else. God has to lay His hand on us and bring us out of ourselves and in to Him.

The world seems to be rushing on into all sorts of folly, sin, and selfishness. These things enslave us, make us bondsmen to the flesh, to temptation, to evils from which we find it hard to escape. God wants to bring us out in order to bring us in.

Communism, humanism, and other isms crowding in on us would have us leave God out, just get an economic scheme, or some benevolence movement that will give us creature-comforts and make good citizens out of us. Well the church does not exist for that. The Church exists to preach the Gospel of the Son of God, to exalt the Christ, to put God first and make Christ-like men and women of us. He is calling us out of all self and selfishness, all greed and idolatry to the worship and service of the living God.

Christ called the eleven disciples out from themselves and bade them go out and evangelize this whole world, turn the minds and hearts of all men everywhere unto Him, "And if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

The days in Florida are as nearly perfect now as one could wish. Spring has come out in her freshest and fairest costume. The atmosphere everywhere is laden with the fragrance of orange blossoms, fresh vegetables are growing and yielding to satisfy the taste of man, the flowers are blooming in bountiful blossom, the birds are singing their sweetest song as they court and woo their mates for the nests they are building, and—well, in the words of the preacher, God is bringing us out in order to bring us in.

Dr. G. O. Lankford of Elon College, was a recent visitor, also Dr. C. W. McPherson, Mrs. McPherson and party of Burlington—and how happy we were to see and greet them all. Some one once wrote a classic on "Ships That Pass in the Night." Some other body might well write a classic on "Friends That Pass in the Day"—especially when one is away from home and in a hospital.

If God can make a world as beautiful and bountiful and blessed as this, desecrated and abused and distorted as it is with the rebellion and wickedness of man, how beautiful, bountiful and blessed indeed must be that world of His own ordering where His redeemed do His will and sing praises to His name always. One presumes that the most beautiful and the best that this world has is but a poor shadow, a faint and imperfect hint, of that brighter and better land where no sin is, and no sickness and no death.

IN THE ISLANDS OF THE SEA.

Industrial training is most important in preparation for life today in the South Sea Islands, says Rev. Clarence F. McCall, who is heading up the Training School at Kusaie, Caroline Islands. The class room work, therefore, is being supplemented by gardening for the boys, weeding, weaving and good house-keeping for the girls. Mr. and Mrs. McCall and Miss Wilson are endeavoring to stimulate the cooperative spirit among pupils and parents. "We believe that the motive power that will make it possible for our students to study, work and cooperate is to be found in Christ whose religion is sufficient for the needs of this changing world," they say.

BEATING THE RED LIGHTS.

Wives and mothers in Japan today are alert to the need of making their homes places where husbands will want to stay and not seek out the gay cafe in which to entertain friends or find personal enjoyment as has been the custom. Says Mrs. William P. Woodard of Osaka, "These intelligent little women are dressing more carefully, no longer considering somber clothing a necessary characteristic of modesty, and are adorning kimonos with gay collars and belts." The struggle between the old and the new in Japan is very evident among the women where this generation and the one passing find it hard to see eye to eye. Here the Christian missionary has a very real opportunity to help in the blending process.

Joy does not happen. It is the inevitable result of certain lines followed and laws obeyed and so a matter of character.—Maltbie B. Babcock,

EXTRACTS FROM A MISSIONARY'S MAIL.

Mail from abroad comes about once a week. Frequently in each mail there are letters of interest from many parts of the world. Not a few ask information regarding the work. Some bring the cheering, helpful word that there are those who are praying for the work and for us.

A young Britisher, met aboard steamer on his way out to the Malay States, on the extreme southern end of Asia, where he is now working on a big rubber plantation, recalls with pleasure his fellowship with the missionaries, who sought to be of spiritual help to him during the voyage to those dark people just north of the equator, writes in a Christmas letter:

"This plantation of six thousand acres was first planted in rubber by Chinese twenty-five years ago. We are now already replacing some with new trees, better stock. I have been given a modern bungalow and a wide view, also a car for my use. Next year we are to manufacture our rubber by an entirely new process, shipping it in a semi-liquid state in steel drums to England and America. A German engineer is putting in the new plant . . . A surprisingly large proportion of the Malayan Chinese here are now Christians.

Our papers give obscure accounts of wars on the Manchukio and Mongolian borders. Let us hope that the Japanese and Chinese will come to some understanding without a real war. Malaya is open to both Chinese and Japanese. The latter are only small shopkeepers, while the Chinese have become bankers, miners, engineers and industrialists. So you see some of our country is not a jungle, such as seen from the decks of passing steamers . . . My sister was over in England from New York recently. Her eldest son has just been sent down from Harvard. His only fault was that he devoted too much time to athletics and too little to his studies. He has now attended the Olympic Games in Germany, so perhaps he will be taken back. A strange world this . . . Then what do you think of the abdication of our late King? It was really a rather sad affair, especially since the English people were ready to welcome an American queen; but not a divorcee of any nationality. The amazing thing is that the ex-king should have proposed taking a course which would have strained the loyalty to the thrones of every church-gover in the land, for the British attitude to divorce is still antagonistic. However, the new king George and his family are already extremely popular with the people, so it may all work out for the best in the end."

A daughter in college in America writing to her missionary parents on the special meetings held throughout the States by special speakers, says: "My words could not formulate anything adequate to express the wonderfulness of the meetings. I heard Dr. E. Stanley Jones speak three times, and I may truly say that he is the most impressive speaker I have heard because of the spirituality of his messages, and because of his absolutely intellectual and practical approach in the light of the present situation of our world today. He made everybody think. His mind and his reasoning are superb. But Dr. Jones was only one of the many with whom we are especially impressed. Miss Muriel Lester, the Jane Addams of London, was radiant as she talked so much of the need to 'practice the presence of God' through prayer and quiet times alone. Then she told how necessary it is for Christians to take a definite stand against war. Other speakers helped us to understand how unstable now is the family and how the situation can be helped" . . . From what we hear of these meetings throughout the country, they must have been a great blessing indeed. Surely none owe more to the gospel of our Lord than the American people. We rejoice to say that strong Christian leaders and speakers are developing among the Chinese. They certainly need prophets at this time.

A well-known American born in Russia, acquainted with affairs in Russia and the United States writes: "I was pleased to hear of the publication of my tract." Ten thousand of these booklets were printed with money furnished by an earnest Christian woman in New York who is much interested in mission work among the Russians. "May the Lord bless the ministry of this little booklet. It was written with a desire to encourage those who are passing through all kinds of tribulations and trials. Russians are among them in a special way . . . Have just arrived from a trip to the middle states. There is no question any more that communism is an American problem, and a very disturbing factor everywhere. The Gospel seems to be the only effective counteracting forces. No wonder it meets so much opposition from the communists."

Rev. and Mrs. J. V. Dawes, after many years of valuable service as Southern Baptist missionaries in Shantung Province, have had to leave the field on account of broken health and are now at 612 Ninth Ave., Honolulu, Hawaii, where they are seeking to gain their health. They are making gradual improvement, though Mrs. Dawes is still far from well. After the winter they go to California. In a letter just received Mr. Dawes says: "If you have never taken a coconut out of its outer hull, let me tell you that you have an experience ahead of you, for it is quite a job . . . In all this territory of Hawaii there are only two Baptist churches, one here in Honolulu with about seventy-five members, and one in a town thirty miles distant with eighteen enrolled. Baptists entered here late, and these churches have no buildings of their own, but the city church is self-supporting and sends five dollars every month to China for mission work. It has nearly a hundred dollars on a building fund . . . This is a real mission field. There are about 140,000 Japanese (100,000 are U. S. citizens), 27,000 Chinese, 40,000 Philipinos, 6,000 Koreans (not one a heathen), about 40,000 Portuguese (nearly all Catholics). The Japanese are largely Buddhists, with a good many temples here . . . Gipsy Smith, the great evangelist, is to begin a three weeks' meetings here Jan. 3. He is much needed for many of the churches (Congregational) are very modernistic. I am kept busy preaching and teaching the Word, but am glad to be so used as far as my strength will permit" . . . Mr. Dawes' help is mostly among the European population, though he preaches frequently to the Chinese in Honolulu. These fine people, the Dawses, deserve every consideration received of Southern Baptist. The wise provision made by the Foreign Mission Board through the Relief and Annuity Fund for their retirement and provision in old age assures a living for them and other such faithful missionaries.

SOUTHERN BAPTISTS SEND FIFTEEN MISSIONARIES.

Fifteen new missionaries have been appointed to serve in the foreign field under the auspices of the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention. Thirteen were assigned to China, one to Africa, and one to Brazil. A reduction in the mission debt during the past four years from $1,115,000 to $400,000 is also announced. During the past four years, eighty-three new missionaries have been appointed, twenty-eight others reappointed, making a total of 111 reinforcements.—from Missionary Review of the World.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

THANK YOU.

Many young people throughout the Southeast would like to express their thanks to Dorothy Truitt of Greensboro, North Carolina, for the material which she sent out for Inter-Racial Sunday. As the newly appointed Superintendent of Service, she sent this material to all Youth Fellowship Superintendents of Service, who in turn sent the valuable material on to their local churches.

It is in this way that the Southeast Youth Fellowship can do much for the local church. We hope that other superintendents will follow Dorothy's lead in securing and sending out material whenever possible.

FLORIDA CHAIN OF MISSIONS.

For the past several years, the Florida Chain of Missions has presented to the people of Florida, a group of Christian leaders of various denominations and nationalities. This group travels over the state holding discussion meeting, workers' conferences, and general assembly meetings. Representatives speak at civic clubs, schools, and churches.

This year Youth Assemblies were held in six cities in the state, in connection with the adult meetings. These youth meetings were planned by a local group of young people, who were given their choice of speakers. Each church and community organization was allotted a certain number of delegates, as the object was not a mass meeting but a leaders' conference. The delegates were between twenty and thirty years of age, the object being to interest that group of young people which so often drops out of church work.

The results of these Youth Assemblies were very encouraging. Young people were eager to come to the meetings and to take part in the discussions. It is hoped that they will be continued as a feature of the Florida Chain of Missions next year.

CENTRAL FLORIDA YOUTH ASSEMBLY.

The Youth Assembly for Central Florida was held at Rollins College, Winter Park, Florida. About one hundred young people were present at the sessions, which met all day Sunday. They represented Presbyterian, Baptist, Methodist, Episcopalian and Congregational-Christian Churches.

The sessions started with an address by Miss Muriel Lester, the great English leader along the lines of social service, peace, and personal religious living, who spoke in the Rollins Chapel. Following that came addresses by Herrick Young, missionary from Iran and world-famous economic authority, and by Mrs. E. Stanley Jones, famous wife of a famous husband.

The delegates ate dinner together at the Woman's Club, and enjoyed talking to these famous people in their "off the record" moments. Mrs. Induk Pak of Korea told about work in her land—she has made several trips to Florida and never fails to please her audience. Then Miss Saito, the "Japanese songbird," sang for the group. This famous coloratura soprano entertained us with songs in Japanese, Italian, and English—and with her very charming personality.

The remainder of the afternoon was spent in group sessions—one on Race Relations, one on Peace, and one on Our Changing Economic World. Here we discussed with these great leaders the problems in which we were most interested. It proved to be a thrilling experience for all who attended.

Wednesday—Following Christ's Faith in Friday—Following Christ's Unselfishness

—Rom. 15: 1-5.

Saturday—Following Christ's Forgiving
Spirit—Luke 23: 34.

Jesus gave His disciples the invitation, "Follow Me." They forsook their nets and followed the Master, not for money, fame, or pleasure, but for the joy of making life better. They did not lose their nets because they turned to Christ. They became better fishermen because they followed Jesus. They sought first the Kingdom of God.

When Andrew became a disciple, he found his brother, Simon Peter,

"and brought him to Jesus." "Follow Me" does not mean simply "being good." We must make an effort to lead others to Christ. If we have found the Messiah, we will be ready to introduce others to Him. I am sure no Christian is so selfish in life that he refuses to make his Christ known to someone who needs a Savior.

Once a person turns to follow Jesus, he turns his face to change the direction of humanity. No one can ever build a better world, one that is Christian, unless one has the inner riches of Christ in his own soul.

For Discussion—

1. Can one follow Jesus in part?
2. Does a person lose his freedom when he accepts Christ?
3. If I had followed "in His steps," would I have acted just as I did today?
4. What would I do tomorrow that I did not do today?
5. Is there an outward sign of an inward dedication of my life to Jesus?
6. Can a person "follow Christ" and not support missions?
7. Have church members in general changed enough in their lives?

"Living for Jesus a life that is true, Striving to please Him in all that I do,

Yielding allegiance, glad-hearted and free,

This is the pathway of blessing for me."

Suggested Hymns—

"Jesus Call Us," "I'll Go Where
You Want Me To Go," "Lead On,

Ways of Praying by Muriel Lester, price 20c. Order from Cokesbury Press, Nashville, Tennessee.

These are intimate little booklets which give a rare insight into the workings of the mind of Miss Lester, who really lives her religion. Quoting from the latter book—"Anyone can live the life of prayer. It is not long periods of quiet and leisure that are the great necessity of prayer; it is a habit, a humble spirit; a disciplined mind, a sense of order, self-control, an intelligent associating of ideas. And all these you can acquire while you dress, bathe, brush your hair, walk to work, or sit in the bus."

THE NEW COMMANDMENT.

LESSON IX—FEBRUARY 28, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; even as I have loved you; that ye also love one another.—John 13:34.

LESSON: John 12:12-13:38.

Jesus had made His triumphal entry into Jerusalem. He had publicly announced Himself as the Messiah. He had received the plaudits of the populace. He had set Himself to teach and to make the best use of the opportunity which the Passover Feast gave Him—the last opportunity He knew full well, that He would have to teach the people.

We Would See Jesus.

A group of Greeks had come up to the feast. They were probably proselytes, men of Greek culture who had accepted that Jewish faith. Thus they represented the best of contemporary civilization and culture. Greece stood for the best in culture and Israel stood for the best in religion. But there was an unsatisfied hunger in the hearts of those Greeks, a hunger which found expression in the words, "Sir, we would see Jesus." The best in ancient culture and religion cannot completely satisfy. Jesus alone can do that. Their words represented something more than mere curiosity; they represented the hunger of the heart for a fuller revelation and experience of God. And today, as then, men really would see Jesus. If only they could see through, or back of, the mechanics of religion to the dynamics! If only Christ could be made real to them. Christ needs not to be defended; He needs only to be incarnated and manifested.

That the Son of Man Should Be Glorified.

These Greeks were the forerunners of that great multitude which no man can number, that multitude of Gentiles who would find in Christ the satisfaction of their deepest needs. Jesus saw that and it made His heart glad. He has been glorified in His saving works amongst the Gentiles.

Losing Life to Find Life.

"Except a grain of wheat fall into the earth and die, it abideth by itself alone; but if it die, it beareth much fruit. He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." It is rather strange that we have never applied to things spiritual, the things which we accept in things natural, that we have not applied the natural law in the spiritual world. A man plants a grain of corn or wheat. But unless that grain of corn or wheat dies, unless it gives up its life, it cannot bring forth any grain. Life comes from life. It is only through the giving of life that we can have life. He who tries to save his life by that very act, loses it. By a strange paradox of life, life can be kept only as it is shared. One never finds real life until he gives himself to something outside of himself. The taunt of the critics while Jesus was on the cross, "He saved others, himself he cannot save" was literal truth, although not in the sense in which they thought. If Christ had saved Himself, He could not have saved us. Because He gave Himself for us, He really found His life.

If Any Man Serve Me!

"If any man serve me . . . where I am, there shall my servant be." Service for Christ means fellowship with Christ. He is the Companion of the way, the way of common, every-day, ordinary experiences of life. And if any man serve Him, "him will the Father honor." Men do not always appreciate their benefactors, nor reward their labors. But God honors the men who serve Him. Godliness has its own reward in the Father's approval here and hereafter.

Glorify Thy Name.

It was Jesus' earnest desire and prayer that in all things He might glorify His Heavenly Father. And at the end of His ministry, He could say, "I have glorified thy name." The Catechism is right when it says that the chief end of man is "to glorify God." Paul said, "Whatever ye do in word or deed, do all to the glory of God." and again he says, "Glorify God with your body and your spirit, which are God's." There are men who live and serve in such a way that they glorify God, they reflect honor upon Him, they reveal the beauty of His character.

A Voice From Heaven.

"There came, therefore, a voice from heaven saying, 'I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again.'" The ministry of Jesus thus far had glorified God. His passion and resurrection and ascension would still further glorify.

But there was confusion as to what really happened when the voice came from heaven. Some said that it thundered. Others said that an angel had spoken unto Him. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. There are those to whom all talk about religion is simply unintelligible. But to others God speaks in terms that they can understand. Jesus Himself laid a great deal of emphasis upon hearing. "Take heed how ye hear," He said on several occasions.

If I Be Lifted Up!

"And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto myself"—this He said signifying by what manner of death He should die. He knew they were going to crucify Him. But in the very act of lifting Him up, in putting Him upon the cross, they would be lifting Him up in a way that would draw all men unto Himself. The Cross of Christ is the Great and Eternal Magnet. That is God's last appeal unto men. God cannot say anything more than He said through the Cross of Christ. Nowhere else is there more power of appeal than in Christ's Cross, Divine Love suffering and giving Himself for the sins of the world.

When I survey the wondrous Cross

On which the Prince of Glory died,

My riches gain I count but loss,

And pour contempt on all my pride.

Were the whole realm of nature mine,

That were a present all too small,

Love so amazing, so divine,

Demands my soul, my life, my all.

A New Commandment.

"A new commandment, I give unto you, that ye love one another; even as I have loved you; that ye love one another." It was not exactly new for its general idea is revealed in Lev. 19:18 and Deut. 30:6. But Jesus gave it anew in the sense that He gave it a fresh meaning.

It was new in inspiration, because in Him they had seen a new revelation of love expressed in human relationships. "Even as I have loved you"—that is a big order; to love regardless of whether we are loved in return; to love whether folks are loveable or lovely. To go on loving even our enemies.

The Badge of Discipleship.

How shall we know who are really disciples of Jesus? He gives a practical test. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." True orthodoxy is not primarily a matter of creed, but of compassion, not of belief, but of behaviour, not of lips, but of life. Are you wearing the badge of discipleship? How conscientious is the badge of discipleship which you are wearing?

THE SECRET OF SOUL SAVING.

"And when they found him, they said unto him, all men seek for thee."
—Mk. 1-37.

Search indicates unsatisfied desire. Search for Jesus indicates unsatisfied desire for Jesus. Sin and its distressing affects often sends one in search for Jesus. However, every effort possible has been, and is being made to make sin so delightful that its distressing effects may be lost sight of, and, as Isaiah puts it, "Sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore, the hearts of the sons of men are fully set in them to do evil," Eccl. 8:11.

But salvation comes to most souls by the creation of desire within them for Jesus and His saving effects. We cannot and should not depend upon the effects of sin to turn man from destruction to the Lord. It is the business of every Christian as a witness of the Lord to create desire for the Lord in the hearts of them whom they lead to Christ. Essentially desire precedes action.

Prayer—O Lord, make Jesus the center of all our desires this day, and grant that all men everywhere may seek and find Him precious to their souls. Amen.

TUESDAY.

LIFE'S CONTENT FOR HAPPINESS.

"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee."—Isa. 26:3.

We are told of an instance of a young man who was disinherited because he embraced Christianity. Because of this and hoping to obtain happiness and contentment, he sells out. He took out of his life one word, and that word was "God." And then he discovered that instead of swapping God for happiness, as he thought, he had sold God for more misery and, like Judas, he went out into the darkest night he had ever known. He discovered that he had no substantial quality or content of happiness without God.

From the morning paper of today we read declarations of High School graduates asserting that "education will solve the problems of life." The fact is that it is the loss of God that explains the distress of the world. The world is not God-conscious, and all the education of the world will not save.

Prayer—O God, it alarms us to think of life without Thee. Forgive us of our sins and make us dependent upon Thee. In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

ARE WE NOT DWELLING
IN THE STARS?

"Though thou mount on high as the eagle, and though thy nest be set among the stars, I will bring thee down from thence, saith the Lord."
—Obadiah 1:3.

The prophet is discussing the perils of pride. No peril is greater. Prosperity makes us self-sufficient. This is because it shuts us off from instruction, from betterment and from pardon. Prosperity tells us that we do not need support, and pride tells us that we do not need a Saviour.

Let us come down from our nest in the stars before calamity comes and shakes us down.

Prayer—Dear Lord, how forbearing Thou art. Pardon our sins and show us our poor weak selves. In His name we ask it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

A MUCH NEEDED TRAIT.

"He entered into the synagogue and spake boldly . . . reasoning and persuading as to the things concerning the kingdom of God."—Acts 19:8.

Paul's boldness was the most conspicuous of his traits. He feared nothing. He said, "I can do all things through him which strengtheneth me." With that backing he went forward and no danger was terrible enough to cow his great spirit.

The world needs more of this type of Christian today. We are nothing beside Paul, but we have the same Christ that he had, and so we have the same strength and the same boldness. There is not a sin that we cannot conquer, nor an iniquity that we cannot banish, if we have to.

Prayer—Dear Father, we pray Thee to banish fear from our hearts and give us courage of our Christ. Make us strong in the fight against sin, and make us glad in all life's doings. This we ask for Jesus sake. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE TRUTH OF WORSHIP.

"God is a spirit and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and truth."—John 4:24.

We require pure foods for our tables and we will allow no substitutes; but when it comes to worship, we are not that way. True worship is the soul's reverence of God. Yet we are often contented with exterior things.

One has not gone to church unless his soul goes. One has not prayed unless his heart has been lifted up to God. One does not read with his eyes alone. A lover is not contented with words; the spirit of the two must meet. Shall we set a lower standard for our love of God.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray that our being may go out to Thee as well as Thy being goes out to us. May we meet in truth and be united with Thee forever. Amen.

SATURDAY.

MORDECAI AT THE GATE.

"Yet all these availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai, the Jew, sitting at the king's gate."—Esther 5:9-14.

Haman had riches and honor, wife and children and friends and the favor of the king; but all that was nothing in his wicked heart so long as Mordecai the Jew sat the king's gate and refused to rise and make obeisance as Haman approached.

Thus often it is with us. A trifling annoyance will counterbalance a world of blessings. Some wretched envy or jealousy will overcast a sky that sparkles with the sunshine.

Haman's heart came into its horrible condition through lack of love. He was all for self, nothing for others. Pride ruled his will. He left no room for God in his soul. No wonder he was hanged at last on the gallows he had built for another.

Prayer—Abolish in our minds, O God, all Haman thoughts of hatred. May we have good will for all men, and then shall we be men of Thy good will. For Christ's sake. Amen.

SUNDAY.

BAPTIZED IN THE SPIRIT.

"I baptized you in water; but he shall baptize you in the Holy Spirit."—Mark 1:1-8.

What a superb and inspiring revelation was this which was made to John the Baptist and through him to us! He had been taking men down to the Jordan and whelming them in the waters of the river for the washing away of their sins; now he saw a baptism infinitely more glorious which Christ would perform, a baptism in the Holy Spirit of the living God.

To be surrounded with God. To be interpenetrated with God. To be lifted, upheld by the gentle might of God's love! What conception is finer than this?

Prayer—Oh, to be taken by Thee, to be filled with Thee, to be purified by Thee, to feel Thy power beneath us and around us and above us, Holy Spirit of the living God! Amen.

AND WHEN THE DOORS WERE SHUT—CAME JESUS.

By REV. VICTOR B. CHICOINE.

"And when the doors were shut . . . came Jesus."—John 20:19.

Certainly in these days of scientific procedure any preacher would have a difficult time convincing most minds that a visible, wrath-like, or physical Jesus slid through the cracks and crevices of that barred door. For most people such a belief would be abhorrent. I cannot here take the position of literal interpretation. Yet I do take, unequivocally, the position that when the doors were shut Jesus did enter. And when Jesus entered that room He came with more power, and persuasiveness, into the lives of those men than He had ever done before! For now the cross had become a factor in the debate that raged about Jesus. And no one can debate very long with the cross! That is why He entered that night through barred doors. That is why there will never be barriers high enough, or deep enough to keep Him out.

Before Jesus went to the cross, many doors of joy had been shut upon Him. Our Lord was never to know the full happiness of home life. And the love of some little laddie, or bonnie lassie of His own was never to be His. The birds of the air, the hunted foxes had places of rest, but for Jesus there were few such retreats. He was denied the satisfaction of having all men heed his words. He was not to see His message of courage leap from heart to heart in the lives of the fear stricken multitudes about Him. The joy of discussing calmly, and without low passion and prejudice the pressing problems of the day with the rulers of the people, was prohibited to Him.

So He found joy in the children of others! He found gladness in staying with the truth, though He was often alone! He exulted in speaking for the unprivileged! He became buoyant when He was able to lead some men and women into the presence of God! "And when the doors were shut . . . came Jesus."

Jesus found joy in different ways than many do today. Hosts are seeking it directly, earnestly, seriously, but they never find it. It is always just ahead of them, or else some one came upon it just before they did. So many do not understand that joy is always close beside them, even as it was always close beside the Master.

II.

Then the doors of friendship were barred and doubled barred against Jesus with thick-crusted, ancient traditions, and sharp jealousies. He was barricaded from the so-called elite. We do see Him at a banquet or two of those whose names were in the social register. But undoubtedly He was there more as a curiosity, a sensation, the lion of the hour, than for any other reason. He was never heartily welcomed in all the homes of the "Who's Who" of that day. Covertly Jesus was an ostracized man!

Some have had the doors of friendship shut upon them because of their own base actions. But this was not true of Jesus. He could have had certain friendships for a price! These doors were shut upon Him because He would not truckle to the cheap demands of the hour! Yet He did enter into the vast and beautiful hall of friendship. Jesus turned to the despised publican, the sick, the poor, the humble, the bruised, the dying. Here doors of friendship were thrown wide open to Him. Jesus would gladly have entered other doors of friendship, but men would not permit Him. "And when the doors were shut . . . came Jesus."

Have the doors of friendship been shut upon you? Some years ago as an aftermath of the World War there were a number of epileptics in a certain hospital. They were forgotten and neglected. No one outside of the professional attendants knew much about them or cared. It was told me by one who saw them that these men, bored to desperation by their own uncongenial company, would sit in a large circle watching each other, and then wager on which would take the next fit.

A group of women discovering this terrible situation made it their task to enter that hospital, play the part of a friend, and change that condition. There are doors of friendship one can enter—if one wills to enter!

III.

The doors of opportunity to serve were shut upon Jesus. He did not come to seize something for himself—He came to contribute. Yet men dull and selfish, missed this point. Early in His ministry Jesus went to Jerusalem to celebrate the Feast of the Passover, and sometime during the ceremonies the ruling party became angry with Him. We read that in order to escape them: "He needs must go through Samaria." They succeeded in shutting that door. Later He was thrust from the synagogue. And another door was barred. One day towards evening, tired with the day's journey, He would have rested in a Samaritan village, but He was ordered to move on.

Yet there were to be doors opened which no man could shut upon Him. Nicodemus came upon Him in the dead of the night. Zacchaeus came to Him from a perch in a tree. A sick man, in defiance of customs, is lowered down to Him through the roof. They do force Jesus to go through Samaria, but there He meets the woman at the well, and to her Jesus imparts some of His choicest thoughts. "And when the doors were shut . . . came Jesus."

One thinks of Dwight L. Moody, a young convert, being denied a chance to teach a Sunday school class. He said: "Give me the room and I will get the boys!" They gave him the room never believing anything could happen. He went out upon the streets of the city and found the boys! One who thinks of the story of Michael Angelo carving a masterpiece from a discarded block of marble.

IV.

Once more our Lord is in Jerusalem. This time He is bound and guarded. The most depraved criminal never had a more secure watch placed over him. His foes now see that He has outwitted them at every point. But from now on there will be no more opportunities for this troublesome Galilean to mingle with the people! To make certain of the matter they will kill Him. Dead men enter no doors!

Poor, purblind creatures! There are doors—open wide—and Jesus will yet enter into the world! Over one of these are written the words: "He who would dwell in the hearts of people—enter this door of love and sacrifice." And Jesus entered that door, and walked to Calvary, and into the affections of the world for all time!

V.

Finally, not satisfied with His death on the cross, His enemies tried to seal Him in a tomb. They barred the door with lies, ignominy, and a great stone. They sealed it all with the great imperial Roman seal of empire against His possible emergence. Against the door they heaped high the disgrace of dying a felon. They placed on watch a trained, trusted, band

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The Board of Trustees of the Christian Orphanage met in its Regular Annual Meeting at the Christian Orphanage on February 17th. We regret very much that on account of sickness on the part of some of the members and some in Florida on Winter vacation, we did not have a full board present as we had hoped.

We did have enough present to transact business and we had a very pleasant meeting.

Our girls won two prizes. Madge Thompson entered a contest some time ago offered in the Screen Guide magazine to arrange pictures in the most artistic poses and won and received $5.00 in cash.

Arline Morgan entered a Shirley Temple contest in selecting the most artistic costume for a Shirley Temple doll. She won a pair of Shirley Temple slippers.

When prizes are offered our children go after them and in a number of cases bring home the "bacon."

Quite a number of our children work for high grades in school and their report cards show that they are going to win.

In looking over the grade cards for last month, I noticed one little boy had seven "As" on his card for the month. He is very fond of "As" and doesn't like "Bs."

I am happy that our graduating class, this spring, is making good grades and are not trying to get through by just making a passing grade.

Our larger girls, 14 to 17 years of age, are very short on Sunday dresses for Easter. The good women have been good to us in former years—I hope their interest has not abated.

HE STILL LIVES.

[A monthly talk in behalf of the orphanage before the Sunday School of the Christian Church, Burlington, N. C.]

Mr. Superintendent:

I wish to dedicate my remarks this morning to the memory of a man who was not a member of the Christian Church, but was one of the Christian Orphanage's most loyal friends and the second largest benefactor.

Several years ago, before the erection of the Baby Home, one pretty afternoon, Mr. Lawrence S. Holt, while out driving, drove through the grounds of the Orphanage. He met two little boys who tipped their caps and were very polite and courteous to a lonely old gentleman. One of these boys was probably Tommy An-

In Memoriam

WALTERS.

The Newport community, near Shenandoah, Va., was saddened when the death angel called at the home of Mr. and Mrs.
Thomas Walters and removed their small son, Leo William Walters, who was born
June 17, 1927, and died February 13, 1937.
This young man is survived by his father and mother, two brothers and two sisters.
Even though we cannot understand why God should remove one so young from our midst, yet may we be as David of old, "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me."

NICEWANDER.

Antioch Church, near Harrisonburg, Va., lost one of its best members when Mr. Jacob Franklin Nicewander departed from this world to the mansions which Christ has gone to prepare for his followers. Mr. Nicewander died February 15, 1937, after a long period of illness. During the latter part of his illness, he realized that his earthly life would not last much longer and he longed to go home to his Heavenly Father. Mr. Nice-wander was 67 years old and is survived by his wife, Mrs. Minnie Nicewander and five children: Moody, Floyd, Warren, Mildred Nicewander and Mrs. James Nutter, all of Harrisonburg and vicinity. May God bless those who mourn for their loved one.

draws, now a Federal engineer and stationed in the Panama Canal Zone.
Mt. Holt was so impressed with the courtesy and behavior of these two boys, that he went home and called Mr. Johnston over the telephone and by appointment, Mr. Johnston called on Mr. Holt at his home the following day. He asked Mr. Johnston many questions pertaining to the work of the institution, becoming greatly interested in Uncle Charlie's endeavors. When Mr. Johnston rose to leave, he was requested to wait a second, Mr. Holt going into the other room and returning in a few minutes with a check for $500.00, his first donation to the Orphanage. From then on, Mr. Holt became a great friend of this home for motherless and fatherless children.

A short time after Mr. Holt made this contribution, he called on my father, who was at that time chairman of the Board of Trustees, and asked him why the Orphanage did not buy the plot of ground adjoining the old building where the Baby Home now stands. He was told that the Orphanage did not have the funds to make such a purchase, that the institution had been terribly in debt, but that he was glad to say it was almost out of debt. Mr. Holt made my father, at the time, a proposition to purchase this land and give it to the Orphanage, provided it could be bought for a price not exceeding $2,- 500.00. Mr. R. J. Hall was selected to call on the property owner to make the deal for Mr. Holt. Mr. Hall was successful in purchasing this property for $1,760.00, for which Mr.
Holt gave his check. After this land had been purchased and cleaned up, it made a beautiful grove. Mr. Lawrence Holt suggested that the Orphanage build a building on that site and, as he put it, without any "ging-gerbread," but a good substantial building, and if such a building could be built adequate to the needs for $30,000 that he would give one-tenth of same. The building was built and his check for $3,000 was forthcoming.
He gave at Thanksgiving time not less than $100.

A few years ago when it was proposed that Burlington should erect a Community House, an office was set up at the expense of Mr. Holt and when this project failed, the furniture in that office, valued at $750.00, was given to the Orphanage. When Johnston Hall was built Mr. Holt was approached and that time he said no, but I am going to do something greater than give a small contribution for this institution. Our institution was included with the institution of his own church, with other benevolent purposes of his denomination and his beloved church, The Church of the Holy Comforter, from which endowment our institution received for several years $1,200.00 annually.

That was in prosperous years when the dollar value was higher than it is now. The endowment is perpetual and from now on we are to receive $900.00 annually.

When we, too, have passed to our reward, the works of this good man,
Mr. Lawrence S. Holt, will continue —though he be dead, he still gives to mankind and for the care of the homeless, fatherless and motherless boys and girls.

of Roman soldiers. It was done with satisfaction, smirks, and curses! But —"when the doors were shut . . .
came Jesus."

God made the earth to tremble a bit, just a tiny bit, and the stone rolled back. After a time men began to feel the shame of deserting Jesus.
And after a little more time God's love began to soften the hearts of men.
Then men began to look about them —even behind closed and bolted doors, and they saw at last that Jesus had entered in!

Our Lord discovered, that in spite of unfair opposition, hatred, death itself, there were ways of entering into the abundant life. We must allow no person to discourage us from also entering. And most of all we must not be discouraged by our own disheartening meditations! If we will enter into life—in the spirit of Jesus—we can! "And when the doors were shut . . . came Jesus."

GOD IS EVERYWHERE.

I cannot put His presence by, I meet Him everywhere,
I meet Him in the country town, the busy market-square;
The mansion and the tenement attest
His presence there.
He comes to break the barriers down, raised up by barren creeds;
About the globe from zone to zone like sunlight He proceeds;
He comes to give the world's starved heart the perfect love it needs;
The Christ, whose friends have played Him false, whom dogmas have belied,
Still speaking to the hearts of men—
thou shamed and crucified,
The Master of the centuries who will not be denied. —Anon

THE CREATION

(A Negro Sermon.)

And God stepped out on space,
And He looked around and said,
"I'm lonely—I'll make me a world."

And far as the eye of God could see Darkness covered everything,
Blacker than a hundred midnights
Down in a cypress swamp.
Then God smiled,

And the light broke,
And the darkness rolled up on one side,
And the light stood shining on the other,
And God said, "That's good!"

Then God reached out and took the light in His hands,
And God rolled the light around in His hands,
Until He made the sun;
And He set that sun a-blazing in the heavens.
And the light that was left from making the sun
God gathered up in a shining ball
And flung against the darkness,
Spangling the night with the moon and stars.
Then down between
The darkness and the light
He hurled the world;
And God said, "That's good!"

Then God Himself stepped down—
And the sun was on His right hand,
And the moon was on His left;
The stars were clustered about his head,
And the earth was under His feet.
And God walked, and where He trod
His footsteps hollowed the valleys out
And bulged the mountains up.

Then He stopped and looked and saw
That the earth was hot and barren.
So God stepped over to the edge of the world
And He spat out the seven seas;
He batted His eyes, and the lightnings flashed;
He clapped His hands, and the thunders rolled;
And the waters above the earth came down,
The cooling waters came down.

Then the green grass sprouted,
And the little flowers blossomed,
The pine-tree pointed his finger to the sky,
And the oak spread out his arms;

The lakes cuddled down in the hollows of the ground,
And the rivers ran down to the sea;
And God smiled again,
And the rainbow appeared,
And curled itself around His shoulder.

Then God raised His arm and He waved His hand
Over the sea and over the land,
And He said, "Bring forth! Bring forth!"
And quicker than God could drop His hand, Fishes and fowls
And beasts and birds
Swam the rivers and the seas,
Roamed the forests and the woods,
And split the air with their wings,
And God said, "That's good!"

Then God walked around
And God looked around
On all that He had made.
He looked at His sun,
And He looked at His moon,
And He looked at His little stars;
He looked on His world
With all its living things,
And God said, "I'm lonely still."

Then God sat down
On the side of a hill where He could think;
By a deep, wide river He sat down;
With His head in His hands,
God thought and thought,
Till He thought, "I'll make me a man!"

Up from the bed of the river
God scooped the clay;
And by the banks of the river
He kneeled Him down;
And there the Great God Almighty,
Who lit the sun and fixed it in the sky,
Who flung the stars to the most far corner of the night,
Who rounded the earth in the middle of His hand—
This Great God,
Like a mammy bending over her baby,
Kneeled down in the dust
Toiling over a lump of clay
Till he shaped it in His own image;
Then into it He blew the breath of life,
And man became a living soul.
Amen. Amen.

Evangelize

By CHARLES E. COWMAN.

Give us a watchword for the hour,
A thrilling word, a word of power,
A battle-cry, a flaming breath
That calls to conquest or to death.

A word to rouse the Church from rest,
To heed the Master's high behest.
The call is given: "Ye hosts arise
Our watchword is, Evangelize!"

The glad Evangel now proclaims,
Through all the earth, in Jesus' name
This word is ringing through the skies:
Evangelize! Evangelize!

To dying men, a fallen race,
Make known the gift of Gospel grace,
The world that now in darkness lies,
Evangelize! Evangelize!!

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

This week we are presenting letters and reports from some who are building for us by a thorough aid from our Mission Board. Their messages are heartening and encouraging.

One truly said of the church a long time ago "It is extension or extinction." The church must extend through its missionary efforts or it becomes extinct. God has so ordained it.

Quite a large amount of material sent in by the Mission Department had to be omitted this week due to lack of space. This is true of some other matter. The editor has been unwell for several days past, and the printer of THE SUN arranged the material to the best of his ability. Mr. Lester reports that though he missed his services Sunday, he thinks that he will "be all right in a few days."

The Templemen's Bible Class of Christian Temple will present in concert Friday, March 12, 1937, at 8:15 P. M., at the Norfolk City Auditorium, the "Hampton Institute Choir" of eighty mixed voices. Admission, 50c, and tickets can be secured from any member of the class or from the downtown headquarters, the Ackiss Brown Company, 438 Granby Street, Norfolk, Virginia.

It is doubtful if THE SUN has carried in many a week a more thrilling account of victory and achievement for God than that which is carried this week on page eight, "After Twenty-Six Years." It is not often that a real busy business man, turns aside from his daily occupation to win souls to Christ, by and through personal evangelism, and keeps books accurately and methodically in his work of soul winning as he does in his purely business affairs; nor is it often that, through one man's efforts, and he a busy layman, about an average of 2,000 converts to Christ are won each year for a period of twenty-six years. And after twenty-six years of this humble and faithful service, this layman is persuaded above all argument that the one need of the Church today is that of soul-winning for Christ by personal witness. If you don't read anything else in this week's issue, read "After Twenty-Six Years." It will be worth your while.

ELON COLLEGE OFFERING.

By action of the convention, Elon College shares in the conference apportionment in the amount of $12,000; that is, this is the amount asked for. Last year we received less than $6,000 and are required to pay out of this amount, $1,000 to the Board of Publications—$500 for 1936-37 and $500 retroactive for 1934-35, leaving us a net balance of less than $5,000 for the college. Offerings are to be received from the churches on this obligation during the months of January and February. As is to be expected, the weather is usually bad, many of our churches are in the country, and the attendance is very small.

The college period is over. We have remittances from very few churches. It is hoped that the churches have received the offering and that the same will be forwarded to the college at an early date. If the churches will cooperate fully and completely, we will be able to balance our budget this year, which will be quite an achievement and will mean much to us as we face the new year at the college. If the churches could realize what their full cooperation in this particular season would mean, there would be no hesitancy on the part of any. The institution was authorized by the Convention. It is our institution and deserves our support.

OUR MOUNTAIN MISSION WORK.

Our mountain work consists of three churches, Elk Spur, Rocky Ford and Ivy Hill, all in Carroll County, Virginia. The present condition of this work is in a high spiritual mood, the people are taking great interest in church work. Some have been hindered on account of bad weather, but the church services have been well attended; in fact, the church attendance is gradually increasing. We had one of the best days last Sunday (February 7th) that we have had for some time.

Sunday School attendance remained above the average for winter attendance.

We are in need of building repairs and are in need of a church building at Ivy Hill.

The work is making progress in all ways. We are reaching the unsaved and non-church goer and bringing them into the Kingdom. We are constantly adding new members to the Sunday Schools. The work offers to us a large number of people to reach and this is being done as the Lord permits.

We organized a church at Ivy Hill the past year. Ivy Hill is a primitive section, but we have won the favor and cooperation of the people. This work is slow but sure, and the Lord has blessed the work since we have been serving it.

The prospects of the mountain work cannot be expressed in words. So far, we have been able to reach people five miles from our churches, and they are now loyal and devoted members of our Sunday Schools and churches.

The most of our people have to walk to and from church, but when time comes for worship they are present unless providentially hindered.

We are now working toward a Woman's Missionary Society and a Young People's organization in each of our churches and hope to have such organizations by spring. We have the material for such organizations, with many more to win.

The hills of Virginia offer one of the greatest opportunities in the work of our Lord, and especially among the young people.

In my twelve years of past experience, I have never worked with a more interesting group of people than those in Carroll County, Virginia. Therefore, we covet the cooperation, support and prayers of all for the continuance of this great and much needed work.

O. A. ELMORE,
Pastor.

OUR LYNCHBURG CHURCH.

We do not have a large membership in our Lynchburg Church but we do have an interested and cooperative group. Recently, following our regular offering, a special collection was taken for flood sufferers and our people responded most liberally. This week our city churches are conducting a Standard Leadership Training School, and twelve of our teachers and members are enrolled in this school.

At our first quarterly business meeting, it was decided to change the name of our church from the United Christian to the Congregational Christian Church, in keeping with the merger of our two great churches. Our prayer meetings have been well attended with a total of 176 for eight meetings. We have discussed the following subjects in these meetings: "Does God Speak to People Today?", "How to Pray"; and we studied three of the great prophets of the Old Testament—Amos, Hosea, and Isaiah. Last week we observed the World Day of Prayer. A large number of children have been present for the mid-week services, and each time a children's story is told to interest them.

Our rolls were recently revised and we found that it was necessary to reduce our Sunday school from 169 to 99, and our church membership from 111 to 79, a good many of whom are children. The Newport News Church gave us 50 discarded "Christian Hymnals" which we are using for our morning services. We bought 27 new hymnals for our evening services which are held in the form of Vesper Services at 5 P. M. Our three Christian Endeavor societies hold their meetings immediately following the Vesper Services. Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Dunn have labored unceasingly for Christian Endeavor.

The Woman's Missionary Society is the most active organization in our church. Led by Mrs. S. R. Gay, the programs are unusually well planned and both men and women are members of this society. On January 21st, seven of their representatives attended the Mission Day Program held at Elon College. We also visited the Orphanage during the day. Plans are under way for a large delegation attending the Jubilee Meeting to be held in Suffolk, May 13th. Our Superintendent, Mr. J. W. Tolley, is leading a study lesson on the "Book of Genesis," and the pastor is teaching the book, "The Story of the American Negro."

About 150 persons attended our Annual Christmas Entertainment.

Our Ladies' Aid Society, knowing the need for communion cup receptacles and hymn book racks, gave a supper at which time they realized more than enough to buy these worthy and needed objects. They are being made, and we hope to have our church floors cleaned and waxed for our Easter Services. Plans are under way to lay a streamer in the church aisles.

The first Sunday in Lent, we observed the sacrament of the Holy Communion, and we are making a special effort to keep before the people, the true meaning of Lent. Headed by Mrs. W. W. Webb, we have been making an effort to secure ten per cent of our membership as subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and at this writing this goal has been reached.

Even though we are small in number, twenty per cent of our regular collections is divided between Elon College, the Orphanage, and Missions. I seriously doubt if there is a church in our denomination which is doing a better work than the consecrated and loyal people of our Lynchburg Church. The people have a mind to work.

J. HOWARD SMITH.

HELPING REBUILD SOME OF THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CHURCHES.

I have been in the field here four months. When I came, of the six churches I am now serving, only Dry Run and Mt. Olivet (R) were having any services, and these only once a month. Palmyra, Joppa, Beulah and St. Peters, the four smallest churches, were without a pastor. Beulah had been without a pastor for almost two years. There were only two of these churches with a missionary society—Dry Run and St. Peters. St. Peters society was inactive. The average attendance of Sunday School in all churches, 23. Joppa did not have a deacon in its organization. Beulah had only one deacon and he was bedridden, and still is. The church organization had no other officers except a secretary. Nearly all the members were attending services somewhere else or not at all. There was a rift among the members of St. Peters, no officers except a deacon and secretary and treasurer. Palmyra had only one active deacon, other officers had quit with exception of the secretary, treasurer, and Sunday School Superintendent. None of the churches had a board of trustees nor young people's societies. So much for status.

Now as to progress. We have been giving Dry Run and Mt. Olivet three services per month. Palmyra gets two. The rest get one each. We could give two more Sunday services each, to Beulah and Joppa, but other denominations use the buildings, except when I have a conflict with my other charges. The average attendance has risen from the 23 mentioned above, to 43 in Sunday School. The church average attendance is 48. We have organized one missionary society at Palmyra. We have preached 48 sermons, taught Sunday School classes, made pastoral visits, prayed with the sick, preached two funerals, held one revival, held four business meetings, administered communion at all churches, given one play at Mt. Olivet, attended Red Cross drive, and attended missionary meetings.

As to the prospects. The prospects are good. The work has run down for lack of service and it will take hard work to build it up again. This, of course, cannot be done in a few months. It may take a few years, or longer. It one does it in a life-time his life spent here will not be in vain. We want summer help here among the young people. I wish them at the weakest points. These need the most attention.

DISTRICT MISSIONARY RALLIES.

Time is drawing near for the District meetings of the Missionary societies of Eastern Virginia. Plans are being made for these Rally programs, and it is hoped that the attendance will be large. If we are to grow in interest and efficiency, it is necessary for us to attend meetings outside of those of our individual societies. By doing this, we share in a larger fellowship, we receive information and inspiration to better carry on the work of our society, and there comes to us a clearer vision of the bigness of our task.

The Silver Anniversary of our Missionary organization will be celebrated by a special Jubilee program in the Suffolk Christian Church on May 13th. The District meetings are emphasizing this celebration, and their interest and prayers are needed to help make May 13th the greatest event in our missionary history.

The Missionary enterprise is a getting as well as a giving one. It gives to us a consciousness of being a co-worker with Christ and develops in us a Christ-like attitude toward peoples and problems of the world. As the cause of missions grows, so will the cause of Righteousness and Peace. Let us help make it grow.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by, all.

THE PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

The purpose of this Church is to cultivate a spirit of union among the followers of our Lord Jesus Christ of every persuasion, and to secure, if possible as associate efforts of all true religious teachers in pointing the wicked to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world."

The peculiar doctrines and tenets which have confused and distracted the Christian world are remanded to private judgment, and hence cease to be matters for debate, only in so far as may be necessary to prevent a sectarian influence from entering into the Church.

This Church requires no compromise of faith on the part of any child of God in order to communion or fellowship; here, denominational distinctions cease to exist, and Christian love binds the brotherhood together.

The purpose of this Church will be consummated in the conversion of the world and the union of all Christians.

Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;

Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen.

—Matt. 28: 19, 20.

OUR MISSION PERIOD.

Several years ago the Southern Convention divided the church year into periods for the promotion of its enterprises. The churches have become somewhat accustomed to making special offerings at Thanksgiving for the Orphanage and at Easter for Missions. So long as the Convention was making its own program without much regard for the denominational program, this system worked quite well. Since the merger with Congregational churches, the plan causes a bit of confusion. It is to be hoped that our Congregational side of the family will be patient with the Christian Church group until we have learned to make the necessary adjustments, and that the Christian Church people will still be kindly towards our Congregational group if they become a bit restive because our Southern Convention plans do not gear into the denominational program as they might, and should. Patience is a virtue (which we do not like to cultivate), and is very important in church work. When we understand better we will probably be more able to correlate our programs and to work more harmoniously.

This word of explanation is given so those churches that have made their special offering for missions will not think that this paper is mistaken in calling for a special Easter offering, or that they are out of order if they do not respond to the call. The fact is that two plans are working in the territory covered by this paper. At present, there is no attempt to upset either plan. Local churches and pastors must know and work their own plan, and so promote the worldwide fellowship of our united Church.

OUR COMMISSION.

Apostolic succession does not mean the same to our Church that it does to our Catholic friends, but we do believe that the commission of Jesus to His disciples comes down to us. He sent them to win the world of their day; and he sends us to win the world of our day. They did their job well. What shall our record be?

The disciples were to go because they had received. The good Master had given them riches of heart which they were to share. Those who have received remission of sins, the joy of salvation, the fullness of life, and guidance into paths of service are to go to others with the message of what has come to them.

They are to teach. Education in religion is imperative. God gives the natural instincts which make our religion normal in human experience, but one must learn about religion just as one must learn about electricity or machinery. Knowledge of missions is gained by study in the same way one learns of science. A fervent appeal for missionary giving will never take the place of continuous, scientific study of the missionary enterprise. Liberal contributions usually come because of definite knowledge of religious values and human needs. The church at home must teach, and must learn. So must the people where the missionary work is being done. Teaching is one of the methods, in fact, almost the method of missionary work. The missionary teaches the non-Christian about Jesus and the Father, and about how to live. Some may call it evangelism, but even that is a teaching process. There must be a knowledge on which to base faith. The more sure the knowledge, the more successful growth of Christian experience.

The disciples were to baptize. This writer does not claim to understand all that baptism means, but he feels sure that two things are certain. Baptism is a symbol that the person has changed from the old way to the new way of life. It is a tie that binds one to God, the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. The process certainly is not enough for salvation, but there must be a saving influence about a ceremony that loudly proclaims that one has renounced the old life and from henceforth is to be a new creature because of the power of God.

OUR PROMISE.

The promise of the Master was that, if they would go to the ends of the earth making disciples for Him, He would be with them. The thing they wanted most was to be with Him. They had profited by His presence for three years. They were lost without Him after the crucifixion. They had gone with Him to the marketplace, to the seashore, and to the mountain resort, as well as to the temple and synagogue. They wanted to be near Him forever.

Mere physical death could not separate them. Only difference of purpose and activity could do that. The good Master was still going through the earth to seek and to save that which was lost. They could find Him there, He said. And they did. So do we. Those who busy themselves with winning the world, not just a little of it in the family or among friends, but all of the world, those are the ones who find the happy, helpful presence of the Divine Spirit that was in Jesus of Nazareth. In the unselfish task of teaching Jesus wherever man is found is our best chance for immortality that begins now because of association with the Master Himself.

F. C. L.

FUNDAMENTAL.

With this week, beginning March first, and ending with June, we have "Missionary Period" in all of our churches. It is a most fitting time and theme. It includes passion week, (the suffering and crucifixion), and Easter, the resurrection, of our Lord.

To herald Him, the Crucified One, and His resurrection from the dead, His power to forgive sin, save souls and conquer death—that is missions, and that is primarily and fundamentally what the Church is for. All else is incidental, and secondary to this and depends upon our faithfulness and loyalty to Him in giving His gospel to others.

Nothing should come in the way of this one supreme task of the Church, for these four months to come.

In this issue of THE SUN some of those who are building for us, at home and abroad, tell their story and reveal their difficulties and triumphs. We must seek to strengthen our weak and helpless churches and congregations, until they are strong and can help, and to enlarge and build new ones, if we are to have a membership and constituency to support the growing enterprises of the Church. By taking from missions, withholding from missions, we kill the goose that lays the golden egg. The enterprises and institutions of the church can only grow, be stable and secure, as the missionary zeal and evangelism of the church undergird and sustain them.

Only missionary churches build enterprises and institutions of the Kingdom that are prosperous and powerful in the essentials of life, character and salvation.

Herald to the world, may every pastor, and Superintendent, and teacher of religion, join during this missionary period, in heralding to the world the glad Evangel of our Lord, and seek to share that saving Evangel with others, even unto the uttermost parts.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY— SUFFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH IN RETROSPECT.

"On February 19, 1912, at 3:30 P. M., in the basement of the Christian Church, in Suffolk, Virginia, the following twenty-one ladies: Misses Ella and Effie Beale, Mrs. W. E. Brinkley, Mrs. A. B. Covington, Mrs. J. M. Darden, Mrs. W. H. Dick, Mrs. C. B. Duke, Mrs. A. T. Holland, Miss Mamie Holland, Mrs. Susie Holland, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Mrs. W. H. Jones, Jr., Mrs. W. E. McClenny, Miss Bessie Norfleet, A. S. Pierce, Mrs. Burwell Riddick, Jr., Mrs. C. A. Shoop, Mrs. O. S. Smith, Mrs. G. W. Truitt, Mrs. C. L. Williams, and the pastor, Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., met for the purpose of organizing a Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society. Mrs. W. H. Dick, who was authorized by the Conference Board to organize this society, presided, and Mrs. I. W. Johnson was made Secretary, pro tem. The society elected the following officers: President, Mrs. W. H. Dick; Vice-President, Mrs. Susie Holland; Secretary, Mrs. I. W. Johnson; Treasurer, Miss Bessie Norfleet; Superintendent Young People's Society, Miss Mamie Holland. It was decided that all persons joining this society within one week, be enrolled as charter members. (100 charter members were enrolled)." Thus reads a portion of the minutes of the meeting of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church. Dr. Staley, in reporting the organization of the society to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, said: "These are all capable women, fine Christian characters and interested in church work. The women of the congregation have responded to this movement more enthusiastically than to any other call in the history of this local church and the society starts with good prospects of success. I am expecting great things from this organization."

In speaking of the early organizations, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, who was the first active president of the Woman's Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, says: "It seems that the society here in our church (Greensboro, N. C.) was the first organized, January 28, 1912. The one in Franklin, Virginia, was organized on February 12, 1912, and yours, the Suffolk society, on February 19, 1912. If there were any, any earlier, I haven't the record of it. You organized with 100 charter members. I am sure that is a record no society has surpassed. Yours has been a wonderful society in many ways."

Colonel J. E. West's Sunday School Class had a missionary fund on hand, and from this fund, they donated $4.04 to buy the first two record books for this society, one for the secretary and one for the treasurer.

At its second meeting in March, 1912, the society voted to join in the Missionary Jubilee which was held in the Main Street Methodist Church. Mrs. W. S. Leake conducted a mission study class the week following the Jubilee. Twelve of our members took the course. Members of the society have studied missionary text-books, both Home and Foreign, for twenty-five years.

At the November, 1912 meeting, the society voted to take a membership in the Eastern Virginia Missionary Association. Dues for one membership through the years have amounted to $250.00.

The society celebrated its first anniversary on February 19, 1913, and as the years have passed each anniversary has been celebrated and a free-will offering taken for missions. Mrs. Warren H. Dennison attended the first anniversary service. She gave an interesting talk on Japan and showed many little gifts she had received from some of her personal friends who were missionaries to Japan. Mrs. Dennison's main objective was to help organize a Girls' Society. The society was organized with the following officers: Superintendent, Miss Mamie Holland; President, Miss Ethel Shoop; Vice-President, Miss Virgie Holland; Recording Secretary, Miss Phoebe Artman; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Mary Andrews; Treasurer, Miss Ruth Turner; Pianist, Miss Mamie Kelley.

At the May, 1913, meeting arrangements were made to defray the traveling expenses of a delegate from this society to attend the first Convention Woman's Missionary Meeting, held at Elon College, North Carolina. Miss Bessie Norfleet was elected a delegate from this society, and Miss Mamie Holland from the Girls' Society. (Miss Norfleet's hand-written report of that meeting is filed among the records of this society).

At the October, 1913 meeting, we voted to support two Sunday schools in Japan, at a cost of $50.00 per year. This we have continued to do for twenty-four years, and to this special foreign work the society has contributed $1,200.00. Many letters have been received from Dr. W. P. Minton, Rev. E. K. McCord and others, telling of the importance of the Sunday schools, and expressing their great appreciation for this contribution to the mission work in Japan.

In October, 1913, Mrs. Dick, our president, organized a Willing Workers Society, with Miss Bessie Norfleet, Superintendent; Lillian Everett, President; James Butler, Vice-President; Hazel Walters, Recording Secretary; Lottie Maie Cross, Treasurer; and Margaret Underwood, Pianist. This Willing Workers Society was sponsored by our society all through the years until our Sunday school became departmental in 1927, when its sponsorship was referred to the Junior Department Superintendent, Mrs. W. V. Leathers.

The first Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference met at Mt. Carmel Church, Isle of Wight County, in October, 1913. Delegates from this society to that conference were: Mrs. C. A. Shoop, Mrs. J. E. West and Mrs. C. B. Duke. Many other members attended this conference and increasing numbers have attended the conferences held in October of each year since that time. This society entertained the second and several other conference meetings, as well as Southern Christian Convention woman's meetings.

(To be continued next week.)

SUFFOLK LETTER.

South Norfolk Church was organized in 1914, under the leadership of Rev. Herbert Scholz. A frame building was erected in 1906 during the pastorate of Rev. J. O. Cox, at a cost of $3,000.00. Rev. Daniel A. Keys became pastor following the resignation of Rev. J. O. Cox. In the year 1912 the church had a membership of nearly one hundred. Rev. L. L. Lassiter succeeded Rev. Daniel A. Keys, as pastor, and a misunderstanding among the members almost wrecked the church. The church was without a pastor for nearly a year. Many of the members left the church during this period of inactivity, and the whole situation was discouraging.

As Chairman of the Committee on Home Missions Col. J. E. West, early in the year 1915, called a conference of a Committee representing the Church and Drs. C. H. Rowland, S. C. Harrell and the writer representing the Eastern Virginia Conference. As a result of this meeting the Committee on Home Missions was authorized to employ a pastor. Rev. O. D. Poythress, who, at that time was a Senior in Elon College, was called, and he accepted, entering upon his duties in October, 1915. Since that time Col. J. E. West, as Chairman of the Committee on Home Missions and the Mission Board of the Southern Convention, has manifested a keen and abiding interest in the development of that church. The church feels that it was largely due to his interest that the beautiful building was erected in 1925-26, at a cost of over $100,000.00. In 1929 the membership had increased to nearly 700. A debt of $59,000.00 was incurred in erecting the present building. The depression was a great blow to the church. But the debt was reduced from the above figure to $34,000.00 by 1930.

During this trying crisis the members have tried to be loyal and faithful to their church obligations. One of the creditors threatened to sell the church for settlement of the claim held by that Company. Col. J. E. West intervened and agreed to become the fiscal agent for the church. He succeeded in making a satisfactory arrangement with that Company and paid the outstanding interest to date, with a substantial reduction of the total amount of indebtedness. The indebtedness, at this time, is less than $24,000.00. The church now has a membership of nearly 500, a Sunday School enrollment of over 500, and an average attendance of 350 in the Sunday School. The church is meeting its current expenses and setting aside a sinking fund to provide for the payment of interest and curtailments of principal when due.

On account of the deep interest of Col. J. E. West in this church, at a Conference held on January 10, 1937, the following resolutions were adopted and forwarded to him, in appreciation of his service:

"Therefore be it resolved:

1. That, as per his request, we accept the resignation of Col. J. E. West as fiscal agent for the South Norfolk Christian Church.

2. That we assure him of our deep and abiding gratitude for his interest in the work of our beloved church.

3. That we pray God's richest blessings upon him in his own work, in his church, in Suffolk, as well as in his business; and that God may spare him many years to come, to continue to be a guiding spirit in the work of the great Congregational-Christian Church of which we are a part.

4. That we elect Col. J. E. West, as an honorary member of the South Norfolk Christian Church, and extend him a cordial invitation to visit the church whenever he sees fit, and to feel at liberty to participate in any and all of her services.

5. That we assure him that we will endeavor to keep the faith and strive to make South Norfolk Christian Church just such a church as will please our heavenly Father.

6. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Col. J. E. West, and a copy spread upon the Church records."

I. W. JOHNSON.

OFFICIALS OF THE CONVENTION MEET.

In compliance with the action of the Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches in its recent session at Burlington, N. C., the different Boards of the Convention met at Elon College, February 16 and 17. They were asked to meet in separate sessions to discuss their particular problems, and then to hold at least one joint session in which they would consider the interest of the whole Church as presented by the representatives of the several Boards.

At the joint meeting a representative of each Board presented a brief statement showing the present condition, plans and purposes of his Board. The writer spoke for Elon College as follows: Elon College has had its ups and downs, but it is in better condition now than at any time since I have been connected with the college. Our equipment is in good condition. We have made repairs on the buildings during the last five years at a cost of approximately $25,000. Our student body numbers 473, the regular session; 97 in summer session, making a total of 570. This is a record attendance. Our faculty has a higher scholastic rating than any faculty that the college has had in recent years. The financial condition of the college, though far from satisfactory, is greatly improved. The debt has been reduced from $753,000 to $154,474.39. We have raised to date on the campaign $21,635.49, with which we have paid the cost of the campaign to date $16,855.43, and $7,087.67 on the debt. From now on we will be reducing our debt as pledges to the campaign are paid and other pledges are made. Our current accounts are in fair condition. We have paid all current bills to date including faculty salaries. We will be able to pay eight months' faculty salaries out of the earnings of the school, which is 75 per cent of the cost of running the school. We are not permitted to use any earnings from the endowment funds for current purposes. It will be necessary to secure $14,000 from outside sources in order to balance our budget. If the churches will raise and pay to the college its part of the Conference apportionments during the spring and summer, we can balance our budget.

The campaign is progressing successfully. I have recently completed the campaign in six country churches, in every instance securing the quota or more than the quota in cash and subscriptions. Everywhere I have found sympathy and great interest in the college.

The Church is moving forward. Let no one discourage you. It is the one divine institution, and the forces of indifference and evil cannot defeat it.

L. E. SMITH.

THE WORK AT RICHMOND.

The work of our Richmond Church has its mountain peaks and its valleys. We have one of the most attractive and adequately equipped plants in our Southern Convention. This commodious building is due to three factors. First, the aid received from the Mission Board in the beginning of the church 17 years ago; Second, the generosity of the late P. J. Carlton, his brother, L. E. Carlton and family of Paces, Virginia; Third, the loyal, courageous and persistent efforts on the part of those devout members of the church who are still working in the church.

The dark side, or the valley experience, is when we take account of the whole and find that about one-third of the membership has been transferred to other places during the depression, or moved out of the community from force of circumstances. A number of these we do not hear from nor receive any aid. When we long for these, like the parent heart, it makes our souls sink within us, but when we compare this situation with other churches, we find we are as well off, or a little better, than some others.

Our mountain peaks are in the loyalty and devotion and contribution of those who are now interested in the progress of the church and the kingdom. Our regular attendance has been on the increase at our morning worship services since Conference despite the unusual amount of inclement weather. So far this winter, the attendance at Sunday School has held up better than it has for several years. The contributions are inspiring in general.

The young people's work is very encouraging. The Sunday night meetings are held at 7 o'clock in conjunction with the preaching services. A fine group of young people they are and such an encouragement to the pastor on Sunday morning for worship.

The church raised its full apportionment for Superannuation Christmas. It raised more for the Orphanage than it did for the preceding year. It has on hand a part of the amount for education and will get the most of that amount, if not all, during the year. We started on our Mission Offering six weeks before Easter Sunday. We use the Cent-a-Meal boxes in every home and ask for at least a penny per meal. The members gladly take the boxes and cooperate beautifully.

Since Conference, we have received four new members who will be of great value to us. We have several prospects. Some are from the Congregational fellowship. The spirit and fellowship in the church is very gratifying. The hope of continuous growth is encouraging. The privilege of serving such a people is glorious. A consciousness of the backing and help of the Mission Boards makes us take courage and press on. The church greatly appreciates the support it has received from the Mission Board and hopes to show that appreciation by building a strong church here so that it may in the future help to build others elsewhere.

THE WORK AT WINSTON-SALEM.

At the request of our Mission Secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, we are glad to report, in brief, concerning the status of the Winston-Salem Church and the work that is being done here. We have been on this field a little over ten months and have become fairly acquainted with the work, the city and the possibilities here. Substantial progress has been made, though it may not be strongly evident in a large increase in membership. Ten new members were added during the year 1936 and one since, in January. We have set as our goal, that no month shall pass by without showing some additions to the church membership. We hope to measure up to this. Two letters have been granted, thus leaving a present membership of 73. Our average attendance at the morning service for the ten months has been above 50, and at night about 25, not including from 12 to 15 young people who attend the Christian Endeavor society and glee club practice prior to the church service. Our Sunday School enrollment is 109 with an average attendance of about 70. The church and Sunday School are both efficiently organized and a splendid type of work is being done.

The harmony and good fellowship manifested in our group is a matter of frequent comment by those who attend services but are not members.

The financial pressure on the church has been greatly relieved by the payment of $400.00 last November on the loan due to the Extension Boards, thus reducing the loan to $2,240.00. This is payable in semi-annual installments of $112.00 each. We have a street assessment against the property of $1,006.00 which bears interest at 6 per cent. We are now in the process of raising $140.00 to make the annual payment of principal and interest.

All special days of the church year have been observed with appropriate services. A Daily Vacation Bible School was held last July with an enrollment of 46 and an average daily attendance of 34. Children came to this school for the first time who have been coming ever since. The church recently voted to hold another such school next summer, and to ask the Board for a Student Summer Service worker to assist. Emmanuel Hedgebeth of Holland, Virginia, was our helper last year. A week of evangelistic meetings was held in September, Rev. O. D. Poythress doing the preaching. One new member was added and the church was uplifted.

The church has an active Woman's Association of about 25 members, which holds regular monthly meetings. Their programs are missionary and they paid their apportionment in full last year and it has been increased for the coming year. This organization is faithfully back of the work here contributing $60.00 annually toward the church budget.

The church is always well represented at all our general conferences and conventions. We seek by this means to educate our people in the general church work. The pastor and three of our young people attended the Elon Training School last June. The young people are organized into a Christian Endeavor society of about 15 members. This society sponsors a glee club which meets weekly for practice. This glee club forms the choir for Sunday School and has been called upon a number of times to sing at various public meetings. Just recently, with the aid of the adult choir, they broadcast a musical program over Station WSJS with many favorable comments received from those who listened in.

We have full confidence in the future progress of this church. It is no rush job, but we hope to keep steadily climbing. It is no easy task. We have never found more to do in any of the larger churches we have served. May we appeal to the pastors of all our churches, who may have members moving to Winston-Salem, to keep us informed and we will gladly and immediately get in touch with them. We cherish your continued support and prayers.

W. M. JAY, Pastor.

TO THE WOMEN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

We believe the plans to make the Silver Anniversary materialize and live in the hearts of the Church, where home and foreign missionary work is organized, will need the strength of "Togetherness." Some things cannot be done by persons or churches acting individually. Our churches discovered that long ago and pooled their devotion and gifts.

The Dr. Staley Memorial will have a real meaning to each of us if we make it on a cooperative basis. It affords an instrument to the large number of societies and church members to do the thing they deem imperative in the life of our missionary endeavors.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

AFTER TWENTY-SIX YEARS.

(A Rich and Rare Experience.)

(Note: What is the greatest need, the one sore need of the Church today? My esteemed friend, himself a modest layman earnestly seeking to make the most of life, and do his best for God and humanity, has the deep conviction that personal evangelism, the individual testimony of a Christian to one who is not saved by grace, is the one supreme need of the Church today. This conviction has been growing in the mind and heart of Charles S. Bates for the past twenty-six years, during which time he has given daily of his toil, and generously of his earnings to this one ever increasing desire and passion for his Lord, and who now with his friend, John G. Talcott, is helping support on whole or part-time over 230 native evangelists in foreign lands. In conversation with my friend recently, when, I had requested to see the list of those won to Christ through efforts in personal evangelism during 1936, I put this question to him: "Mr. Bates, after twenty-six years of this belief and practice, and generous expenditure on your part, both of time, effort, and earnings, what now is your reaction to what you have done and are trying to do? Have your experience, observation, and conditions, modified, or deepened, your conviction?" After some deliberation, his reply was, "I will reply by reciting some actual facts which will the better answer your questions than a brief yea or nay." And here are the facts friend Bates recites and they are worthy your reading. J. O. A.)

"I was a delegate to our National Council of Congregational-Christian Churches at Holyoke, Mass, last year. It was there reported that in 1934, over 40 per cent of our churches did not have one convert during the year, with good church buildings, educated ministers, Sunday Schools, Christian Endeavor societies, Ladies' Aid societies, benevolent budgets, etc., etc., and not a single soul won to Christ.

"As I look at my books and my foreign Mission reports for 1934, I find 2,320 converts with an expense account of $11,125.00. (This budget does not include any compensation to our American Board Missionaries who supervise the native evangelists thus supported.) Now among the over 2,500 churches of ours that report no converts in 1934, there are probably individual churches whose budget equal the $11,125.00 budget mentioned above for my whole foreign work.

"Perhaps I should let my answer to your question rest here. Anyone reading this with any thoughtfulness will readily see that the results compel me to a belief through this 26 years experience, that this personal witnessing for Christ to individuals by individuals, stands out pre-eminently as Jesus' plan for making Himself known, and for building up the Kingdom of God on earth.

"I have been a regular attendant at Church for many years, have had over twenty years experience as Sunday School superintendent, thirty as deacon, etc., and am in full sympathy with every organization in the Church. Yet, I am fully persuaded that every minister who is too weak spiritually to carry on a prayer meeting, and cuts it out of his services, is doing an irreparable injury to the Church. He is eliminating the one and only service where Church members can hold a fellowship meeting of prayer, singing of Christian hymns, meditation, witnessing, and conversation, about the Word, and its blessed promises, so helpful, encouraging, and sustaining in our daily living.

"My answer must be that I am fully convinced by my experiences in foreign lands among those who worship idols and are the hardest to win, and the testimony of those who have been won for Christ in this way, that personal witnessing for Christ by word to individuals, is not only the most successful service in winning souls to Christ in foreign mission countries, but can be made so in our own country—if the churches would organize groups of Personal Witnesses, and make them witnesses in their city, or community, for Christ, this group to be led by the pastor, the members being those who care, who have had an experience of Christ, who believe Jesus meant what He said when He told His disciples, 'Go and make disciples and to be his witnesses.' 'With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.' Jesus tells every human being that his soul is of more value than all the world. And one can be saved only through 'faith and trust in Him'; not in riches, ambition, education, art, or sciences is salvation found, but in Jesus only.

"Every boy and girl as well as adult should be taught the vital importance to their welfare, both for time and eternity, of seeking the Kingdom of God and His righteousness first, so that the following years of life building will be secure and eternal foundations. 'Other foundations can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ.' Nothing should be taken for granted. Every parent, Sunday School teacher, Christian college president and professor in charge, should know by direct personal interview the facts. Jesus is the way to God, there is no other way, no substitute for Him.

"The native evangelists in lands across the seas, our personal witnesses for Christ by words to individuals in organized church groups, by the grace of God and inspiration and guidance of the Holy Spirit, are carrying the same Message of love and salvation to those whom Jesus came to seek and to save, in full assurance of doing His will, under the promise of His presence with power.

"In the light of this experience my conviction ever deepens that in addition to all organizations now in our Home churches, there must be a pastor-led group of Personal Witnesses for Christ by word to individuals that shall be in active service twelve months of the year. I have no hope of changing conditions in our churches for the better unless we do this. It is God's plan from the beginning, and it is His command also, and churches that are faithful and obedient in doing it, will and must prosper with an ever increasing membership and a deeper spiritual life."

IT IS SOMETHING.

David Livingston's enduring hardships for his Lord as few men ever did, sends this testimony ringing down the ages, "It is something to be a missionary. The morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy when they saw the field which the first missionary was to fill. The great and loving God, before Whom angels veil their faces, had an only Son, and He was sent to earth as a Missionary. It is something to be a follower, however feeble, in the wake of the Great Teacher and only Model Missionary that ever appeared among men, and now that He is Head over all things, King of kings and Lord of lords, what commission is equal to that which the missionary holds from Him? May I venture to invite young men of education, when laying down the plan of their lives, to take a glance at that of missionary? We will magnify the office: For my own part, I never cease to rejoice that God has appointed me to such an office."

“EVEN AS I HAVE LOVED YOU.”

This New Commandment impelled six students of Williams College to kneel in prayer around a haystack at Williamstown in 1806 and dedicate their lives to foreign missions. Four of these young men were soon commissioned as the first missionaries of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

For more than a century and a quarter, the American Board has been the channel through which over 4,500 missionaries have given their lives in foreign lands demonstrating the words of Jesus: “A new commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another.” Today 481 missionaries are representatives of the Congregational-Christian Churches in this great adventure.

Social application of the Gospel of Love is not a new trend for the American Board. It is the cardinal thread woven into the fabric of its historic ministry. When our first missionaries went to the Hawaiian Islands in 1819, the party included two ordained missionaries, two teachers, a physician, a printer, and a farmer, with instructions to conduct a comprehensive program of the Christian way of living.

In November, 1935, the China Medical Association commemorated the beginning of scientific medicine a century earlier, when the first physician, Peter Parker, from Framingham, Massachusetts, a missionary of the American Board, arrived in China. China's outstanding philosopher, Dr. Hu. Shih, credits the successive editions of the vernacular Bible with providing the stimulus for China's literary renaissance based on the current spoken language rather than the classical Wenli.

Today all over the map, cooperation is the aim of Christian service. Among the sixteen National Christian Councils, the Near East Council occupies a very important place, working in the Moslem world from Morocco to Syria, and from the Sudan to Bulgaria. The Near East Christian Council represents the cooperative approach of thirty-two mission boards and indigenous churches to the evangelization of the Near East. One of our experienced missionaries, Rev. H. H. Riggs of Beirut, Syria, has recently been appointed Executive Secretary of this Council.

A large proportion of India's Christians are outcasts who have found equality and opportunity for growth in the Christian Fellowship, yet fifty million men, women, and children are held in pitiful restraint as “Untouchables.” Leaders of the Depressed Classes have become convinced that the Hindu system itself pulls them down and have decided to leave Hinduism. Where will they go as pilgrims in their quest? Many of the outcasts are turning to the Christian Church for help.

The largest Congregational Church in the world is at Bailundo, West Africa, with a membership of over 11,000. It is not only self-supporting but self propagating. In the past twenty years, this church has grown from less than 1,000 members.

Our missionaries have one supreme calling: “We must live our message and our message is Jesus.”

OUR CONTINUING PURPOSE.

The American Board has weathered the past difficult years because of sacrificial giving and loyal devotion. More money is raised today on our mission fields for the support of schools, hospitals, and churches than is contributed by our Congregational and Christian Churches in America for this work. In many cases, work pioneered by the Board is not only self-supporting, but it is multiplied in effectiveness by the leadership of educated Nationals. Behind us is a panorama of remarkable achievements bearing witness of the transforming power of the Love of God as in Jesus Christ. What first was an adventure of love is today both sustained by our faith and corroborated by our experience.

To enrich the life of the world in all its areas with the love of Jesus.

To proclaim the unparalleled significance of Jesus and His spirit as the supreme factor in spiritual growth, both individual and social.

To hold a persistent desire to find, to understand and to strengthen those elements in the life of an individual or a nation which are in harmony with Jesus' thought of God and of life. Jesus came not to destroy, but to fulfill the spiritual inheritance of every individual and of every race.

To cooperate with national Christians in other lands in the spirit of love.

Love and faith must have implements through which to find expression. Our implements are churches, schools, colleges, theological seminaries, hospitals, dispensaries, agricultural extension, mass education, reading rooms, summer camps, cooperative enterprises with all who share our purpose. “By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples.”

Many have dedicated their lives to this great cause.

Others with equal devotion, dedicate a portion of their time or possessions through the medium of money.

Thus missionaries of the Cross are able to bear witness of His Life and Message at the crossroads of the world.

The ministry of yesterday has awakened the non-Christian world to an appreciation of Jesus. Today in our world parish of sixty millions we face an open door of welcome. Our continuing responsibility is the support of our missionaries, the nurture of younger churches, the sharing of our experience of God.

There are four things you can do:

- 1. Join the Fellowship of Those Who Care, and daily pray for the work.
- 2. Support with your gifts the apportionment of your local church.
- 3. Make an extra personal gift for the work of the missionaries. Apportionment credit will be given to your church.
- 4. Read The Missionary Herald at Home and Abroad for convincing accounts of the work of your representatives.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

EASTERN VIRGINIA PUBLISHES BOOKLET.

The Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship, under the direction of its president, Mr. W. B. Williams of Newport News, has just published a very interesting booklet on Youth Fellowship work.

This publication starts off with the meaning of the National Pilgrim Fellowship and its Statement of Purpose. Then it gives the conference organization, so far as membership, local organization, and finances are concerned. The Goals of Eastern Virginia for this year are stated, as a reminder for the local groups of the things toward which they are striving. It also contains a list of the officers and a bibliography, from which you can find out the sources of materials to use in young people's work.

There are personal messages from the president and from each of the superintendents, which are inspiring and helpful.

Interesting Quotations.

Following are some quotations from the above mentioned booklet of Eastern Virginia:

"If we ever hope to have and build in Eastern Virginia, a great Youth Fellowship, then we must chart the course now and lay the foundation among our young people and build upon this foundation year by year until our goals are reached."—W. B. WILLIAMS, President.

"Present Personal Religious Living until the devotional life of each member is enriched. Pray about it, work over the problem, and I believe that with the right emphasis, results will be obtained."—MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Superintendent of Devotional Life.

"Christ spent His life in service—service to mankind. Forgetting self, He was always looking for some service to do, and so it should be with us."—ALICE YATES, Superintendent of Service.

"The greatest investment any church can make is to send two young people to a leadership training school, such as the one at Elon College. Once a person goes there, he is never the same again. He gets something which he never loses, something that lasts through life."—LOTTIE MAE CROSS, Superintendent of Leadership Training.

"The Department of Moral Standards recommends that special emphasis be given to Social Action, as follows: Definite local action to (1) Help prevent war, (2) Improve race relations, (3) Restrict the sale of beverage alcohol and, (4) Help improve economic conditions."—ALLEN PILLAND, Superintendent Moral Standards.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN is the official mouthpiece or organ of the Congregational-Christian Churches of the Southeast. It is very evident that we do not appreciate our church paper as we should, as shown by the small circulation it has . . . We can increase the circulation of it by:

1. Does THE SUN come to your home each week? Be sold on it yourself and see that it does.

2. Get a list of both present and past subscribers and keep check; get renewals when subscriptions expire; also, go after former subscribers and see that they subscribe again.

3. Get others who have not, and do not, to subscribe to THE SUN. Church officers are good prospects."—ROBERTA WRIGHT, Superintendent of Publications and Reporter.

HAVE YOU READ?

Christianity—and Our World, by John C. Bennett. This is the first of a series of little volumes to be called the Hazen Books on Religion. Its purpose is to "interpret what Christianity as a whole means for our world. Those aspects of it will be stressed which are in clearest relation to the most serious problems which we face."

It is written for college-age young people and could form the basis for discussions and study on problems of our world today.

The Greek word "ecclesia," used for "church" in the New Testament, means, "selected." This suggests that out of a rushing world of good and bad, the church member selects those elements which elevate and purify and give power to the soul. selects the environment in which he wishes to live, and chooses for his friends those who stand for noble living.

The Church is the world's greatest fellowship because it has Jesus as a single leader; its members hold to the same principles; it includes those of every color and tongue; it speaks the universal language of love; and it is the channel of supreme fellowship with God.

The fellowship of the Church is illustrated in this story: Once there was a girl whom everybody liked, who always seemed to have a magic word that turned people's hearts toward her. One day she unwittingly walked into the garden of an ugly king, who thought nothing of flinging people to death for a whim. Too late her friends tried to call her back. They watched, trembling, while the girl smiled at the tyrant. The king hesitated, listened a moment, and then smiled back. Then he took the girl's hand and they went walking across the garden together.

Something to Think About—

1. What is the test of friendship? Do you think you meet that test?

2. In what respects do Christians fail in showing themselves to be Jesus' friends?

3. When you joined the Church, what obligations did you assume?

4. Is it true that when we join any one church, we join the "Church Universal"—that all denominations are a part of one great fellowship?

5. Are the young people more eager to work together as "one great fellowship" than the older people are?

6. Do the young people take as much interest in the whole church—the "preaching service," for example, as they do in their Christian Endeavor Society? If not, are they doing their full duty?

Suggester Hymns—

"Holy, Holy, Holy"; "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations"; "I Am Happy in the Service of the King."

LIFE HERE AND HEREAFTER THROUGH CHRIST.

LESSON X—MARCH 7, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: "I am the Way, and the Truth, and the Life: no one cometh unto the Father, but by me."—John 14:6.

LESSON: John 14:1-15:27.

It is quite likely that the fourteenth chapter of John is about as well known, especially the first part of it, as any other portion of the Bible with the exception of the Twenty-Third Psalm. Especially is this true of the Bibles of those who have had trouble and bereavement. This section would show the marks of use and wear, for men and women instinctively turn to it in the hour of bereavement. And no wonder! For it answers as deep unto deep.

The Secret of the Quiet Place.

"Let not your heart be troubled; believe in God, believe also in me." Confidence in God, in God revealed in Jesus Christ is the secret of the calm and courageous heart. This is not a matter primarily of intellectual belief, but rather of personal trust. If a man really believes in God, if he really puts his personal trust in Christ, he need not be troubled of heart even if he is in the midst of trouble. We are so anxious and worried and worn because we lack a simple and sound faith in God. Jesus in another place said that we were not to be anxious. A man's chief concern should be for the Kingdom of God and His righteousness. He can trust God for the things that he needs. If he does his part he can depend upon God to do His part.

The House of Many Mansions.

"In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you." It is the word for home—which Jesus uses when He says house. The Father's home the Father, himself will be there, Jesus, the Elder Brother will be there, God's children will be there—there will be room enough and to spare for all of us. And there will not be any Jim Crow quarters there, nor any Harlem, nor any Chinese quarter, nor any Ghetto. We shall all live in the Father's home of many mansions as his children. Jesus gives us his word that if it were not so He would have told us. A Christian ought to be able to face death calmly and unafraid; it is the doorway into the home over there. And that it will be ample and abundant is evidenced by the fact that Jesus said He had gone to prepare a place for us. We shall find a warm welcome and ample preparation and provision. "That where I am, there ye may be also"—to be with Him, that is the hope of heaven.

The Way.

"I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." A way is, in simple language, a means of getting from one place to another, that along which passes or progresses to reach some place. Jesus is the way to God. Through Him one comes to God. One who is rightly related to Christ is thereby brought directly unto God. Jesus is also the way through which or by which one gets from where he is to a place he wants to go. Christ does not simply point out the way—He is the Way. Men may seem to get to God in many ways, but Jesus says that "no one cometh to the Father but by me"—there is no other name given whereby we must be saved. In short Christ's spirit saves, in whatever form it may find expression.

The Image of the Invisible God.

God is spirit, and no man hath seen God at any time. God is invisible. But Jesus Christ was the image of the invisible God. He was God, made manifest in the flesh. "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father"—Jesus himself said this. That Christ is like God is only one half of a great Christian truth. That God is like Christ is just as thrilling a truth. We have a God who is like Jesus Christ! That is the claim of the Christian. If that be true we have a God we can worship, a God we can trust, a God we can love, a God we can serve. God is like Christ, Christ is like God. He that hath seen me hath seen the Father. That sufficeth men.

My Words, My Works.

"The words that I speak, I speak not of myself. . . the works that I do. . . the Father abiding in me doeth his works." Jesus acknowledged His independence upon God. He simply yielded himself fully to do the Father's will. He allowed God to work through Him. His words and His works bore eloquent testimony to the fact that God was working through Him. The tragedy of the situation was that although the light was shining in their midst they loved darkness rather than light. As was said of Jesus, "No man could do these things, except God be with Him." The divinity of Jesus Christ was attested by His works as well as by His words.

Greater Works Than These Shall Ye Do.

Jesus did not say that men would do greater miracles than he did but He did say that they should do greater works than He did. Because He has given men of His spirit He has enabled them to do greater things far greater than He did. He was only one while here on earth, He was localized. But 'because He went unto the Father' and because He has sent His spirit upon men, He works through them to do even greater things.

In My Name.

Jesus did not say that He would give us anything that we might ask for. He did say, if we asked in His name, in keeping with His character and spirit and will, He would give it, that God might be glorified. God would not be glorified if He gave us everything we asked for. There are some things he cannot give us—we cannot be trusted with them. But if we ask for something that is in accord with His name, He will give it to us.

The Test of Love.

"If ye love me, keep my commandments." Love has become a rather loose and soft term in modern life. But love has a stern and exacting note in it. The test of our love for Christ is not what we profess, but what we practice. Not everyone that saith Lord, Lord shall enter into the Kingdom, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. The simplest test, and the ultimate test of our love for Christ is this—do we do what He commands us? His commandments are not grievous, but they are exacting. A new commandment I give unto you that ye love one another. The test of our love for Christ is our love for others, genuine goodness, going forth in loving service.

TO THE WOMEN.

The supporters of the Mission cause have ever believed in action. We are judged by the things we do. One's action ignites another. Indifference is corporate but action, too, is corporate when together we push toward a common goal—"For each woman, $1; for each member of our young people's societies, $.50; for the Juniors, $.25."

We want the men and friends of the Church to feel that this is their opportunity to aid and share in the joy of a thing well done.

As we work together with the spirit of enthusiasm and cooperation, may we find our greatest joy in realization. With confidence we go forward.

MONDAY.

IT ISN'T DONE THAT WAY.

"And the king cut it with his penknife and cast it into the fire."—Jer. 36: 23.

The scroll of the word of God has just been read to King Jehoikim. Subsequently he took the scroll and read it for himself. He then cut it with his penknife and threw it into the fire, hoping to destroy the word of the Lord.

History furnishes us with numerous attempts to destroy the Word of God, each not only proving futile but an act which set fire to its influence and served as a furtherance of that Word.

There are those who are doing the same thing today. They are casting divine admonitions into the fires of infidelity, of ridicule, of disobedience, of imprudent indifference, and imagine that they get rid of them. At the same time these fires leap out and consume the mockers. Their hostility recoils on their own heads. The Word rides on to victory.

Prayer—O God, make Thy Word a delight to us and may we exalt it above every other word. This we ask for Jesus sake. Amen.

TUESDAY.

WHY CAN'T WE JUDGE?

"Judge not that ye be not judged."—Matt. 7: 1.

"Judge not according to appearance."—Jno. 7: 24.

It is hard for us to judge anything except by appearances. Appearances look us in the face and force themselves upon us and it is easy for us to form our opinions about them. But appearances do not always represent the facts. There are realities beneath the exterior which the human understanding cannot always penetrate. It takes divine wisdom to pierce through them. Even the Master Himself said that He came not to judge.

These things being so, one's rough exterior may hide a heart of gold, and a woman's lovely face conceal a bitter disposition. Poverty and sickness may drive one mad and destroy the effects of a most otherwise beautiful life. Christ said, because of this difficulty, judge not. It is a good motto to believe good of all men until you are forced to believe the contrary.

Prayer—O God, we realize this morning that it is so easy for us to err and sin against God and man in our opinions of others. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

HIDING OUR EYES.

"He that covereth his sins shall not prosper; but whosoever confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy."—Prov. 28: 13.

We are told that the ostrich hides his face in the sand and thinks that he is completely hid from view. He fools himself.

Sickness makes itself known. A bankrupt cannot long hide his poverty. When death is in the land, people do not engage in festivals. It is only in spiritual disaster that we hide our eyes and pretend that we are not attacked by them. We record a most forceful saying of a preacher. He said: "A man who hates his sin and is swift to confess it, will flee from it as from a fire." He is a man who gets along in the world, and gathers a prosperity that is far above the material wealth of this world. He is prosperous in purity. He is wealthy in uprightness. He is rich in the loving favor of God.

Prayer—Our heavenly Father, show us the path of true prosperity. Make us wise enough to see where our misfortunes lie and grant us the courage to escape them. Amen.

THURSDAY.

THE CHRISTIAN'S "BLANK CHECK."

"If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father who is in heaven."—Matt. 18: 19.

This word of our Lord is the "blank check," so to speak, which He hands you and me to fill in ourselves. The only condition is that two Christians must endorse it. Those whose spirits are in tune with Christ's spirit so that they will ask nothing except what is in accord with the will of God, have unlimited access to the treasury of God's love. Amos R. Wells used to say that to guard against errors in judgment, two Christians must agree that what is desired by them is what Christ and the Father also desire. There is power in accord of petition. To establish such accord, virtually means that God Himself is praying with us. And when that takes place, His promise to give whatsoever we ask will be fulfilled.

Prayer—Help us, O Lord, to unite with one another in the common bond of Christian love, and to study to know Thy will that we may ask of Thee and ask aright. This we ask for Jesus sake. Amen.

FRIDAY.

TOO TIMID.

"He that observeth the wind shall not sow; and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap."—Ecc. 11: 4.

This is another way of saying that if you are too timid about doing something for the Lord, you cannot expect the Lord to do very much for you. Paul said that workers for God must be "instant in season and out of season." One cannot spend his days watching the signs of the weather.

The Christian is a man who greatly dares in the realm of his faith. The Christian is a man who does,—casts his bread upon the waters,—trusting in God for its return. The Christian who, unlike Dicken's "Mr. Micawber," who was ever waiting for something to "turn up," seeks out opportunity, creates it if possible.

Prayer—O God, make us swift to do good. Embolden us in Christian usefulness. Make us to know that behind the clouds the sun is shining. We would never be fearful and falter. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HEAVEN'S PROMPT AID.

"God will help her, and that right early."—Psalm 46: 1-11.

Let us speedily find a home in the long patience of our God. Generations of mortals are to Him but as days, and the fretful haste of little men must be ridiculous in the sight of the angels.

Remember this when next you are tempted to upbraid the Lord for His slowness in answering your prayers, in bringing to pass what you so greatly long for. His help is sure, His aid is prompt. God never delays. But it is God's time that is in question, and not the toy clock of the world.

God's help comes as speedily as He sees it can come best, to our own good and to the advancement of His kingdom. Would we have it come more rapidly than that? Would we wrench the order of providence out of its course, if we could, to please our hasty fretfulness?

Prayer—May we bide Thy time, our Father, even as did Thy Son. When Thine hour has struck, then will Thy blessings descend, and we would not have them an instant earlier. Help us thus right early, O our God. For Christ's sake. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

OPENING THE WINDOWS OF HEAVEN.

By REV. ELISHA A. KING.

[The following sermon was preached by Dr. King at the Miami Beach Community Church. The manuscript bore this comment, "A plain talk to my congregation and somewhat personal." Ed.]

The real theme of this sermon today is, "Can We Pay What We Owe?" and the text for that is from the 116th Psalm, the 12th verse. "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward me? I will call upon His name and will pay my vows in the courts of His house in the presence of all His people."

There is another expression in Psalm 68:19, "Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits." The most beautiful expression of the wonderful gifts of God, is found in Psalm 103 in these words: "Let my whole being bless the Lord and forget not all His benefits; who forgives all my guilt, who heals all my sickness, who rescues my life from the pit, who crowns me with grace and mercy, who satisfies my desires with good so that my youth renews itself like an eagle."

These very sincere sayings come from the hearts of men who believed that God was the source of their existence, that He maintained them and blessed them, and out of gratitude they acknowledged it to the world and put their thoughts into immortal words. If it happens to be so that any of us cannot see life this way, let us remember that the authors are relating their experiences, not ours. But surely every one of us can count up many benefits received from the Lord. Perhaps if we did, we would be like the little girl that walked home with her father in a dark night illumined by a brilliant sky full of stars. She said, "Father, I'm going to count the stars" and he heard her counting 150, 151, and on through 250 and then 270 and then she said, "I can't count any more, there are so many more than I thought." Once I undertook to count my blessings, and came to the same conclusion. As my blessings are the same as yours, I will count a few. My existence (my life) my reason, and then comes nurture, protection, guidance, education, civil rights, religion; then the gifts of grace, nature and worldly goods; redemption, regeneration, and instruction in the truth; then there comes such things as all good things received and for all success in my chosen career and all the good I may have been permitted to do for others. Then there are parents to be thankful for, for teachers and unknown benefactors, for friends and acquaintances, for all who have helped me in the daily round of duty and service; then there are books I have read and sermons I have heard, lectures, conversations, prayers, examples of good people and even rebukes, criticisms and injuries which have come to me. And sometimes misfortunes—I'll stop counting now for they are more than I thought. It seems, almost, that all I am today has come to me through the meditation of others. "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward me?"

One hundred years ago last Friday, February 5th, there was born at Northfield, Mass., a boy by a name of Dwight L. Moody. In the course of time, when he was 18 years old he became a Christian and the next year joined the Mt. Vernon Congregational Church of Boston. Four years later he gave up business and devoted himself entirely to religious work. He married Charlotte Revell in 1862. He made his home in Chicago. The remainder of his life was spent, as everybody knows, as an evangelist, the builder of churches, schools and colleges. He died at Northfield in 1899 at the age of 62 years. The whole Christian world is observing, in one way or another, his birth, life, and accomplishments this week.

My reason for mentioning him today is the fact that I owe so much to Dwight Moody. It was the reading of one of his books that turned me definitely to a life of religious work, not the ministry, but the Young Men's Christian Association. I knew Mr. Moody, personally, and the kindness and sincerity of the man gripped me tremendously. I heard him preach, helped sometimes in his inquiry room, read his sermons and books and absorbed something of his spirit and purpose. There are other men who have influenced me greatly, such as Henry Churchill King, Edward I. Bosworth, Washington Gladden, Lyman Abbott, S. Parkes Cadman, Kemper Fullerton and others. I can hardly believe that I ever had any original creative thoughts of my own; it seems as if these men had poured into a humble, willing vessel, all that it contains; anyhow, they have communicated a spirit and a method that I hope I may never lose. Can I ever pay what I owe to these great souls? Dr. MacLaren suggests that the best pay is to accept what they gave in the spirit which they gave it; but I somehow believe that I can best recompense them by "carrying on" the best I can in the path they helped me to choose.

I have digressed a little from the main thought of this sermon because of the Moody Centennial. Some months ago I read a small pamphlet entitled, "Can we pay what we owe?" The title seemed strange, at first, but as I proceeded, I began to see the author's point. The story is set on a railway train, and the conductor is collecting fares. Some of the passengers are riding on passes, some on half-fare and some have paid full-fare. The story begins with the words, "Fares, please!" and is taken from Halford Luccock's book by that name, in which he pictures life as a sort of railroad train. In mentioning those who pay full-fare, he says that they feel that they are getting a good ride and they want to pay their way.

But as much as some people desire to pay their way, the question arises, Can they (or we) do it? Let's take for example a boy's education. It is estimated that by the time a boy has finished his college course, his parents and society have invested about $33,000 in him. That's a lot of money. Now suppose he secures a position at a salary of $5,000.00 a year. And suppose he applied every cent of that salary to the paying off of that debt, including the interest, until it was discharged in full, how many years would it take him?

We do not need to spend any time figuring that, for we have other sums to figure. There isn't time to list a lot of problems; a few will suffice.

We often think and talk about our country, its freedom and independence, its constitution, its progress and power; but how many of us appreciate what Washington and the barefooted Continentals did for us at Valley Forge? Can we pay for that? We are so in the habit of turning on and off electric lights that we forget what Thomas Edison did for us. Can any of us pay for that? Then focus your thoughts on the men, who at the risk of their lives, conquered Yellow Fever. Read the stories of "Microbe Hunters" and "Hunger Fighters" and tell me if you can pay for what

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Let us talk finances just a little in this letter. All who read this letter know it takes money to run an orphanage with from ninety to one hundred children every day. It takes money to run a home. Every one who establishes a home finds this out. If it did not cost us anything to run a home, we would not get the thrill practicing economy and seeing how far we can stretch a dollar.

If it did not cost us anything to run an orphanage, our Sunday Schools would not get the thrill of giving to help the little dependant children who have been unfortunate.

I believe as the little children looked at the picture of the little boy which appeared in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of February 11th, whose mother is dead, got some idea of what they give their pennies, nickles and dimes for in Sunday School on Orphanage Day.

If it cost nothing to run an orphanage, then we grown people would not get the real joy out of giving as we do when we have an opportunity to make a contribution to help a little dependant child, or support an orphanage that is giving a home and care to nearly one hundred.

Our budget for the year is ($20,000.00) twenty thousand dollars.

We set our goal to be raised at ($20,000.00) twenty thousand dollars—to balance the budget.

January and February are gone. The income for the two months was as follows: Sunday School offerings, $587.60; belated Thanksgiving offerings, $70.00; specials, $25.00; total from Sunday Schools and churches, $672.60. We received from outside sources, $862.43, making a total for the two months of $1,535.03.

You see, we received more from other sources than we did from the church and Sunday School. You can also realize that our expense account is for more than our income—which hurts our bank balance.

NEWS ITEMS FROM ALABAMA.

The Woman's Missionary society at Lowell, Alabama has a membership of thirteen and they meet each month regardless of the weather. They have laid special emphasis on their programs with some good results. Rev. and Mrs. Hunt have contributed very ably to their programs from time to time.

They have reached their goals so far and are planning to finish the year with every point attained. Special offerings to Elon College, to the Superannuation Fund and to several needy of the local community have been made. They are proud of their new president, Mrs. Florence and are hoping for even greater work in the future. Mrs. Otis Chase, reporter for the society, says, "they get a real joy and inspiration in bringing this help to others."

The Wadley, Alabama Church boasts of every lady in their church being a member of the Woman's Missionary Society, except one who does not believe in foreign missions.

That is a fine aim for every church—that every woman member of the church be a member of the Woman's Society. They are using the Home and Foreign Mission study books and have had special programs on David Livingston, Mary Slessor and Albert Schweitze. They are also sponsoring special sacrificial offerings for the families of their church during the Lent period. They are planning a public program soon having a missionary as guest speaker and the women of the other churches of the town as guests. This society has the honor of having one of its members as the president of the conference.

Mrs. A. R. Van Cleave is a member of this society and we know that "Jewell Truitt," as we all know her, is a great help to them.

those men did for us all. And the story goes on without end; the story of invention, medical knowledge, discovery and research, is a thrilling one and makes us all indebted to the benefactors of the human race.

There are two more thoughts I wish to express; one is our debt to motherhood. If we should leave out all sentiment even then we could not pay the debt we owe to our mothers. You remember how Johnnie thought up an easy way to raise a little cash. He made out a bill for services to his mother, bringing in wood, so much, running errands, so much more, and so on. He left the bill on his mother's plate at breakfast time. The good mother got it and wisely kept silence; but she made out a bill for Johnnie, providing clothes, food, a home, sitting up nights when he was sick and a lot of other things that mothers do, and instead of adding up the figures, she wrote on the bottom of the bill, "No Charge"—and she placed it at Johnnie's plate next morning. He read it and wept. Running to his mother, he threw his little arms about her neck and sobbed out his mistake and told her over and over again how he loved her and wanted her to forgive him and how badly he wanted to please her and help her and prove to her how he wanted to pay what he owed! We are all of us only grown up children and every once in a while we, too, try to collect from God.

There is one final debt that we can never pay in full and it is the unspeakable gift, of God the gracious Father "to you and me and everybody else" as the boy said when explaining John 3:16, to the ignorant ploughman. It is Jesus of Nazareth, the Christ of God, Savior of the world, your Saviour and mine. Scholars have used the most extravagant language to express their estimate of Jesus Christ. The historian Glover says, "He stands in the center of human history, He has brought God and man into a new relation. He is the present concern of every one of us." George Barton says, "The life of Jesus Christ is the most significant event in the religious history of mankind. Nowhere else has God so revealed His nature." Lyman says that Christ must continue to be the religious leader of the race, its pledge of moral redemption and divine destiny. He will be the Head of the only practical Church, the secret of the most victorious life. And, again, I must say with the little girl who started to count the stars, There are more than I thought. There seems to be no end of eulogies of Jesus Christ.

Do you realize how much we owe to Him whom having not seen we love? How can I ever compensate the two young business men who drove seven miles after working hours in the snow during several weeks of a cold winter to a small country village where I lived and told in a simple, but enthusiastic way, the love of God for me as revealed in Christ, me, a little boy of 12 years of age? I do not know their names and did not then; but I knew they were engaged in a work that meant everything to them. That religious experience, that simple confession of faith, on my part, made all the difference in the world to my whole life! Perhaps each one of you have had a similar story to tell. As I see a young man reeling along in his drunken fashion, or a broken life of any kind wrought with sin, I say, except for the grace of God it might be me! What is it that removes us from the animal and the sordid and the base in life if it is not the Gospel of Christ, His love and His willing sacrifice? Isn't it what Christ did on that lonely hill outside Jerusalem that makes the difference?

And the Church of Christ is His. After all is said and done, the Church of Christ means a tremendous lot for all of us, for the community and the world. Think of its innumerable ministrations. How much do we owe to the Church, when you stop to think about it? Though We pour out our jewels, our stocks and bonds, our gifts in cash we have only paid a part, because we owe so much every way we can only pay in part. The promise of God still remains true and the reciprocity is real. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storeroom, that there may be meat in my house, and prove me now saith the Lord if I will not open you the windows of Heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it in." "What shall I render unto the Lord for all these benefits? I will pay my vows in the house of the Lord in the presence of all His people."

A famous hymn writer puts his answer in words like these:

"Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small,
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my life, my soul, my all."

"John said unto him, Teacher, we saw one casting out demons in Thy name; and we forbade him, because he followed not with us."—Mark 9:33-40.

The man follows Christ; he casts out demons in Christ's name. But he does not follow US; he is not one of the Twelve; he has broken into our monopoly. Therefore, said John, the most spiritual of the apostles, we forbade him.

"US! US! US! Our little group, our shibboleth, our forms, our statistics, our honor and glory!" Not Christ's, but ours. Not the Heavenly Father, but Us.

Few hindrances stand more in the way of progress of the kingdom of heaven than this placing of ourselves in the place of our Saviour. It is done with a pretense of zeal for His kingdom. Let us be sure that it is not done in care of our crowns and thrones.

Prayer—Forbid, our Father, that we should forbid any worker whom Thou hast not forbidden. If Thou dost forbid him, his work will be sterile without any of our prohibitions. May we be sure that whoever is not against Thee is for Thee. In thy name. Amen.

—Amos Wells.

From Those Who Are Building

It is a joy to give the Letter of Dr. W. M. Jay about our Winston-Salem work. His letter breathes optimism and heroism. If we of the Congregational-Christian Churches had the desire we should have, and the loyalty, to enlarge our borders and build where there is need, opportunity and promise, we would get behind Dr. Jay and his faithful group and not let them carry alone the financial load and worries they are carrying. We would help them more liberally that they might go forward in growing and building without serious financial handicaps. When will we ever wake up to the needs of places like Winston-Salem that really want us and are willing to go forward with us and for us?

Another, and a real Home Mission work, in that it has been sponsored by us from its beginning, is our work in Carroll County, Virginia. Here our "contemporary ancestors" are working with us with the little they have. The present pastor, Rev. O. A. Elmore, is finding new joy in the service of soul-winning. Here we are sharing with others the Gospel Message and building the Kingdom of God into the hearts and homes of a most worthy and needy and appreciative people. If we believe in denying ourselves for the sake of the Gospel, here indeed is an opportunity.

Rev. Roy D. Coulter, New Market, Virginia, brought to this field by the Mission Board, seems to have made a good start in rehabilitating some of our neglected churches in the Valley of Virginia Conference. His letter this week tells of the field and its prospects.

Rev. J. E. McCauley, pastor, writes hopefully and helpfully about our Richmond Church. Here we have a plant in the Capital City of Virginia, worthy of the city and of our Church. Heavy indebtedness and financial losses that could not be foreseen or prevented call us to the assistance of this great task we have undertaken. From Richmond have gone thousands and thousands of dollars to the institutional and benevolent enterprises of our Church. Now that need has come that no one could prevent, Richmond deserves that we stand by it with our financial help, our prayers and our cooperation, till it is on its feet again and able to contribute, as it did so richly when able, to its support and progress and to all our Church enterprises.

The Church Paper

In the day of radio, daily news paper, magazines of every description, books in abundance, and independent and interdenominational religious journal, does the weekly Church paper have a place? Can it lay claim on the time and expense of members of a modern home? This editor, who is also a pastor, believes the answer is "Yes" because:

I.—The Denomination Is a Unit in the Kingdom of God. Some tell us that denominations are no longer needed, but the fact is that they are here, and that the work of God's Kingdom is being developed largely through denominations. If the units fail, the Kingdom stops, or is greatly hindered. The Church paper is needed to keep members of the Church informed about plans and programs so there can be cooperation in the denomination. There is no other way to do it.

II.—Other News Agencies Seldom Promote Religion. They may give religious news but it is among other very different things. Most of them are promoted for financial gain and not to sustain moral ideals. The Church undergirds civilization with religion, and much of its promotion is through the Church paper.

III.—The Church Paper is an Agency for Promoting World-Brotherhood. Jesus taught the brotherhood of all mankind, but that ideal is not held by many clamorous voices of our day. The "isms" of today divide men rather than unite them. Any Church paper worthy of the name seeks to maintain the ideals of Jesus in our present world. No argument for the necessity of promoting peace and brotherhood is needed except figures concerning the increase of armaments. The Church paper strives constantly to put Christian ideals in all phases of human life. The need for this was never greater than today.

For these, and other very definite reasons, the Church paper has a right to call upon church people for a place in their budget of time and money. It is cheap at any price.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

The Henderson, N. C. Church plans for an Easter pageant, and has recently given several programs of pictures in connection with their mission study.

Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein of Dover, Delaware begins his Easter evangelistic services on next Sunday. He is to have an evangelistic song leader but do his own preaching. Dr. Helfenstein is one of our best evangelists.

Rev. B. J. Earp, pastor of Hines Chapel Church, has a good article in his bulletin of the "Elon Spirit," in which he calls on members of the Church and Elonites to continue the fine work which has been done at Elon. He thinks the apportionment for Hines Chapel is reasonable and that the church should go over the top. Such a spirit helps to insure success.

The Winston-Salem Church seems to be busy. Dr. Clinton has recently been with them. They have cooperated with the Day of Prayer; they are using Lenten material; they have observed Father and Son Day; and the young people have recently led the evening service. In speaking over the radio, the pastor, Dr. W. M. Jay, used in full an article from THE CHRISTIAN SUN, giving credit, of course.

The Templemen's Bible Class of Christian Temple will present in concert Friday, March 12, 1937, at 8:15 P. M., at the Norfolk City Auditorium, the "Hampton Institute Choir" of eighty mixed voices. Admission, 50c, and tickets can be secured from any member of the class or from the downtown headquarters, the Ackiss Brown Company, 438 Granby Street, Norfolk, Virginia.

Rev. A. R. Flower is spending the last week of February in the Community of Sandy Cross Methodist Church and Cooper's High School, near Nashville, North Carolina. It is really remarkable how this unselfish worker in the course of religion and education, gets hold on the attention of our young people. His unassuming disposition, in some way, places him back of the well-chosen subjects that he discovers in such a way that one is more interested in the things he is talking about than in the man who is doing the talking. Our Pastor, in behalf of our church and community extends him a most cordial invitation to come our way again.

A recent special edition of the Winter Park (Florida) Herald says "The present handsome Congregational church edifice was erected in 1924 and dedicated in January, 1935. It is a magnificent church building built of brick of colonial architecture and while it is of unusual size, it is none too large to accommodate the congregation which fills its auditorium upon each Sunday to hear the sermons of Dr. Victor B. Chicoine, pastor, and its interesting musical program. Perhaps the best known to the present generation of the pastors who served this church was the beloved Dr. C. A. Vincent, who for 17 years ministered to the spiritual wants of the membership. Dr. Vincent retired three years ago."

DANVILLE NEWS.

Many of our friends have inquired about our work. We are glad to give a brief report through "The Sun."

We are pastoring Third Avenue Danville, Blairs and Happy Home Churches, through the help of Brother P. H. Ricketts. Our work is going fine at Blairs and we are looking forward to a new building there. The work at Happy Home is going very well with good attendance. Our work here is proceeding nicely with a large Sunday school and unusually good attendance at church services. Our conference requirements have all been provided for this year. Our broadcast, which cost us eighty dollars a month has been taken care of until December 1, 1937. For the past eighteen months the broadcasting of our Wednesday evening services from 7:30 to 8:30 over WBTM has proved a great blessing to the church. When we started broadcasting we had an average attendance at prayer service of about 60, we have now 150.

We have just recently purchased and paid for a farm costing us seventeen hundred dollars. We have about one thousand dollars on our building that will cost about six thousand dollars and will care for about thirty-five children. This home is being erected to take care of children who cannot find entrance to other homes for various reasons. The children will only be kept for a short while, or until they can be placed. Such a home is being operated in Durham, N. C., and is proving a blessing to hundreds of children. We covet your prayers that God may soon enable us to open this home. There are many other things we would like to mention but time and space will not permit.

M. T. SORRELL.

WINSTON-SALEM.

Dr. James R. Clinton, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Philadelphia, Pa., was with us Sunday, February 14, and on Monday and Tuesday nights also. We had a good day Sunday. The attendance was good and Dr. Clinton gave a great message at the morning service, and his recital at night was greatly appreciated by a still larger audience. The attendance at the other services on Monday and Tuesday nights was smaller and chiefly from our own group, but his messages were highly appreciated. Dr. Clinton greatly endeared himself to our people. He did not entertain them or tickle their fancy, but his sermons were great gospel messages, gripping and challenging. Personally, I was pleased with the genuine evangelistic appeal and the challenge to the church that "Winning Souls" is wise.

His setup of the "Christian Crusaders" is a definite and appealing plan for soul winnings. During his short stay here, he also broadcast over station WSJS, spoke to our Bible Class, the Christian Endeavor Group, and to about one hundred young people of the Business College. On Monday he went to Elon College, where he spoke twice to the Ministers Union.

Dr. Clinton is a strong man to be sent out on such a mission by the Extension Boards. He is a preacher of power, a good singer, and his ability in dramatic recital gives him varied appeal to any church and community wherever he goes. I trust that a way may be found by the Boards to continue this splendid service. We should be grateful to have him return to Winston-Salem.

TWO LETTERS OF INTEREST.

The following letters have been received at the college which reflect outside opinions concerning our efforts in the field of character education. At Elon College we have splendid equipment and a well-prepared faculty, but the real worth of the institution is determined by the grade of work that it does. "By their fruits ye shall know them." We are endeavoring to emphasize the importance of character education on our campus. Dean Messick has majored in this field, and his abilities are recognized in the State of North Carolina and in other states. At present he is delivering a course of lectures over WBIG, Greensboro, N. C. Our program is otherwise reflecting itself favorably in the field of education. The following letters are self-explanatory:

February 13, 1937.

Mr. J. D. Messick,
Elon College, North Carolina.

My dear Mr. Messick:

Our staff and I wish to tell you how greatly we enjoyed your radio talk this week on "Character Education." I should like to have you give this over a national hook-up. We thought it scholarly, convincing, and thoroughly delightful.

Yours sincerely,

MARY C. COLEMAN,
Prof. of Physical Ed.,
W. C. U. N. C., Greensboro, N. C.

February 24, 1937.

Dr. J. D. Messick,
Elon College, North Carolina.

Dear Dr. Messick:

Through a preliminary inquiry your State Department of Education has indicated that your school is one of a very limited number doing exceptional work in the field of education and citizenship training. Approximately one hundred school systems throughout the United States have thus been selected as the ones in which an unusual program in character education is in operation.

In order that we may know more fully just what your program is in this regard, we have attached hereto a blank, calling for certain specific data desired from each of these co-operating schools. Supplying this information should not require, we hope, an inconsiderate amount of time.

In addition, it is very necessary that we have a copy of any syllabus or any instructional materials and matter that sets forth the exact na-

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

THE BUSINESS OF THE CHURCH.

The major business of the church in a local community is to bring people into personal fellowship with Jesus Christ. This may be done in a variety of ways, but it is the ultimate goal toward which every Christian church strives. Some depend largely upon preaching, others by teaching, and others upon social service as the method by which this good end is attained. Many call it evangelism, while others have a different name for it. Whatever the name and whatever the method, the central aim of the Christian church is to develop Christ-like character, and this is accomplished by bringing people into fellowship with Jesus.

Outside of the local community, the church seeks to promote the same kind of program, and for the same reason. This we may call missions, or by any other name which may seem appropriate. Sending the gospel of Jesus to those who do not have it, is done in order that they may come into personal fellowship with Jesus. This may be accomplished by the preaching evangelist, by the establishment of schools, by caring for the sick in homes and hospitals, by teaching people how to farm or manufacture in order to have food, clothes and shelter, or by any other means that may be available. The business of the Church is to promote friendship with Jesus. Anything short of this is not worthy of the Church.

At the season when the Cross casts its shadow over the thought and life of the world, is the time when our own Church redoubles its effort to win converts and to send missionaries. Let Easter be the time of ingathering of members for our own churches and money with which to send the Gospel to the ends of the earth. No church should be satisfied until all of its members have shared in this major business of the Church.

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS.

The greatest radio speaker of America, perhaps of the world, has just finished the first in a series of addresses to the American people. When the series is complete, he expects to be able to tell the United States Congress what legislation to pass, and to be sure that the Supreme Court of the United States of America will say that the legislation is constitutional. Anything less than this will seem to be failure for the most popular president the country has had since Washington.

For four years the President has had his way with everyone except the courts. He now frankly demands this final victory, and in the immediate future. The floods, dust, strikes, debts, and other human ills are with us now and must be dealt with at once, he says. Unless the Court will pull its part of the plow, the field cannot be plowed, he contends. The promise to meet the need of the farmers and laborers must be met. The bottom third of the population must have its share of America's blessings, says the President. The fight has just begun, he says. Until it is won, the country will hear the "fireside talks" of its ingratiating and challenging President.

As good citizens of the Country, we all have a right to express an opinion, and should watch with great interest the challenging changes that whirl us toward the future. The fact is, that changes are taking place so fast that most of us cannot keep up with them, and haven't the slightest idea where we are headed. The President is now calling for approval immediately of something that has very far-reaching results. Leaders of all political parties are divided in their opinions. It is important that Americans think their way through and not be stampeded into a change of government.

Changes Are Needed.

The fact is, that economic conditions are very unhappy at present. It is not right for some to starve, while others have too much. The standard of living should be raised. There should be some assurance of safety through the years. Farmers ought to be able to dispose of their products for a profit. Laborers should have reasonably short hours, comfortable working conditions, and a fair wage. Children ought to be given an education rather than be forced to labor.

The President speaks to the heart of humanity, when he makes this kind of plea, and he knows it. No one wants to debate this. The Country is agreed that some changes must be made for the sake of the citizens of today and tomorrow. We are not willing for millions to beg for work who cannot get it. We are eager for all the things for which the President pleads, when he talks to the hearts of mankind. We are also anxious that Democratic Government be preserved.

But What of the Methods?

Our democracy rests upon the Constitution adopted by the colonies and amended by the states. Without that Constitution, we have no Democracy. The Constitution can be amended by vote of the state legislatures, and still preserve the Democracy. But it cannot be ignored and still preserve the Democracy.

Purposely the founders of the nation divided the functioning Government into three parts. The legislative body is elected in part biennially, which makes it close to the electors, the citizens. The Executive Department is headed by a President who is elected for four years and is supposed to see that the laws are put into effect. The third part of the Government is the Supreme Court, nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate, composed of nine eminent judges whose tenure of office is for life. It is the business of the Court to be sure that the laws are in accordance with the Constitution. This three-horse team, to use Mr. Roosevelt's phrase, is hitched to the plow in order that the furrow may be straight and not go around in useless or dangerous circles.

We find ourselves today with a President who tells the Congress what legislation "must" be passed. When the Supreme Court says the legislation is not Constitutional, then he says we must change the Court. The logical and Constitutional thing to do is to change the Constitution. This is the way of democracy. To force from the Court those who do not agree, and to replace them with those who do, is the method of a dictator. Perhaps that is what we need and want, but at least we should know what we are getting.

Unless this editor misinterprets the movements of our day, this is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the Country and seek to preserve democracy, economic, intellectual, political, and religious liberty. A subservient Congress and Supreme Court to an ever-so-well meaning Executive means the end of Democracy as it has been practiced in America, the boasted home of the brave and land of the free.

Think, and Then Act.

This is a matter about which people may easily become excited and act without knowledge. This is neither wise nor Christian. It does make a difference to individuals as to the kind of Government under which they live. Christian citizens are no less Christian when they vote than when they sing. It is important that they watch the processes of government, and know what is going on, and what they think should be done. Your editor has had some hesitancy in presenting these editorials, but duty has driven him to speak his piece. We have seen the loss of personal privilege in other countries and have been sympathetic with the masses. When the process goes on in our midst, it is impossible for us to keep quiet, even though there are very dear friends who will differ radically, and perhaps, heatedly with the editor. That is quite all right. It is wisdom, light, life, for which we strive. This will necessarily mean differences of opinion, but it must also mean freedom of thought and expression. It must mean sincere and concerted effort to maintain our freedom, and the processes of democratic government.

Members of Congress will be glad to know how the people think relative to the proposed changes in the Supreme Court. They have no chance for an election to tell them. It is only fair for the good citizens, and many of them read this paper, to write or wire their representatives and senators what they think is wise to be done. Let no one be deceived by the cry that this is mixing state and church. On the contrary it is simply performing the duties of citizenship as all Christians are instructed by sacred Scripture to do. Unless Christian citizens do exercise their rights as citizens, then the government must be run by non-Christians, and become pagan. Whether you agree with the editor of this paper or not, let your representatives know your opinion. Make your Christian influence felt in your country.

A CAMPAIGN FOR SUBSCRIBERS.

The Board of Publications has recommended, and the Executive Committee of the Southern Convention has approved a campaign for new and renewal subscriptions to "The Christian Sun." They are designating the time as beginning March 15, 1937, and closing on May 31st. The price of the paper remains at $2.00 per year, but for that limited time NEW subscriptions will be received at $1.50 per year.

A flat commission of twenty-five cents will be allowed churches, church organizations, or authorized individuals on each annual subscription sent in whether new or renewal. The former commission basis expires with Monday, March 15th. Those organizations working for the 25 per cent commission on the basis of getting a subscription list equal to 10 per cent of the church membership, must mail their lists not later than the fifteenth. Otherwise they will receive only the twenty-five cents commission. After March 15th, the number of church members has nothing to do with commissions.

All pastors in the Convention have been written, and a quota of subscriptions suggested. Several have replied that they are beginning to work, and that they think they can reach the quota suggested. Others have suggested a different quota. The pastor and the church should decide the number they think should be received by the members, and then go out to get that number. Your judgment is better than that of someone far away.

Basis Of Appeal.

The reason for this campaign is to get our church people to read our Church paper so they will be better church people. How can they know what is being done; how can they really share in the work of the Church; how can they be intelligent concerning the Church of which they are part unless they read its paper? It is for the sake of the Church, for the sake of the people who are now and will become members of the Church that this campaign is to be made.

It is not primarily for benefit of the paper. Actually it will cost much money to conduct the campaign, and the margin of profit to the paper on the basis of the introductory subscription is very little. It is not for the paper we are pleading now. It is for the boys and girls, the young people, and the older ones who need desperately in a day like this to read fine literature and to keep posted in the field of religion that this campaign is undertaken. Homes are filled with daily papers, movie magazines, and other types of literature that give a very biased opinion of what life really means. It is the hope of this little church paper to help those who think to get a wholesome notion of life, and to aid them in making right choices and in living a happy and useful life. Every issue of the paper is printed at a loss, and will be for years to come, but there are those who think that the help to the church people is well worth the investment.

On the basis of the needs of the people, the paper requests busy pastors and church people to visit their friends and sell them on the idea of subscribing to and reading their Church paper, "The Christian Sun." Perhaps we are asking too much, but we think not. It is the attempt of the Southern Convention to render a real service to the churches, a service where it will mean most, in the homes. It doesn't sound reasonable or right that church people should fail to read about religion and their Church. It is time we make a united effort to get our people to reading.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Pastors and deacons of churches in the Eastern Virginia Conference are hereby reminded that a Deacon's Conference will be held in the Suffolk Christian Church, on Sunday afternoon, April 11th, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. Second Sunday afternoon in April should be a time of opportunity and privilege for those who may attend this meeting. The following program has been prepared and approved: Call to order by Dr. N. G. Newman, who will preside. Hymn, Scripture and prayer by Dr. Elwood W. Jones. Addresses (15 minutes each) as follows: "The Deacon as a Man," Rev. H. S. Harcastle; "The Deacon and the Pastor," by Dr. John G. Truitt; "The Deacon and the Church" by Rev. Robert Lee House; Round Table discussion on the problems of a deacon, led by Dr. N. G. Newman. Under the general discussion it is the wish of the Committee that a number of deacons will be prepared to give valuable suggestions. Adjournment at 4:15 P. M.

The deacons in the local church are usually among the leading men. They stand in a position where many opportunities for great service come to their attention. They are "key men." Unfortunately, many deacons do not take their office very seriously. A number of people think the principal work of the deacon is to assist in the administration of the Lord's Supper. That is one of the duties of a deacon. But there are many other duties of equal significance and importance. It is the purpose of those who are promoting the Deacon's Conference to bring these duties to the attention of the representatives of the various local churches.

Church are composed of human personalities. Every member of a church is a distinct type of personality. People differ in their thinking, their methods and their living. Human life cannot be standardized. It is a complex manifestation of changing ideals, and every life leaps beyond the scope of the present and challenges others to scale the heights of the unseen and the infinite. Therefore, a large church has many problems in the personnel of its membership. The deacons of the church should be in a position to deal with the complex problems of the local church in a level-headed, broad-minded and generous spirit.

But it seems to this writer that one of the great opportunities of the deacons is in the field of soul winning and increasing the membership of the church. It is possible for the deacons to sponsor this type of work throughout the year. And the work has only begun when people are added to the membership of the church. Religious education and the cultivation of the spiritual life, offer endless opportunities for earnest prayer and faithful service. The cultivation of a spiritual fellowship, the promotion of peace and unity among the members, the support of social and moral uplift of the church and community and the extension of the kingdom of God among the people should have the united and active support of the deacons in every church.

Pastors and deacons throughout the Eastern Virginia Conference are urged to attend the Deacon's Conference on the Second Sunday in April, beginning at 2:30 P. M., in the Suffolk Christian Church. This Conference should mark a forward step in our local churches.

I. W. JOHNSON.

AN EXPERIMENT IN COOPERATION.

The Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches is a compact organization. This organization has been in the process of formation for more than one hundred years. The name has been changed from time to time, but the organization began with the beginning of our church in the South. It is a very efficient organization and has accomplished much good in the work of the Kingdom. It consists of the Board of Missions, the Board of Superannuation, the Board of Christian Education, the Board of Publications, the Board of Education, the Christian Orphanage, and the Convention itself. These different Boards or Departments have their tasks and responsibilities assigned them by the Convention. There is an advantage of looking at the work of the church in different departments and of holding certain individuals for results in these specific fields. There are also possible dangers inherent in such an organization. It is possible for one department to emphasize its responsibilities to the hinderance of other departments.

Paul, in his letter to the church at Corinth concerning the unity of the Church, reminds them of the diversity of gifts by calling their attention to the fact that these gifts were of the same spirit and that likewise there are differences of administration, but one Lord over all. He reminds them that the Church is the body of Christ and that they are all members of that body. He further illustrates this fact by reference to the body, declaring that the body is one, but that it hath many members. No one member is the whole body, but all members make up the body and that they are all dependent one on the other, declaring that the eye could not contend to be the whole body or separate and apart from the body, but that is was an essential part of the body. It is true that if the body loses a member, every other member suffers because of the loss. If one member of the body is incapacitated, the whole body suffers. If all members are in health and active, the whole body succeeds and abounds in joy.

The same thing is true with our church organization. If one department suffers, all must suffer. It is impossible that benevolences prosper and publications suffer and the whole church be prosperous and in health. It is likewise impossible for missions to go ahead at a pace and education lag behind and the whole church go forward as God intended. We must, as a church, go forward together or go backward. There is no alternative.

At the recent session of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches held in the First Christian Church at Burlington, North Carolina, following a provocative address by the President, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, a committee was appointed to report back concerning suggestions made by the president in his annual address. Among the suggestions offered by the committee and which were adopted by the Convention was a resolution calling for a simultaneous meeting of the Boards of the Church at Elon College in connection with the meeting of the Board of Trustees of the college and providing that these Boards meet separately but should hold at least one joint session at which each Board or Department would present its findings. It was the hope of the Convention in this authorization to correlate our work to give the representatives of all the Boards an opportunity to see each other's task and program, thus affording an opportunity in cooperative efforts for the furtherance of the cause that is dear to us all.

On February 16th, the Boards were supposed to meet. The Boards meeting were the Board of Christian Education, the Board of Superannuation, the Trustees of Elon College, the Board of Publications, and the Trustees of the Christian Orphanage (meeting on the 17th). The Board of Missions was represented at the joint session Tuesday night. The Tuesday night meeting was not largely attended, but a very interesting and a very helpful session was held. The writer feels that this was a forward step in the right direction, and it is hoped that the different Boards will take the Convention's action seriously and cooperate fully. It is simply an effort for a complete understanding of the whole program of the whole church on the part of the whole membership through its delegated Boards.

If we, as a church and as different Boards and organizations of the church, can realize fully that we are our brothers' keepers, that we are responsible for the success or the failure of the other departments of our church, and that one department, regardless of what that department may be, cannot go ahead as it should while other departments linger behind, we will have achieved much that will make for the success of our church and the coming of the Kingdom within our communion and in the wide earth.

PIEDMONT MINISTERS ASSOCIATION.

In our Piedmont Congregational-Christian Ministers' Association at Elon College, February 15, 1937, we had as our guest speaker, Dr. James R. Clinton, pastor of Central Congregational-Christian Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dr. Clinton spoke in the forenoon on "The Hymnology of the Church," showing the devotional use of hymns. Dr. Clinton emphasized the need of higher and better types of hymns as aids to true worship, and discouraged the use of jazzy songs, such as are found in many of the cheaper type hymn books. He believes that such songs may stir the emotions, but questions the value of such as giving spiritual uplift to the human soul.

In the afternoon, Dr. Clinton offered some suggestions as to the qualities he believes the future church must possess, as follows:

First, the future church must be a church of Joy. Just as the early church had the joy of the Lord in it, so must the future church possess and radiate that joy.

Second, the future church must be a church of Confidence. In the past and at present there is a widespread lack of confidence on the part of the pastor and people.

Third, the future church must be a church of evangelical passion. What will happen if the church does not evangelize? The fact that the old methods of evangelism have been discredited so far as many religious leaders are concerned, is no reason that the right kind of evangelism isn't still needed. We need more informal evangelism. Jesus talked with individuals as He traveled along the road and lured them into the Kingdom.

Dr. Clinton referred to the advisability of a Christian Workers' Council, this being used in some churches. In this plan volunteers are called for who will pledge themselves each to endeavor to win a certain number to Christ each month of the year, a group of men to work among the men and a group of women to work among the women. These groups can have meetings each month and discuss the progress made as well as future prospects.

FROM ALABAMA.

The Old Congregational Church (Mt. Pisgah) near Standing Rock, Alabama, which was reorganized three years ago after thirteen years of inactivity, is still on the map and the faithful few are still on the firing line. This is not a strong church numerically nor financially, but it is a willing little group of Christian workers. Neither is this a strong community, but a community of good citizens, all of whom desire to see the church prosper. We have a very good Sunday school whose members are faithful to attend. And the young people have a splendid society of Christian Endeavor, but not so largely attended as some of the larger church societies. We have recently secured the names of seven women who desire to become members of the Woman's Missionary Society. Other names will be completed at our next meeting.

But there is one thing the church needs, which they are not able to buy. And that is a piano. Mrs. V. E. Kitchens of Roanoke, Alabama, gave them an organ some years ago, which was highly appreciated. Now the organ has become worn and in need of repair. Now what I wish to say is, that if there is any one in the Christian or Congregational Church who would desire to have a part in a real missionary project you might ease that desire by helping this old church to obtain a piano. The church needs it, and the young people will appreciate it, and God will bless you and make your life a blessing. There may be some calls that are not sincere but this call, or request, is a worthy one, and one to which, if we respond, will enable the contributors to render a valuable service.

I am writing this letter for the glory of Jesus and for the good of His cause. Who will be the first to answer?

G. D. HUNT, Pastor.

AN APPRECIATED LETTER.

Suffolk, Virginia,
February 26, 1937.

Dear Brother Lester,

Our Church will gladly accept your quota of 110 subscriptions as our goal for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I shall do my best to see that we reach that amount, and, I hope, go beyond it. In fact, I had already published in our Bulletin a goal of 150. I should like so much to see 150 families in our church taking THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I feel sure that they would get $2.00 worth of actual value out of the purchase, and on that basis, I am trying to put THE CHRISTIAN SUN in the homes of our church.

Ministers get in the habit of doing a good number of things for loyalty's sake alone, and we are prone to expect our members to do so, but we should remember that they spend their money for the things they prefer to have rather than for loyalty's sake. THE CHRISTIAN SUN must be made worth $2.00 per year,—which it is already, and on that basis, we must go to the families of our church and seek to sell it. It is true that a number of members of our church take THE CHRISTIAN SUN for loyalty just as the ministers do (I am told that all the ministers do not take their church paper!), but the safest sales talk is to have a church paper worth the price of subscription.

The regular reading of THE CHRISTIAN SUN should be in the background of the education and experience of every teacher in our Sunday School. I am going to seek to get a subscription in the hands of every officer and teacher we have; also I am going to have a check made on all officers in all the organizations of our church to see if they are getting the church paper, and to find some way to cause them to get it. I want this church to read THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It will help the church in many ways, and lighten the pastor's burden of explaining many of the church's enterprises.

Let us make the paper worth it, and insist on our folks taking it. I have faith to believe they will do it.

Most sincerely yours,

JOHN G. TRUITT.

LAKES.

(A-CORRESPONDENCE.)

Florida Sanitarium, Orlando, Florida,

One never tires of lakes, especially these lakes of Florida. In fact, one is delighted that there are so many of them, more than three thousand, they tell us; this city of Orlando, having more than thirty within its confines. They are all so interesting, each different from, and more beautiful than, the other. Their placid waters, their blue depths, their satiny luster, their calm repose; and then the complacent satisfaction with themselves, with their surroundings, and with their world!

What a contribution they make to the wild life that thrives and rejoices about them, and the green, gorgeous vegetation that borders and fringes them on all sides. Whoever planted this sanitarium, must have had in mind and heart, a love for lakes, the lawn sloping off in front of the building to a lake that is ever inviting to look upon, and in a leisurely walk of ten minutes, one finds and follows four others of equal interest and charm. One's favorite walk from here is by a lake reached through a grove of stalwart, strong, stout, aged "seedling" orange trees, with here and there a great old giant willow oak draped in graceful folds of hanging moss; and on the other side, close to the still waters, beautiful and appropriate homes planted in great groves of oak, palm and palmetto, on one side of the dwelling, a boat house, and just to the rear, the garage. What a mingling and a meeting of the natural and the artificial, of man and God. One can look upon such a scene and then look up if one will, and worship God.

Another can and will look upon it only to crave and covet. We talk about beauty and scenery causing us to "be good and to worship," and to keep us out of evil! Well that all depends. It must never be forgotten that Adam and Eve, our forebearers, were in a garden that was a paradise, so grand and glorious that God Himself walked there in the cool of the day—and it was in that Eden of matchless beauty, they were beguiled by the serpent, and sinned a great sin—willfully disobeyed the God Who planted the garden and created them.

However, we shall not forget that the attributes of God Himself are Truth, Goodness and Beauty, and who finds, and enjoys, one of these attributes may, if one will, with satisfaction, and complacency, look up toward the Father and declare "Thy Name is Love."

The hand of Love spread out these lakes of Florida and so no wonder their matchless charm and quiet repose invite the artists' brush and the poets' pen.

One who comes and tarries awhile here, in this sanitarium, can but decide that our Adventists friends who own, control and serve it, have decreed and do decree that, so far as they are concerned these lakes about them shall not be desecrated by any deed or creed of theirs. Their house of worship is within a stone's throw of a lake into whose waters they lead their converts down, on occasion, to "be buried with Christ in baptism." From the third story of the sanitarium, one may view a half dozen lakes lying calmly in sweet and restful repose, and as one strolls by the lake in every evening hour just after seven, when the day's work is over, one may hear the songs of familiar and beloved hymns that cheer the heart and stimulate the soul.

How happy the writer was the past week to be remembered by two groups of friends, one from Newport News, Virginia, another from "Cadbrook," Paces, Virginia and Newman, Georgia. If one would not grow strong and gain health and be happy (and grateful) under such conditions, one must be heartless and hopeless indeed. I thank God for Florida, these lakes, my friends, this sanitarium, by whose combined ministry and goodness, thirteen pounds of avordupois have been added to the weight, if not the worth, of this grateful scribe.

The lakes, the placid lakes, the calm, reposeful, winsome lakes of sunny Florida! Only God, a good and worshipful God, could plan and plant them as they are. May the day hasten, and the hour speedily come, when the heart of man, shall be as peaceful as these lakes, and reflect as they do, the beauty, truth and goodness of His and their Creator.

BURLINGTON.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the First Christian Church, Burlington, celebrated with a dinner Friday night, the 19th, its own and the Woman's Missionary Convention's twenty-fifth anniversary. The minutes record that on March 18, 1912, there was held at the Christian Church, Burlington, a called meeting for the purpose of organizing a Home and Foreign Missionary Society. Prior to this time, the minutes of the Aid Society indicate missionary study and giving were engaged in by the members of the Aid Society. Rev. A. B. Kendall served as temporary chairman and Mrs. R. M. Morrow as temporary secretary of the called meeting. Mrs. Ada Teague moved that "We organize a Home and Foreign Missionary Society." Mr. Kendall put the question, and it was unanimously carried. The constitution prepared by the Southern Convention for such societies was then presented by Mr. Kendall and adopted. An election placed in the office the following: Mrs. Ada Teague, president; Mrs. J. P. Montgomery, vice-president; Mrs. D. E. Sellers, secretary; Mrs. A. B. Kendall, treasurer. And so was the beginning.

Twenty-two persons were enrolled as charter members, twenty-one ladies, and through some means, Rev. A. B. Kendall. The present membership is well over one hundred. The first year, 1912, the Society raised $68.90 for all purposes; by 1915, the fund to remain over $100.00; by 1919, over $400.00; by 1923, over $600.00, and since 1928, it has averaged over $1,000.00, with 1929, $1,568.48 as the high mark. During the twenty-five years the Society has given for missions $17,056.77.

At the first meeting it was voted to have a mission-study class, and Rev. A. B. Kendall was selected as the teacher. At the present time the Society meets each of the Mondays following the first three Sundays of each month. The first meeting is the general monthly session of the Society; the second meeting is for Bible study, and Mrs. W. R. Sellars, recent president of the Woman's Convention, is the leader; the third meeting is of circle groups.

The present officers are Mrs. J. H. McEwen, President; Mrs. J. H. Lightbourne, Vice-President; Mrs. D. C. Johnson, Secretary, Mrs. C. F. Neese, Treasurer.

The anniversary dinner was a pleasant and inspiring occasion. Beautiful Silver Anniversary favors were placed at each plate on tables arranged to form the Roman Twenty-Five—XXV. The service was rendered by girls of the World Fellowship Missionary Society, the menu was delectable, the program reminiscent, enlightening, hopeful, humorous, and the fellowship glowing. The benediction was glorious, consisting of the lighting of candles on a large and snow-white birthday cake, about which were offering plates for the reception of the anniversary gift for the memorial to the sainted Dr. W. W. Staley, received as the members and guests marched by singing "Blest Be the Tie." The finale was the cutting of the birthday cake and informal sociability while it was being eaten.

The following was the program as presented:

Memorial, Miss Sadie Fonville.

Quartet, "The Psalm of Life," Rebekah Lightbourne, Alma Lamm, Thomas Woodson, James H. Lightbourne, Jr., (Members of World Friendship Missionary Society).

Bible Study, Mrs. W. R. Sellars.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY— SUFFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH IN RETROSPECT.

In October, 1914, our organizer and very efficient president, Mrs. W. H. Dick, with her family moved to Greensboro, North Carolina. This society ordered that its records carry a copy of Dr. Staley's Suffolk Letter of September 23, 1914, written in appreciation of her faithful leadership.

At the second Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference, Miss Bessie Norfleet was elected Treasurer of the Conference, and at the next meeting of the society, November, 1914, resigned as local treasurer. Mrs. C. B. Duke, who was elected in her stead, served efficiently and faithfully for fifteen years. At the time of her resignation "A Tribute of Love and Appreciation" was read before the society and ordered placed on its records. Also, Mrs. Duke was presented with a Life Membership on the Southern Christian Convention's Woman's Mission Board. Mrs. M. F. Hall succeeded Mrs. Duke as Treas-

Our Elk Spur Church and Parsonage at Fancy Gap, Virginia.

surer, and is now serving her eighth year. We hope that she, too, will serve fifteen years. We have had only three treasures in twenty-five years.

The week of prayer was first observed by this society the first week in January, 1937, this observance being continued for several years. For some ten years, we have observed the World Day of Prayer.

At our fifth anniversary the society decided to clothe a little girl at the Christian Orphanage at Elon College, North Carolina, at a cost of $30.00 per year. Eulice Bradshaw was selected for us by Mr. C. D. Johnston, Superintendent. Several years later Mr. Johnston wrote us that Eulice was happily married, and suggested Mary Gilbert for our care. Later, Mary left the orphanage, and Mr. Johnston suggested that we take two children who were sisters, Madge and Annie Lee Thompson, 8 and 10 years of age. Mr. Johnston in a recent letter says: "Madge and Annie Lee are still with us and have grown into two beautiful young women with high ideals. Both of them are in their senior year at high school." These four children have been remembered in many ways, and $600.00 contributed for their clothing.

Until September, 1937, there had been no time allotted for definite missionary instruction in our Sunday school. The matter was discussed by the society and Mrs. W. H. Andrews, Colonel J. E. West and Mrs. Fred Bullock were appointed a committee to consult with Sunday school Officials. The outcome of this was a grant of five minutes each third Sunday morning, after the entire school assembled in the auditorium, to be used for this purpose. This was a beginning and thereafter, third Sunday was known in our Sunday school as Mission Sunday. A Sunday school Missionary Reader was appointed each month, Mrs. I. W. Johnson being the first reader. This plan was continued until September, 1924, when a Sunday school Superintendent of Missions was appointed and more time allotted. Mrs. W. H. Andrews became the Mission Superintendent. A carefully planned program was presented each third Sunday morning, until in 1927, when each department of the Sunday school took over its own missionary instruction. Of this work Dr. Atkinson says: "You will never know the value of these beginnings of missionary instruction in your Sunday school. Eternity alone will tell."

In September, 1917, the society voted to memorialize its deceased members by paying into the treasury of the Woman's Missionary Convention, $10.00 per member. To date, we have forty deceased members. Each of these have been memorialized by this society, with two exceptions. A memorial membership was given for Miss Bessie Norfleet by the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Convention, this society contributing $1.00 toward same. Mrs. W. W. Staley, deceased, had been given a Life Membership. Of our deceased member, we would say—Thus "In our work shall they live on."

To date the society has given Life Memberships to our three pastor's wives, to eight presidents and one treasurer, a total of twelve Life Memberships and thirty-eight Memorial Memberships, and a contribution toward one other, have been given by this society, for which it has paid $501.00. This membership plan is being used throughout the Southern way a fund is being accumulated to be used when needed, to care for our retired, sick or disabled missionaries.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

FOR FLORIDA YOUNG PEOPLE.

A. W. Knighton Bloom Memorial Scholarship to the Young People's Summer Conference at DeLeon Springs, June 12th-19th, will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Williams of Lake Worth, for the best book report of Twelve Negro Americans. The following questions will be considered in the report:

1. What difficulties does a Negro encounter who wishes to make something of himself? Illustrate from experiences related in the sketches of this book.

2. Has the book given you any new insight into the character and ability of the Negro? Refer to specific incidents in this book.

3. What do you think the Negro has a right to expect of life? Explain.

4. What will you do about it in your thinking and daily contacts?

Rules Governing the Contest.

1. Open to young people of the Florida Congregational-Christian churches, above 14 years of age.

2. Written reports must be in the hands of Mr. Charles A. Hoyt, Atlantic National Bank, W. Forsyth St., Jacksonville, Florida, by April 10, 1937. The decision will be announced at the Southeast Convention meeting in Jacksonville, April 20th-22nd. Judges of the contest will be: Mr. C. A. Hoyt, Mrs. W. T. Scott, Mrs. E. B. Leshner.

EASTERN VIRGINIA YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

The Youth Fellowship meeting which was held in Suffolk on February 13th, was well attended by young people of the fellowship and by pastors and those interested in the work.

The theme of the meeting was "Our Goals" and the superintendent of each department present presented some feature of the work to the Fellowship, each using a different method.

Miss Louise Baker led the worship service.

Mrs. Robert Lee House, Devotional life superintendent, led a study of the devotional life of the young people, presenting her subject by means of a dramatization. Taking part were some of the young people of Portsmouth and Rev. Mr. House.

A "Skit and Sales Talk," presented by Mr. Lester who was assisted by other young people, gave to the Fellowship ideas to be used by them in the use and value of their church papers and methods to be used in campaigning for more subscriptions. The Fellowship was reminded that one of the goals was the securing by each young person, one subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Miss Caroline Gort led a conference on Mission Projects. The Conference was open to the entire group to ask questions or discuss any of the various phases of the Service Department. Places to obtain materials were discussed.

A talk on "Local Action to Help Improve Economic Conditions" was made by Theodocia Beacham. The taking of some local action to help improve economic conditions is one of the goals, and suggestions were made of ways to work toward this goal.

Dr. Paul K. Buckles, pastor of Hampton Presbyterian Church, made a very inspiring talk on "The Upward Look," which was the main feature of the program during the fellowship supper.

The evening was concluded by an upper room service led by Mrs. W. B. Williams. The service was very inspiring and uplifting for those who took part.

We missed some of our faithful friends whom we had always expected to see and looked forward to seeing at our meetings. Among these, and most sincerely missed, was Dr. N. G. Newman. Also absent was Miss Lottie Mae Cross. The Fellowship accepted with regret the resignation of Miss Roberta Wright, Superintendent of Publications, who has secured employment and felt she no longer had time for the work.

THEODOCIA BEACHAM,
Secretary.

WHY NOT FOR ELON SUMMER SCHOOL?

Above is given the announcement of a scholarship to the Florida young people's conference next summer, to be awarded by two fine laymen of one of our Florida churches. Why doesn't someone in North Carolina or Virginia offer a similar scholarship to the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training?

The value of such a contest is twofold. First, of course, someone will be able to attend the summer conference, who might not otherwise be able to go. Also, a large group will be reading a book which will be of value to them—and in their reports they will be crystallizing their thoughts and attitudes toward the Negro. Both of these will do much for your young people—why not offer such a prize?

HAVE YOU READ?

Twelve Negro Americans by Mary Jenness.

This book contains sketches of the lives of Negroes of our country, who have overcome hardships and conquered difficulties. They are not the singers and artists, of whom people often talk, but Y. M. C. A. secretaries, church workers, and the like.

Paper bound copies of this book may be secured for 60c from Pattie Lee Coghill, 117 W. Forsyth St., Jacksonville, Florida, or from the Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass.

In the garden of Gethsemane is where Jesus won a victory that made the way to the Cross more easy. It was a quiet, secluded place. The triumphal entry had past. His half-hearted friends had forsaken Him; one of the disciples had turned traitor; and the rest were asleep. It was alone that Jesus struggled. "The spirit was willing but the flesh was weak." A few hours hence and He would hear a raging mob cry, "Away with Him!"

Jesus prayed that "the cup" might pass from Him. Yet He concluded the prayer by "Nevertheless, not my will but thine be done." He was then prepared to face false accusations, mockery, scorn, and even the agony of the Cross.

JESUS PRAYING FOR HIS DISCIPLES.

LESSON XI—MARCH 14 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: That they may be one, even as we are one.—John 17: 22.

LESSONS John 16: 1-17; 26.

As one reads the sixteenth and seventeenth chapters of the gospel according to John he is impressed at the emphasis which Jesus puts upon his "joy" and his "peace." He refers to these terms again and again. And yet even as He spoke the words, He knew that the mob was forming that would do Him to death. He knew that troublous times lay ahead. He knew what would be in store for Him. But there was a calmness and a serenity of spirit about Him that can find explanation in only one way. Jesus' life was rooted deeply in God. He had inner resources that circumstances could not touch. He had a joy and a peace which the world could not give, and which it could not take away. He knew that men could not do anything to His spirit. Jesus was sure of God. And because He was sure of God, He had no fear of what was about to happen. He knew that God would supply all His need. Radiantly He cried, "I have overcome the world."

We modern folks need to discover and utilize these inner resources for living. We are so harried and so hurried, so hustled and so bustled, so worn and weary. And as Dr. Jones says, "in most cases it is not from over-work, but from under-being." We do not have adequate inner resources for daily living. And it is our fault. Our God is able to supply all our need according to His riches in glory by Jesus Christ. It is possible for a man to have a joy so deep in his life that it is an abiding joy. It is possible for him to have that peace of God which passeth all understanding and which defies all assaults from without. His joy, His peace,—how we need these fruits of the spirit in our modern world.

If I Go Not Away!

The disciples were bemoaning the fact that their Master plainly told them that He was going away from them. As He Himself said, "sorrow had filled their hearts." And it was quite natural that it should be so. They had come to depend so much upon Him. They had come to find new life in Him. The very thought that He was going away struck fear and terror in their hearts. But alas they did not understand His essential nature or His essential mission.

If I Go.

"It is expedient for you that I go away . . . if I go I will send Him—the Comforter, the Holy Spirit, the One Called to One's Side—unto you." If Christ had not gone away He would have been localized. Only those who lived in Palestine, those who came in actual contact with Him would have received His blessing. But because He went away, because He shuffled off His mortal body and was clothed with a glorified body, He became universalized—He is everywhere and always available. What a tragedy it would have been if He had not gone away! What a blessing it is that He has sent the Comforter to be with us always. The Comforter is simply the living Christ with us.

In the World, But Not of the World.

"I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil one." Christians are to be in the world but not of the world. The Christian life cannot be lived in a vacuum. The monk or the ascetic is not the ideal Christian. The ideal Christian is the man or woman who lives in the midst of the world, but who is not worldly. He cannot help the world by absent treatment. In the home, in the school, in the market-place, in the social contacts of life, he is to be a representative of Christ, and the mediator of new life through Christ. We Christians are to be Christians in the place we are.

As Thou Didst Send Me.

"As thou didst send me into the world, even so sent I them into the world." One has to catch his breath when he reads that statement. But Jesus meant it. Just as God sent Jesus into the world to reveal the character of God to the world, just so has Christ sent us into the world to reveal the character of God to the world. Just as God sent Jesus into the world to save the world, just so has Jesus sent us into the world to help to save the world. To be sure we cannot do this of ourselves. But we are to yield ourselves to the Spirit of Jesus to the end that in us the world may see the Spirit of Christ, and through us the world may receive the saving touch of Christ. We are personal representatives of Jesus Christ.

I Pray For Them Also That Believe On Me Through Their Word.

Christ prays not only for the disciples; He prays for the men and women of future generations, for all who shall believe of the testimony of His witnesses. That means that He prays for you and for me, if we profess discipleship to Him. Christ praying for me—that causes a lump to come into one's throat. But it is true, Jesus Himself tells us that He will pray for us. We must do everything in our power to see that that prayer is answered.

That They May All Be One.

Jesus prays that His followers may be one. He evidently means more than formal unity, He evidently means organic unity—"that they may all be one, even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in them, that they may also be in us." In any event the large number, indeed the disgraceful number of sects and divisions and denominations are one of the barriers to the coming of the Kingdom. One of the most hopeful signs of the times is the new emphasis on church union. "That the world may believe that thou didst send me . . . that they may be one even as we are one." Let us pray for unity and union. One thing is sure, the kingdom of God has not come in fullness as yet.

The Unknown God.

"O righteous Father, the world knew thee not." The world had not known God in the fullness of His grace until Jesus came. In Him we have the image of the invisible God. In Him the Word was made flesh. In Him God came down to dwell among men. Jesus knew God, and God was so real to Him that the disciples knew God had sent Him. He made known to them God's name, that is, God's character. God is like Christ—that is, the radiant theme of the gospel. And the end of it all was that this love of God, revealed in Christ, should be in all men. "That the love wherewith thou lovest me may be in them, and I in them. Christ is us, revealing Himself through us."

DON'T BE FOOLED.

"This I say, that no one may delude you with persuasiveness of speech."—Col. 2:4. (Mod. Speech version.)

Speech is often fashioned to mislead, to cover up, to detour thought, to trick one. And there is no trickery so deluding and no poison so deadly, no infection so fatal, no weapon more sure, no argument so false, no quack so dangerous as one who dispenses such falsehoods.

The one who has the ability and is wise enough to penetrate the thoughts of others, is head and shoulders above his surroundings in intellectual gifts, and when such a gift is controlled by the Holy Spirit of God, how great is he! His greatest need will be supplied, for he will be on guard at the most vital points of his life. At the ear-gate of his soul where the devil makes his most vital attacks, he will be fortified, and his satanic majesty will fly away.

Weigh your own words most carefully, but just as carefully weigh the words that thou dost hear.

Prayer—Our heavenly Father, be Thou the spirit of our lives and the guard at our mouth and ears. May nothing find utterance, and nothing find entrance that is not in accordance with Thy will in purity and holiness. Amen.

TUESDAY.

JESUS ONLY.

"And suddenly looking around about, they saw no one any more, save Jesus only, with themselves."—Mark 9:8.

Our text is taken from the story of the appearance of Moses and Elijah appearing with Jesus and the disciples on the mountain-top. Moses was, in his lifetime, the greatest of law-givers. Elijah was the greatest of prophets. God had buried Moses with His own hands and Elijah had been taken up to God without seeing death. To the disciples, this appearance of these great men on the mountain-top, as they worshipped there with Jesus, must have been most inspiring and of highest significance in their hopes of future glory. But to these disciples it was more significant, in that these prophets were hardly missed when they disappeared. For Jesus was there, and He was infinitely greater than they.

Life has furnished us with many great men and many great things. Great achievements have transpired. They all are significant only as they point to the Creator and His Son, Jesus, the Giver and the Blessor of all these things.

Prayer—O Lord, Thou art our need. Be Thou all that we want. In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

PERSECUTING GOD.

"And I said, who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest."—Acts 26:15.

Think of it. Is it possible for a mere man to persecute the Son of God? It is an awful fact. Amos R. Wells used to say that this is the "greatest disaster that can come to a human soul."

And yet this disaster is one that is entirely possible to every one of us. It happens when one abuses any one. It happens when one is guilty of slander. It happens when one is unjust or unkind. It happens when in any way, large or small, harm is done one.

Our Lord and Saviour is identified with the lowliest of His children. In all alike there is the image of God that has been planted there. It behooves every one to be considerate, loving, kind and true to every one, or be guilty of great sin against our own souls. In the presence of others, we are in the presence of God.

Prayer—Our heavenly Father, forgive us our meanness, and everything that we have done wrong against our neighbor, in deed, or word, or thought. Teach us how to see Thee in our fellowman. Amen.

THURSDAY.

FAIR PRAISE TO GOD.

"My tongue also shall talk of thy righteousness all the day long."—Ps. 71:15.

He who talks about God all the time, or is harping on righteousness all the time is usually considered by his fellowmen as crazy. But with David he could not help doing so. His love for God was deep and fervid.

With us, what we are zealous about we usually talk about. Politicians are constantly urging us to belief and fidelity in politics. They exalt party leaders and demand our admiration. If we are in love with some one, we cannot forbear speaking praise of them, when opportunity presents itself, and we commend them to the favor of others. If some book is worth reading, we hasten to commend it to our friends. Why do we not do as much for the Lord.

Prayer—Forgive us, O Lord, of our much silence about Thee. Be with us in a special manner that we may reflect Thy goodness to all men. Amen.

FRIDAY.

BELIEVING AGAINST HOPE.

"Abraham . . . Who against hope believed in hope."—Rom. 4:18.

Is it possible? Humanity today, believing so much on and but little beyond the material, finds it impossible to believe against hope, for the hope contradicts belief.

But every one that believes in Christ knows that it can be done. Realities in the realm of faith beyond hope, all along history's pathway, are glowingly beautiful. Many clouds drift across the skies, but the sun and the moon and the stars still shine; and the Christian knows that some day these will disappear and heaven will stand forth clear.

Prayer—Our Father, give us the faith of Abraham, and while we believe may we find hope that is irresistible until we shall find Thee in Thy fulness. Amen.

SATURDAY.

BLESSING-BEARERS.

"Tarry: For I have divined that Jehovah hath blessed me for thy sake."—Genesis 30:25-34.

Laban was a trickster, but he was religious enough to discover that God was on the side of his son-in-law, Jacob, and so he wanted to keep Jacob on his side. Without copying Laban's trickery, we may imitate his insight, and associate ourselves with those that know God and live with Him.

That is one of the great purposes of the church, to bring together God's people. Men are most careless in their friendships, where they should be most careful.

When we perceive that some one has brought blessing into our lives, we may be sure that God is the origin of it. We have been led by science to recognize disease carriers; let us be led by religion to recognize the carriers of divine blessing.

Prayer—Give us friends, O God! Give us Thy friends, O God! May we never choose our friends, but allow Thee to select them for us. In the name of the Friend of friends. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

"He that spareth his worries hath knowledge."—Proverbs 17:22-28.

The task of a teacher is noble. Knowledge is given us to impart. It is still more our duty to pass wisdom

OVERCOMING EVIL WITH GOOD.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."—Rom.

12: 21.

Every boy and girl, and every man and woman in this congregation can understand that there is evil and that there is good. This whole service is designed to help everyone present, both boys and girls, and men and women, to fight on the side of good. There they stand, good, and evil. A very wise man, one who has seen much of the world of his day, had helped to lick evil in many a life, and tear down its stronghold in many a city, has shown us that it is possible for evil to crowd out the good. His message would be, men and women, boys and girls, do not let evil whip you, instead, whip it. "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

This is a beautiful world, and a good world; but for a long, long time evil has been in it. Let me read from the first page of the Old Testament: "And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed, and out of the ground made the Lord to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight (What a beautiful garden! Every tree that is pretty! Oh! how beautiful trees are! And this must have meant also the beautiful plants like roses, and lilies, and lilacs! It must have been beautiful, indeed!), and good for food (Yes, it was a garden for food as well as for flowers,—God wants us not only to be good, but good for something!); and the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil; and a river went out of Eden to water the garden."

I. Life Is Like a Garden. God planted the garden of Eden. God planned our lives. In the garden of Eden there were living, growing, beautiful trees. In our lives there are possibilities more towering than majestic oaks, more graceful than spreading elms! Will we crowd out these tender plants, they are but seedlings with briars, and weeds, and sour grass? It is possible for us to be overcome with evil thoughts, ugly actions, and live to be but dwarfs of soul and mind and spirit.

A friend of mine came to me last summer all apologetic. I wanted to bring you some more of those wonderful watermelons like I raised last year, he said, but the rains came for so long a time, and just such a period in the life of my watermelon plants that the weeds and grass completely choked them out. The little plants were overcome with evil! "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

II. Good Plants and Evil Plants Grow In a Garden. There is no need to argue where the evil seed came from, nor what is its purpose. Suffice it to say just now that those evil seeds are there? The man or woman, or boy or girl, who overlooks that fact, simply lets evil overcome him. When the weather is warm, and sunny, and the daffodils, and birds warn us that spring is coming, you go out and plow up, or dig up, your garden, and make the seedbed soft as silk; then you sow only seed from flower bedecked packages, and set only plants from expensive hotbeds, and then what happens? Almost before you know it, the ground is growing with grass weeds. Then you get busy, or you are lost!

George had the good habit of getting up and going to church. It had been carefully formed there by the aid of a loving mother, and a fond father. He had learned to love the church. There he met the finest friends, learned the noblest lessons, and found himself surrounded by the best of the people his community afforded. He missed a Sunday, and ran across someone who had long since stopped attending church. They talked together about other things. George's conscience hurt him, but next Sunday, he carried out some plan agreed upon between the two which left the church out. Evil grew and good wasted away! He was overcome with dozens of other evil habits, and the sunlight of sweet music and sincere prayers, and earnest preaching had no effect on him, because George was not there! He had forgotten the words of his mother's Bible: "Abhor that which is evil, cleave to that which is good." (Rom. 12:9.)

In the same way, Bill took his first drink. He had been taught to abstain from it. He dreaded it, and feared it, and looked upon it as an evil monster. The sunlight of the sweetness of his young mother, and the cleanness of his fine father were bulwarks of faith for him. He had been surrounded by life's truest and noblest. But one night at some party or with a group of his associates, he took his first drink. And a hurt conscience became an open place, fallowed and ready, for the growing of briars and weeds,—and before he realized it, a choice young fellow was being overcome of evil, rather than holding on to the good which had ample power to overcome evil. He had forgotten the words of the blessed old Book: "Seek good, and not evil; that ye may live!" (Amos. 5:14.)

III. The Hand That Helps the Harvest. "When I would do good evil is present" (Rom. 7:21), the best of us will find. The way to make the garden of life a success is not to dodge the issue: "Woe unto them who call evil good; that put darkness for light; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!" (Isa. 5:20). There is nothing to be gained by saying there is no harm in this or that evil. That is not the way to fight! That is the way to lose!

How? Well, the remedy is so simple we may overlook it! It is found right in the text: "Overcome evil with good." Take evil and overcome it with good! My father used to take honey from the old fashioned bee hive. Dwelling between the combs of honey in the hive were hundreds of bees. He wanted them to get out of the way. He took a torch in his hand and blew the smoke amongst them and they quickly moved back! He held the right weapon in his hand! Do you want to overcome evil? Put yourself in the hand of God. Ally yourself with good! Daily I pray not that Thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that Thou shouldst keep them from evil." Give God a chance to answer that prayer in your life!

along to others. Knowledge-misers are no better off than gold-misers.

But our Lord has bidden us not to cast our pearls before swine. A wise man will always be cautious in his speech until he knows that his listener has wisdom enough to value wisdom. It is folly to pour knowledge through a tube open at the other end.

Those best able to speak are best able to tell when it is best not to speak. The spare words do not mean parsimony, but only an understanding of the value of words. A child will toss about a handful of gems in idle play; a lapidary will handle them with respect.

Prayer—Be with our speech, O Thou that spake as never man spake. Amen. —Amos R. Wells.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The winter has been so mild that we thought perhaps we would get through without snow. But alas! on Sunday morning Feb. 28th when we looked out of our window we were surprised to see the ground covered with a beautiful blanket of snow. It was so fluffy and white it had piled up on the little evergreens till they bent under the load. Oh, how beautiful they looked all banked in the snow.

No artist could paint a scene so beautiful as nature had painted it on that beautiful sabbath morning, painted that we might see the handiwork of God. How He could take water and turn it into snow so beautiful and white and clothe every bush and shrub in a beautiful white robe that was so pure and clean.

But soon the trains began to pass and the smoke, soot, ashes and cinders began to mar its beauty and pollute its purity.

It reminds us that God made man in His own image and pure as the beautiful snow. But man let sin come into his life and mar that beauty.

How great if we could live lives so free from sin that our souls would be clean and white as the beautiful snow. The writer heard a noted speaker deliver an address to young people on one occasion and he was discussing the "Potter," telling them how the potter would take clay and shape it into beautiful vessels. "But," said he, "sometimes the potter would mar the clay and not make out of it the vessel he started out to make. He then turned to face a group of young people and said, "God does not always make out of you what he intended to make. He started out to make something perfect but you let sin come in and mar your life, then he had to take what was left and make the next best thing out of it."

A beautiful Christian girl whose life had been a model life in her community was looking at a beautiful sunset scene one evening and she remarked that she wished her sunset as she passed over the river could be as beautiful. Only a few weeks later she was taken ill and those who stood by her bedside as her life ebbed away said the beautiful satisfied smile that enveloped her face in her last moments indicated that her wish came true.

What is more beautiful than a life beautifully lived. The writer realizes that his greatest responsibility is to live a life before the children in his care that will be worthy of emulation.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

One needs a submissive spirit to say "Thy will be done." When we come to this phrase in the prayer of Jesus, we should stop unless we have a sincere purpose. He who has such a spirit will discover that God supplies a grace which makes it easier to endure sorrows and disappointments in this life.

To Think About—

1. Is it true that too many of us are depending upon our own strength rather than upon God for a solution to "The Way of Life?" 2. How may one discover the will of God? 3. Is there a sure way of knowing what is right and what is wrong? 4. Have we ever prayed, "Thy will be done" in regard to: the use of Sunday, whether one should use alcoholic beverages, or to some of our social sins?

Suggested Hymns—

"Give of Your Best to the Master," "Have Thine Own Way," "Into My Heart."

"Let me, Lord my way forget,
If only Thy will be done!
Let me yield without regret,
If only Thy will be done;
What am I that I should choose?
What is mine to take or use?
All myself I gladly lose,
If only Thy will be done."—Anon.

In Memoriam

THOMAS J. CHRISMON.

Thomas J. Chrismon, 74, passed peacefully to his eternal reward on February 15, 1937, at St. Leo's Hospital, Greensboro, N. C. The body was interred at his church, Apple's Chapel, after funeral services by the pastor, assisted by Revs. Trogden and Brown of the Holiness faith, and C. E. Gerringier, of our Palm Street Church. He was the father of 15 children and had 52 grandchildren, and 14 great-grandchildren. He was a member of Apple's Chapel Church almost all his life, uniting when a boy. The Lord bless and comfort his loved ones left this side of the river of death.

B. J. EARP.

NEWMAN.

Mrs. E. M. Newman, who was 70 years old last August, passed to her reward, March 2, 1937. She had been in poor health for the last three years, but was critically ill for only a short time before her death.

Mrs. Newman was a faithful wife, a devoted mother, and a friend to all. She has lived in Franklin County, N. C. for more than 40 years, all of which she has given in loyal and devoted service to Liberty (Vance) the church of which she was a member.

Mrs. Newman is survived by her husband, two sons, H. B. and B. M. Newman of Vance County, and one daughter, Mrs. Tollie Foster of Franklin County; one brother, T. W. Moore of Richmond, Va., two sisters, Mrs. Florence James of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. Emma Hicks of Norlina, N. C.

Funeral services were conducted at Liberty by her pastor, Rev. S. E. Madren, assisted by Rev. C. E. Newman and Rev. H. E. Crutchfield. Interment was in the church cemetery.

May God comfort and bless the bereaved.
S. E. MADREN.

McDONALD.

It was God's will to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. Alec McDonald who departed this life June 17, 1936, at the age of 43 years. She was the mother of four children and one grandchild. She was a consistent member of the Bethel Christian Church, having united with the church at a very early age. Her services and fellowship will be greatly missed. But God needed one more angel in Heaven, so finding her ready he called her home.

God called her home
He thought it best,
We leave her there
With Him to rest.
Mrs. W. H. ALGER,
Mrs. NANNIE MONGER,
Mrs. A. A. DOFFLEMEYER.

TAYLOR.

The death angel knocked at the door of one of our homes to bring sorrow and heartache to all who were left when He took from our midst, Mrs. Mary Eudora Taylor, a much beloved member and co-worker in the Ladies' Aid Society of Bethlehem Christian Church. In her going we greatly miss one of our oldest members. Her many years of service and the friendly hand-clasp made her but the more endeared to the hearts of those who had experienced the joy and privilege of serving with her. She loved the work of the Kingdom of God, and all who knew and loved her will miss her faithful presence.

Because, then of the love and esteem of our hearts for her, be it therefore resolved:

1. That we acknowledge with a spirit of submission the Divine Providence of God who said, "There remaineth, therefore, a rest for the people of God."

2. That we honor her life not only with our lips, but by being true in service to the cause she loved and served.

3. That we as a group of God's children purpose to do His will that some day we may stand in the same group where our ranks are now broken and death cannot come.

4. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the family and remind them of the words of Him who said, "In my Father's house are many mansions."

5. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the minutes of the Ladies' Aid Society of Bethlehem Christian Church, a copy sent to the family, and one to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. O. D. KING,
Rev. R. E. BRITTLE,
Committee.

Mrs. ETTA E. BYRD.

God, who ever deals with His children through love, but whose Providence is beyond the understanding of man, visited one of the homes of our church family and took from our midst one that we loved, but one He loved better. In her going we miss one who has been a true and faithful member and whose life has been the example of patience and service. In the going of Mrs. Etta E. Byrd, the Ladies Aid Society of Bethlehem Christian Church has sustained a great loss, but by faith we rejoice with her in the realization of the joy that awaits all the faithful of God.

Inasmuch, then, as God has seen fit to transplant her life to a more beautiful garden and transform it from a life of pain, sickness, sorrow, and death to one of joy, peace, and eternal life, be it therefore resolved:

1. That we purpose in our hearts not to murmur nor complain at God's Providence, by faith knowing our loss is her gain.

2. That we, in our lives, cultivate that spirit of patience, long-suffering, and gentleness that was so noticeable in her smile.

3. That we consecrate anew our lives to the cause that was so dear to her heart, that when we are called, we may share with her the joy she now experiences.

4. That our deepest heart-felt sympathy be extended her loved ones.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the minutes of the Ladies' Aid Society of Bethlehem Christian Church of which she was a faithful member until the end, a copy be sent the family, and one to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

A. W. ANDES.

There was a man in the land of Uz, whose name was Job; and that man was perfect and upright and one that feared God, and eschewed evil.—Job. 1: 1.

The year of our Lord, one thousand, nine hundred and thirty-six took from our earthly presence a dearly beloved brother, father, husband, pastor, preacher and friend. A brother because he was ever ready to share with anyone in need; a father because he bore faithfully the burdens and obligations of his home, as well as the spiritual burdens and obligations of his people; as a husband, we say, without equal because of the completeness of his home life, in spite of much absence, reflect the beauty of his soul; a pastor in that his life, his soul was given in service of his flock; a preacher in that he was ever mindful to preach the gospel without fear, letting its sting fall where it may or its soul lifting grace reach the heights unknown. He was ever a friend to man.

Much has been said about him, and far be it from us to add or detract, for his work will continue to reflect the completeness of his labors. However, we pause in memory to his noble efforts and his lasting influence to commend to our people the practices of his life. In his home, complete harmony, and leaving behind him a family for which praise cannot be limited; in actions, as brave and pure as the most virtuous knight; in words, the truth only; in thoughts, the noblest and finest; and as far as it is humanly possible he was a perfect and upright man, one that feared God and eschewed evil, in that his religion was pure and undefiled before God and that he kept himself unspotted from the world.

LIFE'S HORIZONS

By REV. C. A. VINCENT.

The people of the world could be classed with fair accuracy into three classes according to the horizon of their lives.

Narrowing Horizon.

In youth we choose the goals of life, the ideals, for the realization of which we labor and sacrifice. What these ideals are, the goals which we seek, determine, as life goes on, the horizon of one's life. The youth who seeks material things out of which to build his life will find this an interesting world for a time, but the time will come when he has won or failed to win what he sought, that he will discover that his world is narrowing down, is growing less zestful, less alluring. When a man makes the plan of the house he will build, he determines what the completed house shall be, whether it is a shack unworthy of his time and strength, or a beautiful home. One of the most pathetic things in this world is a person who has spent his life's energies for the things that are, at the best, temporary and dissatisfying. "What is the price of that corner lot?" asked one man of another. "I do not know," replied his friend, "but I know it cost the man his soul."

Stationary Horizons.

Scarcely less pathetic is the life that makes no advance. Many a Christian's experience of God and the great spiritual realities has become formal and has not gained in richness and power. Many a citizen who thinks he is patriotic does not vote nor give his love and support to the Master who first summoned men to be neighbors and govern themselves. The cause of this lack of growth are three—Lack of food, one must study to know the truths of religion and government if he is to grow; lack of experience, one must run on errands of mercy and use his hands in helpful deeds, if life is to mean more to him and to others as the years pass; and lack of good breathing, one must through prayer and devotion to his nation and church deepen the power of his moral and spiritual and social emotions. The exaggeration of rites above life and of one's personal affairs above the welfare of others makes one's horizon stationary.

Expanding Horizons.

The person who is loyal to God, who stands up for the highest ideals of the United States and lives a brotherly life with his fellow men, will have an expanding horizon in life. He who places God above self, finds his life reaching higher and higher, who puts principles and ideals above money and fame, learns little by little that principles reach below human selfishness and gratification, and that a life lived for others, grows more zestful and gives an increasing confidence in the triumph of love and justice and peace. Thus one's horizon expands in height, depth, breadth, and length, and, as the citizens live these principles, the dreams and sacrifices of Washington, Lincoln, and a host of others in every walk and work of life are realized more and more in the relations of its citizens.

A Tomorrow.

Such a nation and civilization always has a tomorrow. Each generation advances a step beyond its predecessor. We are the results of all the toiling centuries of the past. We are the architects of the future. The human race is one in hopes and fears. Their sacrifices were not wasted in the past, and will help us build permanently today and tomorrow.

"Others shall sing the song,
Others shall right the wrong,
Finish what I began,
And all I fail or win.

"What matter I or they,
Mine or another's day,
So the right word is said,
And life the sweeter made.

I join the great march onward,
"I feel the earth move sunward,
And take by faith, while living,
My freehold of thanksgiving."

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Rev. W. H. Denison is to be in the Eastern Virginia Conference for a week beginning Easter Sunday. Stewardship conferences will be held so that all churches can be represented.

Rev. J. S. Johnson, of Niagra, N. C., has accepted a call to serve the Dendron, Va., pastorate, and is to begin work on April 1st. These churches have not had a resident minister for several years, and their many friends will be glad that they are now to have a young minister to serve them.

Several ministers from the Southern Convention have been invited to share in a conference on Evangelism and Worship at Bel Air, Maryland, on March 29th-30th. It is to be hoped that they will all take advantage of this opportunity. One cannot learn enough on these important subjects.

Rev. J. A. Denton and his good people of Grace's Chapel near Sanford, North Carolina, can be justly proud of their beautiful brick chapel which is nearing completion and may be ready for use on Easter Sunday. A near neighbor sent in this news, and THE CHRISTIAN SUN family will rejoice with this church because of its success.

The choir of our Monticello church, Brown Summit, North Carolina, is busy on an Easter program. The pastor, Rev. E. J. Sanderson, says that they "hope to follow Jesus from the last supper to the resurrection in Scripture and song. Rev. Mr. Sanderson also says that his work at Haw River is beginning nicely. He is a busy man with home duties, school work, and two churches to serve.

Your editor is exceedingly anxious to get news and ideas from the people of our churches. A news paper must have news. And a Church paper should have ideas. Tell us what you are doing. Send all items for print, and all subscriptions to No. 505 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia. And thanks for your help. It is your paper. Write for it. Make it better.

It is the busy pastors that have written to say that their churches would work on getting new subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Quite a number have used the stamped envelopes sent them some time ago, and promise that a sincere effort will be made for the church and the church paper. Thank you, friends. This is a task large enough for all to have a share.

For the next few weeks every minister in our churches in the Southeast will receive THE CHRISTIAN SUN. This is a gift from the Southern Convention. Naturally it is hoped that those who do not subscribe will find the paper to have real value, so much, in fact, that they will subscribe. But there is no obligation. Just read it. That is all we ask, unless you want to do more than just read.

There is at least one minister in the Convention that says all his officials must have the church paper in the home. He does not know how to preach to them unless they read about what is going on, and he does not know how they can be good leaders without reading the Church paper. Most of the officials were willing to subscribe and he gave it to the others. If they will read the paper, his work will be much easier.

Miss Alice True, writing from Portsmouth, New Hampshire, suggests that it would be good to know of the song writers the Christian Church has furnished. Now that is a capital idea. If you know of someone who has written a good song, one that has been put into some good song book, please send that information to the editor, who will gladly publish such information, and also pass it along to the Convention Historian, Mr. W. E. MacClenny of Suffolk, Va.

Don Cheney, 20, of Orlando, Florida, and Malcolm Corlies, 19, of East Orange, N. J., were instantly killed and six others injured when the car in which the fencing team of Rollins College skidded from the road, ran into a pole and burned near Richmond, Virginia last Monday. Others injured in the accident were Professor William Roney, professor of modern languages and coach, Jack Hagenbach of Newark, N. J., Gene Townsend of Orlando, Fla., Don A. Cetrulo of Newark, Oscar Ehrhorn, Jr., of New York, and George E. Fuller of Mobile, Ala. They were on their way to meet the Navy team at Annapolis when the tragedy occurred.

A class of teen age girls of the First Christian Church, Norfolk, Virginia, recently set out to secure subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN in order to get the members of the church to read, and also to get some money with which to attend the Elon Summer School on June 21st-26th, next. Thirty-two was quite a staggering number, and they had to work until the last day. But they reached the quota, and received twenty-five per cent commission. Just another illustration of what young people can do when they become interested.

OUR FIRST PAGE PICTURE.

We are greatly indebted to Rev. L. E. Warner and the Walker's Chapel Methodist Protestant Church of Arlington County, Va. for the beautiful picture on our first page this week. It is a reproduction of a painting in the Walker's Chapel Church four miles from Washington, D. C.

The picture is back of the pulpit, and is a full-figure, mural painting of Christ, done by a member of the church, Mrs. Cherry Ford White, a professional artist of experience and repute. It was unveiled May 4, 1936, when the church celebrated its sixty-fifth anniversary. A large audience shared in this service, and people have come from many parts of our country and some foreign countries to see this picture.

Mrs. White says it has been her great desire to paint the picture of the Christ, and in this picture she has tried to portray in a slender body the compassion of a mighty soul against the background of immense, soul-resisting strength. It was this great soul that said: "Come unto me and rest."

Many sermons have been preached on the picture, and one believes that many more will be. Those who go to Washington may well take the time to see the original. Doubtless they will.

JUNE 21 TO 26, 1937.

This is the date set by the Board of Christian Education for the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training. Pastors, superintendents, mission workers and young people will please remember the date and try not to let other things conflict with it, for this is the one time during the year that the Southern Convention offers leadership training for all of its young people and leaders.

Rev. W. E. Wiseman, pastor of our church in Greensboro, N. C., will be the dean, and Miss Irene Cotten of Dendron, Virginia, will act as registrar. Rev. F. C. Lester of Norfolk, Virginia, will be general chairman. Rev. Robert Lee House of Portsmouth, is to plan a program especially for ministers.

Further announcement will be made later, but this preliminary statement is being made so there will be no conflicts in any churches which may prevent people from attending.

ELON COLLEGE CLUBS.

Rev. Robert Lee House, pastor of our Portsmouth, Virginia, Church has manifested a real interest in all institutions of his church. He has recently made a significant contribution to Elon College. He, himself, is a devout churchman. He is the product of a church school. He knows the value of an institution of higher learning for the church if the church is to go forward through Christian Education, and how else could it hope to go forward?

The practical value of Elon College to the Christian Church is determined by the contributions that the college is able to make the church. If the college is of no practical benefit to the church, then there would be no excuse for its existence and no occasion for its support. The college was established specifically for the training and culture of the young people of the church. Particularly was the college constructed for the training of its ministers. Ninety per cent of the present active ministers in the Southern Convention are either graduates of the college or have been students here. A very large number of the laity of the church have received part or all of their college training at Elon College. The college is in as good position as it has ever been to render service to the church throughout the Southern Convention. For the good of both the college and the church, a more universal patronage on the part of the homes of the church is desired. For two years past practically all accommodations at the college have been exhausted; however, we have had far too few students from our own church. We are urging all pastors and parents to forward us names of high school seniors belonging to the Christian Church that we may contact them in the interest of Elon College, and we will greatly appreciate cooperation in this particular.

Brother House, sensing that and other needs that should be met by the local churches of the Convention, has proposed the organization of an Elon College Club in every local church. He has led the way by organizing a club in his church at Portsmouth. This club has gotten off at a good start and has the honor of presenting a proposed constitution and by-laws for the clubs as follows:

b. To cultivate Denominational loyalty and train our people in the educational ideals of our church.

c. To promote a better acquaintance among the leaders of our local churches.

The writer wishes to commend most heartily Brother House and his good people for starting this commendable undertaking and it is hoped that other churches will follow in quick succession. There are great possibilities in such an organization. I can conceive of no movement which would be of greater benefit and of more lasting good to both the church and the college than a college club in the local church organized and operating on the basis as outlined above. Who will be next?

A HALF CENTURY TOGETHER.

It was the writer's privilege to spend a few hours most pleasantly in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Crawford. The occasion was the celebration of their Golden Wedding Anniversary. For fifty years they have lived together a life of peace, love, and faithfulness. They have shared together the burdens, sorrows, and sacrifices as they have built and maintained their home and endeavored to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Together they have attended church, and in many ways have shown their love and loyalty to the Lord and His Church.

Just a few Sundays ago Brother Crawford walked six miles to attend the services of his church. Of course his good wife could not walk so far, but we feel sure that her heart was there. Whenever possible Brother Crawford attends the sessions of the Conference, and of the Southern Convention.

Brother Crawford's life has been, and still is one of service in church, community and county. Teaching is his cherished work, and while he has passed the age of active service, as usually defined, he still teaches school near the top of the Blue Ridge Mountains, walking the distance of six miles over a rugged mountain road each morning.

Brother Crawford has also served his county in a number of offices, proving the esteem in which he is held by the citizens of his county.

As these servants of the Lord approach the sunset of life, our prayer is that the rest of the journey may be peaceful and happy.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

HOLY WEEK.

On next Sunday the Christian World will think again of the triumphal entry of Jesus into Jerusalem, and will join in the chorus started by the crowds then and continued through the centuries: "Hosanna to the Son of David; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest." Palm branches will still wave in honor of the Nazarene who rode as a king into the Holy City many centuries ago.

To those who sang his praises on Sunday, heard him argue with the religious leaders on Monday and Tuesday, visited with him in the home of friends on Wednesday, ate with him on Thursday, saw him crucified and buried on Friday, the week beginning on Palm Sunday was anything but holy, or happy. It was fiendish, disappointing, heart-rending. It appeared to them that the very Devil himself was let loose, and that even God had forsaken them.

But to those who look back upon the scenes and see also the beauty of Easter Day with the resurrection of Jesus, the week stands out from all the rest, superior, more sacred, and they call it Holy Week. Well we may, for in it we see the eternal conflict of Good and Evil at their height, and witness to the triumph of Good.

In the heart of every one is this great conflict. Sometimes it is more fierce than at others. All the powers of evil seem to attack in full force, friends desert, and even God is far away. To those who, looking back to such a week, can also see the beginning of new life, a sort of resurrection to the abundant life, to them such a time becomes a Holy Week. All of us may profitably read again the story in the four Gospels of the last week of the life of Jesus, and seek to find the sacredness in his life that brought final triumph over all physical forces and left him free in the spirit realm. Then we will witness a new Holy Week.

THIS IS IMPORTANT.

The campaign for subscriptions to "The Christian Sun" is very important. Unless the members of the church read about the church, they cannot know what is going on, and will be only partially as efficient as they could be. All pastors, church officials, Sunday School superintendents and teachers, parents, young people, and children should be learning all they can about religion and the church of which they are members. This means that they should be reading their church paper, and if they are members of our churches in the southeast, and especially in the Southern Convention, they should read "The Christian Sun."

From now until June 1st, new subscriptions will be accepted at $1.50 per year. This is less than half of what the paper costs, and is only a fractional part of its worth to the homes of our churches. Even at that small price, the churches can make $.25 on each annual subscription by collecting and mailing it to the Editor, 505 S. Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia.

May we earnestly urge that you do not forget.

This is important. A reading church is likely to be an interesting and growing church. Now is the time for us to unite in a real campaign for subscriptions to "The Christian Sun."

Palm Sunday.

By RUTH ELOISE DOWNING

Jesus Christ in lowly splendor rode

Along the highway that led up to the cross;

The happy hearted people quick bestowed

With garments and palm branches the bright road—

Nor did their hearts once beat in fear of pain or loss.

But Christ rode on beneath the sunshine of the day,

And hopeful hands and hearts were glad to smooth

His way.

Still today, Christ rides across the earth,

And, drawing followers, He ever leads them on;

His promise gives to all new life, new birth;

Following Him they come from ends of earth,

Loyal souls that work for Him until His day shall dawn.

Still Christ rides across the changes of today,

And we must haste with loving hands to smooth

His way.

—In "Methodist Protestant-Recorder."

THIS IS EVEN MORE IMPORTANT.

There are in your community, not far from where you live, people who do not know about Christ, the Saviour. There are millions of them in America, and many more millions of them around the earth. They need to be won to a personal allegiance to Jesus and His way of life. They need His redeeming grace.

It is very important that every church seek to win these people to Christ. Those near by you can see in person and tell them what you know of salvation. Those far away can be reached through what we call missions. Your money will pay the expenses for others to go with the same message of redeeming love to those you will not see this side of the judgment.

The Easter season is certainly an excellent time for all Christians to join in this most holy task of seeking to win the world to Christ. Palm Sunday, Good Friday and Easter are challenging days to all mankind. Open the doors of the church, invite those who will to get in the procession and follow Jesus. Personal invitations and united prayer will help. Sermons that call for decision are certainly in order. A Pastor's Class for children can do much for the younger ones. Let the radiance of the cross shine into the life of the community. Be sure that those who go the way to destruction know that they do so over the protest of the man on the cross. It is most important to win people to Christ and to receive them into the fellowship of the Church.

But do not forget those your money can save. Easter is the time for the annual offering for missions. Emphasize it; pray about it; work for it; and do not stop until the quota for your church is raised. This is the most important work your church will do during the year. F. C. L.

FLORIDA IN APRIL.

The Florida Conference and the Jacksonville Church invite you to come to Florida in April. April is a lovely month in Florida, but the particular attraction this year will be the meeting of the Southeast Convention, which is held along with the Florida State Conference at Jacksonville, April 20-22. This spring trip to the floral state will be interesting and the fellowship of our denominational representatives for the whole southeast will mean much in the promotion of our common work, will add to the sense of our united purpose, and the speakers will be challenging and inspiring. Some of the outstanding leaders of our denomination in the country and some of our outstanding leaders in the southeast will make it an intellectual and spiritual feast.

Make your plans now to take this trip. The pastor and the people of the Jacksonville Church and the leaders of the Florida Conference extend a hearty invitation.

CHURCH AND STATE IN CONTEMPORARY AMERICA.

By William Adams Brown, in association with a committee of American Christians appointed by the Federal Council of the Church of Christ in America. New York; Charles Scribner's Sons. 1936, XIX and 360 pages, price $2.75.

Professor William Adams Brown of Union Theological Seminary is a modern Pope Innocent, the Third. Like that doughty cleric of the early thirteenth century, he is essentially a "churchman," who believes in a unified and powerful Christendom. It matters little what else brings lasting fame to his name, he will assuredly be remembered for his service to the Christian Church in outlining theology and in demanding a new conception of the church in modern society.

Professor Brown has felt keenly the pointed criticism of those European critics of the American Church, who have pointed out that American Christianity has no doctrine of the Church"—that is, something in the nature of a powerful concept, which would give the stronghold of religion a sense of distinction in relation to the secularized society which threatens also to secularize the Church. That these critics have made their point, no one can deny. The first step, therefore lies in establishing the sociological and historical connection of the church with the society in which it exists. One must study the nature of the state and only then can one begin to understand more clearly the church which exists beside the state.

An attempt at such a picture is to be found in this book; Church and State in Contemporary America. Prof. Brown wrote it in company with a host of scholars and experts, recruited for the most part from the committee appointed by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. The book is no solution to the problem of church and state. It is no finished exposition. It is, rather, the first book in what may eventually be an exhaustive survey of the church and state question over that whole section of the earth which is termed—rightly or wrongly—"Christendom." This book will play an important part in the ecumenical councils which open next July at Oxford, and as a fundamental textbook this work is of singular value in discussing the momentous question of church and state.

"Church and State" an academic question, you say? Not at all, answers William Adams Brown,—no more academic than the fierce battle being waged at present in Germany by the Confessional Synod of the Lutheran Church against the arrogant pretensions of Hitler's Nazis. The totalitarian state, in its restricting fascist sense or its semi-imperative communist phase, is on its way; and if the signs of the times mean anything, the American Church had better be on its guard.

There is a note of poignancy in the opening paragraphs as Dr. Brown confesses himself the bewildered liberal who has within the past two generations seen his world turn topsy-turvy. The presuppositions on which his whole life had been built seemed suddenly to prove inadequate. The result; rethinking and re-evaluation. But the tenets of Prof. Brown's liberal thought pursue him doggedly through the entire book and even in the appendices, written by his associates, one discovers distinct traces of this outworn liberalism.

An historical background of our "dissipated denominationalism" is succinctly set forth. Hand in hand with this go the policies of these various denominational groups, explaining their rise from dim historic beginnings to present day situations. The differences and similarities of the Lutheran and Calvinistic groups are outlined with the same clearness that presents the definiteness of the Episcopalians and the indefiniteness of the Congregationalists on this question. With all denominational groups in both Protestant and Catholic churches, moving then to a discussion of the implications for Judaism as related to Christianity, the book proceeds with precision and decision.

To some, the tentative solution at the close may seem to be the dying gasp of liberalism; to others, it may be the tragic dilemma of the "social gospel," which places undue faith in a democracy already betraying itself; but to the hopeful minority, it remains as the only hope in a world gone mad.

Naturally there is no hard and fast rule to be found in this book, which must serve for us as a guidepost. These are but suggestions to be mull-ed over, invitations to open further doors into the vast complexities of the church and state problem. Like all bibliographies, a huge list of books at the close staggers the reader into momentary impotence, yet goads him into further study. For the moment, he is awed into humility, but he is encouraged to discern some signs of life in the religious situation. To offset the bane of an untutored Protestant clergy, he beholds an awakening clergy, who like their German colleagues are courageously girding themselves to battle for their very lives, both spiritual and physical. He bemoans the imperialism and aloofness of the Roman Catholic Church, yet is cheered by the growing social consciousness of some Catholic clerics, who have a more acute political awareness. He is dismayed by the nostalgic nationalism of Zionism, but is enheartened by the keen intellectuals in Judaism, who recognize the possibility, yes, even the necessity for a strong, united front of Jews and Christians to cut loose the tenacles of fascism. The day is not far distant, warns Dr. Brown, when we must choose between God and Caesar. Which shall it be?

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There are two words—"conservative" and "liberal"—which are having their day in public print. The daily newspapers, in editorials and news columns, are obsessed by their meaning and importance. The dictionary defines "conservative" as one who opposes radical changes in the state, and "liberal" as, free to excess, lax loose—a political reformer. These words are especially used to designate the two types of political leadership; and also, two types of religious teaching.

The present attitude in the public press—both secular and religious—is to glorify the "liberal" and excommunicate the "conservative." Of course this is not true in all cases, for the conservative leaders have their say, when it is possible to do so. Some of these liberal (?) writers and speakers, political and religious, are seeking to put a halo about the word "liberal" and leave the impression that the "liberalists" are the present day saviours of the church as well as the state. One gets the impression that all the virtues have been distilled and poured upon the heads of those who subscribe to all the creeds and untried experiments of the so-called "liberalists". And likewise, the vices of earth and the fumes of hell have been confined to that group who are labelled, conservatives," if one listens to the voice of the champions of a new liberty, as expressed in current literature.

Why all this fury and nonsense about the Supreme Court of the United States? If the Court were composed of "liberals" and approved all the acts of Congress, referred to that high tribunal, and the "conservatives" should launch a program of rebellion, such as is being advocated by many leaders of the present time, then the "liberals" would become the "conservatives" and the "conservatives" would become the "liberals." Why should any leader or any group of leaders, be designated by either of these terms? Why should any one presume that a man, whose ability has been recognized by appointment to the Supreme Court, is so biased by his "conservative" or "liberal" views that he cannot consider any matter brought to his attention on its merits? Such a presumption, to say the least, is a reflection upon the Court and upon the Government. Anyone who is conversant with political history knows that there is no fixed program for a changing world. The major points of emphasis presented for consideration of the American people, in the year 1937, will be out of date, or will become "conservative," within the next decade.

The church is in the midst of this battle between the "conservatives" and the "liberals," in the field of theology, preaching, teaching and living. For the most part the schools—public, private, church, state—colleges and universities, seminaries and all the rest—are seeking to be recognized as "liberal" in their curricula—and in the administration of said institutions. There are a few exceptions, of course, but they are comparatively insignificant. The "liberal" spirit has become radical, in many instances, and from these schools are going thousands of young people with "liberalized" ideas of life. This has been going on for more than a generation. We are beginning to reap what has been sown. With a "liberal" pulpit, a "liberal" press, and a "liberal" school, God alone knows what the future will become. The Nicolaitanes, mentioned in the Book of Revelations, were the "liberals" of that day. Jesus said of their deeds: "which I also hate. "This is not written to espouse the cause of either group, but to express the hope, that the church and the state, will think and act, on the basis of the teachings of Jesus Christ, who transcended both the "conservative" and the "liberal" creeds of His day and submitted a platform, broad and comprehensive in scope. Look unto Him and be saved from narrowness and bigotry.

MISSIONS.

The church is a militant organization. It is arrayed against the wrong. It is on the march. The world is its field. Its conquest is universal. God is its architect. Christ is its head. It recognizes no superiority. With it defeat is impossible. The gates of Hell are powerless to prevail against it.

The angel said, speaking of Mary, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sins." This promise expresses the purpose of Christ. The church is the body of Christ endeavoring to accomplish this mission. Every addition to the church is for the purpose of widening its influence and further accomplishing its task to save the world. No individual has become actually a part of the church yet without himself being decidedly enriched and given the assurance of an eternal inheritance. These assurances, however, are not for the individual alone, but for the purpose of pushing the border of the Kingdom on further so that others, and still others, may be included in its mystic fellowship. The followers of Christ have been declared to be the light of the world. The Kingdom, in its advance, has been likened to the rising sun, sending its light with lightening speed, dispelling the darkness everywhere. The truth of God in Christ is light. It dispells darkness—the darkness of ignorance, selfishness, and sin—displacing the same with light, the light of salvation and of hope. The command is upon us. The commission is to our souls. It is imperative that we carry the gospel to the one who are near and to those who are far. The only way to keep Christ is to share Him. The only assurance that the light will continue to burn in our own hearts is to make sure that daily we are kindling the light of life in the hearts of others.

It may be that our conception of missions is more or less material, feeling that if we give our money to support our organization, to help our church at home, and to send the gospel abroad, we have discharged our duty. It is necessary that we give money. Money is required if the Kingdom is to go to the ends of the earth. But anybody can give money. No man has complied with the command or done his part in obeying the commission who has not first of all given himself in all sincerity and sacrifice, nor has he discharged his duty until he personally has endeavored to bring others into the fellowship that he so richly enjoys and to Christ who so abundantly blesses him from day to day.

There is no finer time than now for the individual to give himself and what he has to Christ and to his church. There is no finer time for the church to redouble itself than at this season of the year. Today our songs tell of the risen Christ. Our ministers bring us to the empty tomb that we may see for ourselves that Christ is risen indeed. What a glorious gospel that lifts the veil of death that we may behold life that knows no death! What a glorious hope that sweeps us on beyond the destruction and the wreckage of time to behold the spirit immortal. What blessed assurance, "He that liveth and believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

"I know that my Redeemer liveth, and because He lives, I, too, shall live."

SANFORD.

At the Vesper Service on Sunday, March 7th, the Woman's Missionary Society of the Congregational Christian Church of Sanford, N. C. held a public service to commemorate the 25th Anniversary of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference. Mrs. W. E. Wisseman was the guest speaker at this time. She is an interesting speaker with an inspiring message. Miss Emma Hart gave a brief account of the history of the local society. Others taking part in the program were Rev. T. E. White and the pastor, Rev. F. Ervin Hyde.

At the Vesper Service on Sunday, March 14th, the World Friendship Club is presenting the Missionary Pageant "Around the World in a Dream" (written by our pastor). The pageant presents a picture of the Missionary activities and needs of our church.

Both of these services are a part of the general missionary educational program of the local church. Others of a similar nature are to follow during the mission period.

On Monday night, March 8th, the World Friendship Club celebrated its first anniversary by having a birthday party. Each member contributed a cent for each year of their age.

This organization has been quite active in many departments of the church. New officers for the coming year were elected. They are Estelle Foushee, president; Blanche Williams, vice-president; Annie Lee Parish, secretary-treasurer. As they enter into their second year's activity, they do so with much optimism of accomplishing more during the next year.

On Palm Sunday we shall begin a series of pre-Easter Services. Our pastor will do the preaching. Rev. Henry Lewis, tenor soloist from Duke University will be in charge of the music. Mr. Lewis has been with us on former occasions and we look forward to his visit again.

REPORTER.

COLONEL WEST SPEAKS.

As Chairman of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention for over thirty years, my message to the pastors and churches of the Convention is a part of the report of the Committee on Home Missions to the 1936

Eastern Virginia Conference, which deserves careful consideration.

"The demands of extensive building programs by churches and denominational institutions so overtaxed the financial resources of the membership that we probably neglected evangelism, church extension, and the full development of all phases of church work to such an extent that the conference has stopped growing and demands our most prayerful consideration. People who declare that Christian is a sufficient name for the Church should be leaders and not followers in solving Kingdom problems.

"As to growth we suggest the following:

"1. As soon as consistent with the reduction of the debt burden on a few of our weak churches, conference missions should be invested largely in men instead of buildings, forming of voluntary pastorates, strengthening of weak churches, and the development of trained leadership in every local church.

"2. There must be an intense spiritual development of the local church.

"3. Some of our ministers should catch the pioneer spirit and establish new churches.

"4. All pastorates should have a parsonage, and building of churches should be almost entirely on the 'pay as you go' plan.

"5. Churches desiring aid for building or support of pastor, should consult this committee in advance of application for same.

"6. On account of the limited funds of this Committee, we suggest that the Mission Board of the Southern Convention continue to assist mission points not self-supporting and organize new churches in the undeveloped territory of this conference.

"7. We commend the work of the Woman's Mission Board and urge our men to increased activity along missionary lines, both as to contributions and the study of missions."

BETHEL, NEWPORT, VA.

Our Sunday school opens at 10:00 every Sunday morning. We have a new superintendent, A. A. Dofflemyer, and along with him we are practicing some new ideas.

Our church is not a rich one in money matters, so having to avoid hiring a sexton to clean the church, each week a certain class of the Sunday school is appointed to do the cleaning. This has been very successful so far.

Once a month we have a "get-together" meeting in the church basement. We have games and spelling matches for the old and young. Everyone joins in the fun, and after it our refreshments are served. The fee is only five cents, but we feel that it helps us to have a "get-together meeting." Our pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, has been present at a few of these meetings.

We are now practicing for a sunrise service Easter morning. Each Wednesday evening we meet at the church and practice hymns for this occasion.

At the beginning of the year we reorganized our Christian Endeavor Society into two groups, all over sixteen years in the senior society, and those under sixteen in the Junior society. Each society has its own individual president, secretary and treasurer. Every other Sunday night the Junior group renders a program. In this way everyone has a part in the service at least once every two months.

February 20th the societies held an oyster supper in the church basement, clearing $10.00 above the expense.

We have regular preaching services on the second Sunday night and the fourth Sunday morning of every month. The regular business meeting is held after preaching services every quarter. Communion services are also held on this Sunday.

HOLLAND CHURCH.

Rev. Carl R. Key, pastor of the Holland (Va.) Christian Church, is preaching a very interesting series of Lenten sermons from the book of James. His theme is: "The Tenfold Test of Religion." The topics are: "Test By Trial," "Test By Temptation," "Test By the Word," "Test By Respect of Persons," "Test By Perfect Obedience," "Test By Good Works," "Test by Speech," "Test by the World," "Test by the Coming of the Lord," and "Test by Prayer." Dr. Warren H. Denison will preach in this church on Easter Sunday, and will assist the pastor in administering the communion.

The church raised and sent during January $100.00 on its College apportionments. The remainder will be raised through the Sunday school and the Dollar-A-Month Club.

Rev. Mr. Key is preparing his congregation for the Mission offering at Easter. A copy of the Bulletin announcing the offering and mission literature has been given to the members each week recently. The envelopes will be given out Palm Sunday, and will be laid on the altar at the Easter service.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE W. W. STALEY MEMORIAL.

Just count on our good women to do the proper thing in the most fitting manner. They are now celebrating their Silver Anniversary, twenty-five years of organized service as a Missionary Society. And in their various local societies, they are giving a silver dollar each which they are to invest in a permanent and appropriate memorial to our late, lamented and universally beloved, Dr. W. W. Staley. It seems to this writer that nothing could be more appropriate, or fitting than this. Dr. Staley was President of the Convention when the first Woman's Board was named.

And from that day till his departure from us, he took great delight in encouraging their work. Only a few years before his going he was attending one of their enthusiastic and inspiring Conferences. At the close of the session, in conversation, he remarked with great joy, "Isn't this great! This is that in which I believe with all my heart, a beginning made in a small way and then growing into a great movement like this for good and righteousness. Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

He himself had much to do in planting the first seed which had now grown into a great plant, and through the years he had helped to nurture the growing plant. His heart was rejoiced to see the growth and glory of our woman's work.

So our good women now will crown his efforts and devotion with a fitting memorial.

And now this writer offers a suggestion. Since the women, in addition to their regular dues and apportionments are giving a dollar each, are there not a great number of us men who are willing and anxious to have a part in this great thing by giving $25.00 each, one dollar a year for each of the twenty-five years of their corporate existence and cooperative effort. We are sure there are not a few of us men who look on this worthy and fitting task with appreciation and applause, and will want a part in applauding our dear women and in building a suitable memorial to the name and memory of W. W. Staley.

He knew that no church could prosper that was not missionary in spirit and in giving; and he knew too that a Woman's Missionary Society was the strong right arm of a pastor in deepening the spiritual life of the church and in winning souls to Christ.

What will this Memorial be? Just leave that to the wisdom and good judgment of our women.

Meanwhile, let us men approve and assist by giving $25.00 between now and May 13th—one dollar a year for each year of their great, good work, of our women.

A GREAT DAY COMING.

On May 13, 1937, the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian churches will meet in the Suffolk Christian Church to celebrate their twenty-fifth anniversary. Begin now to plan to be there at 2:30 P. M. for the first session. Supper will be served in the Fellowship Hall of the church at 6:30. A beautiful and impressive service has been prepared for the 8:00 o'clock session. At this time, the gifts from each local society will be presented. Be sure to have a representative there to light your candle when your church is called.

The Suffolk Christian Church will take care of any coming from a distance who wish to spend the night.

The beautiful Autograph book will be there to receive its loose leaves, which have been sent to each of your Presidents, so that the ladies who contribute a $1.00 or more; the young people, $.50; Juniors, $.25; and the Cradle Roll, $.10—will each write his or her name on these pages.

I hope many of you may be there to write yours again in this book at the Golden Jubilee. Special gifts from the men of our churches will also be greatly appreciated.

Twenty-five years ago a few women of faith and vision felt a knock at the door of their hearts, the knock of opportunity for a needy world.

We have been broadcasting His message, and today we are standing on the threshold of an open door—the door of opportunity—the opportunity to work for the making of a better world. Shall we close the door, or shall we choose the companionship of Christ in service? Are we satisfied with what we have done in the past twenty-five years?

We have climbed this far, our vision is greater, our faith stronger. Let's go forward and keep climbing with the determination to do greater things for Christ in the next twenty-five years.

Twenty-five years have passed and gone,

There are many heathens yet unborn—

Come one, come all,

Let's answer the call!

We will be looking for you at the Suffolk Christian Church, May 13, 1937, at 2:30 P. M.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY MEMORIAL.

That the Committee appointed by the President of the Woman's Mission Board of the convention should have decided that the money raised should be a memorial to the memory of Dr. W. W. Staley, is entirely fitting, it seems to me. He was President of the Southern Christian Convention at the time the Woman's Board was created, was most friendly to its earliest efforts. Busy though he was with his many-sided interests, he always had time to attend the conferences and conventions, one of the most interested and sympathetic listeners. His wise counsel was often sought and his advice was always sound. From his pulpit, with his pen, and by personal interview, he gave support and encouragement.

A Carolinian, by birth; a Virginian, because of his place of service; he belonged to our whole Convention, because of his breadth of spirit and activities. We do ourselves honor to honor him—and the Christ whom he served.

Then, too, it is fitting that the Anniversary Service should be held in the Suffolk Church. It was while the Convention was in session in this church that the Eastern Virginia Woman's Board was appointed. The first meeting in the interest of organizing our women was the same Eastern Virginia Woman's Board, which met in Dr. Staley's study in December, 1911. The first Woman's Missionary Conference was the one in Eastern Virginia, which met in the Suffolk Church. And so, it seems most appropriate that we shall hold our anniversary service in the church that has figured so prominently in our early days.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY OBSERVES SILVER ANNIVERSARY OF WORK.

The silver anniversary of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Congregational-Christian church was observed yesterday with a program at the church and a birthday tea at the church cottage, Mrs. O. H. Paris' circle has the celebration in charge.

Present were four of the charter members, Mrs. L. E. Smith, of Elon College, first president; Mrs. Arthur Pearce, of Salisbury, first secretary, and Mrs. L. M. Clymer and Mrs. S. A. Caveness, of Greensboro. Several past presidents attended.

History of the local organization was outlined by Mrs. J. R. Foster and Mrs. Grace Stewart. Mrs. Mabel Donkin spoke on "Twenty-five Years of Growth and Service." There was a devotional service by Mrs. O. H. Paris and Mrs. A. B. McFarland.

As candles on the birthday cake were lighted by Mrs. C. H. Rowland, president, each member made an offering of a silver dollar, the silver anniversary fund to be used in mission work in memory of Dr. W. W. Staley, of Suffolk, Virginia, who was president of the Southern Christian Convention at the time woman's work in the convention started with the organization of the Greensboro unit.

Tea was served from an all-white table in the cottage where Mrs. L. M. Clymer and Mrs. C. H. Rowland presided. Centering the lace-covered table was the white birthday cake, decorated in silver and aglow with tall white candles. About the cake tall white tapers were arranged in silver holders. Tea was served by Misses Margaret and Birdie Rowland and Mrs. R. E. Harden. About fifty members attended.

To be polite is to do and say
The kindest things in the kindest way.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY— SUFFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH IN RETROSPECT.

(Concluded from last issue.)

In September, 1918, a Boys Missionary Society was organized, with Dr. D. L. Harrell, Superintendent, and Mr. D. C. Lewis, Assistant Superintendent. This society was organized by Mrs. W. H. Yates, who continued to sponsor its activities. These boys made a fine contribution toward building a church in Santa Isabella, Porto Rica. Four years later they united with the Willing Workers Society.

The first Sunday in May, 1919, was Missionary Rally Day in our church. Mr. Walter Rawles spoke on "World Workers," and the offering amounted to $105.30.

In April, 1921, delegates from the society attended the first Spring Missionary Rally of the Eastern Virginia Conference, held at Berea, Nantsemond.

In June, 1921, the Girl's Missionary Society and the Men's Business contribute $150.00 toward the support of Mr. Sumita, a Japanese student, who had heretofore been supported by Mr. Ballard and our Christian Endeavor Society. Mr. Sumita was supported in this way until he graduated from the University of Tokio. He then married, took his wife's family name and was known as the Rev. K. Kitano, Jr. He was given a pastorate in the Sendai field, as native pastor, on a salary of $540.00 per year. In January, 1925, this society voted to contribute $300.00 per year toward supporting a foreign pastor for the Suffolk Church, other organizations contributed $240.00 per year, and the Rev. K. Kitano, Jr., became our foreign pastor. This support continued until the merger of the Congregational and Christian Churches, when the combined mission boards made other arrangements for the Japanese work.

On the occasion of our twelfth anniversary in February, 1924, Dr. Staley in writing to THE SUN, said, "The work of the society has been

KAGAWA AND FAMILY AT PRAYERS.

Association met with this society to hear Mr. L. Pretlow Holland, who had just completed a world tour, and who delivered a fine missionary address on China.

In November, 1921, through the efforts of one of our Hospital Committees a patient was converted and joined the church, and this incident suggested the opportunity to do similar home mission work.

At the September, 1923 meeting, our new pastor, the Rev. H. S. Harcastle, was enrolled as a member—Mrs. Harcastle joining the Girl's Society.

At the October, 1923 meeting, a special prayer of thanksgiving was offered for having reached our goal for the year, and for encouraging news of our "Good Shepherd," Dr. Staley, who at this time was ill in a hospital at Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

The society at this time voted to earnest and progressive, the spiritual atmosphere has been sweet, the real activity has been faithful, and the members have enjoyed the meetings and the work. The study of missionary books has added to their knowledge and interest in missions, and they now feel a thankful pride in what they have done."

In the year of 1926, a special Spiritual Life Program was launched in the Southern Christian Convention. Mrs. W. H. Carroll, of Burlington, North Carolina, was the first Spiritual Life Superintendent for the Convention, Mrs. W. H. Andrews, for the Eastern Virginia Missionary Conference and Mrs. R. L. Smith, for the Suffolk society.

In May, 1931, the society sponsored a Mother-Daughter Banquet, which was served in the Fellowship Hall, by the men of the church, with Mr. Harcastle as head waiter.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

SOUTHEAST YOUTH FELLOWSHIP MEETING.

According to the Constitution of the Southeast Youth Fellowship, "this Youth Fellowship shall hold a meeting in connection with the meeting of the Southeast Convention, and at such other times as the Executive Committee may designate." The Southeast Convention will this year meet in Jacksonville, Florida, April 20-22.

The Youth Fellowship meeting will take place in the afternoon and evening of Wednesday, April 21st. Final plans have not yet been completed, but it is expected that the main object of the meeting will be to make very definite plans for work in the Southeast. Election of officers for the next two years will be held, and a revision of the Constitution presented. Several young people of the Southeast will present different phases of the work, to be followed by discussion and planning for action. There will be a supper in the evening, sponsored by the young people.

Begin to make your plans now to come to Jacksonville in April. Perhaps your minister is going to attend—if so, suggest that you think it would be very nice if he brought you, too. Or try to encourage others to come, get enough to fill a car, share the cost of gasoline, and appear on April 22nd in Jacksonville!

PLANS FOR EASTER.

Several weeks ago, suggestions were made for use during the Lenten Period. We hope that you have been observing it in some very definite way. If not, a great opportunity has been missed, for this Easter Season should be very meaningful for all of us.

On Palm Sunday, if you have not done so before, have your minister tell you the story of Holy Week. Thus you can follow each day of the last week of Christ's life here, and really get into the spirit of this season.

For Easter, if no other group in your church does it, why not plan and sponsor a Sunrise Service? This does not require an elaborate program—the simpler the meditation and service, the better, for you want nothing to detract from the intense spirituality of the moment.

In many places, the young people present an appropriate play or play reading on Easter Sunday in the afternoon or evening. You can find suitable plays in the Pilgrim Highroad or the International Journal of Religious Education, or your minister may have one to suggest to you. Although the time is short, a play reading can be presented with only one rehearsal.

It doesn't matter the form it takes, but every young people's group should welcome the opportunity to observe Easter in some fitting way.

MISS ELDRIDGE VISITS FLORIDA.

At the request of the Florida Pilgrim Fellowship, Miss Lucy Eldredge, young people's worker for the Congregational-Christian Church in the United States, has been helping our Florida young people for the past two weeks.

Three rallies were held in various parts of the state—one in Jupiter, one in Sanford, and one in St. Petersburg. Representatives came to these meetings from the various societies in each section. The most helpful part of these meetings was the period in which Miss Eldredge led the discussion concerning problems which each of the local societies face. By her appropriate illustrations and her helpful suggestions, Miss Eldredge made a great contribution to the Florida young people.

Miss Eldredge and Miss Coghill also held a week-end conference at Florida State College for women in Tallahassee, with the Congregational-Christian girls in school there. Since there is no church of our denomination in Tallahassee, these college girls welcomed their visit and benefited by it.

Suggestions from Miss Eldredge.

"Never end a discussion of any kind until you have found something you can do about it."

"Good meetings don't just 'happen'—they are the result of careful planning."

"A behavior problem can be solved by giving the person something to plan before the meeting, by having him take part in the meeting, and by giving him something to work for after the meeting."

"We may be inspired by a worship service, by discussions from which we gain new ideas, or by doing something worth while."

EASTER: A BEGINNING, NOT AN END.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
MARCH 28, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: I. Cor. 15:12-17.

Daily Readings—

Monday—An Age Old Question.—Job 14: 7-10.

Tuesday—Jesus's Answer.—John 11:21-27.

Wednesday—A Building of God.—II. Cor. 5: 1-9.

Thursday—The Christian Hope.—I. Thess. 4: 13-18.

Friday—Land of Reward.—II. Tim. 4: 6-8.

Saturday—The Promise of Jesus.—John 14: 1-12.

Jesus was a conquerer of death. He was seen by the disciples and later by more than 500 people. The proof of His resurrection is so certain that if we believe in Jesus at all, we must believe in an immortal life—life eternal. The seal on the tomb, the soldiers on guard, and the disciples who saw the nailed-pierced hands and wounded side to believe, are added proofs of certainty.

We do not have to depend entirely on history for proof. The influence which Jesus has on the world today is real evidence that He is still alive.

There are people living who, being "dead in trespasses and sin," have found new life through the transforming power of Jesus' life. A dead Christ could not change a man's life.

The cross was inevitable and darkness brooded over the earth, but out of this came a glorious dawn which gave to the world a victorious life—one that is full of faith, hope, and love.

"Life is real, life is earnest,

And the grave is not its goal;

Dust thou art, to dust returneth
Was not spoken of the soul."

For Discussion—

1. How did the resurrection affect the lives of the disciples? (Note especially Peter, Thomas, and Mary.)

2. Is the resurrection less powerful today than it was on the first Easter Morning?

3. How does the resurrection affect the life of the Christian today?

4. What evidences of the resurrection are discerned in nature at Easter?

Suggested Hymns—

"In the Cross of Christ"; "Christ Arose"; "Up From the Grave He Arose."

JOHN'S PICTURE OF THE TRIAL AND CRUCIFIXION.

LESSON XII—MARCH 21, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Hereby know we love, because he laid down his life for us.
—I. John 3: 16.

LESSON: John 18: 1-19, 42.

Like a skilled artist, John paints with a few deft strokes the events of the last hours of Jesus. There is the betrayal of Judas in the Garden of Gethsemane, with its haunting truth that it was one of the disciples who sold his Master for thirty pieces of silver, an incident that has been repeated again and again in history. There is the moral majesty of Jesus as He deals with His enemies, and His utter love as He seeks to shield His disciples, saying, "If ye therefore seek me, let these go their way." There is the hollow mockery of the trial before the Jewish authorities with its plain lesson that truth and right seldom if ever get a fair hearing at the hands of entrenched privilege and power. There is the story of Simon Peter's denial, with its warning against warming one's self at the fires of the enemies, and with its tragic lesson of the shame of cowardice and the insufficiency of self. There is the portrayal of the action of the soldiers as they mocked Jesus and spit upon Him, and struck Him—one's blood runs hot as he reads this part of the story; but this is not the last time that Jesus has suffered indignity at the hands of those who believe that armed force is the dominant influence in life. And then there is the story of Pilate, a little more in detail, the story of the man who did not have the courage of his convictions, who followed the crowd instead of his conscience, who chose the known wrong in the face of the known right, who was governed by expediency instead of justice—poor Pilate, his name has come down to us with an eternal stigma upon it; "suffered under Pontius Pilate," thus we repeat the creed. One feels pity, rather than anger toward Pilate. What a chance he had to make himself an immortal hero that day! How ignobly he failed.

And then there comes in still more detail the story of the crucifixion. How Jesus came forth wearing the crown of thorns, and was delivered over to the chief priests and rulers to be crucified. How He went forth, bearing for Himself the rude, rugged cross, an instrument of torture and a symbol of shame then, but the central glory of Christianity now. How they put over His head a sign in letters of Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, the languages of the outstanding religion, and intellectual culture, and civil administration of the world at that time—Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews. It was symbolic of the eventual lordship of Jesus over every realm and people. It was a prophecy of the day to come.

And there is the ugly note, the sound of the soldiers as they cast lots for the garments of the dying man—one likes to think that humanity has moved forward a little from that standard, and that these men are not typical of the soldiery of the world today. But there is sobering truth in this story. Certainly it is impossible to reconcile many of the ways of war with the way of Jesus. Militarism still crucifies afresh the Son of God.

Against all this dark background, there are brighter pictures, or colors. There is the beautiful incident in which Jesus recognizes His mother—of course she was at the cross, where else would one expect His mother to be—and commends her to the loving care of John, the beloved disciple, the one who understood Jesus best, and the one who was able best to take care of His mother. How much poorer the world would be if we did not have that incident in the gospel story! And there is the majesty of Jesus, even to the last. John does not go into detail as do the other evangelists. He passes over the long period of suffering, the taunts of the crowd, the storm, the cry of desolation, the taunt of the dying thief, and so forth. He simply refers to the Master's request for a drink, and then the significant words of Jesus as recorded by John bring it all to a close. "It is finished"—He went in the full consciousness that He had finished the work which the Father had given Him to do. He bore witness to the fact that nothing else needs to be done for man's salvation which had not already been done by Him. The last words of Jesus on the cross mean that the cross is God's last appeal to us. God could not go beyond the cross in making His love known, or His salvation effectual.

Because He died of a broken heart, He was spared the humiliation of having the bones of His legs broken. Thus was fulfilled also the scripture to the effect that "a bone of Him shall not be broken." But those Roman soldiers saw to it that it was not a case of a mere swoon, or of conscious deceit—one of them thrust his heavy spear into His side as an extra precaution. This fact needs emphasis.

Jesus died on the cross. The resurrection was not simply a restoration from a fainting spell. Jesus Christ partook of death for every man. And as Paul says, "Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures."

In death He found unheralded friends. Joseph of Arimathea a disciple of Jesus, but secretly for fear of the Jews, and Nicodemus—there is no record heretofore that He was a follower of Jesus—came and prepared the body for burial, and with the help of others friends, they laid the body in a new sepulchre. Thus seemed to come to an end the most glorious life that men had ever seen, a life that had aroused high hopes in the hearts of those who came to know Him best. It seemed such a ignominious end for such a glorious life. But for them it was the end. When those friends put their Friend in that sepulchre they thought that was the last time they would ever see Him. For them Jesus was dead, and the Light which had been the Light of their lives and of the world had gone out. But more of that next week.

In all this little has been said about the meaning of the Cross. But what can be said about that majestic and mysterious event? As some one has said, "it calls for meditation rather than exposition." One has to sit down alone with that story and allow it to tell its own story. And of course it tells different stories to different people and at different periods, as is evidenced by the many theories of the Atonement which have been proposed and accepted by men in different periods. But above and beyond and beneath all these differences there has been a great unity. Men have believed and felt that Christ's death on the Cross was more than simply a historic incident. They have felt sure that something was done there which became a redeeming, saving, transforming factor in the life of individuals and of the world. The Cross was a revelation in time of a timeless process by which God reconciles men unto himself and through which He saves them from their sins.

FAMILY ALTAR

CONDUCTED BY H. E. ROUNTREE
Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

YOUR SIGNET OF CONSECRATION.

"And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold, and grave upon it like the engraving of a signet, holy to the Lord."—Exodus 28:36.

This plate of pure gold Aaron was to wear on his forehead, signifying the holiness of his office, which was the office of his consecration. And it was this consecration that was to consecrate the people, and they were to be holy unto the Lord. Each of them was to wear the same token, and, like the spread of an unbroken chain letter, this was to spread until all were holy unto the Lord.

When the Lord Jesus left this earth in person, He left His spirit with us that we should take up His holiness and be so illuminated with it that others seeing us might know Jesus also and take up His spirit until the world is saved. Question: How are we wearing the character of His holiness; how are we bearing His name?

Prayer—Dear Father, make the life, death and resurrection of Jesus, our Saviour all in all to us and to all the world. Perfect that glad meaning in us. Amen.

TUESDAY.

"STANDING PAT."

"And I said, should such a man as I flee?"—Neh. 6:11.

Many of us are weak-kneed when it comes to taking a stand against temptations and pleasures that are sinful. In order to be a good fellow, it is hard to say "no" to those who would lead us from the path of right and rectitude.

But sinfulness, and they who engage in it, are enemies to God. We need the light of Jesus within, and the self-respect and stoutness of heart that make us scorn to yield, to bend the head to it, or even to give sanction to it by turning, or by giving the wink of the eye. It should be impossible for us to demean ourselves to the servitude of Satan.

How to get this stamina? It is built up splendidly by doing honorable deeds and thinking worthy thoughts day by day. It is mortared out of life's experiences by highest associations. It comes from faith in God and rests upon the eternal rock to His power and loving favor.

Prayer—Dear Father, make us realize what Thou hast done for us.

Lift us up from what we are to what we ought to be. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THOSE GREATER WORKS.

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto the Father."—Jno. 14:12.

This is one of the most inspirational texts of the Bible. We all like to feel that we are doing something worth while, something that is recognized to be of worth. The Lord Jesus promises us that we shall do things greater than that which even He did. Is it possible?

These greater things are what Christ's children are doing all over the world today. He healed the leper, we prevent leprosy. He opened the eyes of the blind; we have progressed far to prevent blindness. He made the dumb to speak; in His name we make witnesses for eternal glory. He quieted storms; we settle troubles (sometimes) for Him. He raised the dead to life; we raise the dead in sin to life in Him. But such powers are given to those only who believe and live in Him. Thank God, that even the poor measure of Christianity which we have today furnishes abundant evidence that our century is far greater than the first.

Prayer—Dear Father: Give us a share in the greater deeds that Thou hast for man to do. Amen.

THURSDAY.

BUILDING OR DESTROYING.

"I will make my words in thy mouth fire, and this people wood, and it shall devour them."—Jer. 5:14

A thoroughgoing Christianity fired by the altar fires of God gives light, sweetness, joy and delight. It feeds, strengthens and gives power of life. As such an influence, it builds up the structure of humanity for better and better all along the way. "Let your light shine," said Jesus.

On the contrary, scorn God's word, disobey it, or disregard it, and it becomes a fiery penalty, a sharp sword, a raging fire, consuming or tearing down everything before it.

Questions: What is the Bible to you? In what spirit do you open its pages? Have you a desire for communion with it? Does it speak to you the friendship of God?

Prayer—Dear Father: We thank Thee for Thy Word. Make it a delight to us and teach us how to use it more faithfully. May we love it more tenderly. May we revere it more devoutly. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THEY THAT BE OUTSIDE.

"Without are dogs, and the sorcerers, and the fornicators, and the murderers, and the idolaters, and every one that loveth and maketh a lie."—Rev. 22:15.

The scene is set at the gates of heaven. We behold them who have passport therein. We also behold them who cannot enter. The latter furnishes us a picture of a wretched company which they will have in their exile.

If people could be sensible enough to so look upon their sins, we believe that the certainty of such company at last would impel them to live the life now that would crown their heads with the signet of holiness and this would be a happy passport into eternal glory.

Such a life would change things greatly here? The "white lie," the "polite" lie, the diplomatic evasion, the sins of culture and courtesy, the sins of trade, politics and society, would disappear. Every one would go to the heart of the matter and live that way.

Prayer—Dear Father, Thou God of truth, love and blessing, we pray for Thy spirit to so fill us that we shall hate all that is wrong, even as with all our heart we shall love Thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

USELESS POWER.

"By strength shall no man prevail."—I. Samuel 2:1-10.

Who so weak as Hannah, the sad, the persecuted, the hopeless, wife? Who so strong as Hannah, with God on her side? Well did she sing in her great hymn, "by strength shall no man prevail," for she prevailed and she had no strength.

It is hard to throw aside our own strength, to forget it, not to rely upon it in the least. It is hard, but it is sensible. For our strength is in our way. It contrives for us a false reliance. It nourishes a broken reed. It builds a house on the sand.

Prayer—Thou shalt be our strength, our Father, and Thou alone. Forbid that we should even dream that we can prevail without Thee. Amen.

THE CHURCH'S STORY OF LOVE.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

This is the world's most beautiful story of love. It was first told, in this form, in old Jerusalem at a night conference between Jesus and Nicodemus. It was Jesus's story. He was born to make it true, and for this story of love he lived and died, and rose again. Jesus knew what he was talking about when he quietly and calmly told Nicodemus how God loved the world, and how he gave his only begotten Son not to condemn it but to redeem it. He would make that story good with his own life. And Nicodemus would remember!

How many times that story of love has been told since! Dwight L. Moody preached on that text seven times in succession to the same congregation. In the lands and languages of the earth that story has been repeated. To large congregations in great cathedrals, and to poor sinners in huts and hovels, it has touched the hearts of those who have heard, and all alike have needed this story of love, and pardon, and life.

It is to be told until (Rev. 11:15) "The kingdoms of this world are become the Kingdoms of our Lord, and his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." It was foreseen of Daniel who was so in tune with God that the lions loved him. He was in harmony with the song of the universe, and his vision was clear across the limitless years (Dan. 7:14-18): "And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: His dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. . . . The saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever."

What vast dominions! We think now how much unconquered territory there is today! If we think only from man's point of view we are likely to be discouraged. So much there is that is thoughtless of God, and of the work of Jesus, His Son. There are rulers and kings who love Him not; and princes of wealth and power who own no sway of His. From the top to the bottom in much of the political, economic, and educational life of the world Jesus is seemingly left outside. How is he to win this "dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve Him?" Are the navies and armies, and ever increasing forces of the air, His? By what strong arm shall it be done?

David taught the nations to look for such a king. David knew the power of song. Tonight our young people's choir has sung as a special number, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations." And how beautiful and how true that is! How inspiring to see our choir of thirty voices, beautifully vested, sing, "We've a Song to be sung to the nations, that shall lift their hearts to the Lord; a song that shall conquer evil, and shatter the spear and sword." Let the Christian young people of the nations of the earth join in singing the Church's story of love. Let us begin right here in Suffolk.

David had his choirs to sing (Psa. 89:27-29) "I will make him my first-born higher than the kings of the earth (Some of the rulers of this present think they are well-nigh all-powerful—they are insignificant shadows compared with Jesus. He is their master, and from him they may well learn of God's love, and the unshaken way to the hearts of men) my mercy will I keep for him forevermore" (What strong arm shall win for Him?—the mercy and love of God—"My mercy will I keep for him forevermore"—the patience and love of God, his everlasting patience and love, will win.) "And my covenant shall stand fast with him (When we help with the Missionary enterprise we are working with God on a covenant that shall not be broken) "His seed will I also make to endure forever, and his throne as the days of heaven." (How long are the days in eternity? "His thrones as the days of heaven!" "There shall be no night there!" And his throne shall be forever.)

Jesus taught his disciples to pray: "Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." It may seem a far cry! But there are still those who envision it. Dr. E. Stanley Jones, and others in the Preaching Mission have gone up and down our country preaching the Kingdom of God. The Kingdom of God will never be national, only can it be international. It will never include only one nation—the Jews have long since exploded that mistaken hope. It must cover the earth as the waters cover the seas! "Thy will be done on earth," the whole earth, not the western half, nor the eastern, but all the earth!

Is it too much? Is it too much to hope for, to pray for, to work for? Jesus dared it! Hear him stading erect, the sins of the poor sinner-woman having been forgiven, the frailties of the flesh in sand written: "He spake unto them saying, I am the light of the world." A light to shine in every benighted heart beneath the stars. A light to save a man within and without. The personal gospel without the social gospel is no gospel at all. The social gospel is even more unthinkable without the gospel of redemption of the individual. No, it is not too much to hope for, nor to work for, nor to pray for. Jesus began that story of love with one Nicodemus! When Jesus wanted a work done he won his individual. That is the starting point.

Then there is hope. For we can win the one next to us, or do our best trying, and if we truly try God will help us. At the same time we can have several starting points all across the nations of the earth, by having a share in sending the gospel direct through individual missionaries to individuals. There is no greater work on earth. It is down to bed-rock of obedience in carrying out the great commandment of Jesus Christ, as he handed his story of love over to his followers. Today it is the Church's story of love! He did not fail God in fulfilling that story, God has not failed us in giving us that story. Will we fail God, or Jesus, and the nations of the earth by receiving that story of love and laying it up in a napkin?

It is the Church's story of love, what will it do with it? You and I must answer that question for our church, and we will, and may that answer be directed by, and blessed of God.

"I watched war lay its hands on the strongest, loveliest things in men," says Dr. Fosdick, "and use the noblest attributes of the human spirit for ungodly deeds. This is the ultimate description of war—it is the prostitution of the noblest powers of the human soul to the most dastardly deeds, the most abysmal cruelties of which our human nature is capable."

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Today, March 15th as the writer takes his seat to write this weekly letter, the snow is falling thick and fast and a beautiful white blanket is covering the ground.

I notice that a special campaign is put on on this date to get new subscribers for the THE CHRISTIAN SUN. This is one campaign in which every member of the church should be interested. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is the medium through which all the institutions of the church reach our people. Every family of the Christian Church (now Congregational-Christian) should have THE CHRISTIAN SUN in the home. "How can we learn if no one teaches us?" How are we to learn if our church paper does not visit our homes each week? The College, Missions and the Orphanage, are largely dependent on THE CHRISTIAN SUN to keep our people informed as to our needs and what these institutions are accomplishing. The larger number of people we can get interested in these institutions the larger work we can do. If, in this campaign, the subscription list can be doubled then you will see greater interest shown in our church work. If you are a subscriber now, speak to your friends and ask them to subscribe at this reduced rate. You will do your church a service and you will do your friend a favor by getting THE CHRISTIAN SUN in the home.

The writer has read THE CHRISTIAN SUN for many years and has been a subscriber for it since he established a home of his own. It has always been a welcome weekly visitor in our home. It brings to you food for the Soul. It makes you a better Christian when you read the splendid uplifting articles which you will find in its columns each week. To get two thousand new subscribers is no one person's job. It will take many interested persons to put it across. It can be done. For the good of our church it must be done. Let us all get to work.

In Memoriam

MRS. OTIS S. SMITH.

January 27, 1937, God, in His infinite wisdom called home Mrs. Otis S. Smith, who was a charter member of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church.

Be it resolved:

1. That we bow in submission to His will, for we know our Heavenly Father doeth all things according to His love and mercy.

2. That in her death we have lost a capable woman, a fine Christian character; one who was interested in the work of her church.

3. That we hold in loving remembrance her service and strive to emulate her meek and quiet personality.

4. That we extend our heart-felt sympathy to her husband and children and commend them to God, whose grace is sufficient in the hour of trouble.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be entered on the records of our minutes.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF SUFFOLK CHURCH.

In September, 1933, our new pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. John G. Truitt joined the society.

In May, 1935, Mrs. W. H. Andrews presented to the society a plan for the erection of a memorial urn by the graveside of Dr. W. W. Staley. On Saturday, May 30, 1936, at 3:30 P. M., a fitting service dedicating a memorial urn to the memory of the late Dr. W. W. Staley, was held at his grave in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Suffolk, Virginia. The urn was presented by the Woman's Missionary Society and The W. W. Staley Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church, and in the words of Dr. I. W. Johnson, "is carved from granite and is beautiful in design."

In May, 1935, Dr. Albert W. Palmer, for the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference, reviewed his book, Orientalism in America. This meeting was held in our church, with 300 women in attendance. Each person brought a box lunch, and at the noon hour, the society served coffee and cake. This was truly a great day.

At the 1936 Spring Rally, held at Mt. Carmel Church, our president, Mrs. John King, was elected District Superintendent.

In May, 1936, at the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Christian Convention, held at Burlington, North Carolina, our pastor's wife, Mrs. John G. Truitt was elected president of that body.

At the beginning of our 1936-1937 Conference Year, the society was divided into six working groups or circles. Each circle is organized, meets in the homes of members, and reports to the monthly meetings at the church. This plan is working fine. Year books were given out to group leaders for each member of the society.

On January 22, 1937, Dr. H. Shelton Smith, at the request of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference, reviewed the Home Mission study book for this year—"The American Negro." This meeting was held in our church, and all necessary arrangements were made by this society.

From February, 1912, to February, 1937, the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church has contributed for missions the sum of $18,733.31, or an average of $749.33 per year.

Today we stand at the quarter-century milestone, tomorrow we press on toward the half-century milestone.

As an incentive for our future progress, I leave with you the words of Dr. Staley written in February, 1912: "I am expecting great things from this organization."

the book of the law in the house of Jehovah."—II Chronicles 34:14-21.

Hilkiah's discovery of the ancient Book of the Law amid rubbish in the Temple was a proof as well as a discovery. The Bible was lost before it was found. It was forgotten before it was mislaid. It was neglected, scorned and misplaced by heathenism, before it got into the rubbish heap.

It would be well for each of us to ask himself, "Where is my Bible?" It may be handsomely bound and resting on the center table, but if it is not resting at the same time in our heart, it really is in a rubbish heap.

Finding the Bible is the most exhilarating and profitable of discoveries. We may be finding more of it every day, delving deeper into its mine of gold and jewels, and bringing forth ever new enrichment for our lives.

Prayer—Lord, we bless Thee for Thy Book. Lord, we pray that we may never lose Thy Book. For Christ's sake. Amen.

LEAKSVILLE.

A very impressive Thanksgiving service was held Thursday, November 29, at the Leakesville Christian Church.

A short program was given by the primary classes of the Sunday school, after which the pastor, Rev. W. J. Andes, delivered a sermon. A consecration Thanksgiving service followed, in which each member of the congregation took part. While everyone stood with bowed heads, Miss Clarine Andes and Miss Shenk rendered an appropriate vocal selection.

The Thanksgiving offering for the Orphanage amounted to $13.98.

On Sunday, December 20, the Christmas program was held at the regular preaching service followed by the Christmas sermon by the pastor..

The offering for superannuation amounted to $7.10.

During January the Sunday school contributed one Sunday's offering amounting to $7.50 to the Red Cross Flood Relief Fund.

What Mean the Symptoms?

No thoughtful observer can close his eyes to the fact that modern civilization is reproducing those vices which have proved the undoing of great and mighty nations in the past. Financial confusion—insensate amusement—collapse of morale—moral laxity and decay. I would not be a pessimist, neither would I be blind to currents and portents. The case for religion may be encouragingly presented by many of us. Religious books are still in demand. Such books as "God in the Slums," "God in the Shadows," "For Sinners Only," have had a phenomenal sale. The Holy Bible is still the best seller. Increasing space is given in the daily press to religious questions. When the press presents a religious question for discussion, newspaper offices are inundated with correspondence. It is safe to say that millions of people every week listen to religious messages over the radio and the Church is still a mighty influence in the midst of the years. But is spiritual hunger as deep and widespread as these encouraging features seem to indicate?

Think of how widespread is spiritual inertia; religious indifference; the gambling cancer. Even reputable businesses seem to think they cannot continue without the allurements of chance methods. Think of the Hollywood craze . . . unsportive sport . . . increased drinking. Think of the smugness and complacency of the so-called comfortable classes. Think of the multitudes of professing Christian people who are "at ease in Zion." These things abound and are ominous signs of a widespread contempt for the spiritual way of life. Add to these things the disunity of the churches—theological wranglings—a loveless orthodoxy. The situation, earnestly contemplated, will give pause and challenge to seriously minded leaders in good government and practical religion.

The government would do well to consider certain of its ways. Notice is being taken all over the country, now that hysteria is subsiding, of sinister tendencies that imperil the liberties of a great people. The emergence throughout these States of leaders who combined sound statesmanship with straight and fervent moral thinking, might alter a number of threatening situations with urgent rapidity.

The greatest need, however, of our day is a rediscovery of God for the community as well as for the individual. "Let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, for He will have mercy upon him and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon." Our only hope lies here.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

THE CHRISTIAN SUN wishes for all of its readers a very happy Easter-tide, and expresses that wish in the language of an unknown poet as follows:

May the glad dawn
Of Easter morn
Bring joy to thee.
May the calm eve
Of Easter leave
A peace divine with thee.
May Easter night
On thine heart write,
O Christ, I live for thee!

Greetings and good wishes to the Mid-Year Va. Valley Central Conference in session at Bethlehem Church on Thursday of this week.

The cut for the front page picture this week was loaned to us by the Methodist Protestant Recorder of Baltimore, Maryland. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is very grateful for this courtesy.

The Winter Park, Florida, church is working on plans for a thirty-thousand dollar educational plant. That will be a fine addition to this college town church, and will be a real help in carrying on their fine cultural program of religious activities.

Mrs. W. H. Boone of our Durham (N. C.) Church has sent in a list of CHRISTIAN SUN subscriptions, large enough to claim the 25% commission, and to give their Missionary Society a nice little bit of money. Thanks, and congratulations!

Some churches, including Suffolk (Va.), have been printing the list of SUN subscribers on the Bulletin, and giving news about how the committees are succeeding with the canvass for new subscriptions. Sounds like a good idea. Let the people know, and they may do more.

Every church secretary who received them should see to it without fail that the envelopes for the Easter Offering for Missions are delivered at the church, and with the co-operation of the pastor, placed in the hands of members of every congregation.

Pre-Easter services are being conducted in the Winchester Church by the pastor, Rev. R. A. Whitten. Rev. Mr. Whitten says that Mrs. C. L.

Whitlock has been appointed chairman of the campaign to secure subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and that the work has started with enthusiasm.

It is time now to be making definite plans to attend the Southeast Convention Jacksonville, Florida, April 20-22, next. The program indicates that it will be good to be there, and bad to be away. Young people are thinking of their plans, and quite a number should go from every section.

Surely every pastor will see to it that the envelopes sent for the purpose of the Easter Offering are distributed to the congregations at one service, or by personal contact and delivery, and the offering taken at the next service when those receiving envelopes shall have had time to consider well the privilege presented through this offering.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill has been spending much time recently in Georgia. She says there are to be three Christian Life Conferences this year instead of the usual one. This will make it possible for more people to attend since distances will not be so great. There is also to be a Summer Training School for young people and leaders.

Our Henderson, North Carolina, Church reports three new members added to their fellowship on March 7th. A sunrise service; morning worship, the pastor using as his subject, "The First Easter Message"; and a pageant, written by Mrs. J. Everette Neese, wife of the pastor, to be presented at 7:30 o'clock in the evening, is the program outlined for the church on Easter Sunday.

Rev. A. Eugene Bartlett and his wife, evangelists from West Chester, Pa., helped Rev. H. S. Hardeastle and the Christian Temple (Norfolk) during the last week in a series of services centered around the idea of Christian joy. On Sunday morning there was a consecration service, and Sunday evening Rev. Mr. Bartlett gave a dramatic presentation of the Christian message. On several occasions Mrs. Bartlett spoke to the women. Rev. Mr. Hardeastle expects to receive several members into the church on Easter Sunday.

Rev. J. F. Morgan of the Rosemont Christian Church, Norfolk, is preaching this week on "The Trials of Jesus." The editor at First Christian Church, Norfolk, is talking about "Jesus and. . . ." including such things as Those Who Honor Him, The Children, Those Who Argue With Him, Those Who Eat With Him, etc. More and more of our churches are holding pre-Easter services for the purpose of deepening the spiritual life of the members and winning others to the Christ at this season kept in memory of the death and resurrection of Jesus.

On next Sunday hundreds of people will go to the altar of the church and pledge allegiance to Christ and His Church. Fortunate are those churches that will be able to receive them into a fellowship strong enough to hold them for service through the years to come. The service will mean more than the joining, and the strength of the fellowship will determine the amount of service. For everyone who will join the Church there are hundreds who do not know of the Christ. Those who love the Master in our Southern Convention Churches will lay on the altar next Sunday morning money with which to send the Easter message to people who do not have it. Let this be a love-offering, measured not by the amount of money which it is easy to give but by the love we have for the Man on the Cross.

STEWARDSHIP CONFERENCE.

The stewardship committee of Eastern Virginia Conference is planning a series of stewardship institutes for next week. Members of the Eastern Virginia Committee are Revs. Carl R. Key, J. H. Warren, and Col. E. E. Holland. Revs. John G. Truitt and Jesse H. Dollar are members of the national committee. Dr. Warren H. Denison will be the main speaker, and members of the two committees will assist.

It is the hope of this united committee to have leading members of all churches in Eastern Virginia attend the various sessions and to share in the programs.

The meetings will be held at the following times and places: Sunday, 11 o'clock at Holland; 3 o'clock at Windsor; 7:30 o'clock at Sunbury; Monday, 7:30 o'clock at Wakefield; Tuesday, 7:30 o'clock at Franklin; Wednesday, 7:30 o'clock at Suffolk; Thursday, 8:00 o'clock at Norfolk First Church; Friday, 7:30 o'clock at Newport News.

Pastors and church leaders will please take notice and see that the various churches are represented so that the Conference will receive the most possible good from this united effort.

SPRINGS.

(A CORRESPONDENCE.)

*Florida Sanitarium, Orlando, Florida,
March 13, 1937.*

[Editor's note—This article as its date indicates, should have appeared in the last issue, but was crowded out by other matter.]

"And they came to Elim where were twelve springs of water, and three score and ten palm trees; and they encamped there by the waters."

Now that was Moses, and the children of Israel, doing that on their way to Canaan, the land of Promise. So the writer of the Book of Exodus tells us (Chapter 15, verse 27.)

Well one can't blame them for camping there under the spreading, graceful palm trees, beside those springs. In fact if one has been to Florida and visited even one of the thousands of springs of water under the palm trees, one will congratulate Moses, and rejoice with the children and the grown ups of Israel for having such a privilege. Moses evidently had an eye for beauty, and a taste for the artistic, as well as a mind for law and a heart for divinity. In fact one has not seen the best of Florida until one has encamped for a few hours at least by one of her springs of water under some three score and more palm trees. Now here in Sanlando, not far from this sanitarium, so named, one supposes, because it chances to be near the road side from Orlando to near by Sanford—and one must find names for these springs for they are well worthy of the best and most fitting name to be found. Now Sanlando just gushes and gurgles up, from beneath a little knoll or mound, many thousand gallons of fresh, cool, clear as crystal water and spreads out in a little basin of its own some thirty yards wide, maybe fifty yards long, and then the eddying water of that basin of its own volition divides itself into two rushing currents which flow around, form and embrace an island of more than a hundred feet square and then flow together again in a wide stream where fish are lazily bathing or dashing to and fro in this their home and native element. On this island white, red and pink azaleas are blooming in richest coloring, and studded all around about are the more than three score palms such as must have charmed the eye and refreshed the weary body of Moses and his Israelites on their way to the Promise Land.

And I just wonder if those children of Israel didn't do very much as the children of the Floridians were doing the other day when I encamped, (loitered) an hour or two, by this spring, namely get into their bathing suits and take a swim. My! but these children were having a great time in the clear, cool, crystal waters from this Florida spring, leaping from their "spring boards," diving, swimming, splashing with the joy and abandon of hilarious youth.

As I lingered by just this one of Florida's thousands of springs, I could readily see why Ponce de Leon in his search for the fountain of youth, declared he had found it when he discovered and tarried by the side of one of these springs. He was mistaken, of course, but there is much of life and vigor and movement and freshness about a crystal spring that suggests both renewed youth and strength, and also that invites one, as it did Moses, in ancient days, to encamp by the springs of waters beneath the overhanging and friendly

THE DAY OF RESURRECTION.

The day of resurrection
Earth tell it out abroad;
The passover of gladness,
The passover of God.
From death to life eternal.
From this world to the sky,
Our Christ hath brought us over
With hymns of victory.

Our hearts be pure from evil,
That we may see aright
The Lord in rays eternal
Of resurrection-light;
And, listening to his accents,
May hear, so calm and plain,
His own, "All hail!" and, hearing,
May raise the victor-strain.

Now let the heavens be joyful,
Let earth her song begin,
And all that is therein;
Let the round world keep triumph
Invisible and visible,
Their notes let all things blend;
For Christ the Lord hath risen,
Our joy that hath no end.

palm trees as one journeys on his pilgrimage now to the Land of Promise.

How happy and grateful this writer is and has been that in weakness of body, he could loiter around the lakes and linger by these gurgling, glorious springs, till a newness of life flowed back into his body, while he put on sixteen pounds of wholesome weight: ready now and anxious, too, to go back back to loved ones at home and the labors that his heart and soul ever and always rejoice in. The open air, the glorious sunshine, the delightful Florida surroundings, all gifts of our gracious and loving Father are nature's restoratives and blessings that one cannot enumerate or express. And we bid good Florida, and the good friends who have been so kind to us here, and elsewhere, a happy and grateful au revoir.

SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

All CHRISTIAN SUN readers should make note of the fact that the Southeast Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches is to meet with our Jacksonville, Florida, church, April 20, 21, 22. As is well known, this Convention meets in alternate years with the Southern Convention. The object of this Convention is to discuss plans and programs for the entire work of our churches throughout the Southeast, thus covering in scope, a wider territory than the Southern Convention, but dealing with the identical problems in the whole territory that the Southern Convention deals with in the Carolinas and Virginia. The churches, Conferences and pastors should have large delegations attending the Jacksonville Convention. A great program is being prepared, the execution of which will bring inspiration and essential information to our entire fellowship. All who can do so should plan to attend this important gathering of ours in Jacksonville, April 20-22. The full program will appear in THE SUN at an early date.

MINISTERS' COURSE.

"A Short Course for Ministers," especially ministers in Florida, will be given at Camp Roosevelt, near Ocala, Florida, April 5-10. This is under the auspices of the University of Florida, the School of Adult Education. This course has been planned for by committee representing the leading denominations of the state in cooperation with the representatives of the University. Among leaders will be Dean Vaughan Dabney of the Andover, Newton Theological Seminary; Dr. Edwin M. Potat of Furman University; Dr. Robert B. Eleazer of the Committee on Interracial Relations, and Dr. W. D. Weatherford of the Blue Ridge Training School. This School is without cost to the ministers of Florida.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

"The crying need of today is not a man with a method, but a man with a message." Jesus had a message—a very definite message. The Apostles followed His example. Men were told that they were sinners, that "the wages of sin is death," that "Christ died to save sinners," and what must be done by sinners to obtain forgiveness for past sin, and how to live the Christian life. The record of conversions in Acts shows the efficacy of the method. The same method will have the same result today.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

GOOD FRIDAY.

Merchants on the streets of our city say they will not be there on Good Friday. They will be home or in their churches busying their minds with things that happened on a Friday in April long centuries ago. They will think of a widow's son hanging on a cross while His mother stands by weeping. They will paint again the picture of a little hill like a skull with three crosses standing there, Jesus between two thieves; Church men waging their heads saying, "He saved others, himself he can not save;" soldiers gambling for the seamless robe, the touch of which was said to have healed an unfortunate woman; and a few weeping friends standing in the distance helpless and almost hopeless. These churchmen who sell on our streets will worship in their churches the One who was betrayed and hanged on a tree.

They may lose a few nickles and dimes, but they will gain in life everlasting. They may be missed in the stalls on the streets, but they will be recognized in the fellowship of Jesus. To them it is Good Friday because on that day the crucified Christ could commend His own soul to the Father as He said concerning the work given Him to do and the plan of salvation, "It is finished."

Many are the multitudes from all corners of the earth who will bow in reverent humility on the anniversary of that great event—the crucifixion of Jesus. People of every race, nation and tongue will sing of His praise and accept of His grace. When we look at His purity, His goodness, His love, we will say like the publican of old, "God, be merciful to me a sinner." Some will tarry about the cross seeking a task that they may do, even though it may be as heart-rending as that of taking down the body of the Lord Himself and laying it away in a tomb. The ministry of love is the lesson of the cross.

EASTER.

A federal judge in Pennsylvania is said to go into seclusion on Saturday before Easter and meditate all day on what happened at the first Easter, and especially how the disciples must have felt on the day after the crucifixion. They had no way of knowing what would happen later. They knew that they had believed in Jesus as the Messiah, that they had left all to follow Him, and that the divine power which they had believed to be His had not saved Him from the Cross and the tomb. Forever they were to be branded as followers of a mis-guided zealot, who had been crucified. Not a very happy or wholesome prospect for them. They really had something to worry about, or so it would seem. They knew real sorrow. They had staked everything on one man, and apparently they had lost. Money was gone, friends were gone, and Jesus was gone. Only quiet and seclusion was left to them. They accepted the inevitable and waited quietly in some unnamed home through their Sabbath.

But faith was not dead. Early on the first day of the week they went with sweet spices to the grave of the beloved—women did. They would stand by even in death. They would minister even to the dead. Love lasted longer than life. Sacrifice extended to the grave. "Very early in the morning, while it was dark," they wended their way to make their offering for the one they loved. There were no lovely flowers to bedeck the bodies of those lovely ladies as they went out into the garden of prayer that first Easter morning. Sweet spices would preserve and perfume the body of the dead, and tears of grief would relieve their hearts of sorrow.

But they did not know Jesus. They thought that they did. They thought that He would be lying flat where He was left on Friday night, but He was walking where people lived. They thought that the grave had sealed Him fast, but in fact it had set Him free. They thought that He was dead, but they found that He was alive, more alive than He had been before.

Of course there are things about the resurrection that our minds cannot understand. But there is no need to dispute the fact and miss its blessings. Careful historians tell us that there is more evidence to prove the physical resurrection of Jesus of Nazareth than there is for most other facts in ancient history. Women were first to testify to this truth. Doubting disciples became convinced of it. Roman soldiers risked their lives to say that it was so. More than five hundred at one time saw Him in the midst. But best of all, a Church was established on this belief, and that Church has lived for nineteen centuries to bless the world with its testimony of a living Christ. Those who accept the testimony find that it runs true to experience, and that the living Christ comes near to human experience.

Well may we turn to our places of worship early on the Easter Day with the hope of finding the Master in the garden to greet us. We will not find Him in a tomb, but will find Him in the heart. He is not far away; He is near. He is not bound; He is free. He is not dead; He lives forever. "He is risen, indeed." "Gloria, in excelsis gloria!" The Christ of God lives, and "because He lives we shall live also."

A CRIME CONFERENCE.

Norfolk has just closed a two-day conference on Crime—Its Cause and Cure. Leading citizens of the city and invited guests from Washington have presented informing and challenging papers. Interested audiences have listened and discussed. Now we turn back to the regular tasks, perhaps to forget as quickly as possible the ugly pictures painted by these people of an increasing list of criminals, mostly young people between 18 and 25 years of age. A continuing committee was appointed whose business it shall be to study further and to seek remedies which may change the tide until crime decreases in our midst.

In the opinion of many, the minister presented the most convincing paper of all, a paper in which he contended that organized religion can and must build the kind of character that will stand against temptation and overcome criminal tendencies. This is the business of the Church, and the Church must busy itself about this important task.

This week we recall the most dastardly crime ever committed by man. Envy and hatred grew in the hearts of Church leaders until they offered a price for the betrayal of one Jesus of Nazareth. Disappointment and greed struggled in the heart of Judas until he was willing to sell his knowledge of the Master and betray the Christ with a kiss. Fear of the people made vacillating Pilate willing to hand over an innocent man to the death-dealing soldiers and let them drag him out and make a Calvary. Desire for life and fear of death sent professing disciples to hide in the shadows while the Master whom they had followed was crucified on a cross. Such a crime as this the world has witnessed only once, and that was once too often.

But similar crimes are committed today. Envy and hatred still spoil human life. Disappointment and greed take their toll and betray friendships. Fear sends many a person cringing from the tasks they should perform. Few of us are innocent, and the sins of all have been laid on the heart of the Man on the Cross. We need no conference on crime to drive us to penitence, for only a look at the cross and the man hanging there makes us know that forgiveness is needed.

EASTER HYMN.

Let us rise in the early morning,
And instead of ointments bring
Hymns of praises to our Master,
And His resurrection sing;
We shall see the Sun of Justice
Risen with healing in His wing.
Thy unbounded loving kindness,
They have groaned in Hades' chain,
Prisoners from afar beholding,
Hasten to the light again,
And to the eternal Pascha
Wove the dance and raised the strain.
Go ye forth, His saints to meet Him,
Go with lamps in every hand!
From the sepulchre He riseth;
Ready for the Bridegroom stand;
And the pascha of salvation
Hail, with His triumphant band.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church." That is a beautiful sentence. It is the First Cardinal Principle adopted by that body of believers who wear the name, "Christian." Its significance is important and its purpose is high and holy. Our fore-fathers in the church desired to recognize the lordship of Jesus Christ. These brief words cannot be surpassed in fitness and religious sentiment. No one should be unwilling to recognize Jesus as the Head of the Church.

During the first century Jesus was the Head of the Church. "Jesus Christ and Him crucified" was the central theme of the apostolic preaching of the first century. With the passing of the early apostles, the Church began to formulate creeds and forms of defined doctrines, and soon the Church became its own head. It formulated creeds, defined doctrines and required conformity to its expressed will and wish. Those who are informed concerning church history know something of the oppression of the church in that period. The church became self-satisfied and its recognized leaders became tyrants in seeking to force their will upon others.

The Reformation, under Martin Luther and others, was a protest against this self-constituted authority and power. But with the success of the Reformation, the Bible assumed a new place of importance among the common people. Gradually the Bible was recognized as a "sufficient rule of faith and practice." This was the third Principle adopted by the founders of the denomination called "Christians." This principle is now generally recognized by all the Protestant denominations. The Bible, or the Holy Scripture, takes precedence over all other books in giving it this recognition of supreme importance.

One other advance step was taken in founding the Christian denomination, and this was expressed in the fifth Principle, as follows: "The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all." This Principle elevates the individual to a place of responsibility in the choice of creeds and the adoption of personal liberty in conduct.

It is significant that these Cardinal Principles of the Church indicate the major points of emphasis concerning the creeds and practices of the Church since the death of Jesus. At various times the great leaders of ethical and religious thought have emphasized the place of Jesus, the supremacy of the church, the sufficiency of the Holy Scriptures and the ascendancy of the individual. We are living in the individualistic age. The prevalence of education has given the individual a high place in the councils of the political and religious leaders. "The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience" has been misinterpreted by people who cannot differentiate between judgment and prejudice; and, who, furthermore, seem to be unable to discover the dividing line between conscience and their own will and wish. Consequently, the individual becomes a law unto himself, and when opportunity is presented, he becomes a dictator. There is but a step between the supremacy of the individual and the self-appointed position of a dictator. If a man can determine his own creeds and conduct why can not he control others in the same field, if his individual tastes lead in that direction? is a natural question, and the inevitable outcome, of the individualistic doctrine of religion.

In this age what has become of Jesus? Is He the Head of the Church? Is the preaching and the teaching of our day conducive to a recognition of Jesus Christ as the Son of God? Surely these questions should have our deep concern during the Easter season. Jesus should have another triumphal entry into the Church during these days. He is knocking at the door of many Parsonages and asking for admittance to the Pastor's study. He knocks at the door of the Church. Let Him in!

MY EASTER OFFERING.

At this season of the year, we celebrate the anniversary of the resurrection of our Lord. His believers and followers were dismayed when He was slain on Calvary. They were bewildered, disillusioned, groping after a faith that had been newly begotten in their souls and had guided them but a short step of the way. Truly they were sheep scattered abroad having no shepherd. Had they believed in vain? Had they followed in vain? Were their hopes of no avail? The church has never seen a night like that. The enemies felt that they had triumphed—that they were done with this imposter. But in their ecstasy of victory they suddenly remembered that He said that He would be crucified, dead, and buried, but that He would rise again on the third day. A part of the prophesy had been fulfilled at their own cruel hands. Would the other part be fulfilled? They stationed a guard about the resting place of His body to insure that no one would come and steal it away and thus claim that He had risen from the dead. In the midst of it all, at the appointed hour, the Spirit Almighty came sweeping through the clay and brought Him back to life. The disciples discovered the open tomb. Mary came face to face with the risen Lord. Again and again He showed Himself alive to individuals and to groups of individuals. It is a historical fact that Christ was born, that He lived, that He was crucified, that He was buried. It is also an historical fact that He arose from the dead. It is an ever present fact that He lives and that He lives triumphantly in the hearts of His own. Evidently the question as to the authenticity of the resurrection story was raised in the first century. Paul, in answer to this question, said, "If Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain and your faith is also vain."

The church of Jesus Christ on earth today is the answer to the living Christ, and its march through the centuries is the graphic and dynamic interpretation of that life. Every individual must answer for himself as to the worth of Christ in His own life and the value of Christian faith in his experiences and hopes.

There are two things that I would like to offer as an expression of my faith and devotion to my Lord. First, myself. I would like to give myself anew. I would like to take a retrospect. I would like to think of the paths that I have walked, of the services that I have rendered, of the thoughts and passions that have swept through my mind. I would like to think of the low moments of life as well as the high. So long as I am in the flesh and have to do with the emotions of life and the temptations of the world, my vision may dim a bit and at times my hopes may sink within me. Mountain top experiences come and they leave their marks, but taking life as a whole, I would like, at these recurring seasons, to bring myself anew and offer what I am and have unto Him whose I am and whom I serve.

A MISSIONARY'S MISCELLANEY.

Visits, Events and Letters that Come in the Course of a Missionaries Busy Life on the Foreign Field.

One frequently plans the night before many things to be done the next day. He is up frequently before day-break for an early start, but night-time comes again with nothing of the work planned done except that executed before the morning meal. This is because so many calls not counted upon come as soon as other people begin to move. So the day sped by yesterday.

There is sometimes a feeling of discouragement, for there is so much which really should be done, and we are not able to push it along as we would. The editor must be able to write, and write well, whether he feels like it or not; the preacher must be able to receive, visit and preach according to schedule. So the missionary must find a way to meet his tasks; at the same time be considerate and "keep sweet" at all times. Regardless of how much he has to do, whether tired or discouraged, when people come they must be received cordially and be given proper consideration; this in addition to the care of many places where there is work and much preaching to be done. Courtesy goes far here among oriental peoples. Frequently there are those who come from afar and cannot return. Among them are some who need comfort and encouragement. By a hasty word or an unwise attitude, or action, one may do more harm in a few minutes than can be overcome in several days. Efficient assistants, secretaries, stenographers we have not. But thanks to a merciful God for appreciative native Christians and the help of the Holy Spirit, who make it possible for the work to go on happily.

Among the callers of yesterday was a Japanese minister. He had come from far south, Shanghai, to see the changes that are taking place in the new state of Manchukio which his nation is making. Thousands of other people of various nationalities come here also, but largely for observation along commercial lines. The pastor's interest was in the spiritual welfare of the people, Japanese, Chinese and Korean of this region. He was accompanied by the Japanese Methodist pastor of Harbin, and by a young Japanese man who recently became a Christian. He wanted to meet a foreign missionary working with the Manchurian people.

This Japanese pastor from Shanghai was concerned to know how missionaries are faring under the new regime. He had heard of some troubles they had experienced, wanted firsthand information, and to be of help if possible. He showed a fine spirit and promised to do his best toward the political affairs of his country was also in Manchuria for this reason and held a long conference with some of us missionaries here in Harbin. These servants of the Lord brought sympathy, comfort and helpfulness. They were able to advise with us in a wise, wholesome way.

We were able to give them some light on trying situations which have arisen frequently, largely from misinformation and ignorance. It seems impossible for some who have no idea of the spirit of Christianity and the purpose of Christian missions to understand how we can be willing to live and work and travel as we do with no other purpose than the saving of the souls of these Manchurian peoplet. So we are suspected of having other motives. The high-ups understand and are both courteous and helpful, but, unfortunately, our dealings are frequently with those who do not understand. We can only be patient and hope for better understanding of our motives and our work. The help of these Japanese Christian leaders is greatly appreciated.

It was gratifying to learn through the pastor from Shanghai that the Congregational churches of Japan are sending six Japanese evangelists to preach the gospel to the Manchurian (Chinese) people of Manchukuo. Churches of other denominations in Japan are also now supporting Chinese evangelists here in Manchuria at several places. Some of this money is given, we understand, by Baptist churches in Japan. There is a movement among the Baptist churches here to do more. It is hoped that they will be able to send Japanese missionaries to the Japanese who are moving into Manchuria, and that they will be able to support some native (Chinese) workers here in Manchukuo. The Korean Christians are sending missionaries into China and also to Mongolia. Chinese Christians in China and here in Manchuria are sending missionaries into Mongolia.

This should bring rejoicing to those who through the years have contributed toward the spread of the gospel in the Far East, as it rejoices us missionaries. At the time it is a challenge to people of western lands. We must not slacken our efforts, but with even greater zeal, faithfulness, and effort, evangelize these people, joining hands with our brothers and sisters out here who have also now taken up the torch and are seeking to give the others the light received from our hands.

There was certainly never a time when here in Manchuria the people were so ready to hear, so appreciative, and so responsive. We rejoice and thank God, and crave that our people at home have a larger share in this glorious work.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE STALEY MEMORIAL.

One might write a column in THE SUN every week till May 13th, devoted solely to the W. W. Staley Memorial and then not do justice to the subject. Last week this writer proposed in THE SUN that since our women were contributing a dollar each through their Missionary Societies to this proposed memorial, many of us men should give and would be glad to give, $25.00 each, a dollar for each year since the women began their work, corporately, in the Southern Convention. Dr. Staley not only took a friendly interest in the work of our women for missions, but was one of the leading spirits in launching our missionary movement in the Southern Convention and to his dying day never relinquished that interest. The present Mission Secretary was to begin his full time work as Mission Secretary of the Southern Convention on the first day of September, 1917. It had already been decided by a committee of the Convention, of which committee Dr. Staley was chairman, that the first work of the Secretary should be that of raising, by popular subscriptions, $150,000.00 for missions, to be paid in five equal annual payments. Prior to this date the present Secretary was serving as pastor of our Elon Community Church and Chaplin for the college. Preaching his final sermon in that capacity on the last Sunday of August, 1917, and returning to his home, he was amazed and more than gratified to find in his mail that day a letter from our beloved Dr. Staley, saying, "I recall that you are now to begin as our Mission Secretary for the Southern Convention, your first objective being that of securing pledges for missions. I wish to assure you of my approval, and enclosed you will find my pledge for $1,000.00, to be paid $200.00 a year in five annual installments." It is useless to say that the Secretary's heart was filled with joy and gratitude, and new courage came to him for the stupendous task to which the church, through the Convention, had called him. And it is useless to say that Dr. Staley promptly paid the $1,000.00 pledged, and a few weeks later when the writer reached Suffolk to introduce his campaign there, he found a dozen others, members of Dr. Staley's church, who followed the liberal example of their pastor and one of his members gave $5,000.00, all of which pledges were promptly met. This shows something of the influence of this marvelous man in his church and his community. I doubt if he ever told his people what he had pledged and I am sure he did not suggest to any of them what they should give, but this man's life by its quiet and unassuming attitude told its own story and made its lasting impression.

But now to our woman's work and their plan for a Staley Memorial. The writer had served, without compensation and in connection with his pastorate at Elon College, as Secretary of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Convention (changed later to The Mission Board of The Convention to include Home and Foreign Missions) since 1907 and when in 1911 he approached Dr. Staley, then President of The Convention, about a Woman's Board and Woman's Missionary Societies, he found Dr. Staley ready and anxious and very graciously suggested that if I would nominate such a Board he would gladly appoint and cooperate. When Mrs. C. H. Rowland, then of Franklin, was suggested as Chairman for such a Board, Dr. Staley readily approved as he did of the other members suggested and it was agreed that the Secretary should call together these members as was done in Raleigh the following spring. After the day's work with Mrs. Rowland and her Board in Raleigh, the results were presented to Dr. Staley, who highly approved and applauded the same and then, as ever and always, he took the most lively interest in the beginning of the Woman's work, corporately, as a part of the Convention. And now the women, within twenty-five years, have unitedly accomplished wonders in missionary work, they are indeed doing a beautiful and fitting thing in raising a Memorial Fund to the memory of this great man and generous benefactor of all missionary and progressive work in the Convention. The writer can but believe the men will join heartily with the women in this most fitting task and not a few of them, if advised of the matter, will gladly donate a dollar a year—$25.00—to the Staley Memorial. Our good women may be depended upon to select wisely just what form this memorial should take, whether it be the building of a Staley Memorial Church, the creation of a Staley Memorial Library, or the establishment of a Staley Memorial Mission, so that in honoring him the Name of his Lord, Whom he served so faithfully through life shall be glorified above all other names.

Yes, we men wish, and will gladly take, a part in this altogether fitting and worthy undertaking.

J. O. ATKINSON.

THE EASTER OFFERING.

It is most fitting that every church in our Convention take the Annual Easter Offering for Missions and make the same as liberal as possible. This is the plan as well as the program of our Convention, and of the several Conferences composing the Convention and surely no plan can be more appropriate. At Easter we celebrate the resurrection of our Lord and it was soon after His resurrection that He gave the one emphatic command. "Go ye and make disciples of all nations." That this command might be emphatic He said to those assembled to witness His ascension to His Father, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. And when He had spoken these things, while they beheld, He was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight." (Acts. 1:8-9.) Thus His parting words we hear today coming down the ages, "Ye shall be my witnesses." We, in making our offering for missions obey implicitly this command. This is the one offering that we make, not out of care for the physical or mental needs and comforts of man, but out of love for our Lord that we may glorify His name and exalt that Name, which is above every name.

The best has been done that we know, that of sending collection envelopes to every congregation, either through the pastor, or church secretary, in all the churches of our Convention. It is up to the pastor and people of the churches to embrace this opportunity and obey this command of our Lord, or to neglect and be indifferent to the same.

The Mission Secretary feels that we Congregational-Christians have a message, as well as a mission, and that it is our duty and our privilege to make that message known on the frontiers at home as well as in fields afar. One half of the offering goes to Home; one half to Foreign Missions, unless otherwise designated. May every pastor see to it, and every church member take an interest in it, so that there may be throughout the church an awakening in the name of our Lord, that will result in renewed spiritual power to the Church, and the salvation of many souls.

A WORLD PERPLEXED.

Was this world of our's ever so perplexed as it is today?

Men in high places, and in low, simply do not know what to do, or what will be next. Nations right now, our own included, are preparing for war on a scale such as was never witnessed before. Look at this summary from an exchange.

In Europe alone, 50,000,000 young men, intensively trained, are assembled in army barracks ready for action at a moment's notice; while in an emergency another 50,000,000 recruits would quickly respond to the call of "do or die."

In the armament factories of Europe there is fevered haste, while in the world's navy yards, hundreds of new warships are emerging, ready to take their places in the line of battle. Italy plans to expand her air fleet until she can send 10,000 fighting planes across her borders to deal death to an enemy. Great Britain, France, Germany, Soviet Russia, Japan, and numerous smaller nations, also air-minded, are constructing stratosphere fighters and bombers, many of them capable of carrying several tons of death-dealing missiles and maintaining a speed of three hundred miles an hour.

The United States delights to term itself the "most peaceful nation" on the globe; yet at this moment it is expending three and a half times as much money for war preparation as in 1913. This country has twice as many men under arms and ten times as many officers. Its navy is double the strength of twenty years ago. Its aviation arm of defense includes some 2,000 fighting planes, with a construction program of 4,400 more.

The world is perplexed. Why?

Men and women every where are leaving God out. That's why. Old moral standards have been torn down and better ones have not taken their place. "Change! Change, Change," is the cry and program of the day.

Well, we are forgetting that there is "One Who is the same yesterday, today and forever," In Him alone is security. He is our refuge. What are we doing, what are you doing, Reader, to help proclaim Him and His sufficiency to a world perplexed, a world in sin?

THE W. W. STALEY MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

One of the most impressive meetings I have attended in some time was that held last night (March 8th) in one of the chapels of our church. It was the occasion of the 24th anniversary of the W. W. Staley Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church. Miss Elizabeth Vincent was presiding. She made most appropriate remarks about the life and work of the man whose name the Society bears, and conducted a beautiful worship service. Mrs. J. S. Rollings, assistant secretary of the Southern Convention read a brief and most interesting history of the W. W. Staley Missionary Society, recalling the fact that it was the first Young People's Society organized in the Convention, and that it was organized when Mrs. W. H. Denison, then of Norfolk, Virginia, was present as a guest and to have a part in the formation of the Society.

The part that impressed me so much, however, was the manner in which the Society went about autographing the Silver Anniversary Book of the Women's Southern Convention. The electric lights were switched off so that only tall wax tapers lighted the room. On a table placed near the front were unlighted candles in red, yellow, black, brown, and white candles, representing the races of all mankind. In the midst of them stood a much taller white candle representing the Light of the World. The presiding officer made a brief explanation telling those present that they were to come forward, take a seat at the table, autograph the Book (pages of the Anniversary Book, which have been distributed to all Societies in the Convention) and then drop their offering, whatever they wished, into a large silver offering plate. They had faith to believe it would total enough to average the desired amount for each member—and from the looks of the offering I saw in the plate when I had the honor of placing my name there, it more than amounted to enough. With very appropriate Scripture quotations, Miss Vincent lighted the tallest candle and with it, lighted the candles of red, yellow, black, brown, and white; and then silently, and how impressive that silence was! They went forward, one by one, to this table, which had now become an altar, took the pen and wrote their names.

In that soft light and stillness of that room, with the burning candles on the altar-table, representing Jesus standing among the peoples of the world, as I saw them go forward everyone, take their seat, quietly inscribe their names on that roll, and drop their offering in the plate, I could but pray that that line might reach around the earth and down through all time to come. They left their names in the Book, their money on the altar, and a prayer that God would help each of them ever to do his part in evangelizing the world. It was very good indeed to be there. Preceding the closing prayer, which was offered by the pastor, they sang:

"Forward through the ages,
In unbroken line,
Move the faithful spirits
At the call divine;
Gifts in differing measure,
Hearts of one accord—
Manifold the service,
One the sure reward."

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

WHAT CAN EASTER MEAN TO YOUTH.

Easter time represents humanity's perennial hope. It proclaims the passing of winter and is the herald of Spring. It is the advance-guard of the procession of flowers and fields of waving grain. And more than this, it has unusual appeal to youth because the observance of Easter throughout Christendom is centered in the Person of a Young Man who swept the whole gamut of human experience, who faced the deep crises of life and refused to surrender to cheap expediences by which he might have saved himself from cruel death.

Three things I wish this Easter may teach you: all of them emphasized in the life of a Young Man who knew temptation as you know it; who never found it especially easy to take a stand against the crowd; and who demonstrated in His every day life the possibility of developing a worthwhile character based on clear thinking, clean living and fidelity to the right.

I. Easter is a symbol of the courage of Jesus; it took courage for Him to turn a deaf ear to the plaudits of the fickle crowd and listen to the still small voice within; it took courage to "set his face toward Jerusalem," but He knew that the man who is true to his inner conviction of right has all the good forces of the universe on his side, and this courage drew Him to his cross-death on a windswept hill, but in truth He has overcome the world.

II. Easter is the great beacon light of love throwing its beams across the dark shadows of a world in the icy grasp of hate, strife, jealousy and fear. May the fact that God, "So loved the world," become a living reality enshrined in the heart of youth.

III. Easter signifies the revival of our faith. Jesus knew He was right, and this gave Him faith in His own purpose. He says to youth today: "Believe in yourself."

He looked down into the hearts of those whom He met and set them on the way or righteousness because he had faith in them; believe in others as He did.

He had faith in God, and the world today needs to have that faith. Your generation can make conquest of all the evils of your day by a sublime faith in God through the spirit of Christ who said: "Lo, I am with you always."

(The above was written for the Iowa Congregational-Christian young people's paper Iowa Pilgrim Log by Rev. Arthur R. McLaughlin, First Congregational Church, Ames, Iowa.)

GOOD FRIDAY—AND—EASTER.

On the day of the crucifixion of Jesus His followers were plunged into indescribable despair. It seemed to be the end of everything.

An incident from the life of the great conductor, Toscanini, related in The Man with the Baton is an apt illustration of this feeling. Puccini, the composer, died before completing the score of "Turandot" and although another composer completed it, Toscanini would not conduct any but the uncompleted version of the world's premiere of the work. And so, in the middle of a phrase, the music abruptly stopped and Toscanini, "turning around to the audience with tears streaming down his pale face, announced: 'Here . . . here . . . the maestro died!'"

But, for Christians, all was not over on that Friday long ago—for then came Easter. As an unknown poet has expressed it:

HOPE.

He died!

And with Him perished all that men hold dear;

Hope lay beside Him in the sepulcher,

Love grew cold, and all things beautiful beside

Died when He died.

He rose!

And with Him hope arose, and life and light.

Men said, "Not Christ but Death died yesternight."

And joy and truth and all things virtuous

Rose when He rose.

I find the gayest castles in the air that were ever piled far better for comfort and for use than the dungeons in the air that are daily dug and caverned out by grumbling, discontented people. A man should make life and nature happier to us, or he had better never been born.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

THE GOOD CHURCH MEMBER WORSHIPS.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
APRIL 4, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Deut. 16:11; Matt. 18:19, 20.

(CONSECRATION MEETING.)

During the month of April, there are four topics which deal with the "Good Church Member." There is no better time to make a study of our individual lives for the purpose of improving as a church member.

It is obvious to say that we should attend Church; but Jesus realized that there was a primary purpose involved,—that of worship. "They that worship the Father must worship in spirit and in truth."

Discuss reasons for worship and ways of worship.

To whisper in Church is a wrong
Which shows the attitude in you.
Each should ask, "Oh Lord, how long Shall things like this continue?"

When we see this neglect
It seems to be their splendor;
"They find our patience all upset,"
Exclaimed the Superintendent.

But soon the damage they'll despair,
For they are slowly shifting;
Attitudes for right we should declare
The Church influence uplifting.

Time goes on and we remark,
It was not as expected;
We're troubled much in our heart
When worship is neglected.

Then listen today with a devoted heart,
The spirit in silence whispers;
And God to you doth impart
Some message through the Vespers.

We fill the air with wrathful shouts,
Demanding an upheaval;
We shall select the reverent thoughts,
And let vanish all the evil.

It is good if you should be Reverent in His service,
Then in worship you will see
The proof that God doth love us.

It is true we all should know
Good church members worship the Master.
It makes a difference what we do
Is advice of the pastor.

JOHN'S RECOLLECTION OF THE RISEN LORD.

LESSON XIII—MARCH 28, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: I am the first and the last, and the Living One; and I was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore.—Rev. 1:17, 18.

LESSON: John 20:1-21; 125.

The lesson story deals with some of the things John recalled about the Risen Lord. To be sure there are other incidents recorded by the other Gospel writers, and there were undoubtedly other incidents remembered by John himself. But when in later years he sat down to write his gospel he put down those recollections which seemed to him most vivid and most vital. Let us consider some of John's recollections of his Risen Lord.

Recollection of the First Easter Morning.

John was undoubtedly an old man when he wrote his gospel, and he had undoubtedly forgotten many little incidents and details of the life of Jesus. But he never forgot the impressions of that first Easter morning. He remembered the darkness of that Friday and the despair of that Saturday preceding that Easter Sunday morning. Like the other disciples, John thought that Jesus was dead. He himself had seen him die on the Cross, and perhaps he had seen him laid in the tomb. And discouragement and defeat had come.

And then came Easter Sunday morning. He recalled across the years how Mary Magdalene had come breathlessly and told Peter and him that someone had taken away the body of Jesus from the tomb. He recalled how Peter and he had run wildly to the sepulchre—he remembered how he had beaten Peter—and how when they reached the sepulchre, Peter with characteristic impulsiveness had gone ahead of him into the tomb. He remembered how strange at first it all seemed to him, and then how gradually it dawned upon him that his Lord had risen again from the dead—indeed he recalled how his Lord had told them beforehand that he would rise again from the dead. He remembered how in awe and amazement he and Peter had returned to their homes, hoping it was true, believing it was true, and yet almost afraid it was not true—it seemed too good to be true. But it was true—as John looks back across the years he knows this: Jesus Christ had come back alive from the dead, He was the Risen Lord.

John recalled, too, of how Mary Magdalene had later told him of her experience, how she had come to the sepulchre, how she had found the tomb empty, how she had remained at the sepulcher after Peter and he had gone away, how the angels appeared unto her, how she had talked with one whom she thought was the gardener, and how in the tone of his voice as he called her name, her Lord made himself known unto her, and how he had commanded her to tell the good news to the other disciples. John never forgot the light on her face or the look in her eyes as she told him this story and he felt that it ought to have a place in the glorious climax of his story of the Master's life.

John remembered, too, how that very night, Jesus himself appeared unto the disciples as they were gathered in a room with the doors shut—it was dangerous business just then to have associated with this man Jesus. There was no doubt that it was Jesus. He showed them his hands and his side. John remembered the joy that had come into their hearts when they saw their Friend and knew that he was alive again. And he remembered how Jesus had told them that they were to go out into the world, even as God had sent Him into the world, and how Jesus had bestowed upon them His spirit and benediction.

Recollections of the Sunday After Easter.

John recalls another incident from the ministry of his Risen Lord. He remembered how Thomas was not with the disciples when Jesus first appeared unto them, and how Jesus, eight days later appeared unto them and convinced Thomas, an honest doubter that He was alive again from the dead. He remembered even Thomas' great exclamation or confession when he realized it really was Jesus—"My Lord and my God." And John never forgot how Jesus had told them that they had believed because they had actually seen Him, but that happy indeed would be those who although they would never see Him with the physical eye, would believe on Him because they had experienced His presence in their hearts.

Recollections of a Fishing Trip.

Among the vivid and happy recollections of the aged apostle was one that stood out so clearly—the recollection of the fishing trip and the consequent experiences growing out of it. He recalled how he and six other disciples had, at the suggestion of Simon Peter, gone fishing. He remembered too, that in spite of the fact that they had fished all night, they had caught nothing. In the morning as they were coming in they saw a friendly stranger standing on the beach. At first they did not know Him. But there was something so compelling about the man that when he told them to cast their net on the right side of the ship, they instinctively obeyed. To their surprise they caught a hundred and fifty three fish—John like every good fisherman remembered how many he caught. By some sudden insight John realized that the friendly stranger was none other than Jesus himself, and he immediately told Peter.

Then something happened that John never forgot. As an old man he still remembered how Peter impulsively jumped overboard and swam and waded to the shore—he could not wait for the boat to take him to land. You see Peter had some things to make right with the Master, things that could not wait. One suspects that John's eyes filled with tears when he thought of Peter swimming and wading madly through the water in his eagerness to ask the Master's forgiveness for the wrong he thought he had done Him. Certainly there is a rebuke to us in our complacency and ease in the face of how we have denied our Lord.

John remembered, too, that breakfast by the sea, with Jesus as host. He remembered how Jesus had thrice asked Peter "Lovest thou me?"—perhaps Peter had thrice denied Him—and how Peter in sincerity and almost in agony, had professed his love for Christ. He remembered, too, how Jesus had told Peter, and John suspected that he was also telling all of His followers that one's love for Christ finds expression in doing some service of love to others. "Feed my lambs," "Feed my sheep," "Feed my sheep," John never forgot those words.

One other incident sticks in John's memory. He recalled how in answer to Peter's question as to what John was to do—Jesus had already told Simon Peter about his future and his fate—that Jesus had told him that discipleship was a personal thing. "What is that to thee? Follow thou me." Christ deals with us as individuals. We are not to do what others do. We are not to obey general rules. We are to seek and do Christ's will for us as individuals. Christ's law of love must find its application to us as individuals.

DETERMINED TO FINISH HIS JOB.

"He steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem."—Luke 9:51.

Jesus knew His mission, and from the beginning of His life to the end of it He was determined against all odds to go straight through, cost Him what it would. He knew what He wanted to say and He said it. He knew what He wanted to do and He did it. He knew where He wanted to go and He never stopped short of it. He was determined to go to Jerusalem because there he was to finish the work which had been given Him to do.

It was a hard road He had to travel. There was the betrayal of Judas, the denial of Peter, the trial for nothing in which He was guilty, and the crucifixion. Yet nothing kept Him from going ahead to the finish. Salvation must be accomplished.

It was in this sacrifice that we find His love and the supreme love of God. Nothing but love for us would cause Him to endure this suffering.

Prayer—Dear Father, in the name of Jesus, we come to Thee beseeching Thee that the love of Christ may lay a thrall upon our spirits and make us willing captives to His will. Amen.

TUESDAY.

THE HIGHEST EXPRESSION OF CHRISTIAN CONSECRATION.

"And for their sakes I sanctify myself."—Jno. 17:19.

This is a climax of prayer—petition that leads to the dedication of a life to some one else; and Christ began this sanctified ministry by washing the feet of the disciples including the one who, at the time, had plans to betray Him into the hands of the enemies.

The highest expression of Christian consecration comes when it is connected with humanity, and when it bows to the service of human needs. So important is this spirit that Jesus made it plain that so must it be with us His children. "He that would be greatest among you let him be your servant." Only by such service can Jesus be enthroned in life, for life is glorified only by its humilities.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, grant that we may be willing to the service of towels. We seek each day to walk with Thee along the roads and in the streets of our cities and towns. We seek each day to be a ministry for Thee to those that are passing by. In Jesus' name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

HEAVEN SHRINKING FROM PAIN.

"Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: but for this cause came I unto this hour. Father glorify Thy name."—Jno. 12:27, 28.

We instinctively shrink from pain, for it is nature's danger signal, Jesus was not free from nature's instincts.

In addition to this, Jesus had a keen sense of injustice by which the innocent of the world are made to suffer. Therefore the cup which He was to drink was one of moral anguish as well as physical pain. Yet the suffering meant nothing to Him if He could accomplish freedom to their souls. This reveals the mystery of the cross,—to suffer the worst that He might do His best to redeem humanity.

Prayer—Dear heavenly Father, as we contemplate the cross and its sacrifice, we feel challenged by Christ's spirit to help Him bear the burdens of other men's sins and sorrows. We feel now that we have no right to think ourselves true Christians if we are unwilling to do this. Grant us the faith and the courage to do it. Amen.

THURSDAY.

(MAUNDY THURSDAY.)

"A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you."

This day, we are told, is called "Maundy Thursday," because of this text, Maundy coming from the Latin word mandatum,—a new commandment. After delivering this message to His disciples and leaving His commission with them to carry this love to the world, the Savior went to Gethsemane. And what He did there not only hallowed that place, but also hallowed that word as the most magnificent expression which the world has ever known.

Among the obvious lessons here taught are some deeper ones, that of facing the Gethsemane of life with hope and courage; that of facing one's self and getting hold of one's self in order to grapple with life's inevitables victoriously, and at last the assurance of the peace of soul which no panic can destroy.

Prayer—O Thou who art the greatest power of the world, suffer no harm to come nigh our souls. Whatever experiences the days may bring,

Thou art our refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE SOUL'S LAST TEMPTATION.

"... save thyself."—Matt. 27:40.

The scene is at the cross on Golgotha and the mob is haranguing the victim,—the man who claimed to be all powerful. They were jeering Him and calling unto Him, "Save thyself." And no doubt the observing felt as they did about it. It is easy to listen to a speech and agree with the speaker, and we are apt to do so unless we think clear through on both sides of the question.

Midst the tumult of this throng and the jeers of them who harangued and spat upon Him, there must have come to Him again the temptation to get out of it all. But this was the finishing of His job. His decision was made and He would not take things out of the hands of the Father. He who had brought to the world salvation through self-denial, and that life is saved by losing it, was definitely determined to give Himself.

Prayer—Help us, O Christ, to see Thee more clearly. May we be willing to labor on and be spent in doing Thy will as much as Jesus did it as is possible for us to do. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

SATURDAY.

A DAY OF GLORIOUS DEATH.

"Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit."—John 12:24.

Jesus came to the fullness of joy by the cross, and He came to the fullness of life by death. As strange as it may seem, this is the only way ye shall find life, too. There is nothing good that comes to us that does not come by sacrificing the lower for the higher. The lower must die and lie in the grave that the higher may rise. A concrete example comes from the pen of Dr. J. Ray Jordon who said: "Where are you going Mr. Livingston?" "I am going to minister to the blackskins of Africa." "What! Throw away your life and bury it in the jungles of Africa?"

Today we know that the life of Livingston was not thrown away. We cannot estimate the blessings which came to Africa through the dedication of that man to Christ's cause there. He died in the jungles of Africa, but there sprang from his death life everlasting for the blackskins.

Prayer—Dear Father, like Paul, teach us how to die daily that we

DOES GOD SEND TROUBLE?

By REV. ROBERT A. GEORGE, D. D.
Minister, First Congregational Church, Memphis, Tennessee.

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God."—Isaiah 40:1.

God means that men and women should find comfort in their religion. He speaks to his prophet Isaiah and to all of his prophets saying, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people." God's people do find great comfort in their faith; there is nothing in all the world so comforting to men in their heart-breaks as a good religion. The chief purpose of religion is to comfort men and God's commission to his prophets today is the same as it was back in the days of the prophet Isaiah, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people."

Do we get the comfort out of our religion that we should? Is our religion as helpful as it ought to be and as we expect it to be? How often have we tried to say, "Thy will be done" when we have wondered why it should be God's will at all?

Men's hearts are breaking under the disappointments and tribulations of life and they ask: "Why does God bring this trouble upon me? Have I sinned that I should be thus afflicted? Is God angry with me?" We have been taught that God is the author of these calamities that sweep over the lives of men like sheeted storms, that from Him cometh these mysterious visitations; the flame, the cyclone, the pestilence that devoureth at noon day, the crash that snuffs out a score of lives. We have been taught that it was God, who for some inscrutable reason, wrecked this fortune, cut down that strong man in the midst of his strength, flooded a beloved child's throbbing temples with fever. We have taught that for some inscrutable reason, accident, sickness, and faith should come into your home and take away a loved one, may be because God saw that you loved your child too much, maybe because of some secret sin of yours which you never committed and so the hearts of men have been breaking, they have been wondering, they have been told that it is the will of God that they are to submit and say "Thy will be done." when all the time they have been wondering why it is God's will at all.

The dramatic book of Job wrestles with this problem of trouble. Job was sorely afflicted and his three friends, Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar came to comfort him. They finally told Job that God had sent his afflictions upon him because of his sins. Eliphaz especially presses this charge. "Remember, I pray thee, whoever perished being innocent." "Affliction cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground."

But Job maintains his innocence, and finally the book closes and God speaks and says to Eliphaz, "My wrath is kindled against thee and thy two friends for ye have not spoken of me the thing that is right like my servant Job." Job finally charged his three friends with being "miserable comforters." This has been our situation, we often have had "miserable comforters" in the midst of our heart breaks and sore afflictions. I can remember when my good father died his minister said, "For some inscrutable reason God sent this affliction upon this good man." I said in my heart, This preacher is another "miserable comforter."

Some time ago I had a letter from a physician, a stranger to me, who wrote as follows:

"We lost a child recently by death, a bright boy four years old. At the funeral the pastor said, 'God in his infinite wisdom and goodness, knowing what was best for the parents, sent this sickness, suffering and death to the child to punish the parents for sins they had committed.' No one but my wife knew the rebellious feelings that arose in my heart. I could scarcely retain my seat, but better thoughts prevailed. I knew that it was not from God that the affliction came."

There have been many "miserable comforters." It is even tragic that the blessed church has often been a "miserable comforter." Very fittingly did God urge his prophets of old saying, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people." And very fittingly does God urge upon his prophets today the same great message, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people."

In view of the lack of real comfort, it is no wonder that many of God's believing children, in the midst of their tragic sorrow, wonder why they suffer so, why such a terrible affliction has been sent upon them. They try to say, "Thy will be done" but they wonder why there is such a will.

In view of the lack of real comfort we can understand why men lose their faith in God and have rebellion in their hearts.

Does God send trouble? Is God the author of these afflictions, of this sickness, of these calamities that overtake men? Does God afflict these children in order to punish the parents for their sins? Why is it that we do not get more comfort out of our faith? Is it because of our religion or because of our misinterpretation of our religion? Is the church affording God's people the comfort that God intends that they should have and ought to have? Has the church misinterpreted the mind of God? Why have men been told all these long centuries that God is pursuing them with vengeance, sending sickness and calamities, scourging them with disease and death, overtaking them with accidents and calamities to break their hearts? Is it any wonder that men in the midst of their trials lose faith in God? Were men not instinctively religious they would not have the faith that they have.

There is a need of rethinking of this whole problem of suffering. We need to get away from our pagan conceptions, from our pagan ideas of God, from our pagan theology, and think of God in terms of friendship instead of in terms of retributive justice.

In our rethinking of this problem of human suffering it will be well to begin with the thinking of Jesus Christ concerning trouble. We find Jesus opening his ministry with these words: "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because the Lord hath anointed me to comfort all that mourn."

This a great and gracious announcement to hear Jesus Christ, the best interpreter of God men have yet known, the supreme Teacher of all time, declare that he had been sent to "comfort the broken hearts of men." He also announced that if he were to depart that he would send the Holy Spirit, the Comforter. Then we have this further statement: "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort, who comforteth us in all our afflictions." Now here is a good foundation upon which to begin our rethinking of this problem of trouble.

First, Jesus Christ announces that he had been anointed to comfort all who mourn. Second, The Holy Spirit is spoken of as the Comforter. Third, God, the Father is spoken of as the "God of all comfort." Jesus was

Dear Friends:

The beautiful clear days with warm sunshine makes us feel like making a garden. But we know the "ground hog" weather is not over yet so we refrain from the mistake of making a garden too early.

The children are looking forward to Easter Sunday. They look forward with much joy, especially the girls. The good ladies from several states have already sent in boxes of dresses for Easter then it is up to the writer to see that they get Sunday oxfords to go with their new dresses.

The Women's Missionary Society of Burlington Christian Church, composed of five circles, brought to us 33 pretty Sunday dresses for the girls for Easter. The women of our Burlington Church have adways been good to us in this work and we are grateful.

All the children also look forward to having a chicken dinner on Easter Sunday with good old gravy with eggs in it.

Oh! how they enjoy it. Most of us do. If the day is clear, warm and pretty, it will be a pretty scene to watch the girls from all the buildings march off to Sunday School and church dressed in pretty Easter dresses.

I have often thought that if our people who make and send us dresses for Easter could be here Easter Sunday morning and see the beautiful smiles on the faces of the girls who received new dresses, they would get lots of joy out of it and feel well repaid for the trouble of making and sending them.

If everybody would help a little, it would make the work so much easier. The Congregational-Christian church should do a larger work through this institution then it is now doing. The demands on us to take children are many. We had a call last week to take four children. Father dead and mother and children trying to exist on $1.25 per week. Think of it in this Christian land which God has blessed with plenty.

MY EASTER OFFERING.

Then after having given myself, it is impossible for me to withhold what I have. I find great joy in dividing my living, that those less fortunate than I may live more abundantly. I would like to bring my offering and put it in the hands of my church, that the Christ that has saved me, that the church that has guided me, and that the gospel that has enriched my experiences, may go to the ends of the earth.

So today at this Easter time, I bring myself, just as I am, and offer it unto my Lord anew. I bring my offering, as generous as I feel that I can make it, and offer it to my church, that His Kingdom may come and His will be done on earth as it is in Heaven; and so may the members of my church far and near join together with all in making this two-fold contribution in joy and high hopes "unto Him who is able to keep us from falling and to present us faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy." EASTER SUNDAY.

LIFE'S SUPREME VICTORY.

"He is not here, for He is risen."
—Matt. 28:6.

Death had failed and the Savior's plans were accomplished. Now, nothing can defeat Him and nothing can defeat the world. He ever liveth to make intercession for us and to give us power to rise from our dead selves to life in Him doing His will now and forever.

By this token, we have a living relation with Jesus, a heritage to a life that has quality, meaning and power. The dominion of death is overthrown and the dominion of Christ may rule in every life. The breaking of the tomb on that eventful morning became the "Supreme hour of the world." Said the poet Dearmer, "Life is good, for God contrives it, Death is good, for man survives it."

Prayer—"May the God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus Christ . . . through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do His will, working in you that which is well pleasing in His sight, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen."

CHAPEL SERVICES.

At Elon College on Wednesday and Friday mornings, we have devotional services. These services are scriptural and entirely religious. Every student is required to attend. It is the practice of the College to have visiting ministers to conduct these chapel hours.

During this week and next, Dr. C. H. Rowland, Pastor emeritus of the First Christian Church, Greensboro, North Carolina, is conducting these devotional services for us. Dr. Rowland is an alumnus of the college, a member of the Board of Trustees, and one of the most faithful and beloved friends that visits the campus. His messages are practical, spiritual, and beneficial. We are delighted to have him.

come surging into his active mind—a legion of them. The man could go on writing down his recollections indefinitely, it seemed as if the whole world would not hold the books that could be written about the things that Jesus did. But of course he had to stop somewhere. But of one thing he is sure. The things that he had written were in sufficient volume, and of such a nature, that those who read them might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and those who believed might have life, more abundant life through His name.

THE SUN'S PULPIT.

anointed to comfort men, the Holy Spirit was sent as the Comforter, and God is "the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort."

Now if we will start in rethinking this problem of human suffering on the basis of the friendship of God for man we will come to new conclusions.

There was a notable accident back in the days when the Son of Man walked the earth, the tower of Siloam fell and killed eighteen people. They tell Jesus about it. They said, "These men must have been sinners above other men." And the Teacher replied, "I tell you nay." Jesus did not believe that God crashed that tower down upon those men because they were sinners above other men. "I tell you nay." An engineer could have explained why that tower, undermined in some way by the elements fell, perfectly regardless of the presence of those men who, unfortunately, were present at that time.

You cannot point to a single word uttered by Jesus affirming that God is the author of these calamities that afflict men. When did Jesus say to any man, "Be lame, be blind, be sick, be afflicted?" When did Jesus teach that God sends trouble? Yea, on the contrary, Jesus lifted up his hands in blessed benediction saying, "Be well, walk, see, be strong, be happy, may your joy be full." He went about healing the sick. He was the enemy of sickness. He wished that everyone might be well and happy. His message to men is "Let not your heart be troubled." God is not our enemy, but our friend, a loving Father. Why, if an earthly father would afflict his children the way we have been taught that God afflicts us, we would have him arrested and haled into court and sent to jail. God is not the author of our sickness and troubles, such things come from other sources. If we violate the laws of health God is not to blame. If we are improvident and suffer need, God is not to blame. If we live riotously and burn the candle at both ends and are cut off midway in our career, God is not to blame. If we build our home the river's right of way and are overtaken by a flood, God is not to blame. If men erect their cities over a fault in the earth's crust and their city is shaken down by an earthquake, as was the city of San Francisco, God is not to blame. If men allow themselves to be bitten by infected mosquitoes and a plague of fever decimates their community, God is not to blame. Yes, God has good grounds to institute a slander suit against many good people.

The teaching that God is the author of sickness and trouble, that he is seeking out opportunities to afflict us, does not fit in with the teachings of the great Teacher.

God is helping men through modern, marvelous, scientific discoveries to heal and prolong human life. Instead of dooming men to sickness, God through modern medical science, through physicians, surgeons, trained nurses, hospitals, and boards of health has organized the world to keep men in health so that they may be strong for their daily task.

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people." How does God comfort his people?

First, he comforts men by placing them here in a friendly world where the conditions are just right for man's welfare and happiness, having the atmosphere he needs, the water he needs, the soil to raise the crops he needs, the fire he needs, the minerals he needs, the food he needs, the friends he needs, everything he needs.
God is for man and not against him.
He has not doomed him to trouble but foreordained him to strength, and achievement, happiness and success.
God, instead of being the author of our troubles, is the enemy of sickness, death and calamities and takes our part against them. He has flooded the world with sunshine which destroys disease germs. He has filled the world with remedies that we may be healed. He has revealed the laws of disease, equipped men with medical skill and scientific instruments, filled the world with sanitariums and hospitals; God is on the side of every remedy and of every physician. Jesus when here healed the sick, wept with the broken hearted, and even rebuked death.

Pray, yes, that the proper remedies should be applied. Pray, yes, that we should have the patience, the courage and fortitude to meet our trouble, whatever may be its nature.

Any one can have faith in hours of success and strength and victory, but it takes trouble to tell the metal we are of, and reveal what we really are. How do we behave in dark days? Do we keep our faith, and look up and go on? God will restore our sick if his appointed remedies can reach them, but what about ourselves? We need to pray more for ourselves than for our sick ones.

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God." This is what our religion is for, to help folks along, to cheer them on the journey, to wipe away their tears, to heal their broken hearts, not to make them miserable but to make life for them a joyous thing.

"If God is for us who can be against us?" and let us be sure, without any doubt about it at all, that God is for us, not the author of our sickness and troubles and disappointments, but the author of every "good and perfect gift, the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort."

"Living will teach you how to live, better than preacher or book."

Absent on Sunday Evenings.

By REV. T. C. BALES, Pastor, Presbyterian Church, Clifton Forge, Virginia.

One of the beautiful and significant incidents in connection with the Easter story tells of a man who missed a blessing because he was not in the place of worship on Sunday evening. The man's name was Thomas. The scene is the upper room in the city of Jerusalem. Our Lord Jesus Christ had conquered death by coming forth from the tomb in His resurrection body. He appeared to several different groups of disciples and friends during that first Sabbath. The evening has now come and the disciples are all present with the exception of Thomas. The doors are shut for fear of the Jews. Jesus appears among them with a benediction of peace. Then He showed them His hands and side, gave them a new commission and breathed upon them the Holy Spirit.

How much Thomas missed by not being among the disciples that Sunday evening! For him there was no reality to the resurrection tidings. Of all the disciples, Thomas was the one who most needed that fellowship with Jesus. His mind was of the kind that must have proof. Because he thought deeply for himself and was unable to accept a truth on the strength of another's belief, he needed the evidence which Jesus revealed. True enough, Thomas was at the evening service the next Sabbath when Jesus came once more and satisfied his mind and heart. But for a whole week this disciple had carried his doubts and lived among the shadows. For a week he had been denied the glad assurance of his faith simply because he was not in the place of worship that first Sunday evening.

I wonder if there are not many people in our own day who are missing some of the blessings Jesus has for them because they leave the Sunday evening service out of their programs of life. Surely, Jesus is always present at the evening hour of worship and wants His children with Him. Maybe there is a doubt in your heart, or a seam of weakness somewhere in your life, or a burden upon your soul awaiting the touch of Jesus Christ on Sabbath evening. Maybe there is a service for you to render on behalf of the unsaved multitude in the community which can only be accomplished on the evening of God's holy day. Of course there are a few reasons and a host of excuses for absence from this vital hour of worship, but Christ must weep as He hears them. He holds in His keeping rich gifts for you and me, but some of them will be withheld because we are not present when He lifts His hand in blessing at the close of the day of rest. Perhaps the next revival will be characterized by whole families making whatever sacrifices necessary in order to wait upon the Lord in His House on Sabbath evenings.

FOURTH BIENNIAL MEETING OF SOUTHEAST CONVENTION

Jacksonville, Florida, April 20-22, 1937.

UNION CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

This church is the oldest church of our denomination in the state of Florida. The first meeting for the organization of the church was held November 8, 1875. The first building was on the corner now occupied by the Federal Reserve Bank and was dedicated on the first Sunday of January 1876. The church was burned in the historic Jacksonville fire on May 3, 1901. Another building was erected on the same site but was later sold and the present fine building was erected early in 1913. When erected it was one of the finest and best equipped churches in the state. This church extends to the Southeast Convention and to the Florida Conference a most cordial WELCOME.

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

The church at Meansville, Georgia, has recently bought a new parsonage for their pastor and his wife, Rev. David W. Shepherd.

The Friendship Parish in South Georgia, of which Rev. W. Carl Parker is pastor, has recently bought two lots in Waycross and is building a parsonage thereon.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill is enjoying a new Chevrolet car, which was made possible for her by friends in New England. Pattie says the only thing that troubles her is that it looks like a million dollars.

Dr. Lillian B. Fulton, pastor of the church at Lake Worth, Florida, has recently undergone a serious operation, but is recovering at her home. Her pulpit was supplied on Palm Sunday by Rev. William T. Scott, and on Easter by Dr. E. C. Gillette.

Rev. Floyd Price, pastor of the group of churches in West Florida, has recently accepted a call to the church at Hiawatha, Kansas. The churches which have been served by him will be served by Rev. I. Alva Hart and by Rev. A. Calvin Nelson, who are already serving churches in this vicinity.

Rev. E. Richard Evans, who has been for over six years pastor of the church at Key West, Florida, has been called to the Burlingame Church in Grand Rapids, Michigan, and will begin his services there at once. His family will remain in Key West until the close of the schools. Mr. Evans has been a diligent and sincere pastor and his many Florida friends will regret his leaving the state, but wish him well in his new pastorate.

Dr. James R. Clinton, who has been recently appointed by the Church Extension Boards as pastor-at-large for Preaching Mission work, will be open for engagements immediately, as he begins his service April 1st. His service will be largely devoted to home missionary churches, or churches in home missionary areas, but not exclusively so. The first six months of his service will be largely in the south, especially in view of the fact that so many churches in the southern states hold summer-time revivals. Those who are interested in securing his services should communicate directly with Dr. Clinton, 203 E. Gower Avenue, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, or with Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, 117 W. Forsyth Street, Jacksonville, Florida.

Dr. Arthur G. Lyon, for six years pastor of the church at Lake Helen, Florida, recently died and his funeral was held in the church on March 21st. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Thomas H. Derrick, formerly pastor at Orange City, assisted by Superintendent Gillette. Dr. Lyon had been pastor at West Palm Beach for several years, going from there to a pastorate near Boston before coming to Lake Helen. He had been suffering for several months, but in spite of weakness and great suffering continued to preach until four weeks before his death, and even dictated an Easter message to the church people, though hardly expecting to live to deliver it. Such courage and devotion and conquering faith are inspirations to us all. One son, Everett, is pastor of the Congregational Church at Thompson, Connecticut.

GREETINGS FROM THE JACKSONVILLE PASTOR.

In behalf of the Union Congregational Christian Church, and in behalf of the general committee on local arrangements, I want to extend this most hearty, advanced welcome to all the churches in the Southeast area who will be represented at the combined sessions of the Florida State Conference and the Southeast Convention. We are delighted to know that you have chosen to come to this historic church, the scene of the origin of the churches of our faith in Florida. We are more than proud of the fact that you have trust in our ability to provide adequate facilities and a pleasing setting for so significant an occasion. We shall do our utmost not to break that trust. Whatever ought to be done and can be done to make the conference sessions move along smoothly and harmoniously we will do. For we desire above all else that your stay in the "sunny state" should be a powerful and lasting experience,—one that will not easily be forgotten, one that will influence deeply the current of life in the churches of our district.

EVERETT B. LESHNER.

THOMAS ALFRED TRIPP VISITS FLORIDA.

Rev. Thomas Alfred Tripp, the new associate director of the Town and Country Department of our Congregational Christian churches, was a most helpful visitor to Georgia, March 1st-15th. He was present for the Georgia Ministers' Convocation at LaGrange, March 2nd-4th, and led the discussion on Parish Cooperation. His practical approach to the rural problems led the group in constructive planning for more thorough organization of the parishes.

Following the Convocation he visited Barnesville Parish, Rev. David W. Shepherd, pastor, where he spoke twice to interested laymen in Meansville church, and with the pastor made very definite plans for better work in this parish. Four days were spent in the Macedonia Parish, Rev. Alan T. Jones, pastor, where meetings were held in each church when the Parish Plan was given first place in consideration.

Mr. Tripp visited the church and Piedmont College at Demorest, Central Atlanta, LaGrange and other churches. He found a quick place in the hearts of Georgia leaders and people, and plans are being made for his return for more extensive work in the fall.

NEW ENGLAND CHURCH NOTES.

March 4th the York and Cumberland Christian Conferences met at Newton, New Hampshire, for a Quarterly Session. This is the home of the present President Ralph Marsten. Miss Clark of Gordon College is the capable supply while they wait for their permanent pastor, Rev. King. There was a fine spirit of living Christian experience and fellowship. Revs. Durgan of Freedom; Galencia of South Berwick; and Sallevaag of Portsmouth gave the sermons and Rev. and Mrs. Capen of African Inland Mission gave fine Missionary talks. Mrs. Capen's sister is a very useful and active member of the Portsmouth Church. Miss Currier of Bristol both in music and address helped to stress the evangelistic note, the Key Thought of the Conference.

The next Quarterly is with Mt. Agementicus Church, Rev. Stevens, pastor.

Portsmouth had a complimentary supper for the deacons and their wives this winter, also a special effort was made during February to increase the Sunday Evening attendance.

The Manchester Church, with its Gospel Team, headed by the pastor, Rev. Thomas Lorens, has been assisting the church at Candia.

Rev. John Everingham, a graduate of Stanfordsville Christian Biblical Institute, has been supplying at the North Congregational Church here because of Rev. Rounder's illness.

MISS ALICE TRUE.

SOUTHEAST CONVENTION AND FLORIDA CONFERENCE

Jacksonville, Florida, April 20-22, 1937

The Meeting At Jacksonville.

The most significant meeting of the year in our Southeast fellowship will be the meeting held in Jacksonville, April 20th-22nd. This will be the fourth biennial meeting of the Southeast Convention and the fifty-fourth annual meeting of the Florida Conference of Congregational Christian churches. A unified program of vital interest has been prepared by the program committee. There will be speakers from all over the southeast area and vital subjects will be discussed by those who are able to speak with power and authority on their subjects. It is anticipated that there will be a large attendance. Already responses have been coming in, indicating that there will be good delegations from all the various areas represented. All who are planning to attend are urged to send word as soon as possible to the pastor of the Jacksonville church, Rev. Everett B. Leshner, 236 West Church Street, Jacksonville, Florida.

A Word About Entertainment.

The Jacksonville church is anxious to entertain to the best of its ability, but there is a limit to that ability to entertain with free lodging. A mistaken impression seems to have gone out that the church is extending to all free hospitality. The church deeply regrets its inability to do that. The Florida Conference for a number of years has been operating upon the plan of securing very special rates from hotels, and every individual delegate paying for his own entertainment. The churches have, however, furnished entertainment for some who could not come otherwise and who have long distances to travel. The entertainment committee has secured rates from seventy-five cents per person per night up, and they have also secured homes so that there will be a goodly number of those coming from a distance who will be entertained with lodging and breakfast. Those who desire such entertainment, or who wish special hotel reservations are urged to write at once to the pastor of the church.

Officers of Convention and Conference.

The officers of the Southeast Convention are: President, V. Arthur Lincoln, D. D., pastor of the church at Tryon, N. C.; Secretary and Treasurer, Rev. George N. Edwards, pastor of the Circular Church, Charleston, S. C.; member of the Executive Committee with the officers, Rev. James H. Lightbourne, pastor of the church at Burlington, N. C. These officers with the pastor of the entertaining church, Rev. Everett B. Leshner have been the program committee and they chose to ask Superintendent Edwin C. Gillette to serve as secretary for the committee.

REV. EVERETT B. LESHER.

The officers of the Florida Congregational Christian Conference, which shares its meeting this year with the

DR. VAUGHAN DABNEY.

Southeast Convention, are: Moderator, Rev. James E. Parker, pastor of the church at New Port Richey; Registrar, Rev. E. C. Gillette; Treasurer, Mr. Chas. A. Hoyt, Atlantic National Bank, Jacksonville; President of the Board of Directors, Rev. Elisha A. King, D. D., pastor of the church at Miami Beach; Vice-President of the Board of Directors, Mrs. Robert G. Williams, Lake Worth.

The presiding at the sessions will be divided between Dr. Lincoln, as President of the Convention, and Rev. James E. Parker, as Moderator of the State Conference.

The treasurer of the Convention reports an empty treasury and it will be necessary that generous offerings be received at the two evening sessions in order to defray the expenses of the meeting.

About the Program.

The opening session will occur at three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, April 20th. There will be organizing business sessions for both Conference and Convention, after which there will be welcome by the pastor and response by the President and Moderator, followed by the brief responses by the state as follows:

Virginia: Rev. Joseph E. McCauley, Richmond; The Carolinas: Rev. William M. Jay, D. D., Winston-Salem, North Carolina; Kentucky: Rev. Ruth Sergeant, Stearns, Kentucky; Tennessee: President William J. Campbell, Nashville, Tennessee; Alabama: President Ross Ensminger, Wadley, Alabama; Georgia: Rev. R. Wiley Scott, Atlanta, Georgia; Florida: Rev. Elisha A. King, D. D., Miami Beach, Florida.

It is customary for the Conference to have a Conference sermon, which this year will be preached by Rev. John P. Jockinsen, who has recently become pastor of our important church at St. Petersburg, Florida. His theme will be: "A Zeal for God." At six o'clock there will be the Fellowship Supper, which will be one of the high lights of the social side of the meeting. The toastmaster will be Rev. William T. Scott, Pastor-at-Large for Georgia and Florida, and there will be various responses including one from Rev. J. Edward Kirby, D. D., who is now Field Representative of the Church Building Society. The evening worship will be conducted by Rev. George N. Edwards of Charleston, with music by the choir of the Jacksonville church. The first address of the evening will be by Rev. John G. Truitt, D. D., pastor of the church at Suffolk, Virginia. His theme will be: "Jesus Began the Church." The second address will be on the subject: "A Spiritual Church in a Pagan World," by Dean Vaughan Dabney, D. D., of Andover Newton Seminary, and

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

AFTER EASTER.

Many of our churches have had excellent services leading up to and including Easter. Quite a number of them no doubt have received new members, most of whom are boys and girls and young people in their teens. Easter has been a great day with large crowds attending and a fine spirit. This is as it should be.

But what of the days to follow? Will the inspiration continue? Are these boys and girls and young people, as well as adults, who have just come into the Church to be turned loose without any guidance, fellowship, or help, or shall they be really received into the fellowship of the Church and guided into paths of service? This writer had the joy of extending the right hand of fellowship to nine young people and of baptizing the same number on Easter Day. It was a great experience. He is calling his deacons together on Wednesday to consider definite plans for guiding these new members into the work of the Church. It is not enough to receive them. Their wilderness experience following baptism may leave them without enthusiasm, but if the Church will give them its love, guidance, and inspiration, they will probably become useful in the Master's Kingdom. It is the editor's hope that every church will follow some workable plan for aiding the new converts and guiding them into Christian activity.

A SPECIAL EDITION.

The associate editor, Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, has full sway in this week's paper. It is a pleasure for the editor to turn over responsibilities for this week to his associate in order that Florida and the Southeast Convention may have their proper place in the thinking of "Christian Sun" readers.

THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

The Southeast Convention has a vital function to perform in the life of our Congregational Christian Churches. For those familiar with the strength of the Southern Convention, it is needless for me to remind them of the value of such a regional fellowship. The former Christian Churches of Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama have for years borne witness to this. With the merger came a fine group of Congregational Churches in those areas and in South Carolina, Florida, Kentucky, and Tennessee, to increase the value and significance of such a fellowship. Thus was the cause for the organization of the Southeast Convention—a medium of fellowship and inspiration for the entire area.

The three previous sessions of the Convention have been held in Virginia and North Carolina, and the approaching session in Jacksonville will be a significant gathering. For the former Christian Churches it will probably be the first time they have ever met south of North Carolina and Virginia. For the former Congregational Churches, it will bring together the largest group of representative laymen and ministers they have ever had in this area. The deep south needs the inspiration of this fellowship in Jacksonville, and those who attend will receive inspiration which will make for a stronger program for our entire united fellowship.

An excellent program is being arranged, and since others are referring to this part, I will say only that I think we are most fortunate to have such a strong group of leaders for our program. Since our Southern churches are so largely rural, I think the appearance of Professor Arthur Raper, Atlanta, Georgia, on our program will make the trip to Jacksonville worthwhile. Dr. Raper, a native of North Carolina, is a distinguished authority on the economic, social and racial conditions of the rural south. His messages should contribute much to the planning for an increasing effectiveness for our churches.

May I give you a "new-comer's" welcome? We have found the Florida people a lovely group of friends. So to our "home folks," of North Carolina and Virginia, as well as to our newly made friends of Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and West Florida, we say welcome to Jacksonville, April 20th-22nd. Welcome to Florida, the land of flowers, friendship, and fellowship. Yours for a great Convention.

THE FLORIDA CONFERENCE.

The Florida Conference, in a way, acts as host to the Southeast Convention. It is interesting to combine these two bodies in this fine fellowship this year. The Florida Conference meeting was planned for Jacksonville and it seemed to many to be an advantageous time to hold the Southeast Convention in Florida. A few words concerning the Florida Conference would seem to be appropriate as introducing the Conference to the Convention.

The first Congregational church in Florida was organized in 1875, and the first meeting looking toward the organization of a Congregational body of churches in the state was held in the Jacksonville church, November 12, 1883. At that time there were only five churches of the denomination in the state. The first annual meeting of the newly organized body, which was then known as the General Congregational Association of Florida, was held at Winter Park, March 18th-20th, 1884. By that time two additional churches had been added to the list, and from that time on, the number of churches grew quite rapidly on account of an active home missionary leader, Dr. Sullivan F. Gale, who was pastor of the Jackson- (Continued on page 9.)

Chairman of the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life.

Session On Our Institutions.

On Wednesday morning there will be Communion Service at 8:30, after which the morning session will be largely given to the consideration of our institutions. Superintendent Johnston will speak for the Christian Orphanage, and Rev. F. C. Lester will speak for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and other denominational publications. We will then turn to the consideration of our educational institutions. It was not possible to have each one of them presented separately and consequently Dr. C. Rexford Raymond, pastor at Southern Pines, N. C., who has had wide contacts with all our educational institutions, will present: "A Brief Survey of Our Schools and Colleges." President Judson L. Cross, D. D., of Tougaloo College, Mississippi, and for several years Secretary of the New England Regional Committee of the Commission on Missions, will speak on the subject: "Our Negro Schools and Colleges." Dr. Cross has had wide contacts with this important phase of our Christian educational program and will be cordially welcomed to our Conference and Convention. Rev. Wm. A. Keith, pastor of the College-side Church, Nashville, Tennessee, will speak on the subject "The Church in a College Community," and President Leon E. Smith, D. D., of Elon College, will speak on the "The Objectives of the Church Related School." This session will close with the devotional service by Dr. Author W. Dyeer, pastor of the church at Birmingham, Alabama.

Social Problems We Face.

The afternoon session, following brief periods given to Conference and Convention business, will face important social problems. Rev. Alfred W. Hurst, pastor of the Pilgrim Church, Chattanooga, will speak on the subject "The Church and Social Justice." He will be followed by Dr. Author Raper on the subject "Rural Needs," after which there will be a general discussion of the problem of our rural churches, one of the most pressing problems we have. This session will close with an address by Rev. Trevor Mordecai, D. D., of New Smyrna, Florida. The discussion on social problems will be continued in the evening by a further address by Dr. Raper on "Racial Interdependence." Dr. Wm. F. Frazier, Executive Vice-President of the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational-

Christian churches, New York City, will close the evening with an address upon the subject: "The Christian Dye."

Missionary Emphasis.

Each session of the Conference has a distinctive note. Evangelism, Christian Education, Social Christianity, and finally Missions. This emphasis begins with the Wednesday evening address by Dr. Frazier and will be continued on Thursday morning. There will be a missionary message from Dr. J. O. Atkinson, followed by another address by Dr. Frazier on the topic: "I Believe." In this address Dr. Frazier will speak especially with regard to the missionary program of the denomination. The meeting will then break up into three groups:

(a) The Woman's Session, in which there will be continued emphasis upon the missionary work of the women. Following the annual business meeting of the Federation of Congregational Christian women, with reports and election of officers, there will be given the twenty-five year story of the Woman's Convention of the Southern Convention, Mrs. John G. Truitt, President; also greetings from the women's organizations of the various states with brief reports of activities.

(b) The Laymen's Meeting, at which Mr. John T. Kernodle will be one of the speakers and it is hoped that Mr. C. S. Bates of Orlando will also speak. Mr. Bates is the layman who has carried on such an extensive missionary service concerning which Dr. Atkinson has written.

(3) The Ministers' Seminary, conducted by Dr. Vaughan Dabney, on the subject: "Rethinking the Ministry."

The closing address of the Convention will be on the subject: "Spiritual Dynamic for All of Life," by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, President of the Southern Convention.

Special Events.

The Youth Fellowship Meeting will be held Wednesday afternoon and the plans for this session will be reported by Miss Carleton on page ten of this issue. There will be a special luncheon for the women which will be served at the Snyder Memorial Methodist Church, about three blocks distant from the entertaining church. Plans are also being worked out for a luncheon at the same time for the men attending the Conference and Convention. The supper on Wednesday evening will be under the auspices of the Youth Fellowship, but will be open to all. This will be served by the ladies of the entertaining church. On Tuesday at eleven o'clock there will be a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Federation of Congregational Christian Women of Florida, Mrs. Robert G. Williams, President. At two o'clock there will be a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Florida State Conference.

Dr. C. Arthur Lincoln, President of the Southeast Convention, will be returning to old and pleasant associations with the Florida Conference of which he has served as Moderator and also for several years as President of the Board of Directors. He was for ten years pastor of the church at Daytona Beach.

Motorcade to St. Augustine.

The period of the sessions of the Conference and Convention will be so full that there will be no opportunity for side trips until after the closing of the session Thursday noon. A motorcade is being planned for all who wish to visit the oldest city in America. Immediately following lunch the cars will start going by way of the famous beaches, where, if the tide is right, there will be several miles of riding on the wide beach, and a visit to St. Augustine, including the oldest house in America, the famous old Fort, the Slave Market and other interesting points of interest. Those who wish to take further side trips in Florida before returning are advised that a good trip to take would be through Daytona Beach to Winter Park and a visit to the beautiful Rollins College there, returning by Gainesville and the State University. Information about other trips in the state will be gladly furnished by the entertainment committee in Jacksonville.

Exhibits and Blue Book.

At the Jacksonville meeting there will be exhibits presenting our various institutions, probably largely in pictures. There will also be a Blue Book bringing together mimeographed material about the various institutions, which will be distributed to all in attendance. In this way, it is hoped to present more vividly to all the equipment and the significance of the work of our various institutions.

The following educational institutions will be included: Southern Seminary Foundation, Nashville, Tennessee; Elon College; Piedmont College; Rollins College; Southern Union College; Pleasant Hill Academy and Thorsby Academy. There will also be included the Orphanage at Elon College, North Carolina, and the West Tampa Mission in Florida.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A real rabbit story should be interesting during the Easter. Here is one up to date. Yesterday (Friday) the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Berea Christian Church (Driver) held a brief devotional service in the church from 10:30 A. M. to 11:00 A.M. At the close of the service I went down into the basement to close the draft door of the Hot Air furnace. Stooping down to shake the grate, I glimpsed something moving in the ashes under the grate. Upon closer examination, I found a live, grown, wild rabbit. I opened the door and the rabbit ran out and hid in some trash in a corner of the basement. I caught it and found that the hair was singed slightly, but otherwise the frightened creature appeared to be normal. I brought it out and turned it loose on the church yard. It quickly disappeared in the woods nearby the church.

Now it is possible that the rabbit entered the basement through the open window through which coal is dumped. And it is probable that it ran into the furnace ash-pot when I went down to look after the furnace. Fortunately for the rabbit I looked in the ash-pot before closing the draft door. The rabbit was out of its place and had hidden in a very dangerous spot. It was in a fire furnace and in a deep basement. Without assistance there was no way of escape.

This experience with the rabbit suggests some lessons for study. If that rabbit can communicate with other rabbits in that vicinity, it should warn its companions to be careful about entering furnaces in a church basement. The church may be lukewarm, or cold, but the furnace sometimes is too hot for rabbits. Somebody may shut the door and then it will be only a short time until there will be a death in the rabbit family. Rabbits should not seek shelter in a church basement, and they should not hide in the furnace.

Men and women should be able to see danger. The human mind can learn by reason and experience. A mother should be able to teach her child the difference between good and evil. She should set an example which will be safe for her child to follow. A young mother whose six year old son held her hand, went into the A. B. C. store in Suffolk and bought, what appeared to be, a bottle of liquor. The little boy stood by the counter of the liquor store and watched his mother make this purchase and accompanied her as she came out and walked down the street. The young mother was well dressed. I said to a friend who saw this: "What can that mother say if that son goes to that store when he is a young man, and buys liquor for his own use—and becomes a drunkard?" That mother took her child into a place, and set an example for him, which may be more dangerous to him, in the after years, than the furnace was to the rabbit. Who knows? Will someone snatch that boy from the power of drink, and seek to release him, as I gave the rabbit its freedom?

God has given us His word, and His Son, and His Church, to warn us of the dangerous pitfalls of sin, and to point the way to freedom, liberty and life. Surely it is the task of the church, in school-room and pulpit, to point the sinner to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE ELON COLLEGE COMMUNITY CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Some time ago, Ripley came out with, "Believe it or not, Elon College has eighteen ministers, a Christian College, and a population of between 400 and 500, but no church." Where and how Mr. Ripley got his information has never been determined. The statement occasioned some newspaper publicity and various inquiries.

Elon College does have a church, and a very live one. It has a good membership, a Board of Deacons, a business Board, a live Sunday school, an aggressive Missionary Society, and a very impressive order of service for its hour of worship. It has a beautiful chapel in which to worship, a splendid organ, and a most effective musical organization. The writer is the pastor of the church, but has the privilege of the services of a number of the distinguished ministers of today to speak frequently. We try to accomplish something as a church. We give more money for others than is required for ourselves. The church always meets its conference apportionments and raises in full the askings of the Convention for the various organizations, boards, and institutions of the church. It has an evangelistic program and is constantly adding to its membership.

Since September the following have been received into the membership of the college church: Dr. F. K. Hardy, Miss Edna Simmons, Dr. L. C. Dickinson, Mrs. Elsie Horn Utley, Dr. R. B. Burrows, Dr. Fletcher Collins, Jewel McCarn, Harold McCarn, Mrs. L. M. Cannon, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. West, Dan Watts, Hal Watts, and David Crump. We are expecting to receive others at our Easter Services.

L. E. SMITH.

A WORD FROM NEW JERSEY.

It is always a pleasure to read THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It is especially enjoyable to read the news from the churches. I wish that more pastors would write, telling of their work. But one has no right to expect others to do that which he isn't willing to do himself. Hence these few lines about our work here in Irvington.

We are now well on in the eleventh year of our pastorate here. The Church celebrated its eleventh birthday last November. In connection with the celebration, a reception was held for the whole congregation, at which time a substantial purse was presented to the pastor and a beautiful bouquet to his wife. This act of appreciation was a real encouragement to the pastor and family. It also seemed to mean a good deal to the spirit of the congregation.

The Annual Fellowship Dinner and Meeting of the congregation held on February 10th was the most largely attended and the most enthusiastic in the history of the church.

Last Sunday morning, March 7th, at our largely attended regular Communion Service, five members were received. This makes a total of eleven members received during 1937. The minister has a class of ten young people now meeting weekly in preparation to be received into membership on Palm Sunday morning. We are working for a goal of twenty-five new members by Easter Sunday. While we realize that the success of any work cannot be measured by numbers alone, they do give encouragement to the workers.

Our progress here in the Second Congregational Christian Church of Irvington isn't rapid. But we do believe it is substantial. That which we have done is but a very small part of that which ought to be done.

WILLIAM F. FRAZIER, D. D.

The Rev. Dr. William F. Frazier of New York City, is executive vice-president of the Home Boards of the Congregational and Christian Churches of the United States.

The office of executive vice-president was created in June (1936) and Dr. Frazier is the first to fill it. His duties are those of general administrator or chief executive for all affairs of the Boards and the office was established in preparation for the consolidation of their affairs under a single corporation to be known as the Board of Home Missions. Included among the Home Boards are the oldest national agencies of any denomination in the country. The oldest is the Congregational Education Society, founded 1816 as the American Education Society; the next is the Congregational Home Missionary Society, founded 1826 as the American Home Missionary Society.

During his twenty-six years in the ministry, Dr. Frazier has received steadily growing and widening recognition for his gifts as a leader. The last fourteen years he has been state superintendent of churches, from 1922 to 1934 in Vermont and then in Connecticut. Although in Connecticut only a short time, he visited practically everyone of the 320 Congregational and Christian churches of the state at least once and some of them many times, and he developed close relationships with Yale Divinity School, Hartford Theological Seminary and other educational institutions. In advance of beginning his new work September first, he went this summer to the Rocky Mountains and visited the most remote mission churches in Utah, Wyoming, Idaho and Montana.

As a state superintendent, his policies have been marked especially by their emphasis upon the furtherance of interdenominational cooperation both state-wide and in local communities. In theological thought, he is known for his progressive viewpoints and the pastors' convocation, which have been held under his direction have been characterized by their thorough and stimulating scholarship. The Conferences under his superintendency have closed each fiscal year without a deficit and the endowments of the Conference and of the local churches have substantially increased. Public service which he has rendered has included membership on the council of the Vermont State Commission on County Life. He is a Rotarian and when in Vermont, was a trustee of the Burlington Savings Bank, a mutual institution and the largest bank in the state.

As a preacher as well as an administrator, Dr. Frazier has become highly regarded. In straight forwardness and direct dealing with realities his sermons are like those of the famous English preacher, Dean W. R. Inge, of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, but unlike the "Gloomy Dean," Dr. Frazier is pronounced optimistic. He is not a harbinger of doom, half-convinced that the existing social order must fall to ruin before a better can be brought about. He holds that the wiser and truer faith is that processes of social advancement are available for the Christian forces and within their power if they will consecrate themselves to the task. With assurance he insists that it is the great work of the Church not only to save souls out of an unworthy social order but also to bring into the human family the moral order which he believes that God has ordained for his entire universe.

Dr. Frazier was born at Bath, New York, the son of a minister, and is a graduate of Oberlin College, Ohio, and Drew Theological Seminary, New Jersey. He took post-graduate work in philosophy at Columbia University, New York City, and received the honorary degree of doctor of divinity from Middlebury College, Vermont. He served in pastorates at Chester, and at Little Ferry, New Jersey, and at Vergennes, Vermont.

A BUSY MAN.

Carl Herman Voss, capable young minister of the United Church of Raleigh, is not only leading his church in a constructive program in that city, but he is making a distinct contribution to the student life of the country. Mr. Voss was a natural leader, both in his undergraduate days at the University of Pittsburg and in Union Theological Seminary, New York, and his fine abilities and enthusiasm are being carried over into the pastorate. He is sensitive to the social and economic trends of our day and is leading many young people in constructive Christian attitudes. He is a member of the Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention, serving on the faculty of the Elon Summer School in 1936. A look at his calendar will reveal his busy life.

From February 17-20 he was chaplain at Elon College, and on the weekend of the 21st was preacher and student advisor at Guilford College. In March he was in charge of the Convocation, N. C. State College, and addressed the students at Shaw University on "Students and War," and in April he is to address the Christian Association at Wellesley College, Boston. On April 11th he is to be the preacher at the 65th anniversary of St. John's Evangelical Protestant Church, Cincinnati, where his uncle is the long time pastor.

W. T. SCOTT.

DR. JAMES R. CLINTON.

Dr. James R. Clinton made many friends in the churches where he held special services in North Carolina and Virginia during February and March. These friends will be interested to know that Dr. Clinton has been appointed by the Church Extension Boards for a year of service as Pastor-at-Large, working especially along the Preaching Mission lines. It has been the feeling in the Extension Board for some time that a spiritual service of this character to the churches would be most valuable and in line with the high purposes of the Extension Boards to serve the churches. Dr. Clinton will serve anywhere in the country, according to the invitations from the churches, but, of course, his services will be largely with churches which are being aided by the Extension Boards. In the experimental service which he has recently rendered, this distinction was not made, as it was desired that he serve in a variety of churches. Dr. Clinton will begin his service with the Extension Boards April 1st.

A CALL.

The call of the day, the need of the time is consecration of self and means that the Gospel of salvation through Jesus Christ may be given to the whole world. We join our Disciples, Brethren, in calling for a period of tithing between Easter and Pentecost.

—That Jesus Christ may be taught, preached and exemplified in our day.

—That followers of Jesus Christ may have a more vital sense of partnership with God.

—That more members of the church, old and new, may be actively enlisted in the program of Christ.

—That the local church and its world causes may be triumphant in their service to humanity.

—That individual Christians may form the permanent practice of tithing as a minimum expression of their stewardship.

—That Christian work may receive a Christian proportion of the increased income of Christian people.

Some believe in tithing all the time. Many do not. Why not try tithing for forty days following Easter and dedicate this tithe to the cause of giving the Gospel to those who are perishing without it at home and afar. All men every where today need the message of our God. "And the light that shines furthest from home shines brightest at home."

THE WAY OF THE WITNESSES.

(INTRODUCTION.)

Reader: "Do you remember saying, I have forgotten just where, that the New Testament is a missionary book?"

Author: "I must have said that scores of times."

Reader: "Would you mind telling me why you think so, remembering that I am not a theologian? And please do not make too much of texts."

Author: "Do you remember the man who walked one day over the hills which run along the south coast of England and, as he rested, looked out toward the Channel and longed for a piece of chalk so that he might draw that view?"

Reader: "Wasn't it G. K. Chesterton?"

Author: "When suddenly he remembered that the hill on which he was sitting was all chalk."

Reader: "That is to say, whether it always looks like it or not, the New Testament is entirely missionary throughout?"

Author: "That is what I should like to show. Sometimes you can see a flash of white which shows the chalk of the hills in the South Country. You can see the white cliffs as you draw near to Dover. And in the New Testament there are flashes which show its character as a missionary book. These are the Great Commission and other direct words of counsel. But its character is the same everywhere; and you have only to look below the surface to see that it is all of one material. The New Testament does not contain a section given up to missions; it is a missionary book."

TO THE CHURCHES, PASTORS AND PEOPLE OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

We are sure that every church which has a Woman's Missionary Society will wish to share in the great Silver Anniversary which is to be in the Suffolk, Virginia, church May 13, 1937. We feel so justly proud and truly grateful for these twenty-five years of service and blessings together that I know each society will make a big effort to have a part in this celebration. For indeed, it will not be a Jubilee and we will fall far short of our goal and our purpose unless we do have the whole-hearted support of every society. Those who are leading and planning for this occasion feel confident that those loyal souls who have stood by the work through these years are not going to fail in this, but will see to it that some one is present to represent them when the roll is called.

So, as the time draws nearer for this event, I am thinking not so much in terms of Missionary Societies, but rather in terms of churches, pastors, and people of the Southern Convention.

Our Missionary Societies have been such a pleasure and blessing to a church and community that we are anxious for all our women to share in this joy. I wish that the women of every church could have some part in the Silver Anniversary. And it is not too late. Groups should be called together, plans made, and delegates elected. Maybe there is a Ladies' Aid Society—they could do something about it. No doubt there are men in some churches who will want to contribute. Some are giving one dollar for each of the twenty-five years.

I would especially like to appeal to the pastors, that they not pass unnoticed this important event in the history of the Christian Church. See that your church recognizes and expresses gratitude for this work that has gone forward through the years and resolve that the next twenty-five will find many more churches cooperating. Opportunity for the best work lies ahead. The churches that put missions first are growing and thriving. "Christ stands ready to go with the people and the church who put Him first and keep Him there."

MRS. O. H. PARIS.

President, North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference.

A THANK THEE.

Oh, Christ, we bring to Thee our fear-filled souls. We would have freedom from all fear. We know that fear should have no place in the heart of a follower of Thine. So take all fear from within me. And may no dread of the morrow scare away the rest from my heart. And may Thy will be to me the guard that shall make me unafraid, knowing that every moment Thy will guards and protects. What can now make me afraid? Nothing! I thank Thee. I thank Thee. Amen.

SPRINGTIME IN THE MOUNTAINS.

Spring has come to our hills again with blue days and fair. People always want to know when spring has come to the hills so I get my pen. Springtime in the mountains with all her romance and beauty is here again. The mountain air is clear and sweet; a blue bird just outside my porch has already been making love to me, so try to forgive all the mistakes I may put on the paper for the romance of springtime in the mountains has cast her spell over me along with the birds.

Really the hills are taking on new life—its another year. New birds, new hopes, new plans and efforts. The mud in the old mountain trail is trying to settle now and let people pass once more. The winter has been warmer than usual, but dark with fog and lots of rain. However, this is the first time I recall having ordered Sunday School literature all winter here. We got to church some, all this winter, and now we will soon have good old summer time. Our pastor has done well in getting up to our hills this winter and we appreciate it. We are looking forward to his coming back to stay. Our Elmores are willing to labor here and we miss them when they are away. They see a field white with harvest and enjoy going into the highways and hedges. Just now as crime sweeps over our hills we feel the need of churches more. It is plain that schools alone can never bring peace and joy to these mountain counties.

The young lady over in Wise County must have been to college for she was a teacher—but she killed her father and is being tried for the crime. And I find in most of these mountain counties, the state is building schools but there are few churches. It is plain that an education without spiritual training is not complete, and does not make good citizens. Since the tragic death of the little girl at Sparta, people all over our hills are uneasy about their children. People are seeing the need of Christianity among our hills, and it will not be hard to get people to come out to church this summer, I am sure. Of course our pastor will have to go and ask them to come, but he will do that and he will be glad they will come for his asking. There are always the faithful few who come and help others to come. But those who live here cannot make a living and at the same time have time to go out and get people to go to church. Most of that kind of work falls on our Elmores. However, lots of our girls are willing to work in the Sunday School and church. Miss Gladys Strickland is a great help and works hard at Elk Spur. I am glad indeed to see our young people take a part and feel that this is their church.

I am looking forward to lilac time and smooth roads, then we can organize some Christian Endeavor and Missionary Societies up here. Our pastor has said we could and should have things like other churches. So when the sweet perfume of lilacs is wafted down to you from our hills this year, I hope we will be more like your churches out there in the world that I view through the gap in the mountains.

And now as the Cross of Christ rises again before the world at Easter, may the glories of a Risen Lord be born anew in the hearts of all who need and love our Savior. Pray for our churches among the Virginia hills. May God give you a Happy Easter.

OCEAN VIEW MISSION SOCIETY.

A Woman's Missionary Society was organized at the Ocean View (Va.) Christian Church last fall. It has been doing good work, and on last Sunday evening it presented an Easter program for the church.

The program consisted of a worship service composed of meditation and prayer, and a pageant depicting a scene in Joseph's garden. There were two choral numbers, namely: "Christ Arose," and "Hallelujah for the Cross."

Mrs. B. G. Harrell presided. Others taking part in the program included: Mrs. Minnie Stephens, Mrs. L. F. Todd, Mrs. Peter Martone, Misses Anna Spivey, Bess Harrell, June Brown, Elizabeth Halbert, Mr. Tommie Ward, and Mr. Leo Martone.

The society is working for ten subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and has already secured five subscriptions.

'INTEREST' IN MISSIONS.

"I cannot get interested in Missions," exclaimed a petulant young lady. "No dear," said her aunt, "You can hardly expect to. It is just like getting interest at a bank; you have to put in a little something first; and the more you put in—time or money or prayer—the more the interest grows. But something you must put in, or you will never have any interest."

THE FLORIDA CONFERENCE.

ville church, was appointed by the Home Missionary Society, which was then known as The American Home Missionary Society, as Secretary for Florida. Dr. Gale served in that capacity for about twenty-five years, a notable service of aggressive, courageous, far-seeing leadership.

The spirit of this Florida Association, or Conference, was shown in that at the very first meeting, with only seven churches in the membership, and many of them new and weak affairs, they discussed the problem of the founding of a college in the state under Congregational auspices. At the very next meeting of the Conference, with thirteen churches, the college was organized and was located at Winter Park, becoming known as Rollins College. The fact that some of the churches in the state had not even been able to secure glass for their windows, shows the devotion and the faith of these pioneers. Not only did they face the problem of higher education in the state, but in the next two years, steps were taken for the organization of a school for Negroes at Lake City. They also passed resolutions petitioning Congress for better treatment of the Seminole Indians. They took steps toward having a prohibition clause in a new constitution then being considered for the state. They organized a State Home Missionary Society. Later a few churches in Georgia were made part of the Florida Association, and later still, under the leadership of Dr. Gale, who was then secretary for the southeast, steps were taken for the merger of the Congregational Methodists in Georgia with the Congregationalists.

In the years since its organization, the State Conference has rendered most commendable service. Important churches have been organized, though some of the earlier ones established in the exuberance of a pioneer community, lapsed and were removed from the rolls.

During the years the Conference has contributed liberally to Home and Foreign Missions, and in many ways, has contributed to the Christian leadership in the state of Florida. The Conference, at its last session, adopted the name: "Florida Congregational Christian Conference," and rejoices in the united fellowship of the denomination, and especially in the united and greatly enlarged fellowship in the southeast.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

WE ARE EXPECTING TO SEE YOU IN JACKSONVILLE.

All of the Florida churches are asked to include at least one young person among their delegates to the Southeast meeting in Jacksonville in April. We hope that even more than that will be able to attend. However, Congregational-Christian Churches in Florida are few and far between, so the group will not be very large.

The Florida group is going to be eager to welcome those of you who come from other states of the Southeast. Although the meeting comes at a time of the year when it is hard for many young people to get away from school and business, we hope that a large number will be willing to sacrifice a great deal in order to come.

Because of the uncertainty among the group, as to just who will be able to attend, it has been impossible to make-up the program definitely as yet. The type of the meeting will be such, however, that it will depend largely upon the individuals present for its success. You will help the whole group by your presence.

Plans will be made for the Southeast work for the next two years. You will want to have a share in them—and the whole group needs your suggestions and ideas.

Get a group of friends to come with you in one car—and head for Florida. We will be waiting to greet you in April.

Florida Pilgrim Fellowship,
HAROLD HERBST, President,
EMILY CARLETON, Secretary.

TO THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

Surely, all of you are familiar with the plans for the Silver Jubilee to be held in Suffolk, on May 13th.

For the benefit of those who have not heard, and to remind those who may have heard and delegated the celebration to the care of the older members of the Missionary organization, may I say that yours is a most important part in the preparation for, and final celebration?

You have heard about the memory Book to be compiled at the celebration. On a sheet, assigned to your church, we want the signature of every young person in the church, with your contribution of 50c. "It doesn't cost you 50c to sign your name"— you are privileged to contribute that amount as a share in this noble enterprise so faithfully carried on for twenty-five years by our mothers, grandmothers, and older sisters. Aren't we thankful that the women are permitting us to help them memorialize the work of the Missionary Conference in this way?

If your church is not planning a special program to raise its contribution, then why not take the initiative and suggest that the Woman's Missionary group help you in arranging such a program?

We are interested in autographs, certainly; but when were you ever asked to autograph a book in commemoration of twenty-five years of sacrifice, prayer, and work, and did you happen to think that twenty-five years from now, when the Golden Jubilee is celebrated, you will look back on your youthful signature and help review the work you have accomplished between May, 1937, and May, 1962, remembering, probably, the sacrifice the offering represented? Isn't it worth 50c to be among that number now and twenty-five years from now?

THE GOOD CHURCH MEMBER PRACTICES STEWARDSHIP.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
APRIL 11, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: I Cor. 4:2; Peter 4:10.
Daily Readings—

Monday—Life a Stewardship.—Matt. 25:14-30.

Tuesday—Jacob a Tither.—Genesis 28:22.

Wednesday—The Motive for Giving.—II Cor. 8:1-5.

Thursday—The Stewardship of Time.—Col. 4:1-6.

Friday—Faithful Stewards.—I. Tim. 6:17-21.

Saturday—Jesus, The Divine Steward.—John 17:1-5.

Stewardship includes all of life. Our lives were given to us to be used for God's purpose. There are two ideas about life. The Christian is: "My life is not my own." The other is the modern idea of freedom: "My life is my own to use as I please; it is nobody's business what I do with it."

A number of people will say: "The property which I have, belongs to me." They are not giving God that which He expects. They hold back part of the price which belongs to Him. One of old asked: "Will a man rob God?" His words are: "Ye have robbed me in tithes and offerings."

Our time is God's. We should ask ourselves this question: "How may all my time, everything I do, be used in accordance with His will?" "Seek first the kingdom of God" implies that God expects us to devote our time to the cause of righteousness. There are tasks in the church that must be done. The pastor needs young people to help with the evening service or Vespers. Have you ever asked Him if there was anything you could do for Him? The Sunday School needs leaders. Did you refuse to teach a class when the Superintendent asked you?

God never expects the impossible. He always gives the strength to do a job He wants you to do. Let us be faithful in our stewardship.

For Discussion—

1. How can you convince a non-believer that his life is given to Him in trust by God?

2. Does it differ whether we believe our life belongs to God?

3. What is the purpose of the Christian life?

4. Ask each member to relate some incident where he surrendered his time, his money, or his mind to God, and what the result was.

Suggested Hymns—

"I'll Go Where You Want Me To Go," "Take My Life and Let It Be," "Make Me a Blessing."

S. E. M.

Young people will soon be graduating from High School. They are now dreaming of what life will mean in the long years to come. College beckons many of them. These bright young people from Church homes should be guided to Church colleges where they will continue to receive the influence of the Christian religion, and not thrown adrift to go wherever the tide may take them in those important years when character is forming and plans for life are being made. This is the way to insure the progress of the Church in the years to come.

It is an everlasting duty—the duty of being brave.—Thomas Carlyle.

GOD, THE CREATOR.

LESSON I—APRIL 4, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth."—Genesis 1:1.

LESSON: Genesis 1:1-2:25.

The writer of the story of Creation as recorded in Genesis 1 and 2 was not writing a book on science; he was writing a book on religion. He was not concerned primarily with detailed facts; he was declaring abiding principles. He was not troubled about how things that are, came to be; he was concerned with origins. One who goes to the Bible for the study of geology will be disappointed. Modern science knows more about the subject than did the writer of Genesis. But—and this is the point—the story as recorded in Genesis 1 and 2 is true to scientific principles. A fair study of the story will show that this is true. Let us consider some of the teachings of these two chapters.

In the Beginning God.

The scientists have many theories of the origin of the earth, but inevitably they have to face the fact of how the world began. An intelligent man can hardly believe that it "just happened." The writer of Genesis says "In the beginning God"—go back as far as you can or care to, trace the world back to its primary source and you will find God. The scientist may call it "the First Cause"; the Biblical writer calls it "God." Genesis is saying in chaste and sublime language that beyond the material there is the spiritual, that there is an Intelligence and a Will in the universe, but above and beyond the universe; that the world as we know it was brought into being by the wisdom and the power of a Spiritual Being whom we call God. There may be some demand on faith to believe that the world was created, and is being sustained and ordered by God; but there is a greater demand on faith not to believe it.

Order Our of Chaos.

The story of creation also reveals order out of chaos. "The earth without form, and void, darkness upon the face of the deep . . ." Then light, then land and sea, then life in ascending scale, culminating in man and woman made even in the image of God himself. Here is eloquent witness to the eternal principle by which God works, bringing order out of chaos, working to intelligent ends, shaping things to His purpose. God is the author of order not of confusion. He moves to far-off divine events in His creation.

There is something majestic in the unfolding process. Before life there must be land and sea. Before higher forms of life there must be lower forms of life to sustain them—grass and herbs and fruit, then animals on land and sea then man. Here was a Creator God with the heart of a Father making wise and abundant provision for all His creatures. It was an evolutionary movement in the sense that it was a process of gradual development, the unfolding of the simple into the more complex, the development of the lower into the higher. And there was a wisdom and purpose and love in the whole process.

The Crown of Creation.

In the fullness of time, God created man. Spirit cannot be satisfied with matter. Like called unto like. The Father's heart was lonely so He said, "Let us make man." There stands man, at the head of creation, the climax of the creative process. He has not always been worthy of this high honor, but that is where God put him. And as he was the climax of the creative process, he is also the object of the redemptive purpose. He is "to have dominion." As the Psalmist says he has been made a little lower than the angels and he has been crowned with "glory and honor." Man, redeemed, is the goal of the creative work of God.

In the Image of God.

"So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." This does not mean that God is a giant, a man magnified a thousand-fold. The word image embodies the idea of likeness in the sense that man has been created with personality, with the endowment of, and capacity for, intellect, emotion, and will. Man is like God in that he is a self-conscious person. And because man has been created in the likeness of God, man can have fellowship with God. There is a means and a medium of communication between God and His children.

In all the controversy involved in the question as to how man came to be, whether by immediate act of God or by a process, it needs to be kept clearly in mind that the fundamental fact is that man was created in the image of God. God breathed into man and he became a living soul. Men may argue about how God made man; the Bible states that God made man. That is the important and fundamental fact.

Woman was made in the image of God, too. She was made to be a help meet for man. Perhaps the quaint story of how woman was made from the rib of man was simply a striking way of putting a great and abiding principle—she sprang from the side of man, she was his equal in rank, she was the complement to his nature. And in that far-off day the sacred story sees the sanctity of the marriage relation—for this cause shall a man leave his father and mother and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh. Jesus said that from the beginning it was meant to be so.

To Dress It and To Till.

Man was not made to be a "retired" pensioner. He was given work to do. He was to till and to replenish the earth. He was to have dominion over it. The history of mankind is in large measure the story of man's increasing mastery of the world and the forces of nature.

Thou Shalt Not.

A Garden of Eden, with everything. But the story distinctly states that "of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat." There are divine prohibitions in the divine plan. Man is free in one sense, but because man is man there must be prohibitions and restrictions. It is only a rare individual who has made such progress in grace that all prohibitions can be removed.

CHINESE CHRISTIAN STUDENTS FACE DILEMMA.

"Caught in a duality of living" is the phrase used to describe the Christian Chinese student today who is intent on meeting the national crisis, on the one hand, and maintaining his Christian faith, on the other. Reporting on the recent meeting of the Pacific Area of the Conference on World Student Christian Federation, one delegate said there was an excellent spirit. There was fine devotional life and real thinking on concrete issues. Then he adds: "My one criticism is that I am doubtful if these two elements were identically linked together by a clear understanding of the Christian faith. We worshipped with our hearts, and we thought about our national crisis with our minds, but there was little to help people feel the vital connection between the two."

"Isn't it strange that princes and kings
And clowns that caper in sawdust rings,
And common folk like you and me,
Are builders for eternity?"

DIRECTION FROM BEHIND.

"Thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, this is the way, walk ye in it."—Isa. 30:21.

We like to have our orders in advance so that we can know what we are about to do and prepare for it; and also, not the least important, that we may have the proper authority for the action.

But that is not God's way. We once heard of a father taking his child across a stream over a foot-bridge. The child was afraid. The father reassured the child by telling it that he would follow close by and direct his way by keeping a finger on his shoulder. Is this not God's way? It may be only a whisper, or a quiet warning; it may be only the sting of conscience, or the still small voice of thunder and lightening. Just the same, God's voice is behind us, and it can always be heard midst the peal of thunder, the blasts of trumpets, or the sounds of drums. There is never a reason for us not knowing the way to go for His voice is behind us.

Prayer—Dear Father, make our ears keener to hear thy word, and make our response more eager and instant. Amen.

TUESDAY.

RELIGION'S HARDEST LESSON.

"Love your enemies. Do good to them that hate you.

Bless them that curse you and pray for them that spitefully use you.

And unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek, offer also the other."—Luke 6:27-29.

It is easy to love those that love us. Love begets love. It would be hard to be otherwise.

But Christianity says we must go further than that, for there is no credit in loving those that love us. Christ has showed us the way in His own attitude toward His enemies. Besides, there is something else about this; we grow by doing the hard things and not by doing the easy ones. Therefore we are urged to see into the heart of human beings and find the things that God has put there to love, and let thy genuine passionate soul go out for the man that ought to be.

Prayer—Dear Father, we need the indwelling of the Christ spirit that we may be like Him. Grant this to us in every thought of this day. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

SIN'S TERRIFYING ROAR.

"The lion hath roared: who will not fear? The Lord, Jehovah, hath spoken."—Amos. 3:8.

The prophets compare the results of sin to the roar of a lion. He also says that they tell God's will. He also says that one of the greatest sins of mankind is to hear these warnings and pass along unheeding. And yet we know how true it is that both human beings and nations of human beings go along, if not contemptuously, indifferently to these warnings, so little does God mean to them.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, we pray for Thy spirit through Jesus Christ, Thy Son, that we may be sensitive to the least of Thy disapprovals, and that our lives thereby may be swayed to the one center. Make Thy will our aim all through life. Amen.

THURSDAY.

"THE GRACE OF JESUS CHRIST."

"The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit."—Phil. 4:23.

"Grace." What a lovely word! The wave of the trees in the wind. The list of the flower in the garden. The charm of the birds in the field. The charm of the organ in its appeal. The kindness, beauty and sagacity of a life. The staunchness yet tenderness of power. "Grace," an old fashion word that expresses all we need in this life, and salvation in the world to come. By grace we are drawn to Christ and held there.

Prayer—So may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be ever in thy spirit. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL TRAIT.

"What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt understand hereafter."—John 13:7.

The words of our Lord Jesus in the text makes imperative upon us the trait and Christian grace of waiting on the Lord with a willing postponed understanding of His way. How beautiful and serene is such a trust!

There is much in life that we do not understand—pain, separations, defeats and sorrows, doubts, losses, waitings and loneliness. But all of this Christ endured and taught us to endure. For He said, "I will not leave you comfortless. I will come to you." Thus He has promised us that we shall understand hereafter, and then we can calmly rest.

In that day of complete understanding, we shall know as we are known, and we shall grope no more, or have fear and distrust. Being sure of Christ we can be sure of this, and being sure of this, we can enjoy the certainty of it before it comes.

Prayer—Dear heavenly Father, may our dedication be so thorough that we shall not worry. Teach us how to make our faith sufficient for our understanding now, and Thou wilt take care of hereafter. Amen.

SATURDAY.

SEPARATORS.

"These are they who make separations, sensual, having not the spirit."—Jude 17-25.

Partitions among men are of the evil one. Unions are of God, who would have all mankind one.

This does not mean that all men should act alike or think alike, but that all should feel alike, that all alike should love one another and love God and seek the good and the beautiful, that all should believe in the sincerity of others, and in their purpose to do good. The separators among men are inimical to these aims.

The Holy Spirit draws men together. Men in whom the Spirit dwells draw men together. Men who are sensual and not spiritual, men who live in and for things of sense, are the separators. From them come wars and divisions and all the evils of this world.

Prayer—May the spirit dwell in us richly, O Holy Spirit, for the love of Jesus Christ. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

SIGNS.

"Let it be, when these signs are come unto thee, that thou do as occasion shall serve thee; for God is with thee."—I. Samuel 10:1-8.

Saul, when anointed king by Samuel, was not left without proof that the anointment was valid. The prophet gave him three sure signs, and these, coming to pass in the order foretold, must have assured the bewildered young farmer that he was really to be king of the land.

Each son of God is to be a king. He is to have a throne and is to rule. There is no doubt about it. That there may be no doubt about it, God has given signs and proofs; for the Father never is unwilling to submit full evidence.

THE HOUR TO GLORIFY JESUS.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"And Jesus answered them saying, the hour is come that the son of man should be glorified."—John 12:23.

It is probable that Jesus spoke these words about being glorified on a Tuesday. He was crucified on the following Friday! It must be understood that Jesus did not mean that in the next sixty minutes He would be glorified. But He did mean that in a short time, it might be within a few hours or a few days, the supreme testing hours of His life would come. He meant that the most awful moment of His whole life time was on its way. If He could match it, all He stood for, and all that God stood for, would be glorified.

It seems to me that for us the hour to glorify the Father and the Son is always present. Let no man think that some special hour will arrive labeled in italic face type: "I am the hour in which you are to glorify Jesus." Neither think that the hour to glorify Christ is many years hence when one can do it in a grand and sublime style. Do not wait for age when men will say that senility has caught you, and that you are glorifying the Lord not because of love for Him but because of fear of death. And do not wait for the spectacular moments. They may or they may not arrive. And if they do, they may or may not be one half as important as some quiet hour spent with some apparently unimportant person, or boy or girl. We may think because we act before the multitudes and receive the praise of men that we have glorified God. When it may be that all that has happened is that we have won the praise of men!

Jesus glorified the Father in many out-of-the-way places. They were without labels. At least the disciples never saw any labels on them. Once a blind man called out to Him. The disciples would have silenced the man. Once the children crowded the Master. That day Jesus glorified childhood and God. Once at a well curb in Samaria dealing with an out-cast Samaritan woman, in an unlabeled and apparently deadly prosaic hour, Jesus glorified true manhood and God and Himself!

And how shall one glorify the Father and the Son? I have been in preaching services and heard some one cry with great fervour: "Glory to God!" Did that add to the glory of God, or did it call attention to the one who shouted? I would say that if instead of shouting, that if somewhere out in life that same person did a Christ-like act, without show or pomp, that God would have been glorified far more!

We all have read of the former Spanish Inquisition and the Massacre of St. Bartholomew done by so called religious men. We know that John Calvin in the name of religion sanctioned the burning of Servetus. We know about the banishment of Roger Williams. Did any or all of these add to the glory of God? Men have said that God was glorified by keeping vows of silence. Others have said that one would glorify God if he retired from the world and was celibate. Still others have said that if great churches were built, and if magnificent ritualistic services were held within them, that God would be glorified. Is that the way to do it? Somewhere I have read that the earth and the fullness thereof are the Lord's!

We will glorify the Father and the Son by being true comrades of our Redeemer. And I mean by that instead of always dealing with those who are clever and easily taught, of fine social heritage, that we also attempt to awaken the apparently dull brain, arouse those who have been unfortunate in their heritage, to dream and strive for the good and true and beautiful.

Now this is not done easily. Do you recall Christian in Pilgrim's Progress when he tried to reach the Celestial City by a quick and easy way? He came to great grief. And he discovered that to reach the Celestial City he must pass between lions, go through the Valley of the Shadow, and have many hard battles and trials. But in the end he glorified God!

There is a small town in the State of Maine. I have been in that village many times. I have known a number of young people who live there. Often I heard them complaining that there was not a duller place in the world. There everybody wore the same styles. There everybody gossiped the same gossip. There they planted cabbages by the moon. It was a dull place. Indeed if one had suggested that the grand, heroic, and sublime resided there it would have been considered humorous.

Yet when a great flood a few years ago struck this community, the village was threatened to be washed away, I read the following account in a great city daily paper: "No greater tale of heroism and fortitude and character will ever be written by any other town or city in the nation than by these men and women who have fought for days to save their town from destruction!" In a terrible hour these men and women glorified manhood and womanhood, civic spirit and God!

But a word of warning must be said. Sometimes after great moments like these, men and women go back again to what they call the dull, and forgetting their great yesterday, begin to glorify some of the utterly worthless things of life! Listen to what Herman Hagedorn, the poet, says can be done. But first let me change a word in the first line from "serving" to "glorifying."

There are strange ways of "glorifying God;

You sweep a room or turn a sod,
And suddenly, to your surprise,
You hear the whirr of seraphim,
And find you're under God's eyes
And building palaces for Him.

And we will glorify the Son and the Father when, as Walter M. Horton of Oberlin says: "We go over from the side of the crucifiers to the side of the crucified!" There that is it! From the side of the crucifiers to the side of the crucified!

And the "Crucifiers," who are they? They are the ones who are indifferent to the good and true and beautiful; who exploit their brethren; who stand aloof from life; who take more out of life than they put back into it; who destroy all the idealism they can with cynicism!

There is no record on that day at Calvary that anyone stepped out from the crowd of the crucifiers and came over to the side of the crucified. It may be that some did. But none did it so boldly that it was written down!

There were reasons why none did and we know them well. There were the soldiers with spears and sharp swords. And there was an inflamed mob which would have been happy to have slain the man or woman who would have spoken too bold a word for the Man upon the cross. There was a cost that day to be paid by the ones who moved over from the crucifiers to the crucified. There always is! But that is the way to glorify the Son and the Father! "The hour is come that the Son of Man should be glorified."

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Easter was a very happy occasion to the Christian Orphanage family. The good women from quite a number of our churches in the Southern Convention made and sent in new dresses for the girls and some little suits for the little boys.

The good women of our churches at Sidney, Ind., Urbana, Ill., Goshens, Ind., and Warren, Ind., joined in to help make Easter a happy occasion for the children.

All the girls got a new Easter dress and all got new Easter slippers.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Union Christian church, Alamance County, N. C., furnished us 25 fat hens and 26 dozen eggs. The Lura Montgomery Circle of Graham-Providence Memorial Church, Graham, N. C., joined the good women of Union Church and donated 12 dozen eggs to help make the children's Easter dinner complete.

To make the Superintendent happy too, our good friend, Mrs. E. J. Brickhouse, of Norfolk, Virginia, who has been so loyal a friend all these years in helping us, mailed us a check for one thousand dollars for the use of the Orphanage. You see, the Superintendent had a happy Easter, too. We wish we had a thousand friends like Mrs. Brickhouse and we hope that her gift will inspire others to do likewise.

We are grateful to all who had a part in making Easter a happy day for the children in the Christian Orphanage. May God's richest blessings rest upon each one.

Superintendent.

In Memoriam

HOWELL.

George Thomas Howell died at his home near Holland Va., March 7, 1937, aged 65 years. The funeral services were conducted at the home by the writer. The burial was in the family cemetery near by. Mr. Howell leaves one son, Jacob William Howell, and two step-daughters, Mrs. Nellie Rawles and Mrs. Eula Dunford, both of Portsmouth, Va. He had been a member of Holland Christian Church most of his life.

STROOP.

Noah Stroop, one of the oldest and most faithful members of the Leakesville Church, near Luray, Virginia, was born January 16, 1856, and passed to his reward on March 4, 1937. Thus his age was 81 years, 1 month and 26 days. He is survived by 5 children: Mrs. Edward Dinges, Mrs. Earnest Dinges, Miss Minnie Stroop, Philip and Willie Stroop. Also he leaves to mourn one brother and one sister, 39 grandchildren, 43 great-grandchildren, and one great, great grandchild, 2 half brothers and one half sister.

He was a man of great faith in his God and in his church, living a most Godly life and following Christ with his best ability. May God in His infinite love comfort those who mourn.

W. J. ANDES.

COLQUITT.

On February 5, 1937, Bethany Congregational Church (The Rock, Georgia), lost one of its most beloved members, Mrs. Ella D. Colquitt. She was born on November 10, 1868, daughter of William Black and Francis Jane Gibson Black. In 1889 she joined Bethany Church, and was a loyal and devoted member for forty-seven years.

Thus closed one chapter and began another of a consecrated, Christian life, which was noble in friendship, strong in quiet determination, and without malice. Her's was a practical religion, and it never failed her or others.

Funeral services were in charge of her pastor, assisted by Rev. Giddon Horne. Interment was in the small cemetery beside the church to which she belonged.

D. W. SHEPHERD, Pastor.

DARDEN.

Richard Darden died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. T. Harrell, Holland, Virginia, March 11, 1937, aged 83 years. The funeral services were conducted at Sycamore Baptist Church, of which Mr. Darden was a charter member, by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. H. Corbett and Rev. Mr. Davis. The burial was in the church cemetery. Beside the daughter mentioned, Mr. Darden leaves three sons: John W. Darden, Boykins, Va., G. Cleveland Darden, of Norfolk, and J. Walter Darden of N. Y., and ten grandchildren. Mr. Darden was a native of Southampton County, but his latter days had been spent in Nansemond County in the home of his daughter. After many years of feebleness and a few days of intense suffering, he quietly enters into rest, coming "to his grave in a full old age like a shock of corn cometh in his season."

ELON IN THE SNOW.

Elon woke up on a recent Sunday morning to find a world of white. Our campus was positively beautiful; the shrubbery leaned over—bent by the snow. We could raise our window and get a handful of snow, just to see how it tasted.

By Sunday School time, a tiny path had been cleared along our walk—a path just wide enough to enable one to walk in the snow and yet not get his feet wet. Some of the girls who teach the town's people's children and also the orphanage boys and girls, went to their classes, afraid that no one would venture forth in such weather.

However, in the Primary Department, there were five little girls and three young boys, who rather enjoyed the fact that they could come to Sunday School. Mrs. Foster, the department leader, could not come, but we sang and had a very delightful story anyway. One of the little boys asked if we might have sentence prayers. I would not have been astonished to have one of the girls suggest this, but coming from a young man, this request made me doubly encouraged. Every child prayed a few sentences.

We all went to the morning worship service to hear Rev. Lester Furr, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Gibsonville. He began his sermon with a clever suggestion that "Furr" was not amiss on such a cold morning. During his sermon on the "Question Thomas Asked Jesus," taken from the fourteenth chapter of John, he brought out a very beautiful point. He pictured the trees, the mountains, the flowers, and other lovely things of nature living and revealing God because they couldn't help it. Man, however, chooses whether or not his life is to reveal Christ's teachings.

In the afternoon, many of the girls stirred the soft, white snow into delicious snow cream.

For our 6:30 Vesper service, Jack Neese, a member of the Freshman class spoke. His subject was "Student Welfare."

"After this most logical talk, we cannot help but love Jack, for he seems to be living here on our campus, the life he endorsed in his speech.

We have had our fun in this snow. We really snow-balled our Dean of Men in front of West Dormitory. We say the snow is most useful.

MARGARET J. EARP.

Life tells how the teacher asked, "What is a geyser?" and the pupil answered, "A geyser is a waterfall going up." This suggests another question, what is a pessimist and what is an optimist? A pessimist is a man going down and an optimist is a man going up. Speaking of pessimists and optimists reminds us of the pessimist who said, "I really believe that I could make a better world than this myself." "Sure," replied the optimist, "that is what we are here for. Now let's go to work and do it."

FAMILY ALTAR.

We may exercise royal power—now. We may receive royal blessings—now. We may dwell in a palace—now. We may wear a crown—now. We need not wait for future kingship. Every son of God is a king—now.

Prayer—Our Father-King, we adore Thy majesty. We bow before Thee in all humility. We trust Thy word with completeness of confidence. The signs of Thy providence encompass us, and we walk as they guide us. Amen.

Towards A Unified Church

By JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

"Must I do what I want to, today?" said the pre-school child to her teacher. Said Christ nearly 2,000 years ago, "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life, for My sake shall find it." What a long way we have traveled—and in the wrong direction.

The world today is staking its all on individualism—in men, in institution, in nations. Christ lived and taught altruism. The world says: "Every one for himself; get the most you can at the least cost of money and effort and don't be too particular about how you get it." Christ says: "For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

In the ^{land} of kaleidoscopic change, when even the foundations of morality and ^{religion} are being challenged and the anchor of faith seems to be dragging, it is a hopeful sign that many people are searching for a simple, fundamental religion as the way to peace, well-being and happiness. The widespread interest that has developed in that book—so powerful, so convincing, so helpful—entitled "The Return to Religion," by Henry C. Link, which should be universally read, is a gratifying evidence of this yearning for religion.

To the church should this quest naturally lead. But the church, with its sects, still clings to its denominationalism, in which a drifting, disillusionized, discouraged world sees confusion rather than hope.

Only a united Christian world can stem the rising tide of materialism of selfishness, of shaken traditions, of crumbling moral standards, and point the way out. How such union might be brought about was once suggested by Dr. Stanley Jones, in a most stimulating address.

He proposed one church, to be called the Church of Christ with all sectarian churches as branches. Thus individual and non-essential differences would be preserved, while on the fundamentals of religion—God's love and Christ's living spirit—all would be united.

If we who call ourselves Christians could catch the vision from the mountain top, we would see that there all roads meet; there Christ stands waiting to see his followers united irrespective of race or creed and praying to the Father that "they may all be one." How long, God Must He wait?

REV. JOHN DUBE.

Rev. John Dube of Natal has had the degree of Doctor of Philosophy conferred upon him by the University of South Africa—the first African to be thus honored. He was the son of a chief who relinquished all his rights to chieftainship to become a Christian minister. John Dube was educated at Amanzimtoti Institute, now Adams College, of the American Board, studied in America and returned to Africa as a minister under the Board. He was first president of the South African National Native Congress, and has been president of the Natal Native Congress since its inception. He is founder and principal of the Ohlange Institute, the only Native school in Natal for higher education, and was founder and is editor of the Native newspaper, "Lange Lase Natal."

"Doctor" John Dube (second from left) poses with the Zulu Regent (fourth from left). Mrs. Dube (considerably near the camera) is at the extreme right. Beside her is the Chief's wife. At Dr. Dube's left is the Chief's uncle. At his right a guard.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

With this month Miss Tora Rudd, of the Monticello Christian Church, will become Church Worker for the Burlington Church.

Rev. G. H. Veasy says that there has been considerable sickness around Wadley, Alabama, which has greatly retarded the work of the church.

Holland (Va.) Christian Church gave $100.00 for its missionary offering on Easter Sunday. Many other churches received the offering, but reports have not come in as to amount.

Materials for Mother's Day programs can be secured from the Board of Christian Education, 514 South Main St., Norfolk, Va. If you want Student Summer Service workers please write to the Board at once.

Mrs. Nannie L. Hawkins of Cedar Grove, N. C., an aged lady who has been reading THE CHRISTIAN SUN most of her life, says that she can not do without the paper and that some articles are worth the subscription price.

Rev. J. L. Edwards, pastor of a Negro Christian Church near Smithfield, Va., is calling a meeting of Youth Fellowship for the afternoon of the first Sunday in May. Several of the Eastern Va. preachers are invited to share in the program.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, former editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, is now visiting in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Jennie Willis Bradford, near Suffolk, Va. His health returns very slowly, and the prayers of the brotherhood will surely arise to a throne of grace for his recovery.

Several car loads of people from Virginia and the Carolinas are preparing to attend the Southeast Convention and the Youth Fellowship at Jacksonville. This is a fine chance for the people in these states to become acquainted with our friends in Florida.

"Rev. A. R. Flowers is just back from a visit in Wayne and Duplin Counties. He reports some very encouraging work in his field of activities, which he seldom ever fails to do. Regardless of the denomination that he is called to work with he never fails to leave without a cordial invitation to return when he can."

All pastors and deacons in Eastern Virginia are expected to be at Suffolk Christian Church next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock for the first deacons' meeting to be held in the Eastern Virginia Conference. A splendid program has been arranged, and all pastors and deacons will surely want to be present.

Winsor (Va.) and Monticello (N. C.) churches have sent in subscription lists equal to 10% of their membership in time to secure 25% commission. Thanks, and good wishes. There may be even more people who need to take the THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Subscriptions should be on the basis of the needs of members rather than on the needs of the paper.

Dr. Charles Eldred Britt Shelton, pastor of the Congregational Church of Portsmouth, Va., for the past 13 years, tendered his resignation on last Sunday. Dr. Shelton has rendered faithful service for considerably more than the Biblical three score years and ten, and is now retiring for a well deserved rest. His cultured mind will probably find some channel for activities and service during the remaining years of life, which his host of friends hope will be many, and happy.

During the past year the Burlington Church has received as memorial gifts these very fine additions to the equipment of the church: a baptismal font from Mrs. H. W. Trollinger in memory of her husband, Deacon H. W. Trollinger; and acousticon, from J. M. Fix in memory of Rev. J. W. Holt, pastor at the time of the founding of the church; new hymnaries, "Pilgrim Hymnal," by Mrs. John H. Barnwell in memory of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Morrow. Through these gifts these persons, honored, being dead, yet speak in a beautiful way Sunday after Sunday.

We rejoice with our two nearest Congregational-Christian Churches, Belews Creek and Salem Chapel, in the splendid building program these churches are putting on. Belews Creek will erect a new church building and the timber is now being cut for the new structure. Salem Chapel will build several new Sunday school rooms to the main auditorium. This Church wishes abundant success to these churches and to their respective pastors, the Revs. G. C. Crutchfield and D. M. Spence, in this much needed and worthwhile improvement.

Bulletin—Winson-Salem, (N. C.) Church.

Rev. Joe A. French, pastor of our churches at Ocean View and Berea, Norfolk, Va., has recently preached a series of sermons on "What Can A Man Believe?" The topics were as follows: "I Believe in God;" "I Believe in Jesus Christ;" "I Believe in the Holy Spirit;" "I Believe in the Bible;" "I Believe in Prayer;" "I Believe in the Church;" "What I Believe About Sin;" "What I Believe About the Atonement;" "What I Believe About Salvation;" "I Believe in Immortality;" "What I Believe About Divine Providence;" "What I Believe About Heaven."

GEORGIA MINISTERS STUDY PLANS FOR PARISH CO- OPERATION.

"Parish Cooperation" was the central note of the Fourth Annual Convocation of Georgia Congregational Christian Ministers' held at LaGrange, March 2nd-4th. The sessions, attended by practically every pastor, were held at the LaGrange Y. M. C. A. The presence of the ministers' wives, and several Alabama pastors, added much to the meeting. Beginning with the fellowship dinner on Tuesday night, March 2nd, and continuing until Thursday noon the program was filled with many valuable helps.

Rev. Thomas Alfred Tripp, Associate Director of the Town and Country Department of the Congregational Christian Churches, was present and led the discussion on parish organization and program. The entire morning session of Wednesday was devoted to this important consideration. Mr. Tripp outlined lines for procedure of grouped churches to co-ordinate their work in such ways as to strengthen the work of the local church and yet to make for strong parish programs. There are many things which a rural church cannot do alone and with fellowship and co-operation with others of "a pastorate" these can be accomplished. Chief among suggestions were suggestions of a parish paper (maybe nothing more than a mimeographed sheet) going out to each family of a group of churches working as a parish; young peoples' activities; parsonage and property care; and an inter-parish council. This parish council, it was brought out, may take the form of the "Official Board" for the parish, it being composed of officers—or especially selected persons—from each local church of the parish. Just how much authority might be vested in this council can be determined by the churches concerned, but it appeared to the group of ministers present that it offered an excellent opportunity for closer fellowship and service within respective areas. It would certainly be the joy and help to a minister of a group of churches to be able to sit down with officers of those churches to face a total program for the parish. Following the Convocation, Mr. Tripp visited several Georgia parishes, and reports indicate that progressive plans were instituted where advisable.

Miss Lucy M. Eldredge and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill led a most helpful discussion on the Religious Education program in the local church and in the parish.

Dr. Arthur Raper, of Atlanta, thrilled the Convocation with his clear analysis of the problems of farm tenancy in the south. Dr. Raper, professor of Sociology at Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Georgia, and author of The Preface to Peasantry, is one of the nation's most eminent authorities on the economic, racial, and social conditions of the South. His keen mind is combined with a native southerner's background and a deeply spiritual note. Those who heard him at LaGrange will look forward with pleasure to the Southeast Convention in Jacksonville, April 20th-22nd, where Dr. Raper has been secured for two addresses.

Others appearing on the Convocation program were: Dr. F. P. Enslinger, Birmingham; Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, Jacksonville; Rev. John Knight, LaGrange; Rev. Alan T. Jones, Braselton; Rev. W. Carl Parker, Waycross; Rev. R. Wiley Scott, Atlanta; Miss Marguerite Davison, Thorsby, Alabama; Mrs. David W. Shepherd, Zebulon; Mrs. Alan T. Jones.

Rev. David W. Shepherd, moderator of the State Conference, presided over the meeting. The Moderator and the Conference Superintendent were instructed to proceed with plans for the 1938 Convocation. Invitations were received from The United Church, LaGrange, for a return to that city, and also from the pastor of the Richland Church.

WILLIAM T. SCOTT.

JACKSONVILLE NEXT WEEK.

Let us have a large representation from Virginia and the Carolinas in Jacksonville, April 20th-22nd. The Southeast Convention and the Florida Conference will be in session there, and friends and acquaintances from the Southeastern states will be present. About twenty of our ministers and laymen of Eastern Virginia Conference expect to be there, and I hear that many from the Carolina Conferences are planning to attend. The signs of the time indicate a large attendance from this general section. Come on, get up an automobile load,—it will not be expensive,—and let us go to Jacksonville, Florida. It will help to add to the good fellowship, it will please our Florida friends, and they are very faithful friends, indeed, in coming up to our meetings, and besides, we shall learn something more about our own responsibilities and opportunities in the Kingdom of God. I have heard, too, that Florida in itself is an inspiration. Let's go see!

JOHN G. TRUITT.

ELON DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

Congratulations to Haye's Chapel and Plymouth Church for reaching their quota and taking their place with those that are over. "It can be done." The $20,550.00 quota for the Eastern North Carolin Conference can be raised, and slowly, but surely, it is being done. Quite a number of churches are on the list of those "Just about over." One more visit to their field and they, too, will be over.

MIDDLE GEORGIA CHRISTIAN LIFE CONFERENCE.

The Middle Georgia Christian Life Conference will be held on April 10th and 11th, at Fredonia Church, near Barnesville, Georgia. The officers of this group are: President, Dorothy Grigsby and Secretary, Mozelle Cole.

A very complete and interesting program has been planned, with participation on the part of the young people being much in evidence. They will be given invaluable assistance in the way of planning and conducting future meetings in the local churches by Rev. D. W. Shepherd, Rev. John H. Knight, Rev. W. T. Scott, Mrs. J. H. Knight, and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill from our group and will hear an address on "Self Control in a Changing World" by Rabbi I. E. Marcuson, Macon, Georgia.

The Fredonia Church, which invited the young people's group to meet there, needs to know how many young people to expect. The seventeen churches in this section should write immediately to Rev. D. W. Shepherd, Zebulon, Georgia, telling him how many to expect from your church.

The program is a fine one—it is up to the Georgia Young People to take advantage of this opportunity.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

FLORIDA IS CALLING.

Several years ago land values in Florida increased with great rapidity, and searchers for quick fortunes went there in large numbers. Florida was calling to them, or so they thought. Today Florida is calling to the Congregational-Christian Church people throughout the Southeast. Last week's issue of this paper made clear that call. It is the call of the Church to church people. It is a call to friendship, fellowship and understanding. It is a call to cooperation and coordination. It is a call to larger vision and greater undertakings.

For some years Floridians have come to Carolina and Virginia to share with us in our program and our fellowship. It is now the turn of those who live farther north to make the trip south in search, not of the Fountain of Youth, but in search of life at its best. It is to be hoped that this call will find a response in the heart of many who will want to share in the cooperative work of Congregational and Christian Churches throughout the Southeast, and that on April 20th, a large group will gather in Jacksonville and remain through the sessions until noon of Thursday, April 22nd.

EDUCATIONAL EVANGELISM.

What age should people be when they join the church? How much should they know of the Bible? What other tests should be given for church membership? What do pastors teach in the Pastor's Class? Do we need a catechism, or something comparable to it? These were some of the questions considered by fifteen ministers representing Congregational and Christian Churches from North Carolina to New York meeting at Bel Air, Maryland, Easter Monday and the morning following.

It was the opinion of these ministers that churches should give such training as will make it easy for children to turn towards the Church with a desire to become part of it, but no age limit for membership could be agreed upon. Twelve years was a median, some thinking that they should be older and some thinking that an earlier age is better.

All were agreed that those uniting with the Church should not only know something of the Bible and the Church, but should also have some experimental knowledge of God.

A committee was appointed to prepare material for a manual that will in some sense meet the requirements of our Church as a catechism does other churches. The entire group will meet again some time next fall for further consideration of the whole subject of Educational Evangelism.

L. E. Smith, Carl H. Voss, S. C. Harrell, W. E. Wisseman, J. G. Truitt, H. S. Hardcastle, and F. C. Lester went from the Southern Convention.

FALSE ARGUMENTS.

Debate is a delight to those who like to match wits. It is a stimulating past-time and a thrilling experience for college students. Those who are older often keep up the habit of debate and find much pleasure in it.

It often happens that truth is lost in the midst of debate. Things may be logical that are not true. This is particularly noticeable in present day arguments concerning taxation. It is argued that since people will smoke poisonous tobaccos the Government should have a tax from the smoking, that since people will drink alcoholic liquors the liquors should be made legal and a tax collected, that since some people will gamble, gambling should be made legal and let the Government receive a revenue. America has yielded to the argument concerning the tobacco and the liquors and is now in the process of doing the same for gambling.

The fallacy of this argument can easily be seen, merely by the suggestion that since people do commit murder the thing to do is to make murder legal and let one commit as many murders as he may desire, provided he pays the proper tax previous to the murder. It is exactly the same argument. There is no question of right in either case. It is an assumption that people are going to do the thing and that therefore the Government should receive a reward.

The truth lies in another direction. If alcoholic beverages are injurious to body, mind and soul, if gambling breaks down the appreciation for the rights of others, and if murder is wrong always, then the law should seek to curb, rather than to promote these things. It is high time for American people to think through the arguments that are passed out freely by eloquent orators and come back to fundamental things rather than to yield to the men of baser sort who are of a non-social type. A government that grows rich on the drunkenness of its people can never live to enjoy its prosperity.

F. C. L.

WHAT DO THEY READ?

The five conferences in the Southern Convention reported 30,820 members last year. What do they read? There are still other thousands of members in Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee and Florida. What do those church members read? At the present time 1,500 copies of "The Christian Sun" supply the demand. This is certainly not a sufficient number of papers for all our church families to receive it.

The matter of reading is very important, for "as a man thinketh so is he." If our Church people feed their minds on movies, cheap magazines and daily newspapers, it is inevitable that they become like that which they read. If they read good literature, religious literature, they will become that kind of person. When our people begin to read about our institutions they will become interested in the work of the Church and will want to share in it. Unless they do read about the affairs of the Church, there is little hope for them to be greatly interested.

All of which means that the pastors and leaders, who read their Church literature and who want the help of those who seem to be indifferent, should endeavor to get these other people to reading the Church literature. To be specific, it means that you who read this can do a fine piece of missionary work and help to build the Church, of which you are a part, by calling on your neighbor and getting a subscription to "The Christian Sun." Boys and girls, and men and women need the inspiration and the information which can be received from regular reading of this Church paper. We need now many missionaries who will make it their business to interest those who do not know the values of the Church paper and to sell them the idea of reading that which will make them better Church workers.

"The Christian Sun" is making an introductory offer of only $1.50 for an entire year's subscription, provided that subscription is sent in before June 1st, next. When that date arrives, it is devoutly to be hoped that the paper will be going into the homes of all pastors, Sunday School superintendents, teachers, deacons, and other leaders, as well as to the homes where children and young people are getting ideas about the world in which they live. This plea is not for the sake of the paper but for the sake of the Church and the people who compose it. Will you, good friend, make it a point to send in one or more new subscriptions? This is a small service but one that may have lasting values.

SAVE THE CHILDREN!

Many of us will long remember March 19, 1937, as the fatal day for more than 400 persons, mostly children, who lost their lives in an explosion in a New London, Texas, school building. The incident will stand out in our minds, especially for those who have children. And it should stand out as a grim reminder that every precaution should be made when the lives of our little ones are in danger. Some die that others may live, though such a fate is difficult to realize when human negligence is so apparent as in the New London case.

But let us take advantage of this awful tragedy to learn a lesson in the prevention of child killing.

According to statistics of a well known life insurance company, in 1936 we killed 3,520 children between the ages of 3 and 14 by automobiles. This was a little over eight times the number of youngsters who perished in the New London holocaust. To this number 5,410 children of kindergarten and grade school age met death in auto collisions. This brings the number up to nearly 9,000 each year killed by the use of the automobile, mostly by careless drivers. If we divide this number by twelve, we have an average of over 700 per month. And if each month we were confronted with newspaper headlines as we were in the New London accident, something drastic would be done to prevent this killing by auto of our youth.

Let us add, and reasonably so, the numberless thousands of our little ones who die from starvation, underfeeding, or malnutrition, if you wish to call it by such better-sounding names. The industrial battle being fought daily by our children also takes its toll of young life. This is a chapter which cannot be told here.

As a result of the New London explosion tens of thousands of heating systems in schools and homes have been inspected—and rightly so. But how about a little inspection of our brakes? Of minds that cannot act quickly enough in times of emergency? Of outright carelessness that turns us into potential murderers?

What hollow mockery it is to follow our babes to their graves because they are victims of carelessness and preventable diseases and hear the parson say: "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord." Did He take away? Ponder that question as the careless and indifferent slay their thousands of helpless and innocent children.

GAINS AND LOSSES.

Dr. Charles S. MacFarland, distinguished Secretary Emeritus of the Federal Council of Churches, in a public address recently, declared that "while the sale and consumption of whiskey in America had jumped over 300 per cent since 1933, the income of churches of the nation had decreased over 12 per cent." There is connection between the two, in that the one explains something of the way of the other. As the thermometer of wickedness, sin, revelry, drunkenness, goes up, that of church life and Christianity goes down and vice versa. There are thousands outside of the church in sin and unsaved whom the church is not reaching.

And then there are other thousands in the church who do little about it and are indifferent to it. If the church has no more to offer to the world than a social or Civic Club or a Benevolent Society has, then it should decline and will do so. "What do ye more than these?" still rings down from sacred lips and inspired Word. The church is in this world to be a body of adventurers, of pioneers, for Christ. If it can't and does not do this, then no wonder men join and patronize with more zest and zeal and enthusiasm their Civic and Social and Benevolent Societies.

The Church is a body of "called out" folks, who have been called out to a distinct problem and to call out others to enlist under the blood-stained banner of the Cross. Are we Christians? Then it is our joy and privilege and commission to tell the good news of Him who has redeemed us, and is ready to save and redeem all who will accept Him as Lord and Teacher.

"Soft words sung in a lullaby will put a babe to sleep. Excited words will stir a mob to violence. Eloquent words will send armies marching into the face of death. Encouraging words will fan to flame the genius of a Rembrandt or a Lincoln. Powerful words will mold the public mind as the sculptor molds his clay. Words, spoken or written, are a dynamic, creative force."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

On Thursday, May 13th, the Silver Anniversary commemorating the organization of the Woman's Missionary work in the Southern Convention, will be held in the Suffolk Christian Church. A detailed program will appear in THE SUN. In advance of that important meeting two matters should be kept before the Missionary Societies: raising the amount of money suggested for the Memorial Fund, and planning to attend the Jubilee Service.

First in the order is the matter of raising the money as suggested. Every member of the Woman's Societies is asked to give $1.00; Young People's Societies, 50 cents; Junior's, 25 cents; Cradle Roll, 10 cents. Provision has been carefully made for obtaining the signatures, or names of all who contribute, and these names are to be preserved in a book for future record. This is not a large amount for any person, and it seems to be possible for the various Societies of the Convention to make a 100 per cent record in raising the money. To do this it will be necessary to approach the task systematically and diligently. At this date Berea (Nansemond), Liberty Spring and Oakland Societies have nearly raised their quota in full. The Woman's Societies will have their full quota. If these churches can make this record, others can do likewise. They will do so.

The raising of this money is of great importance. The work of the late Dr. Staley deserves this recognition. His good example in liberal giving and faithful support of the cause of Missions should inspire others to sacrificial service for the sake of the Kingdom of God. Our church needs the money to carry on the work in our midst. And our people need the benefit and blessing of larger contributions to the Cause of Christ. "The liberal soul shall be made fat." (Prov. 11:25). That may not be acceptable teaching for people who prefer a reducing diet. Many people (especially among the good women) do not wish to be overweight. This is a time when it is popular to be thin. That may be one explanation of the small gifts to the Lord's Treasury. But a "fat soul" is a delight to the Lord. Liberal giving is good for the spiritual health of church members in general.

The other point is representation in the meeting on May 13th. That should be the aim of every Society. The plan anticipates having a representative of every Society present with the money and the list of names to be delivered and recorded in person on that date. Hundreds should attend the meeting. It should be a Red Letter Day among the women of the Conferences and Convention. A great spiritual awakening should arise from such an inspiring program. Why not begin to pray for the money to be raised, the people to attend the meeting and Holy Spirit to awaken a new interest and enthusiasm for missions? Surely such objectives should encourage our constituency to pray daily for the blessing of God upon our work.

This work should in no way interfere with the raising of the regular funds of the Missionary Societies. It will help the regular work of the various churches. People grow by living and giving. A spirit of cooperation all along the line can accomplish much within the remaining weeks preceding the Rally in Suffolk. Do your best and leave the rest in the hands of God.

AFTER HIGH SCHOOL, WHAT?

Secondary education is much more advanced than in former years. Our more advanced high schools are operating on a curriculum more diversified than the average college a quarter of a century ago. Our better high schools offer courses in business, secretarial work, home economics, music, art, dramatics, etc. All teachers in our high schools are required to have certain definite training, without which they cannot hold teaching positions.

The average youngster congratulates himself on the completion of requirements of the grades and feels very much advanced when he becomes a high school student. On being promoted from the junior class, assumes the air of a senior, feeling perhaps that he is now about to reach the goal of his ambition and the end of his preparation for life. However, as he approaches the end of his senior year the seriousness of life and of living begins to dawn upon him, and he asks himself the question, "What next?" and as he wrestles with this question, seeking for the answer, he finds that his parents are also wrestling with the same question.

There are thousands of young men and young women who, in a few weeks will be graduating from high school. Whither will they go? What will the next step be for them? Will they start to look for a job or a position in life that will afford opportunities for a livelihood and advancement? When they think of this, there seems to be but little or no use. Instead of there being opportunities in business or in the commercial world, there seems to be already scores and hundreds on the waiting list. Only the unusual with keen insight and superior ability will be able to edge himself in and obtain a foothold. Corporations and combinations of capital have reduced the opportunities for the unskilled to the minimum. For the average high school graduate to start out to look for a job is about as hopeless as looking for a needle in a haystack.

There is one more possibility—that of continuing his preparation that he may be qualified for a requiring position. Further preparation means college. Will this be the next step for him? To go to college requires money. Seventy per cent of the average senior class in high school today is unable financially to go to college. The only chance this seventy per cent has of entering college will be through consideration offered by the college or a loan from some friend or relative that will make it possible for him to go.

At this particular season of the year, every college in the country is besieged by appeals from worthy and ambitious young men and young women for certain generous financial consideration that they may be enabled to realize their lifelong ambition. Colleges with endowments for scholarships are in a position to select their student body and control their enrollment. Colleges without scholarship endowments are at a serious disadvantage. Many of the young men and young women who are without funds are capable of developing into the highest type of citizens. They really should be given an opportunity, and it is hoped that men who have been blessed in their efforts to accumulate money will be blessed with a spirit of generosity and wisdom that they may use their accumulated wealth for the development of manhood and womanhood and the creation of citizenship that will be capable of the highest type of leadership.

If, after graduation from high school, college comes, then the matter of selecting a college is to the forefront. So far as the writer is able to judge, the small college with a religious heritage and a Christian atmosphere is most capable of doing for the young people of this age what needs to be done than are our larger schools and universities. The small college is freer from the objectionable and more capable of the desirable, and, therefore, is preferable as a training ground for the citizenship of the future.

Elon College is our institution. Her atmosphere is wholesome, her scholarship is thorough, and here the emphasis is put on things that count.

MID-YEAR VALLEY CONFERENCE.

The Mid-Year Session of the Valley Conference of the Congregational Christian Church met at Bethlehem, Thursday morning, March 25, at 10 A. M. Dr. M. L. Weekley led the worship service of the morning which led the congregation to see wherein our difficulty lay when we keep putting our work off and our goodness off until some future day.

Five of the seven ministers were present and 15 churches were represented at this conference. In addition many were there who were interested in the Conference. They were all welcomed by Miss Ella Pickering and the response was given by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Holt.

President Williamson introduced the theme of the Conference which was "Widening Horizons." He defined our horizons as ideals which we never can reach, but they are always aspiring and inspiring. Three things hinder or restrict our horizons: (1) Indifference or laziness, (2) lack of knowledge, and (3) lack of faith.

Rev. R. A. Whitten addressed the Conference on the topic: "The Church." He said that he could not think of the Church without thinking of righteousness along with it. The origin of the Church makes it great and this origin is in God and Jesus Christ as its Savior. Even though the Church has been deluded by the spirit of wordliness, we cannot separate the Church from the world around us. Things enter in—as books, the building, the furniture, and the equipment. The Church people need to become more loyal to their God and their Church. They also need to become more burdened for the Institutions of the Church. We need to rediscover the Christ that we left along the road of life.

Rev. D. R. Coulter spoke on the topic: "The Field is the World." If the field is the world, then we must deal with the world as Christ dealt with it: Be a witness for God. The chief function of the Church is "to glorify God and let men enjoy God forever." It is the mightiest institution for directing life in this world. It must seek to promote rather than oppose the will of God. Therefore, let it not try to define religion in its own social terms, but in the manifestation of a Christian life.

After lunch, Rev. R. D. Coulter led the worship services. Mrs. K. H. Sale spoke on the Silver Anniversary, calling to mind how the Woman's Missionary organization began 25 years ago.

A Round Table discussion, "Widening Horizons for the Local Church," followed with a majority of the laymen and laywomen taking part. The summary of the discussion may be said in these words, "Each Church member must live and believe as a Christ-like human being would live and believe."

PALMYRA.

The revival at Palmyra Christian Church in the Valley of Virginia started March 22nd, and is still going fine on April 1st. It is one of the best we have had in a great while. The attendance has been very great. The pastor, Rev. Roy D. Coulter, has been doing all the preaching and leading the song service. Due to his untiring efforts many have been helped to a new determination to work in the church for God. Two new members have been received into the church and one who has been inactive has come up for reinstatement. The people love their new pastor and are showing their love by gracious gifts of food and hospitality of their homes.

Two weeks ago the pastor held a meeting in which Mr. C. L. Rush was elected by the church as deacon. Mr. Mallon Clem, Mr. David Marston, Mr. C. L. Rush were elected to serve as trustees of the church. Quite recently the Sunday school was reorganized. Mr. Clem was elected Superintendent. Mrs. Salome Clem was elected Secretary. Many new faces have been seen in the church recently. They promise to be regular helpers in the church and we hope to have them come to us by letters of transfer.

The Woman's Missionary Society, organized by the pastor, will begin active work within a few days. The members have expressed a desire for this work and a good mind to start soon in this great enterprise. Mrs. Shirley Ophiant was elected President. Under her leadership there is no doubt of great success.

The church has pounded their pastor and have welcomed him and his good wife into their homes with love. We have just begun to get ready to start to do things at Palmyra. We request the prayers of all Christians for our success in the undertaking of the Master.

REPORTER.

SANFORD.

Eighteen members were received into the fellowship of the Congregational-Christian Church of Sanford, North Carolina on Easter Sunday. Fifteen of the eighteen came upon profession of faith. The week prior to Easter was a busy one for both pastor and people. Services were held each evening, the writer doing the preaching and the music being under the direction of Rev. Henry Lewis, tenor soloist from Duke University. On Thursday evening there was a beautiful candlelight communion service at which time many renewed their consecration to the local church and to the cause of Christ. On Friday evening a group of young people from our church at Southern Pines presented a very dramatic portrayal of events of the last days of our Lord. It was a fine piece of work. Rev. Voight Taylor and Rev. C. Rexford Raymond are to be congratulated upon their fine work in this presentation. The evenings of the week have been profitably used, and our church will be the better spiritually because of these services.

F. ERVIN HYDE.

AN OPEN LETTER.

The Ministers of Randolph County to the Ministers of North Carolina—Greetings: May God's grace and peace be multiplied in your hearts. Dearly Beloved Brethren,

We have been burdened with a profound concern because the danger of traffic in liquor may come to be protected by law in the separate counties of our state.

Determined to oppose this evil with the mightiest of all our spiritual resources, we have bound ourselves in a covenant of daily prayer that God would deliver us and our people from this bondage.

On the afternoon of March 18th, we met with certain Godly men and women of the laity for united petition in this Cause. At this time we resolved to ask other ministers of the state to join us in personal prayer and, where possible, in united prayer for the end of an area in which liquor drinking should be protected by statute law.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

THE EASTER OFFERING.

We feel sure that every pastor who did not begin taking the Annual Offering for Missions on Easter will do so at the earliest practicable date, not merely for the sake of the mission cause, needy as that is, but for the sake of the church, the pastor and his people. When we invest money in missions, we are laying up treasures in heaven where neither moth, nor dust doth corrupt. This for the reason that this money becomes immortal, being dedicated not merely to man, or for the sake of man, but to God for the sake of His Son that His love and life may be shared with others and proclaimed to all the world. We are seeking by every means we know to build up the church and extend our borders here in the home land, and also in fields afar, by proclaiming the unsearchable riches of Christ and giving the message of salvation through Christ to the unsaved.

The late Jay T. Stocking, D. D., at the time of his decease Moderator of our General Council, wrote a pamphlet on "Immortal Money." In this the great preacher declares that money is life and we make it mortal, or immortal, by its use. "Money that contributes to the onward sweep of truth is as imperishable as truth itself. Treasure that is spent for the Kingdom of God is beyond the mark of moth or rust. Through the spiritual use of one's money, one may enjoy the taste of immortality now. No one gets so much out of his money as he who translates it into somebody's reborn soul. Money is a very awesome thing. The bill you hold in your hand may be the admission price of some life into immortality." That money which we invest in revealing to the world our Savior and Redeemer that He may reach and save the immortal souls is itself immortal. Quoting Dr. Stocking further, "To every man with a margin, which he may spend as he will, selfishly or unselfishly, Jesus says as He said to Peter: "I give unto thee the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven." With the money one may "bind" or "loose," one may open the gates, or close them, to souls who are seeking life."

The church goes forward and lays the ground work and builds the foundations for all other enterprises and institutions only as it cultivates and develops the spirit of missions and does the missionary work. The risen Christ has promised to be with us unto the end, on condition that we carry out the great commission and be witnesses for Him at home and abroad. His is the Name and the only name whereby we must be saved, and in our mission work we are trying to exalt that name and make it known to a world in sin. Every dime and dollar sent in for missions is dedicated to the immortal task of sharing the life and love of our Lord with others.

That the church may go forward in this God-given task is the reason that every one should give liberally to missions. Take the offering and send it in as soon as possible. And there was never greater need that it be liberal than now.

REMEMBER.

May we remember May 13th! This is to be a great day for the women of our church. We are invited to Suffolk, Virginia, to attend the Sil-ver Anniversary meeting of the Wo-men's Missionary Convention of the Southern Convention of Congrega-tional and Christian Churches.

The "Book of Remembrance" will be opened. We will be thrilled as we hear about "Twenty-Five Years of Growth and Service." This will be a meeting of interest, information, and inspiration. We cannot afford to miss it. Every Society should send a delegate. Our Suffolk Church is so gracious and kind in offering to en-tertain us. They will do their part, so let us do ours. It will be with glad and joyful hearts that we bring our Birthday Offering for the Staley Memorial. What a privilege to have a part in this work!

"The Lord recompense thy work, and a full reward be given thee of the Lord God of Israel, under whose wings thou art come to trust."—Ruth 2: 12.

A SONG FOR TWENTY-FIFTH ANNI-VERSARY OF THE WOMAN'S MIS-SIONARY WORK.

Tune: "America the Beautiful."

A Birthday anniversary,
We come to celebrate,
In song and prayer our voices raise,
And gratefully relate
Of how, in nineteen-twelve, a band
Of women met, one day,
Just twenty-five short years ago,
In Suffolk town, in May.

A Mission band of women, brave,
They challenged every one,
And soon the call was heeded,
And a work for Christ begun.
At Home and on the far-off shores,
Our women took a part,
And in the years that followed on,
Endeavored to impart.

The story old, of how Christ died
For every race and land,
And each succeeding year, the goal
Was reached, by helping hands.
So now, from 'sea to shining sea,'
'Most every woman's heart,
To Home and Foreign fields is turned,
And yearns to have a part.

Our silver offerings we bring,
And gladly dedicate
To Dr. Staley, pioneer,
A preacher, good and great.
We would not carve on wood or stone,
No banner fling above,
But unassumingly, we'd build
This monument of love.

And so through all the years to come,
In one united throng,
Their work—a beacon shining on,
Ring near and far this song,—
Oh, Woman's Missionary Band!
A blessing on thee rest
God 'crown thy good with sisterhood,'
In service, East and West.

By MRS. J. L. FOSTER.

As we remember the past twenty-five years of our women's work, each of us realizes the truth expressed in that verse. The recompense and re-wards and trust that have been ours!
Let us come to Suffolk May 13th with thankful hearts for the past and present, looking forward with a great faith to plans for the future.

"What's done for earth fails by and by,
What's done for God can never die."—Martin.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

YOUTH FELLOWSHIP MEETING.

On the afternoon and evening of April 17th, the North Carolina-Virginia Youth Fellowship is holding its annual Spring Youth Fellowship Conference at the First Congregational-Christian Church at Greensboro.

Theme: What is Pilgrim Fellowship?

2:15—Registration.

2:30—Devotional.

2:45—Business, Dorothy Truitt, President, presiding.

3:30—Address, Dr. A. D. Beittle, Guilford College, N. C.

4:15—Recreation.

4:30—General Discussion of Theme, leader to be announced.

6:30—Fellowship Supper, Rev. Millard Stevens, toastmaster.

7:15—Installation of Officers.

7:30—Upper Room Service.

8:00—Adjournment.

They hope that the churches of this Fellowship will let Dorothy Truitt, 405 E. Whittington St., Greensboro, know how many young people expect to be present, not later than April 15.

THE FELLOWSHIP RECORDER.

Again the North Carolina-Virginia Youth Fellowship has published a fine paper—a new edition of its occasional bulletin, which is called "The Fellowship Recorder."

The Easter period was planned for, by making definite suggestions as to what could be done then and listing materials which would help in preparing for Easter services. We like the idea of putting new life into the "dead" societies at this spring of the year, when everything is awakening. Good suggestions are made for "reviving" such young people's groups.

Then, too, the bulletin looks ahead far enough to include plans for Mother's Day, with a list of materials which may be secured very inexpensively for the celebration of that day.

Finally, the constitution of the Fellowship is printed, so that all the members of the Fellowship may have an opportunity to read it carefully before attending the next Youth Fellowship meeting to be held in April.

OUR SOUTHEAST.

Miss Lucy Eldredge has recently returned to Dayton, Ohio, after a trip which covered Florida, Georgia, and Alabama. In these three states she visited local young people's groups, attended and lead rallies and group meetings, and met with our students in colleges. As she attended Elon College and has worked in the North Carolina-Virginia section, she is thoroughly familiar with the Youth Fellowship work there.

She writes that she is impressed with the variety of things being done in young people's work in the Southeast. Each locality is doing interesting things very different from those activities carried on by young people in other parts of the Southeast.

Unfortunately, all of us cannot travel all over the Southeast as we would like to do, finding out the interesting things which are being done. However, these things can be shared by means of this page. It is your page and we want news of you and your group. Write us what you are doing in Georgia or North Carolina, in Alabama or Virginia.

Another way in which this information can be shared is by attending the Southeast Youth Fellowship meeting in Jacksonville on April 21st and giving us a verbal account of the "happenings" in your group.

WE'RE EXPECTING YOU IN FLORIDA.

APRIL 20-21-22.

Since the letter which Mr. Lester sent to the Officers in the Southeast, urging them to attend the Southeast Youth Fellowship meeting, made all of them feel they simply must attend, we are taking the liberty of quoting it here—in the hopes that those who did not receive a copy will take it to heart, too:

"Dear Friends:

As the time for the meeting of the Southeast Youth Fellowship draws nigh, I am getting excited about who will be there, and what will be accomplished. The date, as you know, is April 21st, and the place is the Congregational Church, Jacksonville, Florida.

The Youth Fellowship of the Southeast is a comparatively new organization intended to give young people an opportunity to work cooperatively. Adults are interested and eager, but they have their work and can only act as advisers to the Fellowships. The work must be done by the young people, or it will not get done at all.

By vote of the Fellowship, the youth leaders are to meet once every two years to transact business and make plans so they can work together. You have been elected to office as a leader of Youth. Don't you think that you should be in this Jacksonville meeting?

The church will give bed and breakfast free. One night on the way, food, and car fare is all the cost. By going in car-loads the expense will not be very much. I think it will cost far more to miss the opportunity of leadership which is offered to you. When the Church gives a young person a chance of leadership, that person should be glad to accept the challenge, even if it does cost something. Don't you think so? I believe that is the way most young people feel.

Let me suggest, also, that you try to get others to attend. Such a meeting as this may be the turning point in life. Just think of the joy of helping to find a leader for the Church! It now appears that there will be a car-load from my church. I surely hope that other churches and Conferences will do as well. The time is short, but fast work may yet get a large group there for the meeting. Of course you will want to attend the Southeast Convention, also, which will be in session Tuesday evening to Thursday noon.

Please take this matter seriously. People all over the country are watching to see what the young people in the Southeast will do. Some of us have fought for you to have your opportunity, and now you have it. What will you do with it? Let's make good—not excuses.

Hoping to see you in Jacksonville, and with very best wishes to each of you, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

F. C. LESTER.

THE SIN OF ADAM AND EVE.

LESSON II—APRIL 11, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: The soul that sinneth, it shall die.—Ezekiel 18:4.

LESSON: Genesis 3:1-4:26.

Shall we take the Garden of Eden story as literal truth in every detail, or as pictorial language presenting spiritual truth? Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind as to that. But in either case there are abiding spiritual principles as fresh and binding today as when the story was committed to writing centuries ago.

The Subtlety of Sin.

"Now the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field"—the devil is no fool. He is shrewd and subtle. Essentially he is "the deceiver." He came with an insinuation. He slyly challenged God's authority. He awakened pride. He suggested limitations. He mocked at prohibitions. He promised freedom and pleasure. He misrepresented truth. "Ye shall not surely die, for God doth know that in the day that ye eat thereof, then shall your eyes be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." Then as now, he made his victims feel that he could give larger life and freedom from restraint.

The Strategy of Sin.

"Sin when it hath run its course bringeth forth death, said Paul. But the devil takes care to see that ordinarily we do not see sin in that light. He dresses it up and makes it attractive and desirable. "When the woman saw that the tree was good for food—there was the appeal to the appetite or senses; that it was pleasant to the eyes—sin looks so attractive in prospect; and a tree to be desired to make one wise—it promised larger, fuller, freer life, then the woman took the fruit thereof and did eat. If it had been sordid and sensual she might not have yielded. As a rule, the haunts of sin are made attractive as possible.

The Contagion of Sin.

"She took of the fruit thereof, and did eat and gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat." Sin will not "stay put." One cannot build a wall high enough to keep it in his own life. Sin has the power to make us tempt our fellowmen, even those we love and those who love us. It spreads and grows in a man's own life. It overflows and contaminates the lives of others.

The Shame of Sin.

"And Adam and Eve hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God, amongst the trees of the garden . . . I heard thy voice and I was afraid." To be sure sin makes one brazen in some instances, but ordinarily sin brings a sense of guilt and shame. It shames us when we come into the presence of God. When Isaiah saw the Lord high and lifted up in the temple, he cried out: "Woe is me, for I am a man of unclean lips and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips." Sin cannot keep God from loving us, but it can keep us from having fellowship with Him. It will keep us from Him, and He will keep us from it.

The Wages of Sin.

Back of the story as recorded in this third chapter of Genesis is the eternal principle that the way of the transgressor is hard, and the wages of sin is death. It is not all stated in these words, but the fact is there. "Cursed, enmity, sorrow, thorns, thistles, bruises"—too much meaning must not be read into these words in this passage, but they are the words that must be included in the vocabulary of sin.

And what is the meaning of that picturesque statement that after Adam and Eve had been driven out of the Garden that there were cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life, if it does not teach that sin had shut them out of the ideal state, that once sin has entered a life things can never be the same again, that sin brings its own curse upon the sinner, that indulgence in sin brings inevitable penalty. And sin is essentially disobedience to the will of God. There are sins of the spirit as well as sins of the flesh.

The Cure for Sin.

Jesus Christ was manifested to take away our sins. We call his name Jesus for He shall save His people from their sin. God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved. Who shall deliver us from the body of this death? I thank God, through Jesus Christ, my Lord!

ANOTHER INTERESTING AND REWARDING BOOK.

Because of the appreciation of ministers and laity alike for the occasional appraisals which I have given some of the recent worth-while books, I wish to call attention to another very recent and very interesting book by an outstanding leader in the Congregational-Christian Church Fellowship—the autobiography of the late Fred B. Smith, who was the Honored Moderator at the time of the merger of the Congregational and Christian Churches in 1931.

The title of this exceptionally interesting autobiography is uniquely suggestive—"I Remember." The volume, containing 222 pages of intimate revelations from the life of one of America's greatest laymen, was written shortly before the author's death, which occurred September 4, 1936, and has just come from the press, having been published by Fleming H. Revell Company, of New York City.

Though Fred B. Smith was a layman, few, if any, religious leaders even among the clergy have exerted so great an influence on the lives of so many young men, who later entered the ministry, as has Fred B. Smith. Literally, hundreds of ministers and missionaries now in their forties and fifties from all denominations will testify that they made their final decision to give their life in Christian Service, while attending one of the Student Y. M. C. A. Conferences at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, or at some other such sacred place where these gatherings were held and hearing the impassioned appeals of Fred B. Smith to give "A Life In Service to God," on the Home or Foreign Field.

No matter how many college presidents, bishops, or other distinguished clergymen were on the program, Fred B. Smith was always the outstanding personality at the Student Y. M. C. A. Conferences in these days when "Christian Life Work" received the major emphasis. The young college and university students of that day idolized him. "He got them." And the thing that "got them" was his own life.

Now, not only college and university students are able to receive inspiration from those experiences, but also men and women of every age and every walk of life, for the story of his interesting life is "an open book" now for all.

When I opened this delightful volume for the first time, I thought I would simply dip into it for a few minutes to "taste it," so to speak, and then read the entire book later. But it proved to be so interesting that not until far past midnight did I lay it down.

The story of his boyhood life in Iowa in what were pioneer days in that great mid-western state is replete with adventure and testing experiences. The story of his educational training, and his life's decisions; the story of his remarkable experiences in Individual Evangelism; the story of his leadership in the Men and Religion, the story of his leadership in the Crusade for World Peace—it is all here in this splendidly written book, "I Remember."

Fred B. Smith, as a layman, was a leader of clergymen and laymen. His autobiography is a window through which all his friends and admirers may look into some of the more intimate contacts of his life which help to explain the secret of his courage, his vision, and his distinguished service as a Christian laymen, religious leader, and promoter of International Friendship—which was his last great passion.

The story of Fred B. Smith's life, "I Remember," should be read by laymen and clergy alike. It is interesting reading for every member of the family, and can be purchased at any local book store or from the publishers, Fleming H. Revell, 158 Fifth Ave., New York City, for $2.25 a copy. Ministers of all denominations should have this book for their own reading and to lend it to men of their congregation. Because Fred B. Smith was a member of the Congregational-Christian Church, this story of his life will be of special interest to our ministers and laymen.

MONDAY.

DESTRUCTIVE DESIRES.

"There is a way which seemeth right unto man, but the way thereof is death."—Prov. 14:12.

A similar gospel to our text is found in Psalms 78:12-32, in which it is said that they had their desires and were satisfied, but those desires brought destruction to them.

This gospel recalls the pilgrimage of the Israelites when they rebelled against God's provisions for them. They got their desires and were gorged until they were sick.

How true is this gospel with us and our desires! Being guided by our desires, we pray to our own hurt, we long for things that become poison, and there seems to be no way to teach us the right way except by disaster. Is there no other way? Yes. Let Jesus be the center of desire. Let the will of Almighty God be the aim and ambition, cost what it will. Such as these have made the world of good what it is today.

Prayer—Our Father, help us to pray as Jesus prayed, "Not my will but thine be done." We believe that this is the only way of happiness and we pray for it with all our souls. Amen.

TUESDAY.

CHRISTIAN REGARD FOR HIGH OFFICE.

"And Paul said, I knew not, brethren, that he was high priest: for it is written, thou shalt not speak evil of a ruler of thy people."—Acts 23:5.

Paul taught reverence for the law and for the office of the law. He went further than that; he taught that the law was of God. We are not too certain in these days that every law is ordained of God, but generally speaking, laws are intended for the ministry of righteousness and justice. So far as that may be true, it is believed that such laws are of God. But even in the miscarriage of justice in the ministry of the law, Paul gives us a Christian example.

He was under examination before the Sanhedrin and the High Priest took exception to his assertion, and bade him be smitten on the mouth. Paul replied, "God shall smite thee, thou whited sepulchre." This was his fiery answer to a base old man. But when he, short of sight, was told that he was addressing a highpriest, he apologized in words that proved his Christian spirit, but which might also be taken as a bitter sarcasm.

What care we may take toward all people in office in our country, and especially the church of the living God, yea, and to all people whom we meet.

Prayer—Supreme Ruler, ordain us to living Christianity under all circumstances. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE LIER-IN-WAIT.

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."—Psalms 23:4.

In the shepherding of sheep, our text is illustrative. We are told that wild animals, death to sheep, lurked in caves in the mountain side ready to spring out on the sheep and take one. The shepherd blocked entrance to all caves that the sheep might pass along unharmed. David says, "So the Lord cares for us."

Extra, eighth chapter, tells us of the Hebrew exiles who being led back to their fathers, returned thanks to God for their escape from the desert bandits.

It is one of the most comforting thoughts in Christ that God delivers His children from insidious foes, if they trust Him.

Prayer—Our Father, we pray Thee to go with us all the way in every day life and bring us safely home at last. Amen.

THURSDAY.

WINTER IS OVER.

"The winter is past; the rain is over and gone."—Solomon 2:11.

Our text is what Californians are saying right now. There has been winter in California. Rains have been abundant and the reservoirs have been filled. All are happy because they know that water will be abundant now for the fruit of the land for several years to come. As we drive through the hills, never was valley and hill greener and the flowers are beginning to paint a blaze of glory in plains and on the hillsides.

The song of Solomon seems truly symbolic and seems all the sweeter in this picture of spring. We may all live in the perpetual spring of the soul. The birds sing for us, the grass grows for us, the trees and flowers leaf out and bloom for us. That is what Christ means to all who receive Him.

Prayer—Our Father, we would receive Thee into our hearts and lives this day. Come Thou wholly in our lives and give us eternal rejoicing. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE DRAWING POWER OF WISDOM.

"All the earth sought the presence of Solomon, to hear his wisdom which God had put in his heart."—I. Kings 10:24.

All the earth does not seek the mere wisdom of man. But when the wisdom of God is embraced in man, man seeks out that wisdom. This wisdom is not always sought in a consciousness that it is of God; but the wisdom of God in man is so powerful, so good, and so desirable, that man seeks it for it satisfies.

How foolish we are, often, to arrogate our own wisdom and goodness to ourselves. One of the greatest needs is that we may recognize that God is the Giver of our wisdom and of everything good about us, and render unto Him our deep gratitude. If we fail to do this, wisdom, goodness, or any other gift, will not be ours very long. Solomon's wisdom departed from him because he departed from God.

Prayer—O Thou Cleanser of souls, the All-Wise and ever living God, make us, Thy children, so true and loyal, that they who know us may know Him also and be saved. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HEALING SUNSHINE.

"Unto you that fear my name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings."—Malachi 4:1-6.

The doctors were a long time in finding out the healing virtue of sunshine. Malachi knew it ages ago. Malachi, ages ago, compared God to a winged sun, scattering health over the world with His cheery rays.

But it is easy to avoid the sunshine. We can always find a gloomy shadow to creep into. We can always stay indoors and pull down the blinds. Many do that with their lives, and so become spiritual invalids.

Let us get out into the flesh, sparkling air, we who fear and love God's name. So shall our days be long in the land, and happy as they are long.

Prayer—O Lord God, save us from needless sorrow. May we not make gloom for ourselves when Thou art making joy. Amen.

THE MIGHTY ARM.

"Thou hast a mighty arm."—Psalm 89:8-13.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

"THE WORLD UPSIDE DOWN."

By REV. JOHN H. KNIGHT,
United Congregational Christian Church, LaGrange, Georgia.

"These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also."—Acts 17:6.

When God established the Christian Gospel through the person and work of our Lord Jesus Christ, He liberated forces which had within them sufficient power to revolutionize the world.

The early Christians startled the complacent and easy-going oriental world by their message of a Gospel that had power. An extraordinary thing, this. These new religionists had found a religion that worked! And orientals do not like to have their sensibilities shocked by that which might be too practical.

These early Christians proclaimed uncompromisingly a Gospel that was 'the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth.' But, ah, was this not dangerous doctrine? Was not salvation of the Jews? Had not Judaism maintained the integrity of the Jewish people? And now here were these 'Christ's Ones' who taught that God included all peoples—Jew and Gentile alike, in magnanimity and love.

It was no wonder that the grey-beards of Thessalonica feared the inroads of the Christian gospel. Would not such a dynamic message uncover their sin, reveal their malpractice, overthrow their religiosity? Why should they welcome a message that would destroy their profits, disrupt their society, and demolish the very works of the devil—and their works with it?

And changed lives? Yes, they had seen Cephas become Peter, and Saul become Paul, and fishermen become prophets, all under the uncanny workings of some mysterious power that seemed to be connected with the name of Christ.

So the grey-beards were afraid. They did not want to change their way of living. They did not want to discard their traditional method of thinking. They did not want to vary the existing order of things. Thessalonica had been going along very pleasantly and nicely, everything decently and in order, sedate and dignified. "Now we've got to put up with a group of radicals who are intent on upsetting the apple-cart. Yes, they did it over in Asia Minor and these that have turned the world upside down are come hither also." So fumed the grey-beards of Thessalonica.

The world upside down! This is exactly what the early disciples of our Lord did with their apostolic message. With a feeling of divine sanction they produced turbulence where once there had been a deadening peace. It is true that there is something inherently radical about the Gospel. The Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ is at once disconcerting, tranquilizing in its effect upon the human soul. In our condition of egotism, self-sufficiency and sin, the Gospel irritates and antagonizes the soul. But equally, in our condition of neediness, conviction, and contrition, the same Gospel which once antagonized, now brings peace and poise. Such is the wisdom of God and the power of Jesus Christ.

The world upside down! Yes, Jesus had Himself been guilty of preaching this awful radicalism. And it was His Spirit that was responsible for the turmoil that day at Thessalonica. No doubt the sleepy, dusty, little city needed to be shocked into an awakening. But to think that it should be accomplished with disorder and in the name of religion.

But these fervent disciples of our Lord believed with conviction that they were doing the work of Him who sent them. Had not their Blessed Lord said, "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I am not come to send peace, but a sword," as well as, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you." They knew the Divine secret that before the Gospel can heal, it must first wound, before the Word can direct, it must cut deep, before the Spirit can regenerate, He must convict.

The world upside down! Disruption of human affairs as well as the organization of a new society. Destruction as well as construction. War as well as peace. Jesus was never an absolute pacifist. Absolute pacifism, viewed from the vantage-point of Christian philosophy can only be illogical and untenable. Jesus was not a 'peace at any price' man. He was the world's supreme realist.

Even the idealistic and well meaning pacifists of former years have realized the sheer impossibility of their position. Ethiopia violated! Spain sacked! Liberia to be invaded! Where is your pacifism now man, when helpless women and children are blown to bits? Where is your pacifism now, man, when auto-cracy and tyranny rear their ugly heads? Where is your pacifism now, man, when each unfolding hour forges new links in the chain of hatreds that fetters the human race?

Right is right and wrong is wrong. There is no justification for injustice. Even well planned propaganda fails to convince us that black is white.

No, Jesus was a warrior. He vowed the total destruction of all sin and iniquity. He declared Himself to be at all times at absolute variance with wrong-doing. He committed Himself every time to the defense of the right. He pledged Himself to destroy the works of the devil.

There is a time for war—for war against the forces of sin, prejudice and intolerance. There is a time for war against the diseases that ravage body, mind and spirit. There is a time for war against the demoniacal powers hell has let loose upon earth.

And the times of this conflict shall not end until every manifestation of evil shall be done away, or until the dispensation of grace shall close.

So as Christians, we must go on in the honorable tradition of the Apostolic Church—upsetting the world. May worldlings say of the Christians of today and tomorrow, "These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also."

FAMILY ALTAR.

How fine it is to have magnificently developed muscles! How splendid it is to be able to lift heavy weights, to push great obstacles out of the way, to do a wonderful day's work! No wonder that men crowd around athletes, gather to watch them, and applaud their performances.

But all the arms of all the athletes that ever lived are less than the arm of God. That arm thrust the worlds out into their orbits. That arm upholds the suns. That arm reaches out into the bounds of the universe and maintains the cosmos. How vast and marvelous is the arm of God!

And to think that that arm is at our service! To think that it will ward off our foes, lift us over every obstacle, and raise us to the heights of heaven!

Prayer—How grateful are we, O God, that Thy mighty arm is underneath us, upholding us through all our lives. Amen.

In Memoriam

TOPPING.

Mr. C. L. Topping, a member of the First Congregational-Christian Church of Newport News, Va., died suddenly while at his work on Tuesday afternoon, March 2, 1937. He was a Christian, intrested in the welfare of his church, which he served as a deacon and as a teacher in the Junior Department of the Sunday school. When his church called, he answered. When God called, he was ready. The funeral was conducted by the writer.

JESSE H. DOLLAR.

STROOP.

James Edward Stroop, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Stroop near Woods Chapel Community, departed this life March 29, 1937. God, in His infinite wisdom saw fit to take from this earth the bud before the flower had fully opened, knowing there was need of another to join the angel band. May God bless the parents in their loss. The best things are none too good for the Master. Like a gatherer of flowers, He seeks the best to adorn the mansions against the time of the coming of the bridegroom.

The funeral services were in charge of the writer in the absence of Rev. R. L. Williamson, pastor of Woods Chapel.

R. D. COULTER.

RUDD.

Albert Oscar Rudd died in his sixty-eighth year at Long's Hospital, Greensboro, on March 24, 1937. He was a life long resident of the Monticello Community and a member of the Monticello Christian Church. He is survived by his wife, four daughters: Mary Rudd Turner, Grace Rudd Mitchell, Tora Rudd, and Nell Rudd, and three sons: Dr. P. D. Rudd, Fred Rudd, and Norman Rudd. Two sisters and a brother also survive the deceased. The funeral services were conducted from his late residence and Rev. E. J. Sanderson was in charge, assisted by Rev. J. L. Trollinger, and the writer. He was a devoted husband, a loving father, and a good neighbor and a friend to all. To know him was to love him and he shall be sadly missed by those who loved him. May God bless and comfort the bereaved.

F. ERVIN HYDE.

HOLLAND.

Mrs. Mary Louise Holland, age 92, passed to her reward on Saturday night, March 20, at 11:15. "Grandma," as she was widely known, was a charter member of the North End Christian Church, now the First Congregational-Christian Church of Newport News, Va. Though frail in body for several years, she never lost interest in her church. It was a benediction to know her and serve her as pastor in her last days. She lifted the first dirt for the foundation of our new church building. She leaves one daughter, Mrs. J. F. Roundtree; a son, C. E. Holland, both of this city, and a son, Claud Holland, of Suffolk, Va. A number of grand-children and great-grand-children also survive her. A saint has gone to rest. Her works do follow her. Blessed is her memory.

Dr. N. G. Newman, of Holland, Va., her first pastor here, and Rev. R. L. House, her immediate former pastor, assisted the writer in the funeral services, which were conducted from the church she loved.

JESSE H. DOLLAR.

NEWMAN.

Our entire community was saddened when on March 2nd God saw fit to call from our midst Mrs. E. M. Newman, wife of the Chairman of our board of deacons of Liberty Christian Church. She had been in declining health for a number of years, but was confined to herbed for only a few hours. In her going we, the members of the Ladies' Bible Class, realize that we have lost one of our most devoted and loyal members. She was not known for her much speaking in public, but in a quiet, humble way she went about doing good.

Her devotion to her church could not be excelled, as she always attended the worship service, the Sunday Schol, the Woman's Missionary meetings, or any other service in her church. She freely gave of her time, her money, and her comfort and cheer to the sick, always visiting them, carrying food, or flowers to help them. She was ever ready to do what she could and was busily engaged in the various activities of life.

She has fought a good fight, she has kept the faith, her labor and toil are over—Therefore there remaineth a rest for the children of God."

We realize that her place is vacant and cannot be filled, and that we should strive the more earnestly to carry on the work she lover so well. Her presence was always an inspiration to our class and may her loyalty inspire each of us to press on toward the mark of the hih calling in Christ Jesus.

As classmates, we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well. We pray His blessings upon the bereaved ones and ask Him to lead and direct us into greater service for Him.

O, how we miss her! And may the parting be temporary and the meeting eternal in a home not made with hands eternal in the Heaven.

MRS. R. J. NEWTON.

to know what kind of churches and schools are in the community.

The community is like a great family, and each person in it should feel that it is important. Each person has a responsibility for the things done in the community. If a spiritual life is weak, it should be nourished that it may develop. Since there are no others but the local people to do this work, all must share the task together.

Each member of the community should be led to see his relationship to the people about him and to stimulate an interest in others. As the community is examined, see if there are things which should be improved or removed. It may be that someone should introduce an interest that will put a new spirit into those who live in the community.

As a worker for Christ, make the people who live within reach of your church feel that the church was established for them.

For Discussion—

1. What relationship should the church have to all community life?

2. Who are the ones to make Christian principles a part of the community life?

3. Discuss some way in which Christians can work, together for the improvement of community life.

Suggested Hymns—

"Work, For the Night Is Coming," "Help Somebody Today," "Helpers of Jesus."

Plans are under way for a summer school of leadership training at Franklinton Christian College, June 28th through July 2nd. For some years Franklinton has been closed, but last year there was a summer school which seemed to please our Negro friends very much. Rev. E. C. Lawrence of Raleigh has been chosen as general manager, and Rev. R. L. House of Portsmouth, Va., is to be the dean. Other officers, teachers, and courses have been chosen and will be announced later after the persons have been consulted concerning the work.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

"Do not forget that even as 'to work is to worship,' so to be cheery is to worship also; and to be happy is the first step to being pious."

If your church has not reached its quota for Elon College and Missions, it is not too late to do something about it. Why not use the next two months in which to work hard for these two good causes.

The missionary rallies in Eastern Virginia were well attended and there were fine programs at each. Detailed reports will be given this week and later. The editor enjoyed being in each rally.

The first meeting of deacons in Eastern Virginia Conference was largely attended last Sunday at Suffolk. The program was excellent, and the deacons were in favor of meeting once or twice each year.

Both the editor and the printer expect to be in Florida next week, but there will be a paper just the same. If some material seems to be a bit slow in getting into the paper, just be patient. It will come later, no doubt.

The office of the Board of Christian Education and THE CHRISTIAN SUN are now at 514 South Main Street, Norfolk, Virginia, rather than at 505 as heretofore. The change became necessary to get larger office space than the church could afford.

Springtime is the beauty season, the growing, the flowering season of the year. It is the time of happiness and hope. Then is the time for the church to work with extra effort for its forward movement. Watch the churches grow into things of beauty as you work for the Master.

If you know someone who needs a New Testament or Bible, who is not able to buy it, just write to the Board of Christian Education at 514 South Main St., Norfolk, Va., telling how many you can place to advantage, and the books will come at once. The Board also stands ready to help with all phases of your religious educational work. Call on them.

Practically every church in Eastern Virginia is busy getting subscriptions for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Several have reached their quota. Only one preacher has not yet been heard from, and it is expected that he will get his church lined up. Other Conferences are also busy. This gives courage to those who work day and night that there may be a paper. We can get a paper into the homes, and the homes and churches will be the better because of it. Now is the time to work while the introductory offer of $1.50 lasts.

BEREA (NORFOLK).

I read in THE CHRISTIAN SUN recently where Rev. Calvin J. Felton spoke of what a pleasure it was to him to read the news from the churches of his denomination, but seemingly how unwilling were most pastors in giving the news of their churches. As I read this I thought of my own pastor as belonging to that list. Thursday night, April 1st, we held our second church conference for the present year. Rev. French, our pastor, read his quarterly report and then handed it over to me, I being Secretary. Well, I don't know what he is going to think or say about me for what I am going to do, but here goes some of the things in that report. He stated that he urged the use of "The Fellowship of Prayer" during Lent; and that the development of the spiritual life of the Church is to be fostered still in the use of a devotional booklet, known as "The Upper Room." Also he is going to make use of the period from Easter to Pentecost in the hope that Pentecost Sunday may be a season of great spiritual uplift for his parishioners; and again, he has just finished a series of sermons on, "What can a Man Believe?" He further stated that the Lenten season was marked by two fine messages brought by Dr. James R. Clinton of Philadelphia. These sermons from what I could learn were very helpful, encouraging and inspiring. In combining the whole category of good things achieved, he and his people reached the acme, or climax on Friday night of Holy Week, in having a very sweet Communion service.

Now reader, don't you think a pastor ought to be willing to write up such a combination of good things for us poor mortals to read?

LOOKING BACK.

Passion Week with its tense anxiety and Easter with its jubilant exultation have passed. From now until Ascension Day in May, a multitude of questions will flit through our minds concerning the Risen Lord, and many times over shall come Job's question, "If a man die shall he live again?" There will be many whose faith will lead them to believe that when life on earth shall be no more, their spirits shall live on "in the mind of the Infinite, where the memory of its life endures eternally. Such a hope as this must be of a necessity be speculative and imaginative; but there is a type of immortality that does not require faith to believe in it. It is the immortality of influence.

I have been thinking of immortality because I have been thinking of Elon College. Or, it may be that I verse—and I cannot fail! Hundreds of teachers, doctors, lawyers, and ministers that have graduated from Elon College join me in this declaration and determination.

Do you desire eternal life? Then join the Waits, the Palmers, the Carltons, the Wellons, the Newmans, the Smiths—and time would fail me if I told of the others—who have invested in the welfare of immortal lives. Dr. Albert Palmer recently said: "Money, while it has many other values, may find its greatest significance as an extension of ourselves and of our influence." Dr. Jay T. Stocking just before his death wrote, "What a man carries away from this earth depends upon how he has invested himself and his money." Jesus Christ said: "Whosoever loses his life for me shall find it."

have been thinking of Elon College because I have been thinking of immortality. It has been almost a year since I left Elon. I am wondering how I got through. And wonder of wonders, how I ever got to seminary. Yet, is it such a wonder? Was it not because someone dared to live? Professors who gave and gave when it hurt, a President who laid all on the altar of sacrifice, men and women of the Christiian Church who gave dollars and pennies for a cause in which they believed. Shall they die? Never! Not while day and night shall last. Effort and time and money that have been spent in shaping destinies, giving courage, building hope, and making a "New World" will never pass away. Someone gave up cherished plans that I might realize the value of a college education, someone gave precious time and energy to instill in me a Christian philosophy of life; someone went hungry to help me find my place in God's great Uni-

ELON DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

This week we congratulate Mt. Auburn Christian Church for going far beyond its quota. In this church we see a real example of the Elon College spirit prevailing. In the words of our College President, "It can be done." Before this article comes out in print there will be, I am sure, at least six other churches over. They are just about over now and the committee expects to visit them the week before and the week after Easter and complete their quota.

"THEIR HAPPY CONDITION."

"Leave people alone in their happy condition; don't worry them with all the bothers of civilization." I have heard that a good many time as an objection to missions. Where are illiterate people in this happy condition? I have never seen any. They are sick and hungry and afraid. Instead of having a God they can love and trust, they put up their little altars because they are frightened by unseen spirits, especially of their own worst ancestors. They are in a hell of terror all their lives, in terror of dangers real and dangers imaginary. They are a frightened little people. I don't know any more ignorant saying than. "Leave them alone in their happy state." They haven't any happy state.

Do you realize, friends, that over a thousand million people on this planet are so ignorant that they cannot read a line, that in Africa at least 99 per cent of the people cannot read nor write; in India 340 millions; in China even more than that. The illiterate, because he is so ignorant, is sick. He doesn't know how to cope with his diseases. He uses the medicine man. He is hungry because he cannot cope with the insects that destroy his crops. But, worst of all, he is afraid of progress. He must be. It is the law of self-preservation. When you don't know a thing, you have to be afraid of it, and when you don't know anything, you have to be afraid of everything. The only thing right is what your ancestors did.—Dr. Frank C. Lauback.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

Before the next issue of this paper comes from the press the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches will be in session. This may be the dawning of a new day for our Church work in the southeast. History sometimes turns on a very small pivot. Light from a small point may illumine a large area. Inspiration in the heart of one person may reach out to multitudes and inspire them to noble living.

It is the hope of those who sponsor the Southeast Convention that Congregational and Christian men and women shall meet in convention to consider problems which face our churches, and seek the way of greater usefulness by counseling with each other, listening to those who have gone farther along the way, and seeking for the divine leadership which we so sorely need. One of our preachers recently well said that deacons may make their largest contribution by meeting for prayer when there seems to be nothing else demanding their attention. This is true not only of deacons, but of their leaders as well, and particularly of those who hold official positions in our churches, conferences and conventions.

Members of the Southern Convention have become accustomed to the transaction of business. We want to be in conference and convention in those sessions when business is being transacted. Sometimes we forget the weightier matters of goals, ideals and the cultivation of souls. Business is important, but so is fellowship and inspiration. The Southeast Convention seeks to bring together leaders from all this area to consider our mutual problems, to gain from each other helpful ideas, and to seek in a friendly way the divine guidance for our forward movement in a new day. Congregationalists and Christians will do well to make the most of this opportunity for widening horizons, increasing friendships, getting new knowledge of the Christian world, and of finding the inspiration which will keep them steady at their tasks through the months and years to come.

THE SOUTHEAST YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

Young people in the Southeast are organized into what they call a Fellowship. They are definitely seeking to build up friendships among leaders of young people throughout the Southeast, and especially in the various conferences. If they can know each other, know the plans and programs of other churches and conferences, if they can counsel together concerning united work, they feel sure that in such unity there is strength, and out of this cooperative work will come new men and women for the new day.

Their session for business will be Wednesday afternoon, April 21st, with a banquet and evening program of inspiration. It is very important that leaders and prospective leaders from every section of the Southeast be in this meeting. It may cost money for them to be there, and it may mean inconveniences otherwise, but the new vision of a Christian world growing out of the conflict of our time will be worth far more than the cost. Pastors and leaders of local churches may well take to heart the responsibility of getting their young people into this united on-going, growing young people's department of our Church in the Southeast.

SOMETHING NEW.

A meeting of the deacons of the Eastern Virginia Conference was held at Suffolk Christian Church Sunday afternoon, April 11th. There were present 111 deacons and four deaconesses from fourteen churches, seventeen ministers, and five visitors. Dr. N. G. Newman presided. Rev. J. F. Morgan conducted the song service and Dr. Elwood W. Jones read Acts 6: 1-8, and offered prayer.

Dr. J. G. Truitt delivered an address on "The Deacon and the Pastor," followed by Rev. R. L. House on "The Deacon and the Church." A "Round Table" discussion was led by Dr. N. G. Newman, in which the following questions were discussed. "What Should Be the Relation of the Deacon to Delinquent and Immoral Members?" "How should the Deacon Deal With Personal Differences In the Local Church?" "Should Deacons Hold Regular Meetings?" If so, "What Should Be the Method of Procedure?" "Should Deacons Make a Formal Report To Every Quarterly Conference?" If so, "How Should Such a Report Be Made?" "How Should the Local Church Proceed In the Choice and Election of Deacons?" "Should Deacons Be Elected For Life or For a Limited Time?" These questions were freely and frankly discussed by a large number, different ideas were presented, and the different customs of the churches given. The spirit of the meeting was fine and a sincere desire and purpose to understand the duties and improve the efficiency of the office of the deacon was manifest. A unanimous desire was expressed to have another such meeting.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There is an evidence of a growing interest in the cause of missions. In part, this is due to the fact that the scope of this work is constantly widening. In the first stages of the development of this work, the emphasis was laid upon the raising of money. That emphasis has not been lessened, in any degree, but extended to the fields of education and spiritual inspiration. The study of mission fields and the development of the spiritual life are now coextensive with the raising of money to support the work. Consequently, the ever broadening field attracts and interests a greater number of people, and intensifies the spiritual blessings of the missionary cause.

The Spring Rally for the Nansemond-Gates and Franklin District, held at Liberty Spring Church, Wednesday, April 7th, was well attended. The program was well prepared and adapted to the tastes and needs of the large audience assembled. About two hundred and fifty people attended this Rally. Rev. L. H. Lancaster, a missionary to China, under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church, was one of the speakers on the program. He gave much information concerning the work in China. An interesting address, written by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, and read by Mrs. John G. Truitt, touched a responsive chord in the minds and hearts of the delegates and visitors. The worship services conducted by Mrs. Hendrix Jones and Mrs. A. B. Jarvis lifted the hearers to a higher plane of Christian thought and spiritual living. All the other features of the day were upon the same high spiritual plane. Mrs. John King, the President, carefully planned a well rounded program, and set a high standard for others to follow in emphasizing the spiritual life, as the central objective to be reached and given to others.

When the church can realize that the real objective in missions is not money, but spiritual life for the church and the unsaved, great advancement will be possible for the cause of Christ at home—and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. Missionary books, when carefully read and studied, create a new interest in the people of the foreign field. Those who are studying the missionary books for this year are compelled to have a broader view and a new interest in the people of Africa as well as the colored people of America. It is unfortunate that the study of this particular field becomes the occasion for some of the radical racial attitudes to find expression, both in the class room and in the literature concerning Africa and America. We should be able to study any race, or any country, with an unbiased mind, and with unprejudiced conclusions and applications of the lessons in hand. The real objective, in this case, is a more intimate knowledge of the people and not the exploitation of some pet theory of social equality, or racial inequality. We need truth—historic and spiritual truth—and these other questions may wait for later discussion and solution.

The spiritual emphasis is the final basis of hope for the missionary cause. Social service, social teaching, racial and economic revolution—no one of these specific phases can form the final basis of appeal and adventure. These topics will change with the fickle-minded enthusiasts of superficial exploitation. But when we face the fact that the work is ordained of God, as the ultimate opportunity for service to Him and the people of the earth, the church finds a foundation for continuing the work under the commission of our Lord Jesus Christ.

THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

In our churches in the South and East we have different church organizations. Aside from the local church, we have our conferences and conventions. The Southern Convention of Congregational-Christian Churches is constituted by the Congregational and Christian churches located in the states of Virginia and North Carolina. In this area we have five separate conferences. These conferences meet annually for business and inspirational purposes. These five conferences constitute the Southern Convention of Congregational and Christian churches. This Convention meets biennially for the purpose of receiving reports, setting goals, formulating plans, and otherwise providing for the organization of the Convention as a whole.

With the merger of the Congregational and Christian churches came a new organization, namely, the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. This is a more inclusive body; it embraces the territory of the Southern Convention and additional states in the Southeast including Tennessee and Florida. The churches constituting this convention have a total membership of more than sixty thousand and the property value runs into the millions.

The possibilities of this organization are unlimited. This Convention meets biennially, alternating with the meeting of the Southern Convention, for instructional and inspirational purposes. It is not a business organization, but exists for the purpose of planning for and inspiring its constituency.

This Convention meets this year in Jacksonville, Florida, April 20th to 23rd. Every church in the Southeast is invited and urged to have a good delegation present. There are no limitations on the attendance. Any local church may have as many members in attendance as it likes. This is the first time that the Southeast Convention has gone to the far South for its biennial session. It is hoped sincerely that all churches at a distance may have representatives present for this session. This is a splendid opportunity for all who wish a trip to Florida.

The committee in charge has arranged a very attractive program. In addition to many speakers from the Convention itself, there are to be a number of guest speakers. Dr. William F. Frazier, Executive Vice-President of the Board of Home Missions, a new office with great responsibilities, will be present. Dr. Frazier is a very capable executive and a fascinating speaker. He will bring a worthwhile message. Dean Vaughan Dabney of the Andover-Newton Theological Seminary, Hartford, Connecticut, President Judson L. Cross of Tougaloo College, Dr. Arthur Raper of Agnes Scott College, and others will be present.

The Jacksonville Church is to serve as host for the Convention and will provide as far as possible entertainment on the Harvard plan for those who come at a distance. When these accommodations are exhausted, rooms may be had from $0.75 up per person.

This is to urge our constituency to begin now to plan to attend this session of our Southeast Convention.

"DEBBIE, THINK O' DYIN' "

A very prominent minister took occasion to write in a quarterly on religion recently what amounts to poking a bit of irony at "the remark of a Down East woman when her daughter er was leaving home for the first time: "Be a good girl, Debbie, and think o' dyin'." I wish to defend this "Down East woman," although from her beautiful, and sound advice which she gave her daughter I would think she needed no defense of mine. But since her antagonist is the pastor of a church with nearly thirteen hundred members, and has been the pastor of that church for more than twenty years, and since he is a graduate of Dartmouth College, and of Union Theological Seminary, and the distinguished author of three volumes of sermons to boys and girls, it would seem that a jab from him at the mother of Debbie might knock her off of her feet.

I do not know the significance of the phrase "Down East woman," that is, I do not know the meaning of the words but not the significance of just the way in which they are used, but I dare say that she was a dear mother, and that Debbie loved her. I just feel that she was pouring out the very passion of her heart when she took Debbie, her dear little girl, who had not so long ago been her baby, and said, as she was telling her goodbye, "Be a good girl, Debbie, and think o' dyin'." I have one little daughter whose mother is in Heaven, and I hope that that little girl will be good, and that occasionally she will stop long enough to think of that beautiful life beyond. I know she does, for she is indeed a good girl, and she does think about the life hereafter. It does not make her morbid, not mar her happiness, for she is gay and happy just like a little girl of eleven years should be. I have another little girl, and I think nothing could be nobler than that she accept the advice of Debbie's mother, namely, to be a good girl, and think of dying.

When we are children we should think as children, gay, and bright, and beautiful, about eternity, and things eternal. We may wish we could shield our children from thinking about dying but long before they become as old as Debbie, and are starting out on life's ventures, they will stand in the midst of death. How many children I have seen suffer the coming into their homes of the death angel and their questioning minds will not overlook some thought about death. Already this week have I seen a group of boys ten years of age, acting as pall bearers for a child, and before the week is over dozens of little folks will follow an old Negro school janitor to his grave. These white children will lay flowers on his grave, and shed a bright tear for the one whom they loved. And there is the little girl burned to death on Christmas Day, and another little girl instantly killed in the street. I think it was fine for Debbie's mother and Debbie to have some serious thinking along the line of life which can and does have an ending on earth, and a beginning elsewhere. And especially since Debbie was a grown young woman stepping out into life.

Yes, Debbie, do by all means think of dying. Our highways are fraught with danger and all too tragically often with death. And in so many ways you may meet the end. Let a serious thought come into your pretty head, Debbie, and may God bless you with long, and ever enlarging life, so than you may be able to say at the end, "I have kept the other part of my dear, 'old-Down-East-woman mother's advice, too.'" The thought of eternity, and God, and the "many mansions" will help you to be not only "a good girl," but really good for something and thoroughly capable of passing on by your own beautiful life sound advice to a little girl whom you may hold in your arms someday and say, "Be a good girl, Debbie, and think o' dyin'."

THE LORD WILL PROVIDE.

In this day of depression, few of us have the nerve to even read where it says: "The Lord will provide," or, "Let not your hearts be troubled." This spring I was facing clouds of doubt and fear. My father and mother are almost eighty years of age and we depend upon a run-down mountain farm for our living. I had tried and failed to get a doctor to say that I am fit to hold down a job. Then I thought of going away where the doctor's didn't know me and see if I could not get some work I could do, so I have answered ads in papers from California to New York, only to find that no place wanted me. However, I didn't think our pastor's wife knew about it all. But that lady has eyes and ears that see and hear more than the whispering of the breeze on these mountains.

Yesterday our pastor, O. A. Elmore, drove up here with a new cook stove for us. The surprise was complete all right. I always ask silly questions so I wanted to know where it came from. He said from the Hopedale and Carolina Christian Churches and the Elmores. But I have one more question—How did Hopedale and Carolina know my mother's stove had almost no bottom in it? Oh well, it is springtime and the birds are flying about. Maybe they tell things. Anyway, if you folks will come up this summer, we will try to have the old mountain dish—chicken and dumplin'. It will be cooked "plum" good now.

In all sincerity, you who have the love of God in your hearts, have made this Easter a more happy one for us, and I can never thank you all I want to. It means more than you know about to us. You have taught me that truly, "The Lord Will Provide."

It was folks like these who made the Christian Church in the beginning, and the same kind who must still carry on. May God bless you, and may He help me to be enough, and do enough, that you can always be glad that you helped me. I hope to live my thanks and not just say, "I thank you."

And the next time the clouds hang low above blue peaks, and the future looks dark as night, I shall remember—"The Lord does provide."

Now blue spirals of smoke rise from the stove in a windowless log kitchen on the crest of the mountains; the dove calls softly over the hill, and the breeze is sweet and low. I am looking forward to summer when I hope you people of the outside world can visit our hills.

When the rhododendron drops her soft petals by the old mountain trail, hills are worth seeing. Come up.

And now I send my love to all my unknown friends out there.

Gratefully,

PALMYRA REVIVAL.

The meeting at Palmyra is a success. Many have come into the church by profession of faith. Others have come for a refilling of the spirit. The people voted to run the meeting another week, carrying it into the third week. We will continue as long as they want the meeting. The good people have placed good things to eat in our car every night since the start of the meeting. Our pantry, which formerly looked like that of old Mother Hubbard's, is about full now. We have never experienced such kindness and good will. The people of Palmyra have a mind to work. We firmly believe that the church as a whole is in better shape than ever before. The Woman's Missionary Society, organized by the pastor a few weeks ago, is getting off to a good start. The president, Mrs. Shirley Oliphant, is a good leader and is always busy doing something good. She will make it a success. We beg the prayers of all Christians for the success of the work here in the Valley Churches.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

OBJECTIONS BASED ON IGNORANCE AND PREJUDICE.

The two great foes of mankind are ignorance and prejudice. Out of one comes our mistakes; out of the other comes our sins. The two are closely allied, if not fundamentally identical. Some at least, but not all, would do better if they knew better. Some know better than they do, but prejudice prevails and sin enters. It has been said that prejudice is the thing that begins where information leaves off. It is blind. These two great foes to mankind are the real enemies of missions. Many are ignorant of mission work and are ready to criticize; some are prejudiced and simply do not care to know the facts, even for their own benefit. If testimony would avail, no cause on earth would prosper and flourish like the missionary enterprise, for those in position to judge have declared, and do declare, that no enterprise known to man is as worthy and brings as much for the dollar invested as missions. William Boyd, advertising manager, Curtis Publishing Company, declares even from a business point of view: "I believe that every dollar invested in foreign missions has produced greater returns than any dollar invested in any human enterprise." The only mistake Mr. Boyd made was in calling it a "human enterprise." It is not; it is a divine enterprise, instituted by our Lord and carried on by His most emphatic command. Money invested in missions becomes immortal because it is invested in the salvation of souls through Jesus Christ, Who is Himself responsible for missions and established missions that He might have coworkers with Him here on earth. The governor of Bengal gives his testimony: "In my judgment, Christian missions have done more lasting good to the people of India than all other agencies combined." Alexander Powell, author and traveler, says: "I have observed the results of their labors in every great field of evangelistic endeavor, and it angers me to hear missionaries and their work condemned." Ex-President Taft, a Unitarian by faith, as governor of the Philippines could not praise too highly the work of the missionary in those islands. Charles Darwin, teacher of evolution, said after revisiting the Indians of Tierra del Fuego: "I certainly should have predicted that not all the missionaries in the world could have done what has been done." And because of this observation he began his contribution to foreign missions which he kept up as long as he lived, because of their achievement in human uplift.

From ignorance and prejudice, we can easily predict failure, or lack of growth that are in home missionary churches and enterprises. We plant a church, or begin a missionary undertaking in the home field, and immediately there are those ready to criticize and to say the mission money could have been better spent at some other place. As long as any divine enterprise must depend upon human agencies to carry it on, there will be criticism and objections.

Through our missionary enterprise we are seeking to build churches; to win souls to Christ; to preach Jesus Christ and Him crucified. We are not ashamed of the Gospel and the one object of missions is to preach the Gospel and to reach souls through belief in Him and in His Power to save. Only the missionary church is the going, growing, glowing church.

A STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE.

When Mrs. Harris asked me to write a news item about the Silver Anniversary, for THE CHRISTIAN SUN of the week of April 11th, she said for me to select any phase I wished.

So I am suggesting "A Standard of Excellence."

Women, Young People and Juniors who are members of Missionary Societies, know what A Standard of Excellence means. We have that to work by, the whole year through.

This year, the Women have ten points on the Standard of Excellence, and the Young People and Juniors have eight points. Our big aim is to carry out the desires of our Board, and do each of these tasks. And so, it seems to me, that for our Silver Anniversary, on May 13th, at Suffolk, Virginia, our Standard of Excellence should have three points, as our aim:

1st, That there be, at least, one representative from each church in the Southern Convention, that has organized Missionary Work.

2nd, That those representatives should be in Suffolk, and at church, at two-thirty, for the opening service, and stay until the close.

3rd, That they bring checks averaging $1.00, for each member of the Woman's Societies, 50 cents, for each member of the Young People's Societies, 25 cents, for each member of the Junior Societies, and 10 cents for each member of the Cradle Roll Societies.

If we remember we are doing this for our Risen Lord, and to try to do some worthy thing in Dr. Staley's memory, it will be a great joy.

DURHAM SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

The Durham Congregational Christian Church celebrated the Silver Anniversary of the Southern Convention of the Woman's Missionary Society and the Twenty-first Anniversary of the Woman's Auxiliary of the local church, Sunday evening, March 7, 1937.

The beautiful Call to Worship and Responsive Readings were led by the President, Mrs. R. J. Kernodle. During the period of announcements, Mrs. A. C. Linthicum very impressively acquainted the congregation with the plans for the Silver Anniversary in Suffolk on May 13th and the Staley Mission Memorial. She also presented the Silver Anniversary Autograph Book. Durham hopes to send a full delegation to the Suffolk meeting with a dollar for each adult member, fifty cents for each young person, twenty-five cents for each junior and ten cents for Cradle Roll members.

The music was very appropriate and beautifully rendered. Mrs. J. E. Harward and Mrs. W. H. Elder presented historic sketches which were well prepared and inspiring. Of especial interest to local members was the fact that the present beloved and faithful president was the first president of the Durham Society. To work faithfully for a short time is well, but to devote one's life to untiring service and growing strength is a happiness indeed. One of the greatest blessings the Durham Church enjoys is the fellowship of cooperation kindled and nurtured by such great souls.

The candle lighting service was especially impressive, showing as it did how the spirit of sharing extends throughout the church, from God the Father to the humblest of Christ's followers. When the church lights had been dimmed, to the strains of twilight music the reader approached a very tall Trinity Candelabrum and read: "The True Scope of our Missionary Strength, the Holy Trinity." She then lighted the three tall white candles, representing Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. As she read the various organizations and personifications listed on the program, representative persons came to the platform and lighted their candles, each from the preceeding one, until the persons representing "Phases of Christian Living" came. "Study" lighted from the candle representing God the Father, "Prayer" from the Holy Spirit, "Service" from Christ the Son.

The candles remained lighted all through the prayer and Benediction. The women rejoiced in singing: "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," as they felt all persons present realized at this time that every organization of the Church Universal is striving toward the one single goal: to set the Light of Christ aflame throughout the whole wide world.

Mrs. S. C. HARRELL.

DRY RUN MISSION SOCIETY.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Dry Run Congregational-Christian Church met Thursday, April 1, 1937, at the home of Mrs. Will Cullers of Seven Fountains, Virginia. The Society, as the custom is, met in the morning. The ladies were busy all the morning making articles to be sold, the proceeds to go for Missions. At noon a delicious luncheon was served by Mrs. Will Cullers. It was a great day for all who were fortunate enough to be present. In the afternoon there was a fine program led by Mrs. William Burke. Several members were on the program for songs, readings, poetry. Prayer was made for the success of the meeting and its future for missions by the pastor.

Honor guests included: Mrs. Holder of Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Holt of New Market, Virginia, who went along with the pastor and wife.

Those who have never had the happy experience of attending a missionary meeting of the Dry Run Christian Church have missed something wonderful in this life. The pastor has never experienced anything so pleasant, so entertaining, so instructive, so delightful as one of the Missionary Meetings of Dry Run Congregational Christian Church.

OAKLAND.

The Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Oakland Christian Church held an Easter worship and candle-light service Sunday evening at 7:30. The following program was presented:

Duet—"Were You There When They Crucified My Lord?" by Misses Frances Harrell and Elsie Darden. Reading—"A Psalm of Life," Mrs. R. W. Bradshaw.

Music—"Funeral March," Mrs. I. W. Johnson.

Scripture—John 20, Mrs. W. K. Wagner.

Solo—"Come Ye Disconsolate," Miss Elsie Darden.

A Prayer For Courage—Mrs. R. W. Bradshaw.

Address—Dr. I. W. Johnson.

The candlelight service was led by Miss Effie Simpson.

On a table near the front were five unlighted candles, representing the group who planted the seed that has grown into the Oakland Missionary Society, as follows: the pastors who have led them throughout the years; the home missionaries; the foreign missionaries and in the midst a much taller candle representing the Light of the World. The candles were lighted by Mrs. R. W. Bradshaw, Mrs. W. C. Dailey, Mrs. C. T. Pruden, Mrs. E. L. Pruden and Mrs. L. F. Darden.

Mrs. Rosser Bradshaw is the Spiritual Life Superintendent of this Society and it is through her that we get this news item..

ANTIOCH SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

LAST CALL FOR THE SOUTHEAST MEETING.

We hope that you have made final plans to attend the biennial meeting of the Southeast Youth Fellowship, which will meet in Jacksonville, Florida, next Wednesday. We feel sure that you will be amply repaid for going, and we know that you will contribute to the meeting.

With no definite way of knowing just who will be present, it has been difficult to plan a program. However, it is felt that the type of meeting most needed is one where we can get to understand each other and all come to definite conclusions as to what the Southeast Youth Fellowship does mean and should stand for.

In the evening we shall have the privilege of hearing Dr. Raper, of Agnes Scott College, who is an outstanding southern authority on the tenant farm and race question. We are sure that it will be one of the high spots on the program.

Although we have been stressing the Southeast Youth Fellowship meeting, those who arrive in time will also have the opportunity of attending the sessions of the Southeast Convention. With a variety of meetings, outstanding speakers in many fields, and the privilege of fellowship with the leaders of our denomination in the Southeast, it will be indeed a rare opportunity. We hope that all the young people who go to Jacksonville will take advantage of it.

Although Florida has been blessed with rains for the past week or two—a thing which we understand is practically unknown in North Carolina and Virginia—we are hoping to provide plenty of sunshine for you. If the weather fails us, we will do our best to make up for its deficiency!

WINCHESTER.

On Sunday, February 28, 1937, the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational Christian Church of Winchester, Virginia, celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary and had charge of the evening worship service.

Among the enjoyable features of the program were special instrumental numbers by a visiting orchestra, a vocal solo by Miss Gladys Patton, of the United Brethren C. E. Society of Winchester, and a solo by our own little Junior, Miss Betty Sheetz; a talk by the President of the Society, Miss Colleen Hoover, "Echoes of a Quarter of a Century," in which she told how the Society was organized February 26, 1912, and has been in continuous session since that time,—that from the Society had gone out a State C. E. President, two District Presidents, City Union Presidents, as well as other outstanding leaders in Christian Endeavor and church work, that seven members from this group (which was the only delegation from this vicinity known to the writer) attended the Maryland State Christian Endeavor Convention, which was held in Hagerstown, and became personally acquainted with Mother Clark: (a number of the members of this Society with other Endeavorers of Winchester and vicinity also attended the West Virginia State C. E. Convention in Martinsburg, and had the pleasure of seeing and hearing Dr. Daniel A. Poling); and last, but most interesting and inspirational, an address by my Rev. C. W. Caulkins, C. C. C. Chaplain (who was personally acquainted with Dr. and Mrs. Francis E. Clark, and who had the great privilege of attending a summer conference at the Clark's beach cottage). Mr. Caulkins used as his Scriptural theme this verse: "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today, and forever." He stated that we should be proud of the fact that our Society has been in continuous session for a quarter of a century, that we should be proud of its accomplishments and, with this heritage and the challenge of the Christ still in our hearts, should attempt even greater things in His name; that it was in this church, June 17, 1923, the Winchester C. E. City Union was organized.

The various organizations of the Congregational-Christian Church of Winchester, Virginia, have been very active recently. The Ladies' Aid Society has raised and contributed $400 toward the parsonage indebtedness, $50 to the current expense fund of the church, and to other causes; has accepted the responsibility of conducting the campaign for subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN (upon recommendation of the Official Board of the church) and secured seven new subscriptions at the March meeting.

A committee has recently reported that subscriptions have been obtained and paid with which to purchase

THE GOOD CHURCH MEMBER IS WORLD VISIONED.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
APRIL 25, 1937.

SCRIPTURE: Matt. 28:16-20; Jno. 4:35.

No doubt many people live in a world that includes only the immediate family interests or even personal interests with no thought for those whom they do not know. Think how many of the world's fifty-three countries have made the year's headlines for wars or rumors of wars. Is it not time that Christian people were thinking in terms of bringing people everywhere to the Christ of Galilee?

To gain a world-vision we need to read the story in John 4:4-24; followed by John 10:10, and 14-17; John 17:20-26. These passages bring out Jesus' purpose as Christ. The world (and not American people alone) needs the only Savior God has—Christ. It is not the spirit of Christ to want only his own nation to have the Gospel. Jesus completed the task the Father gave Him and left us a program to follow. His commission is: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation." God's plan for unity is not complete until we have told all men of His plan of salvation.

"In Christ there is no east or west,
In Him no north and south,
But one great fellowship of love
Throughout the whole wide earth.

"In Him shall true hearts everywhere
Their true communion find,
His service is the golden cord
Close binding all mankind.

"Join hands, then, brothers of the faith
Where e'er your race may be
Who serves My Father as a son
Is surely kin to me.

"In Christ now meet both east and west,
In Him meet south and north;
All Christly souls are one in Him
Throughout the whole wide earth."

For Discussion—

1. Is my church life limited only to the people I know?
2. Is my society interested in foreigners?
3. Do foreigners have a right to the Gospel?
4. Who is responsible if they do not know Christ as Savior?
5. How may one have a world vision for Christ?

Suggested Hymns—

"We've a Story To Tell To the Nations," "The Whole Wide World For Jesus," "Christ For the World We Sing." S. E. M.

THE EFFECTS OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES.

(The Scientific Approach To the Liquor Problem.)

LESSON III—APRIL 18, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder.—Proverbs 23:32.

LESSON: Genesis 13:13; 19:23-25; Deut. 32:31-33; Proverbs 23:29-32.

"If our country is ever to return to sanity in the matter of drinking, it will be through the dissemination of accurate information. There is no argument for alcohol, and every argument against it, and this is the teacher's opportunity to drive facts home that men may know." Thus does the writer of Peloubet's Notes challenge the teachers of boys and girls, men and women. The new approach to the liquor problem must be an educational one. We must give people the scientific facts. But one feels that it is going to take more than mere facts to win the victory. There is a moral and spiritual issue at stake. The inherent evil in the liquor traffic itself, and the incongruity between drinking and Christian discipleship must be emphasized. One never comes to the basic issue until he approaches the question from this standpoint: "What would Jesus have to say about the modern liquor traffic?" "What suggestion would He make to His followers who asked Him whether they should drink or not drink?" There is a great deal of confusion in the minds of people today at this point. Because a thing is legally permitted does not make it morally right. A man's first obedience is not to the State—Mr. Hitler and Mr. Mussolini to the contrary notwithstanding—but to God. The liquor traffic is to be tested by the mind and spirit of Christ. By that test it stands condemned on every count.

He That Soweth To the Flesh.

It is a grim story which comes to us out of the past from Sodom and Gomorrah. Here were two cities which had sunk to the lowest depths of degradation. Sensuality reigned supreme. All restraint had been unloosed. Sin was rampant. The same laws were operative then as now. Sin when it hath its course, bringeth forth death. "Then Jehovah rained upon Sodom and Gomorrah brimstone and fire from Jehovah out of heaven, and and overthrew those cities,"—it is the stark statement of an abiding principle. Sin brings ruin whether in the life of an individual or of a city or of a nation. He who sows to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption." And the same thing goes for nations. The nation that ministers to the things of the flesh shall inevitably reap what it sows. Our nation cannot indefinitely profit from the traffic. The state of Virginia cannot possibly make any money from selling its citizens alcohol—not in the long run. The same principle applies to licensed prostitution, legalized gambling, etc. There can be no enduring gain apart from the basic qualities of character.

What a Wise Man Said About Drink.

"Who hath woe?" He knew the answer. He knew that drink caused so much of the world's woe then, as it does now. And that woe was the lot not only of the one who drank, but of innocent victims.

"What hath sorrow?" How often men recover from a "drunk" to be filled with shame and sorrow for what they have done, and the wrong they have inflicted upon others. Alas for the sorrow that strong drink causes both to the drinker and to innocent victims.

"Who hath contentions?" How often do those who are peaceable and quiet become contentious and belligerent when they are under the influence of drink. Quarrels, brawls, fights, murders are the fruitage of strong drink.

"Who hath complaining?" Folks are prone to put the blame for their troubles everywhere else except where it belongs. The answer to many a person's ill health, impaired efficiency, loss of position, loss of honor, and breakdown of character is drink.

"Who hath wounds without cause?" How often one becomes involved in fighting when drinking and suffers wounds without cause. And think of the accidents which are due directly and indirectly to drunken driving. Many a person has suffered a life-long handicap because he has been hurt or maimed as a result of drink.

"Who hath redness of eyes?" It may refer simply to the bleary eye of the drinking man. But Sir Victor Horsley, a famous British surgeon says that "acuteness of vision it also weakened. The use of the eyes becomes fatiguing and objects become confused."

The wise man had an answer to these questions in his day. "They that tarry long at the wine, they that go and seek out mixed wine." And his advice is to keep away from the stuff that does these things to men and women. Indeed he suggests that one ought not even to trifle with the temptation—"Look not upon the wine when it is red," he says, There is potential danger and disaster in every drink.

"At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." To be sure it does not do this at first. But at the last—one should try to see the end from the beginning, he should try to see where his course of action will lead him. "What shall the end be?" is a good question to ask as a test of conduct, but especially of the liquor habit. How many men and women have come to the end of the drinker's trail, disillusioned, disenchanted, weary, broken, and ruined in body and soul.

Perhaps it should be said that this is true of alcohol in any century and under any system. Legal liquor will do this just the same as illegal liquor. Strong drink is strong drink no matter where one buys it. And its effects are the same, no matter how attractively it is put up, or under what auspices it is sold.

Just one word more. If one doubts the inherent harm in alcohol let him read such a book as Emerson's Alcohol and Man and see the actual effects scientifically tested and recorded. Let him grasp the fact that a mortality rate of 49.8 was recorded among pneumonia patients who had used alcohol excessively, and 34.4 among occasional drinkers and abstainers. Let him read the results of tests on such things as motor control, type-writing, the learning process, automobile driving, and alcohol and athletics. These are facts, not theories.

A NEW BROTHERHOOD.

"Now that you are cut off from us all," demanded the caste-brothers and the family of a former Hindu who had become a Christian, "with whom can you sit? Where can you marry your children? You are alone." "Alone?" he replied, "Indeed I am not. I have entered the greatest brotherhood in the world, the brotherhood of 590,000,000 Christians, the world around." Nevertheless, being practical as well as idealistic he realized that co-religionists a thousand miles away, or even twenty miles from his small town, would be of little daily help to him. "Well, then, I'll win members to the brotherhood here," he decided, and has become an active evangelist in his own town.—Exchange.

MONDAY.

SOLDIER'S HARDSHIPS.

"Suffer hardship with me, as a good soldier of Christ Jesus."—II. Tim. 2:3.

War is hard, Marches, fasts, wounds and death. From the first enlistment, every one expects this.

That was Paul's idea of the Christian life after he had been through it. No one knew any better than he. Nevertheless, he urged men to it in the same way he bade Timothy to join him in those hardships.

The one thing which gave Paul this courage was the ease by which he was enabled through Christ to endure all the hardship. He was not alone in his suffering. Christ was with him. That was a wonderful comradeship and to shirk that comradeship was unthinkable.

Prayer—Dear heavenly Father, Great Captain of our souls, summons us to the work which thou hast for us to do, and strengthen our courage to be loyal forever. Amen.

TUESDAY.

SEEING GOD.

"He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."—John 14:9.

Relation of Jesus to the Father, and our relation through Jesus to the Father was always a mystery, and always will be. Jesus Himself seldom spoke of it. How He could be fully man and at the same time fully God is not fully made known to us.

This mystery, however, is no ground for unbelief, for we do not understand ourselves and yet we believe in ourselves. Let us be content to believe that some day we shall know as we are known, and until then work and pray, and strive, to catch glimpses of Him who gave us the Father. This is not hard. We catch those glimpses in everyday experiences which demand righteousness and peace. And as we hear the still small voice of life's holy demands, so much do we hear His voice and so much do we talk with Him. And so much as we see the accomplishment of good in the world, so much do we see Him, and seeing Him we see God.

Prayer—Heavenly Father, in the name of Jesus, Thy Son, may we see Thee more clearly every day, and seeing Thee, we would follow Thee all the way. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

BEWILDERED AND LOST.

"Did not our hearts glow within us when He was talking to us on the road, opening up the scriptures for us?"—Luke 24:32. (Moffat.)

The disciples were groping their way along the road. They were a group of sad souls. Not only had they lost their Bible and all that they believed in, but their hopes were blasted.

The talk of the stranger who appeared to them along the way restored to them in a marvelous sort of way their Bible and gave them back their Christ. Their enlightened minds and glowing hearts furnished the evidences of this being the Christ. And it convinces us that Christ is always near. When the road is dusty and long, when the way is dark and gloomy when we suffer the onset of failure and despair drives us to nothing left, be not faithless but believing.

Prayer—Dear Lord, open our eyes that we may see Thee. Give us understanding that we may interpret life's experiences right, and warm our hearts more and more till they glow with the glow of heaven. Amen.

THURSDAY.

EASTER AT ITS BEST.

"And their eyes were opened, and they knew him."—Luke 24:31.

After all the glory of Easter, the real meaning of it all is in sustained spiritual living. Spiritual depression will follow such a celebration unless we discover the secret of sustained joy. With the disciples, it was the coming of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost that made their Easter permanent.

The Holy Spirit will do the same thing for us. But the condition of receiving the Holy Spirit is, that we shall seek every day companionship with Him. If we have lived our Lent and Easter right we shall make that righteousness real for a long time.

Prayer—O Lord, we seek the daily companionship of Jesus. With each morning may we find Him so vital that we shall hear Him speak to us the eternal realities of life. Amen.

FRIDAY.

TAKING HEART AGAIN.

"Peace be unto you."—John 20:19.

Bit by bit the disciples began to catch the glimmer of light of immortality. In this upper room they were convinced that Jesus was alive, and that thought transformed them from a life of seclusion to a life of courage and determination, a life that has given to us the Christianity of the world.

The disciples now knew that the thing that they must come to grips with called "death," was only an incident, better termed "a birth," "and whatever life gives, in Christ, is triumphant. Life at its worst now appeals to the best that is within us.

Prayer—Dear Father, grant unto us an angel's hand to teach us the fulness of meaning, of beauty, and of purpose of life. In earth's darker things may we like Him find the better things, dispel the evil and bring on the good. Make us a blessing to humanity for Jesus sake. Amen.

SATURDAY.

REBELS AGAINST LIGHT.

"These are of them that rebel against the light."—Job 24:13-17.

The light is most regal. It penetrates the most obscure corners. It drives the darkness imperially before it, annihilating it. God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all. The noblest and least to be condemned of the idolatries was sun-worship, star-worship. Such worshippers were the magi, and they were led to Christ.

It would seem impossible to rebel against the light. Light is so gracious, so winsome, so altogether desirable that all men, one would think, would be drawn to it irresistibly.

Yet there are those—there are many—who seek darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil. They lurk in the shadows. They run under cover. They shun disclosures, and they fear above all things the revelations of the coming Day of Light.

Prayer—Splendor divine, illuminate our hearts, we pray Thee. Light of the ages, shine gloriously into our lives and make us one with Thyself. Amen.

—Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

LIVING IN GOD'S LAWS.

"Ye shall therefore keep my statutes, and my ordinances; which if a man do, he shall live in them."—Leviticus 18:1-5.

What is the home of the soul? It is not one's abode of wood or brick or stone. That is no more than the inn where he stays over night. The home of the soul is its growing character. It is made up of its desires, its likings, its chosen associations.

The home of a man's soul is his relation to God's laws. If he ignores them, mocks them, rejects them, his home is out in the wilderness, among the stones and briars, in the caves with the wild beasts. If he loves God's laws, if he honors them and obeys them, his home is with God, in

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

"THE ARM ACROSS THE SHOULDER."

"Lift up your eyes and see."

—John 4:35.

(Notes from a sermon preached in the Congregational Church of Orange City, Florida, by HENRY J. CONDIT, Pastor.)

Some years ago a group of artists led by John Tichenor stood in a field in France looking at a glorious sunset. Tichenor was pointing to first one and then another feature of beauty, when an old peasant who had been watching the group from a little distance came up slowly behind them and watched with puzzled eagerness. Finally he said, "What is it?" "We are watching the sunset," said Tichenor. "Sunset, what is that?" Then realizing the situation the artist slipped his arm over the shoulder of the old peasant, and patiently explained to him the meaning of beauty in the skies. And the peasant, finally, with tears streaming down his face, said, "I've lived here all my life and I never saw a sunset before."

Many years ago a simple Scotch doctor in the heart of Africa laid his arm across the shoulder of one after another of the black men in the heart of the Dark Continent. Easy harvests, simplest living, nature doing everything for them, and yet envying other tribes, war, degradation, slavery, wooden fetiches, yet patiently the good doctor pointing up, said, "Look, the glory of God." Again and again he said it until at last some began to see, and believe and love the good doctors' God. Then one night, on his knees in his lonely tent, the good doctor breathed his last prayer.

The story of two of those black men, Susi and Chuma and of how they carried the prepared body through hostile tribes to the coast, then to England, and with all the simple pomp and ceremony of Westminster Cathedral walked in the funeral procession, is as thrilling a one as could be found. David Livingston, his arm across the shoulder of the black man, had opened his eyes to a new and glorious vision.

Another part of Africa, and another Scotchman and his wife came to the krall of an old Africaner—heartless and reprobate, on whose head was the reward of five thousand pounds. But the Moffatts lived before him and taught the simple message of the loving Christ. When a friend in England wrote her asking Mary Moffatt what to send her as a present, she replied, "A communion set"—What faith, for as yet not a single native had professed his faith. but at last that arm of kindly love and service stretched over the shoulder won, and the old chief, Africaner, saw and became a Christian. And today where Livingston and the Moffatts labored and prayed, there is a great nation of black men, and a great cathedral crowded with the followers of Jesus.

While these things were going on, seventeen men and women from New England landed on islands far out in the Pacific. There infant murder was common, chastity unknown, there was no marriage law, and the natives were headed toward certain extinction through their own vices. But the arms of these seventeen were slipped over many shoulders. Six years pass and 10,000 gather in one place to hear the Gospel story. The ruler of the islands pledged his people to the Christian's God standing on the rim of the smoking volcano, Mt. Pelee. And they saw the glory of God. The history of the Hawaiians Islands since then has not been all Christian—but we cannot blame the islanders.

In 1845 William Duncan, a missionary exploring the west coast of Africa, found nine Indian tribes. They were always fighting each other. After six years of learning, the language and getting acquainted, he preached his first sermon, but he had to do so six times in succession in six different places, as he dared not bring the nine warring tribes together. Savage cannibals, dog eaters, bitter fighters they were. Slowly but surely the power of the arm across the shoulder, an object lesson of the love of Christ, has its way and when Lord Dufferin visited that district a few years later, he exclaimed, "Behold what God hath wrought."

It was a cold, winter night in lower New York City many years ago. A homeless man, an exconvict just released from prison, walked shivering through the dark streets, wondering whether he would have to commit another crime to get food and lodging. Literally an arm was slipped across his shoulders, and a kind voice questioned him as to his need and destination and then the humble city missionary taking off his own overcoat put it on the shoulders of Jerry MacAuley, who as the result of that Christly act became a Christian and founded and for years conducted the Water Street Mission in which hundreds like himself found God.

These incidents come from the missionary history, home and foreign, of our Christian churches. Somehow during the past years many have come to dislike the words "missions" and "missionary." But what do these words mean? Just this same slipping the arm of love and service in the name of Christ over the shoulder of those who have never known Him, to be friend, teacher, brother.

There was a day, not so many years ago, when the brotherhood of the churches of Florida and of the nation reached out to this struggling church to help put it on its feet. And today how many of our little group of churches in Florida are still knowing the help of that brotherhood?

Why then should we be suspicious of these terms—why withhold gifts that we can make in the outreach of our hearts to the world's great need of Christ.

The nations through their representatives meet at a council table, but distrust and hatred and suspicion have their sway—and each goes his own way to continue to suspect and distrust the others.

Stern, bitter dictators are breeding contempt within their own lands and yet more in others.

In the Far East Japan as a nation bows to Power as to God—even though the Christly spirited Kagawa moves quietly on teaching cooperation and brotherhood.

Great, unwieldy China, in the dark, torn by civil wars is as a giant awaking, but awaking to what? Communism or Christ?

On around the world in all its turmoil we could go—a tale of sorrow, loss and bitterness; BUT, in all and through all these lands a little handful of men and women, touched by the spirit of Jesus are slipping their arms over the shoulders of their fellow men, and helping them to see the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

Not one in a thousand or many more can go in person on this task of Christian Brotherhood but every one can share in both praying and giving. "And Jesus said, lift up your eyes and see the fields white to the harvest—pray we therefore the Lord of the Harvest that He would send forth laborers into the harvest."

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

In a few weeks our public school will close. Five of our girls and one boy will graduate. Their graduation will be their first real thrill in their educational life. They have climbed year by year from grade to grade till they have finished the eleventh grade. They or any child deserves a lot of credit to finish high school. It shows ambition and perseverance. Some of the girls want to take a business course at Elon College, one wants to get a job and make her own way.

But whether they enter college or get a job—they will enter a new field and it will be different from high school life. It will be like entering a wilderness and perhaps will find many obstacles in the way; but I hope their training through the high school will have fitted them to be able to overcome many of the obstacles that will confront them from time to time. It takes ambition, grit and perseverance to win a goal.

The writer has in mind a young man that spent eighteen years in school without a break. In order to prepare himself for the work he wished to do in life. He had his discouragements and his hardships but he never gave up and he won in the end. And today he is practicing the profession he wanted to engage in. It was a long road to travel but he reached his goal.

Young boys and girls with all the opportunities given now to get a higher education should take advantage of it. By being prepared, one can give so much more for the betterment of humanity and in making the world better.

A QUESTION ANSWERED.

By BERT H. DAVIS.

I am 16 and in highschool. My parents have threatened to punish me severely if I ever touch any kind of intoxicant, even a glass of wine. So far, I haven't. I am sure that I am developing a complex because I can't do what all my friends do. Don't you think I should have a chance to work this out by myself?

Personally I'm sorry if it is on your parent's decision, not your own, that you refrain from drinking. By all means, abstaining parents (and even drinking parents) may wisely guide a young person to go in for other and more wholesome activities and outlets than drinking. But the decision ultimately must be each person for himself.

That fact is more promising than it might seem. Through the past generation the drinkers have probably outnumbered those who never took any intoxicant. If the parents' practice, whether for drinking or against it, be the principal guide for the next generation, alcoholic beverages are with us and in something like their present popularity for generations on ahead.

"Like father, like son" does not invariably hold—for no small number of the staunchest members of this alcohol-free fellowship of young people came from homes in which there is some drinking. "As for me," said one young person after another, "I do not need and do not want these beverages. Alcohol may hold me down. I'll pass it up. There are things I want more than this, and I'll take the chance that abstaining from alcohol will put me ahead in the race of life—as it will in athletics!"

Your question is in effect a confession that you are torn between two conflicting sets of opinions, your parents' opposition to alcohol and your friends' practice of using it, without having formed opinions of your own.
There's your need. If you would rout a complex, begin by acquiring a mind of your own about alcohol.
Weigh your parents' experience and wisdom against what your friends really know about life. Throw into the balance on one side the facts that scientific learning have acquired to show alcohol's handicaps to your progress; against this, set the claims that the advertizers are making for alcoholic wares. Look about you in your own town. Ask questions about the business and professional opportunities for drinkers. Talk to a trusted coach, a well-informed physician, other persons who seem to get a lot out of life.

The choice that has to be made concerning drinking, whether as an occasional venture of an habitual practice or something to be traded off for higher values, is too important to be made without all the facts you can get. Take no one's opinion or example as final until you have thought and studied through your own liquor problem—"Is there any convincing reason why I should drink?"—Allied Youth.

IDEAL HOME CLIMATE.

In a Christian home the dicipline of children is not so much of exhortation as of contagion. The prevailing climate of unaffected idealism strengthens the moral constitution of the child. Thus the Christian family gets its unity and stability, not by outward regulation, but by the natural processes of its inward life. It has its troubles, and they draw hearts together. It has its joys, and they are multiplied by being shared. When, finally, the children of that family grow up to hear of larger truths—truths of the kingdom and of the Father in heaven, and of the Son for whose return the Father is waiting—then they interpret these great mysteries of the eternal world, as Jesus prompted them to do, in the language of their own loving and united home.

One George Small has given us these lines:

I read
In a book
That a man called Christ
Went about doing good.
It is very disconcerting to me
That I am so easily satisfied
With just Going about.
Are you?

Pass It Along

By REV. CLARENCE A. VINCENT.

All wise and effective builders in society have appreciated what the generations past built at great sacrifice and handed down to those who followed them and have felt the duty and privilege resting upon them to hand down the inheritance, enlarged and enriched.

Religion.

From heathenism to intelligent views and practices of religion has required thousands of years. From formalism to a vital faith is a great achievement. In the United States, the State and Church have been separate. Wherever they have been united, tyranny and ignorance among the masses have prevailed, wherever they have been separate organizations, truth and justice have had an opportunity. Religion is a spring from which flows the cleansing, life-giving water of life. Today in the United States men can worship God according to their consciences. As long as that religion does not oppress others, they have the freedom of worship and practice. The richest inheritance we receive is convictions of a God of love and helpfulness, who would share His life with us. This realization develops in one a fine personality—if he honestly tries to live up to it. Pass it along!

Mutual Helpfulness.

Centuries ago nearly every individual tribe, nation, and race tried to gain advantage from other individuals or groups. In many parts of the world a ship wrecked sailor was thrown into slavery. Even as late as the colonial period in our history, every colony tried to take advantage by custom laws and in other ways of the other colonies. There has been a wide improvement since ancient times in the treatment men give to others. The courts settle personal disputes. Nations try without the success we had hoped for, to settle their rivalries by arbitration, still, they accomplish worth-while results. But all peace-minded people, and they number millions, want to see world peace. The millions of lives and billions of dollars spent for wars, expended for world betterment, would work miracles for civilization and happiness. "Man is unjust, but God is just; and finally justice triumphs." Pass it along!

Government of the People.

Dictators rule with a cruel hand many nations. In Russia, Italy, Germany, and Spain, to hold their powers, the Dictators snuff out lives as a housewife snuffs out candles. Taxes for the laying of which, people have no say, crush the homes. Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, and Switzerland have a kindlier government. The hope of the final triumph of self-government rests in the rule of the people and those whom they elect. England's king is legally a figure-head. His influence is spiritual and moral. He is a symbol of the unity of all her colonies and the Mother country. The United States' task is to prove that a government "of the people, by the people, and for the people" can be the most reverent, the most just, and can bring about the welfare of all individuals and occupations and races in their treatment of one another as no other form of government can. Our faults are many, but our possibilities are more. Constitutional government must be preserved and perfected. Pass it along!

REPRESENTING THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials, Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME LXXXIX.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, APRIL 22, 1937.

NUMBER 16.

DAVID M. HELFENSTEIN.

Rev. David M. Helfenstein, M. A., D. D., for more than sixty years an active pastor and prominent leader in the Christian Church, departed this life at his home in Colfax, Iowa, April 12th, two days before his eighty-fifth birthday, and six days before his sixtieth wedding anniversary. Dr. Helfenstein was the father of Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D., pastor of our Church at Dover, Delaware, and the brother of Rev. S. Q. Helfenstein, long-time editor of our Sunday School literature. A fuller account of Dr. Helfenstein's life will be found beginning on the editorial page of this issue.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

The big event in our Southern Church this week is the Southeast Convention and Youth Fellowship at Jacksonville, Florida. Many of our leaders are there.

The Easter bulletin of the Dover, Delaware, Church had a beautiful painting of Christ knocking at the door on the front page. Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, the distinguished pastor, does an excellent job with his bulletins.

Our Lynchburg Church, which has recently changed its name to Congregational-Christian, has sent its conference apportionment for Christian Education with a little bit additional. The Board is grateful to this church for its contribution.

The editor and the office force for the Board of Christian Education and THE CHRISTIAN SUN are attending the meetings in Jacksonville this week, and expect to take a few days of much-needed (and perhaps deserved) rest before returning to Norfolk.

Fourteen members were received into the Greensboro Church on Easter Sunday. Rev. W. E. Wisseman is pastor, and Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor emeritus. The names and addresses of the new members were given on the mimeographed bulletin of the church on the Sunday following.

Rev. Roy D. Coulter reports a very successful three weeks revival just closed at Palmyra Church in the Valley of Virginia. The pastor did the preaching and most of the song leading. Visible results included good attendance, excellent attention, three consecrations and 13 members by profession of faith.

The many friends of Rev. I. W. Johnson, D. D., of Suffolk, Virginia, will join with THE CHRISTIAN SUN in extending sympathy to him because of the death of his father last week. Funeral services were conducted on Thursday and the burial was at Mt. Carmel Christian Church, near Walters, Virginia.

The ministers' meeting at Elon College on April 12th decided that June 10th and 11th is an appropriate date for the North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention. Those who feel that it is not, if any, should notify

Dr. W. M. Jay, 707 Gales Avenue, Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

Rev. R. L. House of Portsmouth, Virginia, and Rev. E. C. Lawrence of Raleigh, North Carolina, are working out a program for the Franklinton Summer School which is scheduled to be held June 28th to July 2nd. There seems to be a growing sentiment in favor of putting Franklinton back into service for our colored Congregational and Christian Church people.

The executive committee of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention met at Suffolk on April 12th and planned a program for that convention, which is to be held at Liberty Spring, July 20th. They voted a contribution to the Board of Christian Education of $50.00 from their treasury. This is a real help to the Board, for its funds are almost exhausted.

All ministers will be interested to know that Dr. James R. Clinton of Philadelphia will teach two courses at the Elon Pastors Conference, June 21st to 26th. "The Preacher's Treasure Hunt in the Psalms" and "Studies in the Christian Manifesto." Rev. J. Lee Johnson will teach First and Second Thessalonians. Other courses will be offered in the Leadership Training School.

First Christian Church, Norfolk, held a reception on Wednesday night of last week in honor of the 24 members who have united with the church since the last annual conference. This church has four young people attending the Southeast Youth Fellowship this week, expects to have six or eight at the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training, and is planning to hold a vacation Bible school, and to take its young people out for a three day camping trip at the beach during the summer.

May 2, 1937, is designated as Rural Life Sunday. Concerning the observance Rev. Thomas Alfred Tripp, the new secretary in the Town and Country Department of our Extension Board, says the following: "Rural churches and pastors should observe Rural Life Sunday because it is to their immediate interest to help their people to understand their own situation. Urban churches and pastors should observe the occasion because of the importance of agriculture and rural life to them. City churches continue to draw much of their vitality of leadership and constituency from the country." For further information, write to this department at 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

REIDSVILLE HAS NEW BUILDING.

A recent issue of "The Reidsville (N. C.) Review" carries an article concerning our church there, in which it tells of the opening of the new $15,000.00 addition to the church plant. Rev. J. L. Neese and the Reidsville people have worked hard for the past two years in order to erect this new Sunday school plant. Description of the building is given by the local paper as follows:

This new Sunday school department on the outside is 72x56 feet and is of brick veneer construction with beautifully finished interior, and adjoins the main body of the church on the east and contains two assembly halls, 10 class rooms, a large room for use of Boy and Girl Scouts, and a Sunday school office for literature.

The main assembly room, 50x36 feet, connects to the main auditorium of the church with sliding doors and will be used for the additional seating space in the church service when necessary. Five class rooms open off this floor as well as the pastor's study with its private prayer room which is just between the main body of the church and the new department. Three additional class rooms with the Sunday school office occupy the third floor on the south side.

In the basement is another 36x50 foot assembly room which will be used by the Baraca class, Ladies Missionary Society, mid-week prayer services and other organizations in which it will not be necessary to use the larger church auditorium or regular assembly rooms. Two more class rooms and the Scout hall open off this room.

The basement under the main body of the church as also been remodeled into a complete Junior department with assembly hall and six class rooms. A dining room and kitchen equipped with gas range enables all church organizations to take care of the refreshment problem.

The years monotonous? The same old season, and weathers, and aspects of nature? Never anything new to admire or wonder at? The monotony is in our eyesight, which goes on seeing nothing but the common and invariable things; simply because, from long familiarity, these are the easy things to see. But these are only the frame of the picture; the picture is never twice alike.—Edward Rowland Sill.

REORGANIZATION LAUNCHED.

A major reorganization within the Congregational and Christian denomination was launched this week in the union of all the national church and Sunday school extension, church building, educational, publishing and benevolent work in a single board, the new Board of Home Missions.

The denomination has become the first, it is said, to unify the work of all its "homeland" boards" in a single corporation. The reorganization is the largest within the denomination since its formation by a merger of the former separate Congregational and Christian bodies in 1931.

The charter for the new board was granted by the state of New York on March 4th. The board was organized here on Monday by the incorporators who came from different sections of the country. On Tuesday the new board accepted the transfer of all the activities and the administration of the funds of seven old historic boards. The reorganization was carried out according to instructions previously voted by the General Council of the denomination.

Realignment of activities are being made in readiness for the board to begin its first complete fiscal year on June 1st. The detailed budget adopted for 1937-38 by the directors of the new board is $1,324,888.00. The first annual meeting of the board will be held next fall in Plymouth Church, Fort Wayne, Ind., October 19 to 21.

"The consolidation of all the various national home missionary activities of a denomination in a single completely unified organization is the logical goal of a trend which has been prevailing in all denominations during the last twenty-five years," according to the Rev. Edward Weeks Cross, president of the new board and minister of the Union Church, Richmond Hill, New York City.

"During the preceeding century," Dr. Cross said, "a prominent slogan in all denominations was 'expansion.' Each denomination organized a variety of boards to raise funds and aid in the development of church life in the states to the west as the land was settled. These boards organized churches and Sunday schools, contributed toward pastors' salaries and church buildings, prepared and published Sunday school curricula material and other religious literature, provided experts in religious education, founded and supported colleges, aided disadvantaged peoples, particularly the freed Negroes in the southland, the Indians and the southern white highlanders and engaged in different kinds of benevolent work especially the care of aged ministers.

"By 1915, the territorial expansion was practically complete throughout the forty-eight states and the territories for the principal denominations. Although in growing cities and suburban areas and in some remote localities new churches have continued to be needed, the total number of Protestant Churches has been decreasing as measures have been taken to eliminate the inevitable over-churching which occurred with enthusiasm for expansion.

"The new slogan is 'effectiveness' for the church program in individual communities. The denomination through their national programs and are cooperatively seeking to provide a more thorough and higher spiritual leadership to the people of the nation. Coordination, unification and simplification in the organization of denominational work has been coming in progressive steps for sake of greater efficiency."

The two oldest national Protestant home mission agencies of any denomination are included in the seven whose work has been united. These two were organized as the American Education society at Boston in 1816 and the American Home Missionary Society at New York in 1826. Later "Congregational" replaced "American" in their names. The American Home Missionary Society for several decades was a Presbyterian and Reformed as well as Congregational agency; it founded thousands of churches of the three denominations. It was formed following a special convention in the old Brick Presbyterian Church, Beekman and Nassau Streets, New York City. Its organization meeting, held in the famed City Hotel, was attended by Governor De Witt Clinton of New York state; five governors, including those of Maine, New York, and Alabama, were among its original vice-presidents as were also the heads of five theological seminaries; prominent merchants and the presidents of thirteen colleges, including Yale and Princeton were among its first directors. The movement which led to its organization traces back to 1776 when the New York Missionary Society was organized after travelers returning from England reported upon the organization of the London Missionary Society in 1795.

A third board in the consolidation this week was the American Missionary association, incorporated 1846; its major work has been with Negroes for whom it has been conducting five colleges and twelve secondary schools in addition to having founded Hampton Institute and Howard, Fisk and Atlanta Universities. It has also been conducting a girls' school, a hospital and churches in Puerto Rico. The work of the other boards in the consolidation has been Sunday school extension, church building, publishing and ministerial pensions.

The consolidated balance sheet of the seven boards shows total assets of $28,856,332.00. Property used for religious, educational, welfare or other benevolent purposes is valued at $3,296,170.00

The principal general and executive officers of the new board are:

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

WHEN IT'S SPRINGTIME.

Many are the poets who have sung of the beauty of springtime. The faltering pen of this writer could add nothing to the things that have been said, and certainly cannot put into poetry the thoughts that pass through his mind. He can see the beauty and enjoy the luxury of springtime.

When it's springtime the grasses grow, trees bud, flowers bloom, birds sing, and all nature speaks of a creative God who gives life to the things of earth. When it's springtime farmers plant with hope for a harvest. When it's springtime gardeners get busy with the cultivation of flowers which will bring happiness to homes and hospitals. When it's springtime the hopeless see new light and take new courage. When it's springtime the Church's message lives in the heart of mankind, and the world knows that even though winter may come, spring is not far away, that life is not swallowed up in death, but that death is overcome by it.

DANGEROUS WORDS.

In a recent meeting of ministers, someone said that "the second coming of Christ" and "sanctification" are dangerous words. The reason given was that opinion differs radically concerning the meaning of these terms and that many strange ideas have been connected with these excellent words. Your editor does not agree that they are dangerous words. On the contrary he believes that one is a glorious hope and the other is a desirable aspiration.

It is true that people differ concerning the second coming of Christ. There are those who believe in the visible return of the resurrected Christ to set up a government here upon earth in which He Himself will be the King. Some of them have designated the time of His return, but many make no claims to such knowledge. There are others who do not look forward to any great catastrophe, or to the visible return of the glorified Christ. They think rather of His coming through the gradual processes of the building of the Kingdom of God on earth. Like leaven in the bread, they believe the message of Jesus will gradually permeate the whole of religious experience until every phase of life is made abundant by His presence. In either case it is a glorious hope. They expect that ultimately Jesus will be supreme in this earth, that His will will be done here among men.

Around the word "sanctification" has grown many ideas which were evidently not in the mind of Saint Paul when he wrote to the churches which he had established in Asia and Europe. But that is no reason why a perfectly good word, meaning purity, loyalty, consecration, power, and all that the presence of the Divine Spirit in human life can mean, should be thrown out of the vocabulary of the modern Church. It is important to preserve sacred words, sacred ideas and sacred experiences.

It seems wise for Christian people to counsel together concerning great Biblical truths with the earnest desires to find the real meaning and depth of experience and to do this without heated debates and differences that divide. There are those who find much joy in the two ideas suggested here. Those who have not experienced the happiness which comes from holding these ideas may well inquire diligently of those who do have such joy concerning the meaning of the words and the depth of the experience which they represent.

NATIONALLY KNOWN MINISTER PASSES TO HIS RICH REWARD.

Dr. David M. Helfenstein, M. A., D. D., for more than sixty years an active pastor and prominent leader in the Christian Church, departed this life at his home in Colfax, Iowa, Monday morning, April 12th. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Isabelle Helfenstein, and four children, Dr. Anna I. Helfenstein of Colfax, Iowa, Dr. Alva E. Helfenstein of Farrar, Iowa, Mrs. Ethyle O'Connell of Miles City, Montana, and Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D., of Dover, Delaware. His youngest son, Perry, at the age of three, preceded him in death forty-five years ago. Besides the members of his immediate family, he leaves three brothers, two sisters, five grandsons and three granddaughters, a large number of relatives and a host of friends to mourn his going. His oldest brother, Rev. S. Q. Helfenstein, now in his eighty-ninth year, was for many years a distinguished leader in the Christian Church, having been editor of the Adult Sunday School Journal for twenty-five years before his retirement ten years ago.

Death came to Dr. D. M. Helfenstein two days before his eighty-fifth birthday, and six days before he and his faithful companion would have celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary. Dr. Helfenstein spent sixty years in the active ministry of the Christian Churches of Iowa and Pennsylvania, the last ten years of which time he was pastor of the First Christian Church of Lewisburg, Pennsylvania, resigning this pastorate, and retiring from the active ministry on account of failing health a year ago last fall. His great interest in the church at Lewisburg, the splendid progress it had experienced under his ten year's ministry—every branch of the work being built up in a remarkable manner—and his deep love for the faithful membership of the church and his appreciation of their most remarkable devotion and loyalty, and the fact that the entire church wished him to continue as their pastor, made him reluctant to give up the work even at his advanced age. But as members of the congregation often expressed themselves, "he was younger in spirit and more active at eighty than are many men at sixty." His last pastorate of ten years duration in a University city begun at the age of seventy-three and, being terminated against the protest of the membership, is a most beautiful tribute to his Christian character, his ministerial efficiency, and his friendly disposition. He was often called "Everybody's Friend," for both young and old, rich and poor, learned and unlearned, felt that in him they had a real friend and freely sought his spiritual counsel.

Dr. Helfenstein was born in Madison County, Ohio, and moved to Iowa with his parents in early childhood. He was a great believer and promoter of the educational interests of the church. Before being ordained to the Gospel Ministry, while still a very young man, he taught in the Public School of Iowa. He received his B. A. and M. A. degrees from Parson's College of Iowa, and his B. D. and D. D. degrees from McCormick Theological Seminary of Chicago—two leading Presbyterian institutions of the Middle West, though from boyhood he was a member of the Christian Church, his father, James O'Kelley Helfenstein having been named by and for the founder of the Christian Church, Rev. James O'Kelly. His great grandfather was Major Peter Helfenstein of the Revolutionary War, who was a resident of Winchester, Virginia, and a graduate in surveying of the University of Bonn, Germany, associated with George Washington both as a surveyor before the Revolutionary War, and as a Major during the war.

Soon after Dr. Helfenstein graduated from McCormick Theological Seminary he was elected president of Palmer College, then of LeGrand, Iowa, which institution he served as both president and as college pastor for five years, and as president for ten years, building up the institution in every department and securing substantial endowments. He was a member of the National Board of his denomination for sixteen years; a frequent contributor to the Herald of Gospel Liberty, which was the national publication of the Christian Church until the merger with the Congregational Church; president of the Iowa State Christian Conference for three terms, and of the Mid-Western Convention for five bienniums, having preached and lectured in all the Christian Churches of the State at sometime during his ministry. For eight years he was pastor of the First Christian Church of Des Moines, Iowa. Other churches he served as pastor during his sixty years ministry, were the Christian Church at LeGrand, Iowa, Clemens, Iowa, Linden, Iowa, Truro, Iowa, Ferguson, Iowa, Griswold, Iowa, Hill of Zion, Iowa, Madrid, Iowa, Keokuk, Iowa, and Lewisburg, Pennsylvania. In his early ministry, he received several calls to become pastor of churches in New England, but felt duty bound to serve the churches in the Iowa Conference where his services were so greatly in demand.

Dr. Helfenstein, though laying great emphasis upon the importance of religious education, was a strong believer in the work of evangelism, and conducted unusually successful evangelistic services in the principal churches of the Christian Denomination and in other denominations in Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska,—literally thousands of people today date their conscious religious experience from some evangelistic service which he conducted.

Dr. Helfenstein was also an ardent believer in Christian Union, giving numerous addresses and writing numerous articles and pamphlets on the theme of "A United Protestantism." It was a source of joy to him to have lived to witness some of the definite results of his passion and labor for Christian Union in the uniting of the Congregational and the Christian Churches of America six years ago.

His was an unusually rich and rewarding ministry, interested as he was in every branch of Kingdom Service, and zealous in every good work. Many young men have entered the Christian ministry in response to the inspiration of his noble life and ministerial efficiency.

What a host from every walk of life would now rise up and call his memory blessed!

Funeral services were held at the Christian Church in LeGrand, Iowa, Thursday afternoon, April 15th, Rev. F. M. Strange officiating, other ministers, who had been closely associated with the deceased, assisting. His body was laid to rest in the family lot in the peaceful cemetery at LeGrand, where his youngest son lies buried.

His influence goes marching on!

The happiest of men were he, who understanding his craft and working intelligently with his hands, and earning competence and freedom by the exercise of his wits, found time to live by the heart and by the brain, to understand his own work and to love the work of God.—Mme. Geo.

A LETTER FROM FATHER TO SON.

I am intensely interested in your discussion of religion as a thing to be sold like other things. I heartily agree with you 100 per cent, and then I go on much further and believe something more than that, which qualifies your analogy. Religion is a thing of life, and I believe that the greatest failure of Christianity lies in preaching without practice. The greatest force for winning souls to Jesus Christ is in Christian character. The Bible does not save. Preaching does not save. Sales talk, however, important, does not save. The world looks at individuals, and if they see Jesus in them they can believe.

It is true that there is a lot of incompetency in the ministry and Christian workers. Your analogy is right, but even that may be qualified by saying that it is not always so. The apostles were uneducated and mentally disqualified for their job. But they had Christ who is "The Life." Dwight L. Moody, the greatest evangelist of modern times, was uneducated. But we are told that his presence in a shop or before an audience, beamed with radiating influence, and it was that influence which sold religion through him.

So, religion is a great spiritual thing of life. It is life itself. Therefore, salesmanship is only a road to travel, so to speak. It is the road to success, and certainly the road that must be traveled to that success. But salesmanship is material altogether and therefore an agency. It can go only so far. There is a realm of spirituality—soulfulness—that indescribable something called "righteousness," "justice," "love," "joy," "honesty," etc., that represent the heart of God and therefore the heart of religion as it dwells in man. That is why it takes a Christian life genuinely to complete the sale of religion.

H. E. ROUNTREE.

A REAL RELIGION. INDEED!

If you could get religion like a Methodist, and experience it like a Baptist, and be positive of it like a Disciple, and be proud of it like an Episcopalian, and pay for it like a Presbyterian, and propagate it like an Adventist, and enjoy it like a Negro—that would be some religion!

—Quoted from the Apostolic Review, in the Japan Christian Quarterly.

In the morning when thou risest unwillingly, let this thought be present, "I am rising to the work of a human being."—Marcus Aurelius.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

"Your father is dead." That message came over the telephone at midnight, Tuesday, April 13th. It was not a surprise to receive this message. But it seems that the words of James Whitcomb Riley fitly state the fact: "He is not dead—he is just away."

My father, Julius C. Johnson, had reached the ripe old age of 85 years, two months and twenty nine days. His strength had been failing for several months, but he was not confined to his room until about ten days before he passed away. He sat up in his room for a short time a few hours before the end came.

If it seems too personal for a son to write a word of appreciation of his father, SUN readers will be kind enough to pardon this trespass on the part of this correspondent. My father told me a few days ago that he had been a subscriber to THE SUN for about sixty years. Dr. W. B. Wellons was editor when his name was first entered upon the subscription list. During all these years he was loyal to the church paper and to every cause represented by the Christian church.

He was a son of the late Jesse B. Johnson and Mary Cotten Johnson. His father was a member of the old South Quay Primitive Baptist church. Grandfather lived about fifteen miles from his church, but faithfully attended every first Sunday, when it was possible for him to go, until his death at the age of nearly ninety years. He was so strongly impressed with doctrines of the Primitive Baptist church that he would not address any minister, or member of any other church as "brother." One can easily understand how the children of parents with strong religious convictions would inherit a tendency in the same direction. My father was first of all a religious man. The first consideration in his mind on any question was "Is it right?" That question once settled, every other consideration was secondary. He was industrious and had an unfailing supply of energy, until age depleted his strength, but he never allowed the thought of profit to sway him from the path of rugged honesty. His word was as good as his bond.

He united with Antioch Christian Church when a boy in his teens. He was a member of the Committee appointed to select a site for the location of Mt. Carmel Christian Church.

He became a member of that church after it was organized, and served as Superintendent of the Sunday School, deacon of the church, and was a teacher in the Sunday School for many years, having resigned that position in June, 1936, when he was in his 85th year, because of failing strength. He was director of the choir about 30 years, and taught a number of classes in vocal music. He attended Colosse Baptist Church, regularly, also, as long as strength permitted, and was for a number of years director of the choir in that church.

He was married April 23, 1873. His father gave him a tract of land covered with a dense forest of virgin pine timber. He built a small house in that forest and he and his wife began their honeymoon in the woods. He cleared a farm. Built a larger home twelve years later. From that home and farm, he sent two sons and one daughter to Elon College where they graduated with honors.

I owe much to my father. He was a good man. The war of '61-'65 deprived him of the privilege of a good education, but he used his limited educational advantages wisely, and his mind was trained by hard work and careful, systematic thinking and holy living. He made an impression upon his church and community that will remain for many years. "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." (Prov. 22:1.)

ELON COLLEGE.

A quarter of a century ago only the fortunate had an opportunity of college. Today it is more or less the usual thing for high school graduates to go to college. Colleges are more numerous today which complicates the problem of selection. Unacquainted with details of college life, the prospective college student finds it difficult to select an institution for his training in higher education. It is taken for granted that the usual subjects in a college curriculum are offered by all institutions. It is the extra-curricula activities that often become the deciding factor. Elon College, in addition to the regular liberal arts curriculum, offers dramatics, art, music, business administration, physical education, a superior program of intercollegiate athletics, and other advantages which are difficult to define.

The atmosphere of a school has something to do with its value. It not only portrays its friendliness or the lack of it, but it also demonstrates quite clearly its scholastic trends. what we call "college spirit" is born out of its atmosphere. A wholesomely dominating college spirit breeds loyalty and somehow molds the entire student body into an enthusiastic organization for the advancement of the institution's program.

In determining a curriculum of training for modern youth, the wrong guess is made if emphasis on religion is omitted. Every individual is religious in the same proportion that he is social and intelligent. His religious life needs nurture and guidance. If neglected during college days' it will certainly be negligible when he assumes vitally the responsibilities of life. It takes training to become efficient along any line. In these days special care must be taken of the individual's religious life if his religion is to be healthy and wholesome.

Elon College specializes in training for specific undertakings. Those who wish to teach will find excellent advantages in the Department of Education. As a rule, Elon College graduates are successful in securing teaching positions and are able to hold them. If you wish to train for the professions, law, business, medicine, engineering, surveying, art, dramatics, music, Christian Education, or the gospel ministry, you will find excellent opportunities at Elon College. Elon College is a church related school. It is Christian throughout, but not sectarian. It is coeducational. Young men and young women are admitted on equal terms and are given equal advantages without discrimination. It has a superior faculty for a small college. It accords to every individual special consideration that his training may be efficient and complete. Faculty members are not only thoroughly trained in the science of education, but they have a personal interest in the individual student. It is always a pleasure for an Elon College professor to help the individual student with his peculiar problem. Each professor endeavors to see the whole process of education related to the individual student. More and more Elon College is recognized as an institution with a distinctively and discriminating program of progressive education. We see the student with his problem from every conceivable angle and endeavor to enable him to discover his needs and relate himself properly to the problem of education, not only meeting his personal needs, but the needs of the entire student body. Our first concern is the individual, but the individual is by no means considered the end but the means to an end, for he is distinctively a unit in college life and must lend himself definitely for the advancement of the whole student life on the college campus of which he is a part.

The appeal of Elon College to prospective students during the past four years has been more effective. During this period her student body has more than doubled. Our enrollment for 1936-37 is 473. Judging from present indications, her student body for 1937-38 will exceed this year's enrollment by a large number. The fall term begins September 7th. If you contemplate entering college, you are earnestly urged to consider what Elon College has to offer.

CONFERENCE STEWARDSHIP

The Stewardship Committee of the Eastern Virginia Congregational Christian Conference met recently to plan "follow up" work supplementary to that done by Dr. Warren H. Denison in the Stewardship meetings just after Easter. Dr. John G. Truitt and Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, members of the Commission of Stewardship of the General Council were present and offered valuable suggestions.

The Committee is happy to announce that it has one of each of several fine books, pamphlets, pageants, and worship services which may be sent as sample copies on request to any church or group interested in using stewardship materials. These may be secured by writing the Chairman at Holland, Virginia.

The Committee recommends that each Church or Church School set aside two or four weeks during the year when an intensive study shall be made of stewardship and when some of the worship services on it may be used. The prayer meeting: junior, intermediate, senior, young people, and adult classes and missionary societies are excellent groups to take up this study. The minister should be asked to preach two or more sermons on stewardship during this period. These sermons may form the basis for discussion in the group meetings.

The Committee offers to hold special classes in stewardship on Mondays and Tuesdays of any week that can be arranged in any Church requesting it in the Conference. One or two of the following men will be glad to teach such courses or classes: Rev. Carl R. Key, Committee Chairman; or Dr. John G. Truitt and Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, members of the Commission on Stewardship. We also plan to offer stewardship in our conference leadership training schools in the fall as classes or special lectures.

CARL R. KEY,
Chairman Stewardship Committee.

EASTERN VIRGINIA MINISTERS' MEETING.

The Ministers Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference met in regular session in the Suffolk Christian Church Monday, April 11th, with Dr. J. G. Truitt, President, and Rev. Carl R. Key, Secretary, in their respective chairs. The song service was led by O. D. Poythress and the devotionals conducted by Rev. H. S. Hardcastle. The program consisted of a paper by Rev. R. L. House on "The Minister and Missions," and a study of the second chapter of II Thessalonians by Rev. H. E. Crutchfield. Mr. House recited the many things the minister can do in the pulpit, before the organizations of the church, and in social contacts to create the mission spirit and promote the work of missions. The paper and the general discussion tended to the conclusion that the minister could be more effective by an occasional use of strategic times than by a continuous preaching of the subject.

Mr. Crutchfield's study provoked an interesting discussion of the much controverted subject of Christ's second coming. Some of the ministers accept literally the references to the second coming—others give them a spiritual interpretation, and yet others have been unable to arrive at definite convictions on the subject.

Lunch was enjoyed by the ministers in the social hall, served by the ladies of the church. There were nineteen ministers present.

A PLAN OF LIVING AND GIVING.

By CLARENCE HILL KELSEY.

[Mr. Kelsey, Yale '78, was connected with the Title Guarantee and Trust Company of New York City for forty-seven years and from 1891 to 1923 was the president of the company. The following statement is a paragraph from Mr. Kelsey's will explaining why his charitable bequests were not larger.]

"The reason is not because of any change in my interest in, or appreciation of, these institutions or the work that they are doing, but because my theory and practice of giving are inconsistent therewith. I have always felt that it was better to give regularly and generously from income rather than accumulate principal with the expectation of making large gifts at the end. I believe that money set to work immediately is better used than if accumulated with the intention of doing great things with it afterwards. These plans often are forgotten or fail to be carried out, and I firmly believe that there is much greater satisfaction in giving money away than in keeping it and watching it grow in your own hands. Money never catches up with time, and good done with a little money now may be far greater than that done with a great deal more later on, and is more sure to be done. "I wish to commend, therefore, this plan of living and giving to my children and grandchildren. If they will live well within their incomes, if they will give regularly and carefully each year from their savings and, as their incomes grow larger, increase their giving, they will find great satisfaction from such a course and will be much happier than if they spend all they have on themselves or hoard it."

WOMAN'S DISTRICT RALLY.

LIBERTY SPRING CHURCH,
Nansemond, Virginia.

APRIL 8, 1937.

The seventeenth annual session of the Nansemond-Gates-Franklin district of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference met at Liberty Spring Church, April 8th. Mrs. John King is President and Mrs. A. J. Holland, Secretary. "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," was sung and Rev. Carl Key offered the invocation. The churches were recognized and found thirteen represented by 236 delegates. Committees on Nominations, Place and Courtesy were appointed. Mrs. J. G. Truitt announced the Silver Jubilee Service to be held in Suffolk, Virginia, May 13th. The hymn, "The Morning Light Is Breaking" was sung. The President read her annual message on the theme, "Go Forward." "Holy, Holy, Holy," was sung followed by a worship service conducted by Mrs. Hendricks Jones. The theme was "The Cross of Christ," illustrated by the altar with candles and the crimson and white crosses. Rev. L. H. Lancaster, a Presbyterian missionary to China, spoke on the national, social and religious conditions of China. Hymn, "O Zion, Haste," was sung.

The Secretary was instructed to send a telegram of greeting to Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary. Dr. Atkinson's address on "The Unchanging" was read by Mrs. J. G. Truitt. An offering of $18.50 was taken. The morning session closed with prayer by Dr. Elwood Jones.

Lunch was served by the Women's Missionary Society of Liberty Spring.

The Afternoon Session opened with the song, "He Leadeth Me." The invocation was offered by Dr. N. G. Newman. A period of meditation was conducted, consisting of a violin solo by Mr. George Rogers, accompanied by Mrs. I. W. Johnson and a reading, "Forward Through the Ages" by Mrs. J. E. Rawles. Dr. L. H. Lancaster spoke informally on the work in China, responding to a number of questions from the audience.

Officers were presented by the Nomination Committee and elected as follows:

Mrs. John King, President; Mrs. C. W. Rountree, Vice-President; and Mrs. A. J. Holland, Secretary. Holy Neck was chosen for the next meeting. The Committee on Courtesy recommended thanks to the officers for faithful discharge of duty, to Mrs. Hendrick Jones for her inspiring worship service, to Dr. L. H. Lancaster for his addresses on China, to Dr. J. O. Atkinson for his inspirational message sent, to Mrs. Jarvis for her uplifting Vesper Service, and to the Women's Missionary Society of Liberty Spring for their generous hospitality. The meeting closed with benediction by Rev. F. C. Lester.

A DAY OF MISSION STUDY.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Congregational Christian Church, Durham, North Carolina, observed a day of Mission Study on Thursday of Holy Week. The study book used was Julia Lake Kellersberger's Congo Crosses. The plan for the presentation of the message of the book was to have six persons, each of whom would be responsible for presenting one chapter of the book. Rev. Stanley C. Harrell discussed the Introduction and the First Chapter. Succeding chapters were presented in order by Mrs. J. E. Harward, Mrs. H. L. Johnson, Mrs. C. E. Young, Mrs. Robert Smith, and Mrs. D. M. Estes.

This form of mission study has been found most satisfactory. Each member attending brings an individual lunch. At the noon hour a table is spread picnic style, and a delightful social hour is enjoyed. The morning and afternoon sessions allow ample time for a very complete discussion of the book. Those attending felt that they had gained a definite insight into the life of African women.

MRS. STANLEY C. HARRELL.

"That load becomes light which is cheerfully borne."

GO FORWARD.

By MRS. JOHN KING.

Dr. W. H. Denison of Dayton, Ohio, gave a most inspiring address recently at Suffolk Christian Church, his theme: "Christian Stewardship as Related To Missions." Dr. Denison said in part, "The world Mission of Christianity is the central for us as Christians. Missions symbolize the faith of Christians and really reflect their attitudes of life. The Gospel of Christ is to be preached and taught in all lands; we must go, or help others to go, with the Gospel to the uttermost parts."

Dr. J. E. Crawford said, "Missions is the voice of Christianity uttering its heart." The United Stewardship Council has said, "Stewardship, in its full New Testament meaning, involves responsibility to man and provides a solution for the social, racial, industrial, and economic problems which confront the modern world."

Dr. Charles A. Cook says, "The Great Work of Missions will never be adequately supported until God's people fully realize their privileges and obligations as Christian Stewards."

Practice Stewardship in your many Missionary Societies, remembering that Stewardship enrichment is necessary for the soil from which you would reap. We should realize the great importance of Christianizing the heathen for the sake of our obedience to the great command, and the saving of millions of souls for eternity. May we grasp the opportunity to make Christ known to a lost and dying world. "I am the Way," says Christ. We must claim that He means it, not only for individuals, but for all men, for nations, and for races. He is the one and only way. He honors us by making us His agents, His ambassadors. When we look out over this bewildered world, so sorely needing to know the Way of the God and the power to follow it, let us not only remember that Christ is the word that calls us to walk that way, but that after the passing of two thousand years there is the Divine Constraint to give the Gospel to others.

Because Christ is divine, He is worth preaching about—because He is divine, He is the world's only hope—because He is divine, He is the dynamo of the great missionary propaganda. Christ shall reign forever, His Kingdom cannot fail. This glorious prospect is the splendid hope and incentive of missionary effort. Religion in itself merely for our own enjoyment is sadly deficient. Experience that fails to express itself in service will not eventually turn back upon itself. That type of Christianity does not envision a new earth with a new order of Society and will not give itself thereto, fails to meet the test. And so empowered by the assurance of Christ's presence, we go to make God's dreams our dreams. We go with confidence in the ultimate triumphs of Spiritual forces in the earth, which Jesus set in motion. We go, knowing something of the long battle that lies ahead and knowing that we need a long term faith. John 20:19-23, "As my Father hath sent me, even so I send you . . ." As God hath sent His Son out of ivory palaces into a world of woe, even so does He send us.

Large is the life that flows for others' sakes,
Expands its best, its noblest effort makes;
Devotion rounds the man and makes him whole:

Love is the measure of the human soul.

What a wonderful thing it is to be alive and share in the great Missionary movements of today. In no unmistakable terms, Jesus gave unto us the great commission, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." We hear the cry of "A Needy World"—that is as it should be. The inspiration of inspired women who have visited the Far East contact with leaders who teach. New friendships are formed as Christian leaders confer as to how best to put the Missionary Program across in the whole church.

This is the way to a better program or a new way to reach the uninterested, all and all a challenge. Certainly seven days spent in such an environment, would pull anyone out of a rut and create new interest. Does the Church and Sunday school see the need for new leaders? Yes, for the cry is heard in every church, "But we haven't the money." "Make a Life." Send someone to a Conference and you have a leader, someone to help anywhere in the Church Life. What is wrong? Certainly not money. Women around the world are knocking at the door of opportunity, they want it opened that they may step in and help to make a better world. Listen—shall we keep the door closed or shall we open it and have companionship and service with Christ? It is a great thing to venture for God. Faith in one sense is a venture. When our women organized, it was faith and vision and great enthusiasm that passed our responsibility on to us.

Let's question ourselves how we have measured up to the responsibility. Some say we are well organized, but what about the work in societies, churches asking for mission funds and not cooperating. It is true we have developed leaders—young people and women have accepted responsibility for the first time. Today we are confronted with large objectives and opportunities, and we know they are worth all the time, effort, and sacrifice which may be required of us. For these let us step out for a larger program, enthusiastically taking our places with some spirit of achievement within us. Press onward to a greater interest which is beckoning us in this new day. We are entering the period when hundreds of women and young people should be brought into our organized work, and many new societies formed.

Our goal has not been reached, our task is yet unfinished, now is the time for action among our Christian men and women. How can our Church, pastors and leaders of the Church face God with our share of the world task uncompleted? Such a situation would be tragic, and yet that is what we shall come to if we do not take hold with earnestness. The day of sacrifice is not yet over. God calls His Church to respond, even as Christ himself and His early followers responded.

Again quoting Dr. Charles A. Cook, "The great work of the Missions will never be adequately supported until God's people fully realize their privileges and obligations as Christian Stewards."

With renewed energy and greater faith may we accept the challenge of the day in which we live to a greater determination for sacrifice, service, silver. Broadcast Christ's Message:

GO FORWARD.

Is this the time,
O Church of Christ, to sound
Retreat? To arm with weapons cheap and blunt
The men and women who have borne the brunt
Of truth's fierce strife
And nobly held their ground?

Is this the time
To halt, when all around
Horizons lift, new destinies confront?
Stern duties wait our nation, never wont
To play the laggard,
When God's will was found.

No! Rather strengthen stakes and lengthen cords,
Enlarge the plans and gifts, O thou elect,
And to thy kingdom come for such a time.
The earth with all its fulness is the Lord's.
Great things attempt for Him, great things expect!
Whose love imperial is, whose power sublime!

What the world needs more than anything else is sympathy—sympathy between nation and nation.—William Jennings Bryan.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

MOTHER'S DAY.

Today we saw an advertisement in the newspaper suggesting a gift suitable for "Mother" on "her" day. Since it is not too far off to begin making plans for your society for May 9th, we would like to bring you the suggestions made by the North Carolina-Virginia Youth Fellowship in their recent bulletin.

"When May comes into view, we immediately begin wondering what to give mother on Mother's Day. We want to give her something to make her happy. The gift which would bring exceeding joy to the heart of a Christian mother would be an invitation to a Christian Endeavor worship service in her honor.

"The Greensboro group for several years has had either a worship service or a playlet in honor of its mothers. After the Christian Endeavor Vesper, they usually serve tea and sandwiches, and have a bit of fellowship. This group has found that the mothers are very anxious and happy to come, and that they thoroughly enjoy the evening. Are Greensboro Mothers any different from those of all communities?

"Materials and prices for Mother's Day programs are suggested below. These may be secured from the Christian Publishing Company, 219 S. Ludlow Street, Dayton, Ohio.

Paramount Book, 25 cents; Mother's Day Helper, 25 cents; Only Six Letters—Mother, 30 cents; Suggestions for Mothers and Daughters Observation, 15 cents; Mother's Day Suggestion Book, 25 cents.

FLORIDA PILGRIM PROGRESS.

For the first time in several months, the Florida Pilgrim Fellowship has published an issue of its "occasional bulletin" called Pilgrim Progress.

This issue contains a write-up of Miss Eldredge's recent visit to Florida, a summary of the United Youth Movement, of the National Pilgrim Fellowship, and urges Florida young people to attend the meeting of the Southeast Youth Fellowship. It also contains some news from local churches, some personals, and a preliminary announcement of the Florida Summer Conference to be held at Camp Immokalee.

In this issue an appeal was made to the Congregational-Christian young people of Florida to raise some money to help send some Cuban boys and girls to our summer conference. Two years ago one girl went from our West Tampa Cuban Mission, and last year two girls were present. They gained so much from the conference and have talked so much about it that there are others from there who want to go. They are working hard, having "Penny Fairs" and other entertainments to provide the money to send some of their number. We are hoping that the local groups will respond to this appeal and aid some of these worthy young people.

Florida is hoping to issue another copy of its Pilgrim Progress before the summer conference. If there is anyone who would like a copy of this issue, we shall be glad to send it to you.

VIRGINIA VALLEY RALLIES.

Spring rallies for the Virginia Valley Central Youth Fellowship will be held May 7th at Winchester beginning at 7:30 P. M. for District C; May 8th at Concord beginning at 7:30 P. M. for District B; and May 9th at Mt. Olivet (R) beginning at 3 P. M. for District A.

The theme for these rallies is "Building a Greater Youth Fellowship Within the Local Church." Programs are practically complete and will be well worth the effort it may take for pastors and young people to be present. Every pastor and every young person will do well to share in these young people's meetings and to help make them as helpful as possible. Remember the date, and be present for the opening.

WINONA LAKE SCHOOL LISTS SUMMER COURSES.

The management of Winona Lake School of Theology, the institution which is coming to be recognized as "America's Summer Seminary," has just issued its 1937 Prospectus, listing the courses to be given during the coming session of the school.

There will be two semesters of work, July 7th to July 23rd, and July 24th to August 11th. Work will be given for which credit is allowed toward the regular Theological degrees, Bachelor of Theology, Master of Arts (in Theology), Master of Arts (in Religious Education), and Bachelor of Divinity degrees. Work may be pursued in one or both semesters.

Subjects announced for the year are Theology, Religious Education, Church History, Greek New Testament, Old Testament, New Testament, Sacred Music, Evangelism.

Last year twenty states, besides a few foreign countries were represented in the student body, and more than a score of denominations were included in the registration.

For the first time, fifty free rooms are offered to students. The school is high standard, interdenominational, and evangelical, combining all the desired qualities in theological training.

A copy of the twelve page Prospectus may be had by requesting the same from the Dean, addressing him at No. 302 Morton Boulevard, Marion, Indiana.

WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT IT?

One hundred college students were recently asked to rank the Ten Commandments in their order of importance in helping persons meet problems of conduct today. The results were:

1. Thou shalt not kill.
2. Thou shalt not steal.
3. Thou shalt not commit adultery.
4. Honor thy father and mother.
5. Thou shalt not bear false witness.
6. Thou shalt have no other gods.
7. Thou shalt not covet.
8. Thou shalt not take the name of Jehovah in vain.
9. Remember the Sabbath Day.
10. Thou shalt make no graven image.

It is to be noted that there was quite a variation in the answers given by those who were regular church goers, occasional church-goers, and non-church-goers. This whole group, however, seemed to consider more important those Commandments relating to ethical life and moral conduct, rather than to religious institutions.

It would be interesting and worthwhile to have your group use the Ten Commandments as the basis for a meeting some evening and see which ones they consider most important in modern life. Then compare your answers with the order given in Exodus XX. Of course, we must not lose sight of the fact that all of them should be the basis of character-building.

THE OBEDIENCE OF NOAH.

LESSON IV—APRIL 25, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: By faith Noah, being warned by God concerning things not seen as yet, moved with godly fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house.—Hebrews 11:7.

LESSON: Genesis 5:28-9:28.

And Sin when It Hath Run Its Course.

No man liveth to himself and therefore no man sinneth unto himself. When Adam and Eve sinned, sin started its sordid and swift course in human life. There was the "bent to sin" and the thing gathered momentum like a snowball rolling down a hill. Thus we read that in Noah's time "the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and every imagination of the thought of his heart was only evil continually" and that "God looked down upon the earth and behold it was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence." In striking language the Biblical writer says that God was sorry he had made man, so far had he fallen short of His Divine possibilities, and so badly had the divine image been marred.

The Wrath of God.

God is a Father. His essential nature is love. But because His character is holy, He cannot allow sin to go unpunished. As a matter of fact sin punishes itself. God saw that if he was ever to bring to fruition His plans and purposes for the human race He would have to wipe out the civilization with its corruption and violence and make a fresh start. Thus He warned Noah that He was going to destroy the race by a great flood. It is to be noticed that God did not do this in a vindictive spirit—He has no pleasure in the death of the wicked, nor did He do it without adequate warning—Noah was a preacher of righteousness. Let no man say that the road to sin and destruction is not marked with warning signs.

Character in Unwholesome Environment.

Environment does enter in as a factor in human life and in character. But it is not all determinative. Here was a man righteous, a man just and upright, of clean life, and of obedient spirit living in the midst of a sinful and totally depraved generation. Goodness may flourish even in the most inhospitable environment if the life is nourished from within by fellowship with God. It is one thing to get people out of the slums; it is quite another to get the slums out of people. Men can be good in spite of environment. But that does not mean that we should not make the environment as good as possible, especially for immature persons.

Courage of Conviction.

It took courage and faith to do what Noah did. One does not have to have much imagination to realize that Noah had to face ridicule and derision while he was building the ark. This is harder to bear than outright persecution. But Noah knew that God had spoken to him, and by faith he obeyed. He was moved with "Godly fear." And by his obedience he not only saved himself, he saved others.

The Wages of Sin.

"And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth . . . and all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man"—everything but the animals and the folks that Noah had in the ark. It was the ultimate outworking of sin unrestrained. God had to destroy the race and start all over again. And even the animal creation suffered because of the sin of man.

Building An Altar.

"And Noah builded an altar unto the Lord." God's goodness awakened and quickened his sense of gratitude, and he established an altar, the symbol of praise and worship and sacrifice. How grateful we should be after deliverance from evil, physical and moral! How important it is that we have a visible object of worship to keep alive the sense of the unseen God! How impotent and meaningless is life without prayer and sacrifice!

The Bow of Promise.

"I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between men and the earth." It is not specifically called a rainbow but it was undoubtedly that. What a fitting symbol of the promise of a new and better day. What a symbol of hope, with its bright colors against the dark background of the storm-clouds! It is the pledge of God's covenant with His people. It is a reminder of His constancy and His care. And incidentally it is a token that no more shall the earth be covered with a flood—we have God's word for that.

The Ugly Specter of Strong Drink.

"And Noah drank of the wine, and was drunken; and he was uncovered within his tent." From the beginning strong drink has brought men to shame and trouble. Here was this good man debauched and brought to shame by the fruit of the cup. The curse of the drink evil is spread on the pages of the early story of the human race. And modern methods of advertising and salesmanship, plus the habit-forming power of strong drink itself are writing that curse on the pages of modern life. It would seem as if in the very beginning God would warn men regarding the use of this dangerous beverage.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LITERATURE WANTED.

All used and out-of-date Sunday School literature from the Holland Christian Church was turned over to one of our colored brethren who is Supervisor of Church School work in this area for our Negro Churches. He can use all literature of this kind that may be secured. May we ask that each Church in the Conference having such literature on hand send it to the next Association Meeting by their pastor and we will be glad to turn it over to our fellow Christians for use. You may be assured that anything you do will be appreciated.

Any white church having a dozen or more copies of old or discarded hymn books will be gladly accepted for use in colored churches and Sunday Schools where there are no books.

CARL R. KEY.

"LET ME KEEP MY BIBLE."

"Let me keep my Bible," said Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek when all books and writing materials were taken from him by his captors. Col. J. L. Huang, his secretary, secured this precious volume and during those tense days of solitude, China's Man of the Hour gained strength and courage from it, refusing steadfastly to sign any papers or make any compromises. "No matter whether it be an individual or a nation, the loss of integrity is tantamount to death itself," declared the Generalissimo in his now famous address to the rebellious officers. "I consider life or death a small matter compared to the upholding of moral principles. Honesty, righteousness and love of the people are the important moral characteristics for our country."

MONDAY.

HEAD-WAGGING.

"They that passed by railed on him, wagging their heads."—Matt. 27:3.

We love to indulge in post-Easter thoughts. That is about all we have thought about lately. In fact Easter seems so new and fresh that we feel that it has been the most glorious Easter we ever experienced. The lay people tell us that they have never heard so much said about Easter before in their lives. It has come over the radio and in much public activity.

And yet are we just wagging our heads? It is easy to do. It is easy to be blind to the real significance of it all. It is believed that more mob celebration without an intent of Christian dedication or holy devotion, may be as derisive to our Lord as the mockery of those who passed by the Cross.

Prayer—O Lord, we bow before the Christ, praying for His likeness in us, and for a pure devotion that follows clear through as devout children of the Father. In Christ's name, we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

OUR CHRIST'S ENDURING KINGDOM.

"His dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away."—Daniel 7:14.

One of the lessons of the Resurrection is the fulfillment of this prophecy. In the resurrection Christ became Master of all the forces of the universe. Forever he banished the idea that mere brute force could ever triumph over love, and that despair can never permanently take the place of hope in the human heart. It demonstrated that there is something about man, at his highest and best, that cannot be touched, that is immortal and endures forever.

Daniel foresaw and foretold this everlasting Kingdom. We ourselves declare that in the social service, we render humanity, in the Church, the Red Cross, and charities. We are emphasizing the value of the human soul which God has placed there through His Son Jesus Christ.

It is good to belong to this permanence, to feel ourselves a part of His matchless strength.

Prayer—O Lord, give unto us our lives the character of Thy eternal.

May every day add to the power of His glory in us; and may we be found always entering into His Kingdom. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE LIGHTENING'S PATH AND GOD'S WAY.

"He made a decree for the rain, and a way for the lightening of the thunder."—Job. 28:26.

Thunder and lightening are a terrific phenomena of nature. No wonder that the ancients pictured their gods in the thunder-bolts. Our own religious training represents God as holding supremacy over these things and decreeing the way they should take.

But, of course, that is only a symbol. He is the power of all powers and makes both the evil and the good to serve Him. This elicits our faith according to His word. It helps us to believe that in the realm of His love and kingdom, whatever may happen may be turned into good. It makes real to us His word: "He doeth all things well to them that love and serve him." In such a trust, we will not tremble, though the skies flame and the earth quake.

Prayer—Dear Father, bid us come to Thee where there is no fear and where thou dost direct all fearful things. Make our paths straight and give us the courage to walk therein. Amen.

THURSDAY.

SWIFT WITNESSING AGAINST SIN.

"I will be a swift witness . . . saith the Lord of hosts."—Mal. 3:5.

Here is a new thought, or perhaps an old thought with a new angle: the swiftness of the Lord God against sin.

We are slow in our vision, sluggish in our testimony, and timid in our speech against sin; we are even vague oftentimes in our ideas about it. In the courts judges and juries are often perplexed to render a proper decision.

But when Jesus walked into the temple and found a den of thieves and robbers, His action was immediate and definite and there was no "soft-soaping" anybody, and what He did pierced even the thoughts and intents of the heart.

What a beautiful example for us to follow! Though we be weak and frail, plain human beings, this is an example we can cultivate. At last when before the judgment bar of Him who is both witness and judge, we shall see "is fairness and justice and be able to stand."

Prayer—Dear Father, we come to Thee. Help us to so live that at the judgment bar, Jesus, Thy Son and our Savior, may plead our case. Amen.

FRIDAY.

"GADDING ABOUT."

"Why gaddest thou about so much to change thy way?"—Jer. 2:36.

It has been said that a "gadger" is one who is continually running around hither and thither, forever hunting for something new, seeking new experiences and never satisfied with what he gets. The Lord says, "seek ye the old paths and inquire therein the way."

There is a wonderful advantage in permanence: the old home, old friends, old literature, the old church, all furnish a sustaining and comforting circle which keep one in his later years from getting lonely.

We commend the old ways and the old truths of the Bible; we commend the blessed association of Christian people; we commend the paths of honor, the lanes of peace and devotion to a God who is the same yesterday, today and forever.

Prayer—To Thee, O Lord, we dedicate our lives. Hold us fast and suffer us not to go astray. Amen.

SATURDAY.

BRASS FOR GOLD.

"King Rehoboam made in their stead shields of brass."—I. Kings 14:27.

The reprobate son of Solomon! He removed the shields of the temple and substituted brass.

Such is any life given over to sin. It loses its beauty, its worth and its usefulness and substitutes shame in their stead. It tries to fool others, but at last sin itself finds it out. Brass is not gold, neither is unrighteousness righteousness.

Prayer—Dear Father, our souls cry out unto Thee of sheer helplessness. We strive to abide with Thee and to have Thy worth with us forever. Amen.

SUNDAY.

THE MASTER OF THE FORCES OF THE UNIVERSE, EVEN DEATH.

"O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"—I. Cor. 15:55.

At the time of the crucifixion of Christ the world was at its worst. Philosophers and theologians had discussed immortality, but never were they able to convince the people that there was life after death. They

THE DIVINE DISCONTENT.

By REV. JOHN H. KNIGHT,

United Congregational Christian Church, LaGrange, Georgia.

"It repented the Lord that He had made man on the earth and it grieved Him at His Heart."—Genesis 6:6.

A young pastor returned home tired and discouraged. All day long he had wrestled with sin and suffering. But the think that had hurt him most was the spiritual heedlessness of his people.

"Mary," he said to his wife, "I wish that I had a job like others, where I could go to the shop and work eight hours a day, getting grease and grime up to the elbows, knowing when the whistle blew the day would be over. Then I could come home and sit down and eat a meal and enjoy it."

But Mary, wise and understanding, spoke up as inspired by the Lord. "Tom, there are thousands of men who can work in the shops. It is true that when their day's work is over they go home feeling that now they can rest until tomorrow. But Tom, God has planned that there should be some who should suffer eternal discomfort. You are one of those men whom the Master has commissioned for the care of souls." And his courage was renewed.

Our God is not uninterested in this world's events. Rather He is supremely interested in them, and even to what some of us mortals might be pleased to call "trivial" matters. Some characterize God as never greatly disturbed about anything.

Such a characterization of God places Him in the category of the Sphinx and the Reclining Buddha. We may be assured that God does not live in the realms of Nirvana nor is so deeply engrossed in heavenly affairs, that He is oblivious of the vicissitudes that confront His earthly children. God knows people. And because He does, He is filled with a divine discontent.

A minister once remarked on a "blue Monday," "I am glad that I don't know any more people in this town than I do." When asked what he meant by this strange statement, he replied, "Because if I knew any more people I should be more unhappy than I am at present."

How divinely discontented then must be the heart of God, who knows everyone! "For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth." (II. Chron. 16:9.) "I am the Lord that searchest the heart." (Jeremiah 17:10.) How unhappy must He be with the indifference so apparent today on the part of His Church. How unhappy must the Divine Heart be with the carelessness of living, of which so many of us are guilty. How unhappy must He be with the sins that fester our souls.

Many of the good people of our churches have no conception of the devilry going on in the world around them. Christians are too prone to live in a little world by themselves. While we are enjoying the worship of God and the civilization of spiritual graces, all around us spring up awful conditions, corruption in politics, injustice in society, the disintegration of moral standards. We must be realists enough in these days to face the facts. Only a mole could be as blind to existing conditions as God's people have been. Conditions are literally appalling. How can Christians remain contented and happy in view of all this?

Now if knowledge of conditions serves to increase divine discontent, then God is, of all persons, most divinely discontented. His spirit is torn with the waywardness of man. The Ancient of Days who sitteth in splendor is also the grief-stricken God in whose mind is an eternal discontent, and in His heart there was a Cross long before the Crucifixion.

The offense against God is greater today than ever before. The light of the Gospel has shone upon this world for well nigh two-thousand years. We no longer can give the excuse of the pre-Christian eras, "No one has showed us the way." The way has been opened for us and Christ has proclaimed the glad tidings. How much the condemnation if we reject the Gospel light.

In what degree do we share this Divine Discontent? This is a serious question. Are we as individuals, or as a society responsible for a great part of that Divine Discontent? This too, is a disquieting challenge to our spiritual indolence. We have been too much at ease. He calls us into action. May we share the Divine Discontentment of God and awake from our indifference.

"Rise up, O men of God,
Have done with lesser things,
Give heart and soul and mind,
To serve the Kings of kings."

FAMILY ALTAR.

still asked the question, "If a man die shall they live again." They wondered about immortality.

This Easter time has brought to us the fact afresh that the resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ was God's way of settling this question. It was God's way of convincing humanity that there is something about a man at his highest and best which cannot be touched by death." He lives and we shall live despite everything.

That value which God has placed on a human soul has been handed down now till the most of people regard human life with utmost consideration. We spend our money and our life-blood to help the needy.

Prayer—O Thou Most High God, sanctify our souls in heavenly humility and undying love, for one another and for God and His Kingdom. Amen.

AN INFIDEL'S SERMON TO A PREACHER.

Never shall I forget the remark of a learned, legal friend who was at one time somewhat skeptical in his views. Said he:

"Did I believe as you do, that the masses of our race are perishing in sin, I could have no rest. I would fly to tell them of salvation. I would labor day and night. I would speak it with all the pathos I could summon. I would warn and expostulate and entreat my fellowmen to turn unto Christ and receive salvation at my hands.

"I am astonished at the manner in which the majority of you ministers tell your message. Why do you not act as if you believed your own words? You have not the earnestness in preaching that we lawyers have in pleading. If we were as you are, we would never carry a single suit."

A decade of years has passed away since that remark was made. I bless God that it was addressed to me. It put a fire into my bones which I hope will burn as long as I live. God preached a stirring sermon to me that day by the mouth of that infidel lawyer.—Peter Etryker in The Gospel Banner.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

Sixty eight dollars and seventy seven cents in our financial report this week. The smallest weekly income we have had in a long time. And nearly our hundred children to care for! Think of it!

Everything we buy is high in price. And we have to buy. The children must be fed and clothed. The bills made during the month must be paid at the end of the month to keep our credit good. Oh! If all our churches and Sunday Schools would take a greater interest and help, how much easier it would make the work. This is the situation April 17th:

You see from this table that we have more churches not giving than there are giving. What a pity! You have elected me the Superintendent of your Orphanage, can you expect me to run it without your help? Every soldier is expected to keep step with the others in his company. Every church is expected to help support the Christian Orphanage. It is an institution of the Congregational Christian Church and is dependent on the churches for its support. I want to appeal to the one hundred and eight churches not on the giving list to come to the rescue of the Orphanage and help. We need you. Think of the widow with four little children trying to exist on $5.00 per month. She has appealed to your Orphanage to take two of her children. Do you want to help her? She is a member of the Christian Church.

THE FLOWERING OF NEW ENGLAND.

By VAN WYCK BROOKS.

Here we have a masterpiece indeed! Upon that the critics have agreed with one accord and the demand of the public, sending it into its sixteenth printing, would seem also to give assent. Van Wyck Brooks, whose "Life of Emerson" thrilled so many of you, has given us a literary history of great proportions and of noble perspective. "The Flowering of New England" belongs to that class of thrilling books whose sweeping grasp of a historical period, whose intuitive perception of poetic genius, defy any description.

Imagine, if you will, a great symphony in which we are gathered beautiful. (Continued on page 15.)

HEAD.

Whereas it was the will of our Heavenly Father to call our friend, Tom L. Head on March 20, 1937, we again affirm our faith in the precious promises of Christ concerning the provision made for those who love Him. We, the Sunday school of the First Christian Church of Roanoke, Ala., offer the following tribute to his memory. Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we are grateful for what his life has meant to us for the peaceful, kind, and happy life that seemed to be his.
2. That we realize God doeth all things well and while we mourn the loss of one who meant much to his home and community, we bow in humble submission to His divine will.
3. That we extend to his wife and family our deepest sympathy, realizing that they have lost a good, kind, and loving husband and father.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be spread upon the Sunday School secretary's book.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. MERVIN HARPER,
MR. V. E. KITCHENS,
MRS. V. E. KITCHENS.

SHERMAN.

We, the members of the Sunday School of Roanoke First Christian Church, wish to pay tribute to the memory of William Sherman, who died March 9, 1937.

His going has brought deep sorrow to those who knew him. Therefore be it resolved:

1. That in his death the Adult Bible Class has lost a constant and faithful member.
2. That while we believe our loss is his gain, we can but commend his family and loved ones to the All-Wise and All-Gracious Heavenly Father who "doeth all things well."
3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family one sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be spread upon the Sunday School secretary's book.

Respectfully submitted,

tiful themes hardly touched upon by the other masters—for Van Wyck Brooks is certainly a master of prose and analysis. Then you begin to appreciate this book. Bring together the nostalgic note of Lewis Mumford's "The Golden Day," the sombre chords in "The Education of Henry Adams," the deep understanding of James' "Life of Chas. N. Elliott," and the patriotic medley of James Truslow Adams' "The Adams Family." Place these on the high melodic plane of the magnificent "Rise of American Civilization" Charles A. and Mary R. Beard and you have then perceived the scope and mettle of Brooks' writing.

Brooks mastered almost all the literature produced during 1815 to 1865 in New England, when that growing section of America took the best in Continental Europe's culture and consciously tried to create a Renaissance on the Atlantic Seaboard. No easy task—that! In a style that borders on the fictional—so racy and gripping are many of the paragraphs—and wandering not one whit from a scholarly approach, Brooks takes the reader by the hand on page one and leads through the enchanted maze of New England literature during that great half century.

In a lovely backdrop of colonial Boston, Brooks shows us the "Christian Sparta," the term given it by the doughty Samuel Adams. Here was to be the true "Athens of America,"—the city of God, as the fruition of Jonathon Edwards' millennial visions. Here would emanate the knowledge of the nation, for these progenitors of the Lowells and the Cabots "lived and moved, walked and spoke as if their little town were a holy city, and Rome, London, and Paris were their suburbs."

Religion did not play a minor role, but played rather a negative one—as in the Renaissance of the 15th century. In this case of the 19th century, there was a terrific reaction against Calvinism. In Italy several centuries ago, the storm arose when the humanists broke away from the Roman Catholicism and beheld the "new learning" arise like a phoenix from the ashes of feudalism. Brooks does not draw the parallel, but the inference is unmistakable. Did there not arise "a mild and tolerant Unitarianism, rationalistic, torpid, utilitarian—known far and wide as the Boston religion?"

From this "negative and pallid religion" there sprang an impetus "favorable to the flowering of the mind." Here was William Ellery Channing, "the impassioned little saint with the burning heart, whose intellect was the conscience of New England." There was Ralph Waldo Emerson, who left the Church for the greener groves of Concord and a life of leisurely letters. Such was the Yankee bent! No wonder the wise Santayana, in our own day, looks back on his life which was so intricately entwined with this "Indian Summer" and slyly refers to the faith of that day as being "amusingly irreligious!"

Figures of legendary fame walk across the pages: George Ticknor, whose "Wanderjahre" takes one all over Europe; John Quincy Adams, whose hobbies in the cultural arts caused everybody to think him "just a bit queer;" Daniel Webster, Edward Everett, Jared Sparks, and George Bancroft, paragons of platform, pen, and pulpit; the kindly Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, benevolent already in his youth; the romantic exiles; and countless others who gave such lustre to "The Golden Day."

We can simply point to the wealth of material that here lies at your disposal—intellectual food of the rarest cuisine, savoring of an erudition that is not stifling, of the piquant phrase and apt anecdote that merit retelling, of the informative character that overflows with pertinent facts, and the cool objectivity and literary chef would envy. You have a rare treat in store for you and we'll venture to say you'll linger over each morsel in this grand feast!

CARL HERMAN VOSS.

If I can stop one heart from breaking,

I shall not live in vain.

If I can ease one life the aching,

Or coll one pain,

Or help one fainting Robin

Into his nest again

I shall not live in vain.

Where Violets Grow

By ELMER L. DAUGHTREY.

Out in my yard the violets grow,
And raise their heads in scattered row,
They have just awakened from their sleep,
Out on this drowsy world to peep
As heralds of the days that bring
The fragrant fullness of the spring.

In balmy days when violets grow
There's something bids me plant and sow,
And I must break the resting earth
That fine new life may find its birth,
That spring, with promise in its call,
May lead me on to fruitful fall.

So I am glad when violets bring
The first bright days of fertile spring,
For soon each hillside, dale and farm
Will teem with life of matchless charm,
Soon branch and stem, now bleak and bare,
Will toss gay bloom on fragrant air.

I wonder why these things are so,
When in my yard the violets grow.
I know the buds have mystic power,
That fruit will come in timely hour,
That soon great floods of green and gold
With all earth's sleeping forms unfold.

So, I seek through verdant maze
The answer to such wondrous ways,
My eager steps lead all around
Where truth in splendid forms abound,
And each new day, enchanting spring
Reveals God's hand in everything.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL-CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Richmond, Virginia

It was at the Twenty-Eighth Biennial Session of the Southern Christian Convention, held in the First Christian Church of Richmond, Virginia, May 1 to 4, 1928, that the resolution was adopted, recommending that the "Convention approve these recommendations" which the joint committee on Union of the Congregational and Christian Churches had submitted to their respective general bodies, and recommended to the General and Executive Committees of the Christian Church that they proceed "to consummate the union of our two churches." Among those present at the sessions of the convention were the following representatives of the Congregational Church: Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, D. D., Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, D. D., Rev. Frank E. Jenkins, D. D., Rev. Lewis W. Keller, D. D., Rev. Robert L. Kelley, D. D., Rev. F. P. Ensminger, D. D., Rev. J. Edward Kirby, D. D.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

All delegates and visitors to the 25th Anniversary Celebration of the Woman's Missionary Convention which meets in Suffolk Christian Church at 2:30 and 8:00 P. M., May 13, 1937, who desire homes for the night, please notify Mrs. J. E. Rawls, Chairman Hospitality Committee

The Southeast Convention was a success in every particular. The representation was good, when distances are considered. The writer of this note drove 460 miles in one day of the going trip and stretched this mileage to approximately 575 on the return, with a total trip mileage of nearly 1,600 miles, but it was worth it. The good people of Jacksonville are to be commended for the way in which they entertained the Convention.

For the second time in less than two years, it is a race between THE SUN and the river. Extremely heavy rains in the watershed of the James River above the City of Richmond, have caused flood waters which may reach even higher than did those of last year when the city gas works were flooded and the city was without gas for several days. It is reported that there will be no gas for cooking or commercial purposes if the river continues to rise. So it is a race to put THE SUN into type before the river floods the gas works.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hardecastle of Dover, Delaware, celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary on Wednesday, April 21st, with an informal "At Home" to their friends in the afternoon, and a Family Reunion Dinner in the evening. Every member of the immediate family, including children and grandchildren were present for this happy occasion. Later in the evening, Rev. H. S. Hardecastle read an appropriate Golden Wedding Anniversary Service in the presence of the members of the family, and Mr. and Mrs. Hardecastle renewed their vow and covenant made fifty years ago. This event will always be a happy memory in the lives of all of those who were present.

The many friends of Mrs. Sallie S. Lincoln will learn with deep regret of her passing away on the morning of April 8th, at the Mercer Hospital, Trenton, New Jersey. Since the death of her husband, Prof. J. J. Lincoln, she had made her home with her son, Dr. A. L. Lincoln of Lawrenceville,

New Jersey. Her other son, Dr. Jennings S. Lincoln, lives at Upper Montclair, New Jersey. The funeral services were held in Trenton, with Rev. Calvin J. Felton of Irvington, New Jersey officiating, and her remains were laid to rest in the family burial plot in Lacey Springs, Virginia. For many years Prof. and Mrs. Lincoln lived at Elon College, where Prof. Lincoln taught. Mrs. Lincoln for quite a while wrote a devotional prayer weekly for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and was an active worker in church life until ill health prevented.

BISCOE DISTRICT RALLY.

The District Rally of the Woman's Conference of the Christian Church, met with the Biscoe Church, April 16, 1937, Mrs. R. E. Caviness, district chairman presided.

Mrs. Elbert Brown, district secretary, recorded the proceedings. Seven churches sent 19 representatives with good reports.

Three ministers were present and added much to the occasion by their inspirational talks.

Dr. C. H. Rowland, of the Greensboro Church made the principal address representing Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College who was unable to be present.

Mrs. Wisseman, of the Greensboro Church, spoke on "Our Missionaries," our literature and made able suggestions for the young people's work.

At the noon recess, the ladies of the Biscoe Church served a picnic dinner to the 100 guests and delegates.

The meeting was helpful and inspiring to the workers present, and will be felt in the societies back home.

Much credit for the success of the Rally was due to the cooperation of the pastor, Rev. W. C. Martin and his splendid wife, and Rev. S. M. Penn, of Sophia Church.

STEWARDSHIP IN EASTERN VIRGINIA.

Sometime ago the Stewardship Committee of the Eastern Virginia Congregational-Christian Conference planned a program and placed a copy in the hands of each minister. One of the principle items of the program was a week of stewardship meetings for pastors, church officers, and leaders, reaching every church in the Conference. Dr. Warren H. Denison, Assistant Secretary of the General Council and Executive Secretary of the Commission on Christian Stewardship, was the principle lecturer and leader.

These meetings were held in the following churches and in the following places: Holland, Windsor, Sunbury, Wakefield, Franklin, Suffolk, Norfolk (First Church), Newport News, and Richmond. In each place the groups were interested and appreciative. The Stewardship Committee feels that much good was accomplished and that a better understanding and keener consciousness of the scope of stewardship was attained.

We have made a good beginning. The opportunity lies in the work yet to be done. We plan to have the course in Christian Stewardship taught in our local training schools at Elon and Franklinton. But this is not enough. We hope that the local churches will plan for courses or lessons in stewardship. It would be a fine thing if some month during the Church Year were designated as stewardship period for a thorough study of the subject and its relation to life. The young people, adult and prayer meeting groups are excellent places for such study. The pastor might be asked to preach two or more sermons on it. The Committee Chairman will be glad to conduct classes or lead discussion group for four or five sessions on Mondays and Tuesdays of any week that you may care to arrange.

The following materials are suggested for use in worship and study along stewardship lines: Irwin G. Paulsen's "It is to Share" (Methodist Book Concern), Paper, 50c; Ina C. Brown's "Jesus' Teaching On The Use of Money" (Cokesbury Press), Cloth, $1.00, Paper, 50c; Guy L. Morrill's "Laughing Stewardship Through" (Richard R. Smith, Inc.), $1.00; Francis J. McConnell's "Christian Materialism, United Stewardship Council (Friendship Press), Cloth, $1.25, Paper 60c; Williamson and Wallace's "Stewardship in the Life of Youth" ((Fleming H. Revell Co.), Cloth $1.00, Paper, 50c; three pamphlets from the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., Philadelphia, Pa., "What Lack I Yet?", "Stewardship for Today and Why Give?"; and from Commission on Christian Stewardship, 287 Fourth Ave., N. Y., "The Christian Acquisition and Use of Money" for all groups, 10c each, and "Denison's Financing the Local Church for Kingdom Building," 5c each. Some of these materials will be in the hands of your Committee Chairman soon and he will be glad to lend them so far as is practicable. Please write him for any help or suggestions at any time.

SPEAKING OF NEIGHBORS.

With apologies to Della T. Lutes in "American Mercury"

A good neighbor means more than living next door and minding your own business, allowing everyone else the same privilege. Someone had asked: "Where is the old country doctor, who grew up with the idea that God created physicians to serve the people?" I would like to ask, "Where is the old fashioned neighbor who would come and sit up all night with the sick and have warm, prepared meals brought in for the distressed family?"

A good neighbor knows all about you. He knows you have faults—and loves you in spite of it. In the small country town, where as a little boy I lived and worked, a good neighbor never let you down. There were a few shiftless whites and many lazy negroes who depended upon those who were a little better off. But there was no class distinction when the neighbors were in trouble. Those better fixed never thought it beneath their dignity to lend a helping hand in time of famine or pestilence. Those better off never turned the deserving away—and, whether deserving or not, in time of trouble one got help just the same. But nowadays the so-called neighbors shun a house where there is sickness as they would a plague.

Father was a primitive Baptist—and a great believer in humanity—roots and herbs for its many ills. He had a cure for every ailment of man or beast—provided, of course, they followed his directions in taking the root extracts. If one ever failed to get good results after taking Yellow Root Tea, it was simply a matter of not taking it long enough or strong enough. If one died, it was God's intention that he or she should die, and nothing under the sun could have saved them. Many times his tea must have the assistance of a certain amount of the spirits of wine to get the correct medicinal value. In defense of this he would always quote "There is nothing from without a man that entering into him can defile him; but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man."

The Ross negroes were a lazy lot—all sixteen of 'em. They depended upon the neighbors for their living. Old Dick Ross was too tired to till the little patch of land around the house. So he would come over and pretend to do some work for fresh garden stuff. Nora, his wife, had her hands full bossing the older children in the ways of cooking and minding the smaller ones—they had fourteen for the neighbors to feed.

Whenever one got sick, Father—who was called "Doc"—would be asked to come over and administer a plaster of leaves or root extract. It was too much to ask old Dick to go into the woods for his own, when "Doc" had it already "fixed."

Of course nobody ever paid "Doc" for his trouble of digging and boiling the roots. One never thought of making a charge for just helping a neighbor. It's different now. The person who helps you expects you to reward him for every single service—and will talk about you being a stingy old miser if you refuse to offer pay. To-day if one calls upon the minister to present a special gift—outside his regular due—it almost always has strings attached. The price of being recipient of a favor these day comes high.

Certainly they found fault—these old time neighbors—for often they took the other fellow too much for granted. But all in all, they liked you and never thought of you in any other way but a neighbor.

Many times one was expected to get out of bed in the early morning to administer a gallon of hot water to a neighbor suffering from cramp colic, or help him with a sick cow. But now if a man knocks on his door in the middle of the night, he thinks of men being taken for a ride. If one hears a scream of pain in the night, he hesitates to investigate for fear he will be asked to testify in court—so he minds his own business.

In one of our weekly magazines recently, I saw a picture of a man lying unconscious on the walk of one of our large cities. He lay there for twenty minutes, while hundreds passed by, not daring to help the sick man. Finally an old gentleman saw him and helped him to a hospital. People are afraid to be a neighbor these days.

The old time neighbors far excelled us in always being ready to help at any hour of the day or night. Sleep and rest, to them, was of no importance when a neighbor was in trouble. I remember one dark, cold night we children were awakened by a loud, distressed voice calling for "Doc." It was two in the morning and freezing weather. The house was sold, for the fire had long since gone out in the open fire-place. Father arose to go with this man, who had called for help. His little boy was very sick. It was late morning when Father came home. Mother had a warm fire going and a hot breakfast on the table. We children saw the worn, sad look on Father's face as he entered quietly. Listening in from the living room, we heard him say softly to Mother:

"Yes, Georgie—the little Williams boy passed away—about six this morning. Mrs. Williams will need your comfort. There's not much one can do now—but just being around will help a lot."

Just being around in time of trouble is a virtue we have about lost.

THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

The joint meeting of the Southeast Convention and the Florida State Conference at the Union Congregational Church in Jacksonville, Florida, presented a vigorous and interesting program of sustained strength throughout. It dealt consistently with vital questions of modern religious life and kept the concrete issue of Christian education, a Christian social order and the evangelist and missionary work of the church constantly in the foreground of thought.

Its spiritual emphasis and atmosphere from the beginning to the close was impressive with its sincerity, passion and sane optimism. In each session spiritual power from fresh reservoirs and deep springs of thought, feeling and practical experience gave evidence of the speakers' intimate contact with the life of today and the life of Jesus dealing with it through them.

The program was full; there were no breathing places where one might safely take a nap or go sight-seeing, and since no one wished to miss any good thing every session was well attended. Fine delegations came from the eight states of the Southeast Convention; and the Union Congregational Church was equal to the emergency of an unexpected large attendance and provided royal entertainment.

Without doubt this meeting, more than any other convention of our Southeast fellowship has made us aware of our common interests and tasks and has brought us into far more lively self-consciousness as the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches. If, in the wisdom of men, some name can be adopted sometime to take the place of the compound designation of our denomination, a greatly needed step will be taken in eliminating the consciousness of our former separate existences, and in cementing the union of these two splendid groups in one indifferentiated fellowship.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

A GREAT MEETING.

Those attending the Southeast Convention last week in Jacksonville, Florida, were agreed that it was a great meeting. The program was executed about as planned, and was both happy and helpful. Attendance was larger than anticipated, but the church entertained in excellent Southern fashion. Every state in the convention was well represented. It was a delight to be part of this great fellowship.

A more complete report will appear in the paper next week, if the editor succeeds in getting back to his desk after loafing in Florida for a few days following the convention.

ARE THEY RIGHT?

The Board of Publications and officials of the Southern Convention thought that the members of our churches should read "The Christian Sun," and they would read it if the price were reduced. These officials are of the same opinion still. They believe that those who lead in the local churches need to know the plans and programs of the Convention and of the Church at large. They believe that growing children and young people should get some early ideas concerning the larger outlook of the Church. They believe that "The Christian Sun" can give needed information to those who are striving to make the world better. They believe that those who seek to be Christians can be aided in their struggle by reading "The Christian Sun." Are they right? Can this paper make a real contribution to members of Congregational and Christian Churches in the Southeast? If it is not doing it, what can be done to make it accomplish its purpose?

We have been told from various sources that if the price were reduced, subscriptions would come in; that $2.00 is a bit too high for a church paper like "The Christian Sun." Your Board of Publications is waiting to be convinced, for it has accepted the challenge and offered an introductory rate of $1.50 for new subscribers during the period leading up to June 1st, next. This is far less than it costs to print the paper, but if the paper can have real value then it may be worth the effort. For more than a month this offer has been made. Perhaps it is not yet time to get a report from the churches that are working on it, but up to the present, the number of new subscriptions is remarkably few. Your editor is beginning to wonder if the change in price was the necessary change. He is aware that many churches are working on subscription lists, but he is also aware that it is not long until this offer must be discontinued. Were the members of your Board of Publications correct in their opinion that the churches would respond and that many new subscribers would be secured during this special offer? The answer lies with the churches, and your editor, as well as the Board of Publications, is waiting anxiously for the final reports.

SHALL WE CHANGE?

During recent years only a small section of our Southern Convention read its Church paper. One is inclined to believe that many more of them read daily papers that cost several times as much, and many magazines that were not worth the time it took to read them. The depression years made many people discontinue buying many of the things they wanted, but those depression years are gone now and people are spending more freely. Will our church members begin to read the Church paper?

Criticisms have gone the rounds that churches and church people are a little bit negligent concerning duties and responsibilities. We can no longer blame the depression for our failures. This is the day of aggression, of forward movement, of hope and determination, of reaching out, of moving forward. Will the Church of which we are a part expand in like measure? Will it become aggressive, take on new responsibilities, do a larger service, receive new members and put them to work in the Church and the Kingdom of God? On this bright spring day it seems natural to believe that every church person and every church group will want to be in the forefront of those who are moving forward under the banner of Jesus who is King of kings and Lord of lords. Under His leadership these churches of ours can multiply their usefulness, can reach out a helping hand to larger circles than heretofore. Will we change, or will we go on in the regular routine and do the things just as they have been done through the years?

The crying need of our present day is for a changing Church, for a changing world. The message is the same, and the Master is the same, but the Church faces new responsibilities.

It is the hope of "The Christian Sun" to be able to aid individuals and church groups to measure up to their high responsibilities, to guide them in their search for truth and in their endeavor to work co-operatively, and to give them inspiration as they move forward in Church work. But "The Christian Sun" is limited in its usefulness by its subscription list. If the churches will put the paper in the homes of its people, "The Christian Sun" will do its best by the members of the families who read its pages. This is a cooperative enterprise that calls for tremendous change on the part not only of those responsible for the paper, but also for the members of the churches who must of necessity secure the subscriptions in order for the paper to mean the most in a changing world. Your personal cooperation is urgently solicited in an endeavor to bring the Christian message to the homes of the people connected with Congregational and Christian churches throughout the Southeast.

"A ROUND TABLE ON EVANGELISM AND WORSHIP."

By REV. ROY C. HELFENSTEIN,

Minister, People's Congregational-Christian Church, Dover, Delaware.

During the past decade numerous rewarding "Round-Tables," dealing with various themes vital to the well-being of the church, have been conducted in various sections of the nation by our Department of Evangelism and Devotional Life, under the most able direction of Dr. Frederick L. Fagley, Secretary of the Commission. The literature that has been published, resulting from some of these Round-Tables, has been most stimulating and practically helpful to pastors and other workers in the field of religious education. A person has only to attend one of these Round-Table Discussions to be convinced of the great opportunity they afford for creative and cooperative thinking on the part of those who participate, and to realize the peculiar value the findings of such groups may be to the general work of the denomination.

Dr. Fagley is a past-master in the art of selecting groups of congenial personalities with different backgrounds, and having varied viewpoints, to consider together the problems of religious leaders who seek worthily to serve the church and society in the present-day with its peculiar perplexities and disillusionments. New conditions call for new duties to be accepted by the church, and for new approaches to the age-old problem of directing the thoughts and lives of men and women, boys and girls along the paths of religious faith and right conduct. The value of the Round-Table method is suggested by the old proverb: "In the multitude of counselors there is safety." But there is something more than safety—there is revelation—the revelation of how little one person's opinion counts in the face of a pronounced diversity of opinion, and yet how valuable each person's opinion is in arriving at a common ground of appreciation and evaluation. Pooling the opinions and experiences of a group in this manner gives a consensus of opinion and judgment which is far superior to the best thought of any single individual of the group, and thus offers material of unique value to all others interested in the subject under consideration. The Round-Table will prove of inestimable value to the church in every phase of its work in the days ahead.

The last Round-Table conducted under the auspices of our National Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life, and personally directed by Dr. Frederick L. Fagley—the Secretary of The Commission—was recently held at the Country Club of Bel Air, Maryland, an unusually interested and delightful place for such a meeting.

In response to the request of the group there assembled, I submit this brief comment on The Round-Table:

The theme for consideration was "The Educational Aspects of Evangelism and Worship." The time of the meeting was March 29th and 30th, thus the pastors in the group came fresh from the inspiration of their Lenten and Easter programs and experiences, eager to give and eager to receive any contribution of thought that would help to discover and utilize the Educational Aspects of Evangelism and Worship. Sixteen of the eighteen men invited to participate in the Round-Table were present, the other two sending their sincere regrets in being unavoidably detained at home. Those attending represented the work of the Congregational-Christian Church in North Carolina, Virginia, Delaware, the District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and the state of New York.

Promptly at the hour scheduled for the Round-Table to begin, the group gathered in the large drawing-room of the Country Club; a brief but impressive devotional service was conducted; the task at hand was presented by Dr. Fagley, and the meeting was turned over to the two chairmen for that session. Two chairmen were appointed for each session, and two secretaries were appointed to serve throughout the different sessions.

The objective of the Round-Table was:

(1) To discover in the present educational technique those principles which are of most worth in religion?

(2) What materials do pastors need in addition to what is already available for religious teaching?

(3) Definite suggestions of practical helpfulness to pastors concerning the preparation of young people for the worship and work of the church; and

(4) What can the pastor do at the point where the formal religious education program ends on a group basis and becomes individual?

Various questions arose in the discussions which naturally every pastor has to face—such questions as (1) Should there be a minimum age limit at which time children would be permitted to unite with the church? (2) Or should the personal equation of the boy or girls—their background, their home-life, their religious tendencies, their mental and spiritual appreciations and alertness, their dependableness etc., etc., be the determining factor as to whether or not they should be granted the privilege of uniting with the church? (3) Should the catechism be ruled out as a method in religious education? Or should the values of the catechism be conserved with the use of a modern content in the questions and answers?

(4) Should membership in our churches be based upon Infant Baptism or only on personal decision?

(5) What is the best plan for conducting "A Pastor's Class," and is "The Pastor's Class" the best method of preparing boys and girls for Church Membership, and also what should we expect to happen in "The Pastor's Class as regards to "religious experience and religious decisions?"

(6) Where should the program of religious education really begin—with the boys and girls of the Church School or with their fathers and mothers—especially their mothers who, by virtue of their relationship to the child, can do more for the religion's nurture of the boy or girl than can the entire Church School and the Pastor included; and on the otherhand, if the mothers fail to accept their religious responsibility toward their children, they can, by their more religious ignorance or religious indifference easily undo whatever the Church School may try to do.

(7) Should there be a minimum requirement of Bible knowledge before boys and girls are received into the fellowship of the Church?

(8) Should personal religious experience and personal religious living be a requisite of those engaged in religious teaching?

(9) Should religious education be considered a substitute for Evangelism?

(10) How can a proper appreciation of the significance of the privilege of uniting with the Church be created in the thought of boys and girls and young people?

These and many other suggestive questions were presented and considered at the Bel Air, Maryland Round-Table.

Space will not permit recording the findings in this connection, but secretaries were appointed to perform the task of marshalling together the most important responses made to the many questions arising in consideration of the general theme, and their findings will very likely be given general circulation through the medium of a pamphlet.

Three or four of the considerations might fittingly receive brief mention in this connection.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Life is a glorious gift. The mystery of life makes it more interesting. People who can see the manifestations of life, hear the music of its myriads of voices, and feel the experiences of its ever-changing thrills, should give thanks to God for the privilege of being alive. Normal people want to live. People who commit suicide have lost the vision of the world, an understanding of themselves, or their fellowship with God, before they reach that sad conclusion.

This is springtime in Virginia. The trees in the forest are now putting on fresh, new leaves; farmers are sowing seeds in the fields; flowers are blooming forth in fragrance and beauty in the gardens; and the air is fresh with the warmth and glory of life. Nature has, apparently, been silently waiting for the return of such a time as this. Life in field, forest and garden has been dormant during the long winter. Nature was not dead during that season, but was resting and waiting for the time and season of resurrection.

There is a such a contrast between spring and autumn, seed-time and harvest. At harvest time, during the autumn days, flowers wither, and the leaves die. It saddens the heart to see vegetation in the fields, and giant trees of the forest falling asleep. But the abiding faith in the awakening next spring satisfies the disturbed soul and soothes the aching heart. And this story of flowers and trees has its counterpart in human life. Youth is the springtime of life. Hopes are budding and faith is taking root. Foundations are laid for character. Visions are being written across the sky in letters of flaming gold. Strength is being stored up for the race and the conflict. Roses bloom on the ruddy cheeks. Eyes sparkle with intelligence and keen understanding. Yes, that is spring-time, that is the glory of living.

But the harvest time will come. That thought should not chill the enthusiasm of young life. It should be an incentive. The farmer is not saddened by the thought of falling leaves and gathered harvests next autumn. He is encouraged and inspired by the promise—"whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Let youth strive to reach high ideals and enter into the struggle with high hopes of successful adventure. But the significance of the picture of the harvest in old age should be kept in mind and heart. For it is also glorious to live in the autumn days of life. The step is not so quick and firm. The eye is dimmed. The voice is not so clear. The hand is unsteady. The color goes from the cheeks. The heart beats with more difficulty. Old age has come. Autumn is here. The harvest is ready.

In such an hour one will remember the happy days of springtime. One recalls the lure of faith and adventure. And if life has been filled with the higher visions of faith, and spent in loving toil for God and humanity, the glory of spring will be renewed in the waning strength of autumn, and youth and old age will share alike in the enchanting visions of immortal life. Spring brings the promise of summer; youth gives a promise of maturing and old age. And when the child of God reaches the end of life's day, the golden rays of the sunset will reflect the faith and hope of another spring—in the sunrise of tomorrow. After all it is the high privilege of every child of God to live in the spring-time either of this life—or of that life with the saints in the glory-land.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE COLLEGE STUDENTS RELIGION.

The average youngster in college has some kind of a religious background. Usually he comes from a religious home, or he was connected with a church in one way or another before coming to college. He has a pretty good idea of the church, of religion, and of what is required of one if he is to represent correctly the Christian religion. For him college is different, particularly from a religious standpoint. The greater part of his time is spent at home with home folks. On the Sabbath he attends church usually, but even here he has few opportunities to exchange ideas about religion and about religious ideals. He arrives in time for the service, listens to the songs, the scriptures, the prayers, and the sermon; but after the benediction, he goes out of the church quietly, tarries for a few moments, and is home again.

At college it is different. He is away from home. The spirit and restraints of home are not with him. He feels the freedom to think and the liberty to speak as he may choose. He is constantly with people of his age and with similar ambitions. In the classroom he comes in touch with more mature minds—individuals who have broader fields in spiritual accomplishments. Ideas contrary to the ones always held by him are expressed. He finds himself waging a battle either to change his own convictions about religion or to bring the religious ideas of the campus in harmony with the ones held by him. In discussions and contentions about fundamentals in religion, he often loses sight of the fact that religion is not technical, but practical, and ceases to do those things that are essential to Christian living. If a student in college is to keep his religion in good order, it will be necessary for him to feed his faith daily. In college there is nothing that will take the place of personal devotions and of private worship. The reading of the scriptures alone is like closeting oneself with God. Prayer in secret is nothing other than holding individual and personal communion with God. Religion, however, will not keep one separate and apart from others, but finds its fullest expression and greatest joy in communion and fellowship with others. The service of public worship is indispensable to religious growth and spiritual enrichment. The student who absents himself from the service of worship misses a great opportunity for real culture in those things that matter most. The average college provides opportunities and facilities for spiritual exercises and for student activities in the field of morals and of religion. Fortunate, indeed, is that student who resolves in his own mind and keeps the resolution that he will not let go his Christian faith and will permit nothing to interrupt his Christian life. For if the student's religion is kept healthy and vigorous, his entire college career will be enriched, and he himself will be successful in his efforts to attain culture and efficiency that he may make the contribution to society that God intended for him to make.

The Christian college meets a need and renders a service that no other institution does or can. It deserves universal support and should receive it.

L. E. SMITH.

Men do not avail themselves of the riches of God's grace. They love to nurse their cares, and seem as uneasy without some fret as an old friar would be without his girdle. They the commanded to cast their cares upon the Lord, but even when they attempt it, they do not fail to catch them up again, and think it meritorious to walk burdened.—Beecher.

A ROUND TABLE OF EVANGELISM AND WORSHIP.

(1) It was the consensus of opinion that the question of age limit had been over-emphasized by many Churches which had a hard-and-fast rule that boys and girls must have reached a certain age, 12 or 14 or 16 before they could unite with the Church. Some children by reason of their homelife, their natural tendencies, their religious interests, etc. are more qualified for membership in the Church at seven years of age than are some other children at twice that age.

(2) Regarding the use of a catechism, though some of the group were strongly opposed to this "antiquated" method of religious instruction, others of the group, though believing strongly in the modern educational technique, felt that the Church might well consider the fact that the old catechisms, regardless of their theological impossibilities, did result in giving the boys and girls certain definite religious knowledge which is so desirable for everyone to have. Many men and women who have been spiritual heroes and heroines received their early religious knowledge from a catechism. There is this to be said for the use of the catechism: the quality of Christian lives they helped to produce has not been surpassed as yet by the use of any other method. And would it not be possible to have a catechism which would be modern in content and character so as to give boys and girls some definite religious knowledge in concise statement, and not leave their religious knowledge in such a nebulous state? The Church which has its boys and girls of teen age the best versed in Bible knowledge, and in religious knowledge from that respective denomination's point of view, makes great use of the catechetical method in its entire program of religious education. It is interesting also to note that the members of this particular denomination, the Seventh Day Adventists, though one of the youngest denominations and though only a few hundred thousand in membership, give each year for missions more than any other denomination. Their per capita contributions to Missions each year, is more than forty dollars per member more than the contributions to Missions of any other denomination. Though the archaic theology of this group seems strikingly erroneous to us, the quality of life which their theology and religious training produces cannot help being appreciated. No denomination regardless of age, numbers, traditions, creed, or educational methods is giving the world more Christ-like men and women—more consecrated, self-denying, self-sacrificing, conscientious people than the people of this denomination. And most people would agree that the wrong theology with the right kind of a life is preferable to the right theology with the wrong kind of life. But there is no reason why the right kind of theology should not always find expression in the right kind of life. Why should not the quality of Christian life which one expresses always be an accurate register of the relative correctness of one's theology? Christians are judged by the world and by their Lord by the kind of life they live rather than by the type of theology they hold.

(3) Religious education should not be considered as a substitute for Evangelism, but as the most valuable aid to Evangelism. Any religious education which is not Evangelistic in spirit and in purpose is not true religious education. Likewise, any Evangelism which is not educational is not true Evangelism.

(4) Uniting with the Church should be looked upon as a matriculation experience rather than as graduation. Church membership should be only for those who purpose to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ."

(5) In all our work of religious education, whether in the Church School proper or in the Pastor's Class, more use should be made of the new method used in general education—that of stimulating questions in the mind of the learner, rather than merely preparing him to answer the questions propounded by another.

(6) All who seek to lead childhood and youth into a conscious religious experience should ponder well the deductions of two great modern Educators, Principal L. P. Jacks of Oxford, who declared that "It is a question if ever from the beginning of time anyone has ever reasoned his way into a religious experience;" also the statement of Dr. Glenn Frank, "More people live their way into religious thinking than think their way into religious living."

"May God make the door of this house wide enough to receive all who need human love and fellowship and the Father's care; and narrow enough to shut out all envy, pride and hate. May He make its threshold smooth enough to be no stumbling block to childhood, weakness or straying feet, but rugged enough and strong enough to turn back the tempter's power. May God make the door to this house the gateway to His eternal Kingdom."

SOMEBODY'S REBORN SOUL.

The late lamented Dr. J. T. Stocking, at the time of his decease moderator of our General Council, wrote a brief essay on the "Immortality of Money," the thesis of which is that through the spiritual use of money one enjoys the taste of immortality now. In the elaboration of this thesis, Dr. Stocking declared: "That no one gets so much out of his money as he who translates it into somebody's reborn soul". This rebirth of the soul takes place when the individual turns from himself and centers his ideal and his aspirations on Jesus Christ in Whom the soul finds satisfaction and relief.

There is a divine, as well as a human, arithmetic. There is this difference. In the divine arithmetic, increase comes by division; (in the human, it comes by multiplication). As we share, with others the life and love of our Lord, that life and love increases in our own hearts. We have, indeed, very little of the spirit of Christianity as our own unless we have some share with, and export to, others. The larger our export; the greater our import. In this, the work of missions becomes the one un-failing source of increase in the strength and resources of one's own living. In our missionary giving, teaching and preaching, we are making our deeds and our gifts immortal. A Christian gentleman said to your speaker recently that the one un-failing source of courage and comfort to him was the thought expressed by the writer of the letter to the Hebrews that "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever." The fact that there is One Who never changes, even in a world of change, and who in Personality and Power abides forever, brings assurance to everyone who accepts Him as Savior and seeks to share Him with others.

The writer has been Mission Secretary of the Southern Convention since 1917. During these twenty blessed years he has seen churches planted where there were no churches before, through which churches and their divine agencies, hundreds, not to say thousands, have been born into the kingdom of righteousness. This was the result of faithful, consecrated, self-denying men and women in the home field, giving their lives that they might share with others the un-searchable riches in Christ Jesus their Lord. He has seen Sunday Schools planted where the Bible had not been taught and where youth did not have the privilege of being trained in the way of the great Teacher. In his correspondence and vision he has followed thousands of dollars contributed by consecrated souls and unselfish hands that others in fields afar, where Christ was not known, might know Him, Whom to know is life eternal. Twenty, or more, blessed years of watching consecrated men and women, consecrated and immortal dollars being given, that the kingdom of God might be built on earth as it is in heaven. It has been a blessed service of working and watching, and He would here pay tribute to these consecrated witnesses of the Way for investing themselves, their lives, their labor and their money in helping to found and build up a kingdom whose Builder and Maker is God and whose Son, our Lord, the inspired writer declared: "Is the same yesterday, today and forever." This indeed is an investment in somebody's reborn soul.

This is an investment immortal and eternal. This investment is made to glorify our Lord and reveal Him to the last, the unredeemed, the unsaved, that they may know Him Whom is life eternal.

As an onlooker of missionary work for two decades of those who have consecrated their money and their lives to this task, observation and experience, lead me to declare that missions assure us of an investment of life and deeds in immortality. Dr. E. Stanley Jones relates the incident of the child who alternately stirred and sipped her tea. Presently with tears of disappointment in her eyes the child said, "Mother it won't come sweet." Her mother smilingly said, "I'm sorry, my child, I must have forgotten the sugar." No amount of stirring could make the tea sweet until the sugar was in it. And no amount of mere stirring of our emotions will sweeten our lives. "It is futile, declares Dr. Jones, "to stir emptiness. Our lives do not need stirring; they need filling. If Christ is not in the depths of our souls, no amount of stirring will make life sweet." By, and through, our missionary effort we are sweetening our own lives; filling them with the blessed fellowship of Him Who said, "Ye shall be my witnesses and, Lo! I am with you unto the end." Missionary work and giving puts into life something that the sermon may stir, something that reading our Bibles will stir; something that our worship services will stir; it is nothing less than the presence and power of our Lord. This is the more abundant life. This is life eternal.

OUR SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

The good women of our Eastern Virginia Women's Societies are looking forward to May 13th as a real epoch in the history of our work and all of us are anxious that every Society in our Southern Convention shall be represented in person at Suffolk on the afternoon and evening of May 13th. Mrs. John G. Truitt, our president, is arranging to have a candle for each and every Society and as the name of that Society is called the representative present from the Society will go forward and light the candle. Should a Society not be represented in person, then the candle of that Society will be left unlighted. We don't want any unlighted candles left on that glorious evening. As each Society is trying to let its light shine at home in the local church it should certainly seek to come to Suffolk and light its candle there that the full light of all these candles may fill and flood the large auditorium of our Suffolk Christian Church. Our Suffolk people are to entertain for the night all delegates and visitors who come if they will in advance write Mrs. J. E. Rawls, 204 South Broad Street, Suffolk, Virginia.

The event will be memorable not only as the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of our organized existence, but as a memorial also to the name and work and life of our late lamented and beloved Dr. W. W. Staley. It was in our Suffolk church that he poured out his great life for the cause of righteousness and the building of the kingdom on earth. The offering by Societies and by individuals are to be brought together and laid on the altar, the very altar which he himself consecrated with his own life and labors; and all this will be a memorial, fitting and appropriate, indeed. All of us in our Societies will need the inspiration of the occasion and the occasion also will need the inspiration of our presence and of our devotion.

MRS. R. T. BRADFORD.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICE.

Day by day changes are taking place and extraordinary things are happening. Now where is this more noticeable than in Missionary work.

This year makes a quarter of a century of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary work of the Southern Convention. During the past few months special programs have been presented by the Woman's Missionary Societies throughout the Southern Convention in anticipation of the great occasion when the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the great work of missions of the southern women will be celebrated in the Suffolk Christian Church on May 13, 1937.

In preparation for this outstanding occasion the Woman's Missionary Society of the Franklin Congregational Christian Church presented on February 21st a most interesting and beautiful as well as inspiring service. The Church was decorated with silver candles in silver holders, white flowers in large silver vases.

On the altar table was spread a white cloth on which was placed a long silver tray on either end of which were silver candles, these being lighted as the offering was brought to the altar at the close of the service, first by two juniors representing the Willing Workers Society, then two young girls representing the Young People's Missionary Society, then following these were the circle leaders of the Woman's Missionary Society. After placing their offering on the tray they stood in a semi-circle, while "Take My Life And Let It Be" was being sung, and the Benediction was pronounced by Dr. Jones.

These services leading to the Twenty-fifth anniversary, the most outstanding occasion of the Woman's Missionary work since the organiza-

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

JACKSONVILLE MEETING.

About forty young people and leaders from all sections of the Southeast met in Jacksonville last week at the regular biennial meeting of the Southeast Youth Fellowship, in conjunction with the Southeast Convention.

In the absence of Lanson Granger, president, the meeting was in charge of Earle Ward, vice-president from Florida. Mrs. R. L. House of Portsmouth, Virginia, led the opening devotional period. Following a period of introductions, a brief history of the Southeast Youth Fellowship was given by the Rev. F. C. Lester.

One of the important business matters taken up was that of changing the name of our group to "Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship." After discussing the question thoroughly, the group voted to adopt this new name. It will make our work harmonize in name with the national organization and in that way will make our relation with it more clear. Throughout the country, Congregational-Christian young people's groups have been making this change and it seemed well to the group at Jacksonville for us to follow along this same line. So—remember to use the term "Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship" from now on, rather than "Southeast Youth Fellowship." This change in name will make no difference in our method of work or organization, but we hope it will make more clear our right to the National Pilgrim Fellowship Bulletins and other program helps with like names.

If you are one of the group who would prefer to keep the name Youth Fellowship, please let the matter drop now and work, as you have been doing, to improve the young people's groups in the Southeast. "The king is dead—long live the king!"

SOUTHERN PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP OFFICERS.

At the Jacksonville meeting the report of the Nominating Committee was unanimously adopted. The officers who will strive to serve you for the next two years are:

President—Earle G. Ward, Winter Park, Florida.

Vice-President—W. B. Williams, Newport News, Va.

Secretary—Emily M. Carleton, Winter Park, Florida.

Assistant Secretary—Frances Foster, Greensboro, N. C.

Treasurer—Emmanuel Hedgebeth, Elon College, N. C.

Superintendents—Devotional Life, Mary Monerief, Demorest, Georgia; Missions, Irene Cotten, Dendron, Va.; Social Action, Dorothy Truitt, Greensboro, N. C.; Leadership Training, Rev. W. J. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va.; Publications, Rev. J. Everette Neese, Henderson, N. C.

Editor—Emily Carleton, Winter Park, Florida.

Counselors—Rev. F. C. Lester, Norfolk, Va.; Rev. F. Ervin Hyde, Sanford, N. C.; Mrs. W. B. Williams, Newport News, Va.; Miss Annie Campbell, Corbin, Ky.; Secretary of Missions, Young People's Superintendent of Woman's Mission Board, Chairman Board of Christian Education, and all Extension and Field Workers.

ATTENTION, LOCAL GROUPS.

At the Jacksonville meeting a revised Constitution was adopted for One of the things which was changed in the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship was the method of raising money for the Southeast work. According to the old Constitution, each local society was to send one dollar a year to their Conference Fellowship. Each of these Fellowships, in turn, was to send one-tenth of the money they received to the treasurer of the Southeast.

This method was changed for two reasons—one, because the system has not worked, for very little money has been forthcoming; secondly, because it did not seem right for the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship to dictate how much money your local group should send to the Fellowship to which you belong.

Instead, it is now proposed to have each local group take an offering once a year, preferably in May, for the work of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship. It is very necessary that the Southeast have some funds if it is to do its job. The newly elected Superintendents are willing and ready to help you, but they can not send out program materials if they have no money with which to do so. It is hoped that the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship will function as an agency for sending you program materials and suggestions, as an agency for improving the young people's work in the Southeast. Do your part by taking this offering some time in the not-too-far-distant future.

WHAT MAKES HAPPINESS IN THE HOME.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MAY 9, 1937.

SCRIPTURE TEXT: Col. 3:12-21.

Meditations

The Basis of True Happiness—Pro. 16: 20.

Religion in the Home—Josh. 24: 15; Lk. 39; John 4: 53; Acts 16: 15.

It is easy to have overlapping in this meeting and the one following. Both topics deal with the home. The leaders of these meetings should plan the programs together.

The members of the society should think of various types of homes such as: A miner's shack; a ten room house in the country; a share cropper's one or two room cabin; a trailer; and an apartment house too small for its occupants. Ask yourselves: How can a family have happiness in these types of homes? Would it make any difference whether the family was Christian or not?

It would be well to make a list on the blackboard of the things that make a home happy or unhappy. Collect opinions on: "How Can Any Home Be Happy?"

Jesus has ways of making homes happy. It will be well to study Col. 3:12-21 and I. Cor. 13 very closely to discover His way.

The Bible gives us many indications of the nature and powers and happiness of real homes. Let us therefore think of a practical application of these principles in our own homes.

Someone has said, "Happiness grows at our own fireside, and is not to be picked in strangers' gardens."

Suggested Hymns—

"More About Jesus," "More Like the Master," "More Love To Thee."

"A home is more than four walls square,
With pictures hung richly guilded,
A home is where love abideth,
With shrines the heart has builded."

A PRAYER FOR OUR COLLEGES.

That love may dare the work to share
And count all else but loss.

ABRAHAM, A MAN OF FAITH.

LESSON V—MAY 2, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: By faith, Abraham, obeyed to go out unto a place which he was to receive for an inheritance.—Hebrews 11:8.

LESSON: Genesis 11:27-20:18.

The lesson for today covers ten chapters. It is manifestly impossible to cover in detail all these chapters either in teaching the lesson, or in writing these Notes. But it is possible, and desirable to cover more than the few verses which comprise the lesson text in the quarterlies. These Notes will therefore be something of a character study of Abraham as revealed in the ten chapters from his life story.

Abraham, a Man of Faith.

When the writer of Hebrews chapter seven puts the heroes of faith in his Hall of Fame, he quite justifiably puts Abraham as one of the most outstanding heroes of faith. Indeed Abraham has been called the "father of the faithful." Here was a man of faith, not in the sense of giving intellectual assent to man-made dogmas or creeds, but in the sense of trusting a living God. He believed in unseen spiritual realities. This faith was born of a first-hand experience of God. The validity of his faith had been proved by the vitality of his experience. He believed God, believed that He was, and that He was a rewarder of those who diligently seek Him. And James says "Abraham believed God and it was imputed unto Him for righteousness; and he was called the friend of God."

Abraham, a Man of Obedience.

"Abraham, when he was called, obeyed to go out unto a place which he was to receive for an inheritance." He went out not knowing whither he went, adds the writer of Hebrews. But he knew he was going in obedience to the voice of God. It did not make any difference therefore where he was going. He obeyed. Obedience is the first law of spiritual knowledge. There are too many of us who argue and hesitate and balk in the presence of divine demands; we need to obey, to follow such light as we have, to walk by faith, to go forward trusting in God to show us the way and to provide the resources.

Abraham a Man of Prayer.

As one reads these ten chapters he is impressed by the number of instances where it is recorded that "Abraham builded an altar unto the Lord, and called upon the name of the Lord." Indeed one could almost trace his journeys by the altars which he built. Even in that far-off day this man knew the necessity for, and the value of worship. The life of faith cannot be lived unless the fires of faith are constantly renewed through fellowship with God. The secret of Abraham's strength of character was the inner resources which he found for living through worship. It is to be noted, too, that he built these altars in a strange land. They were his eloquent witnesses to his faith in the God who was above all the gods of the people. He knew whom he had believed and he was not ashamed to confess Him before all men.

Abraham a Man of Peace.

Abraham prospered. He became a rich man. And as is so often the case his wealth created a problem and precipitated a crisis. There was strife between the herdsmen of Abraham's cattle and the herdsmen of Lot's cattle. Here was the making of a "family scrap." But Abraham was a man of large heart as well as of large herds. He had things, but things did not have him. He put personal relations above personal profits. In a large-hearted way he took Lot out and gave him first choice that lay before them. "Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee . . . for we be brethren . . . if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, then I will go to the left." What a splendid thing it would be if individuals and groups would approach their problems in this spirit!

Abraham a Man of Compassion.

When it became apparent that Sodom and Gomorrah were doomed, Abraham attempted to stand in the breach. He interceded in behalf of these wicked cities and the sodden inhabitants thereof. Like his God he delighted in the destruction of the wicked. There is a great need today for men and women of great compassion. Our modern world needs folks who care, folks who will try to stand in the breach between men and the awful consequences of the sins which our complex life has brought upon them. We need folks who "will take it upon themselves" to do something toward alleviating human misery, and averting divine displeasure by giving themselves in sacrificial service.

Abraham a Man of God.

Abraham was not perfect. He had his limitations. The record plainly states that he practiced deceit in at least one instance. But we are to judge the man in the light of his day. He lived in the early dawn of the moral and religious history of the race. But one does not have to apologize or explain concerning Abraham. Here was a man of integrity of character, of honesty of purpose, of largeness of heart, of singleness of devotion, of intelligent insight and of joyful obedience. Abraham was in the finest sense of the word a "man of God." He stands high in the list of the men who have revealed the glory of manhood and the glory of God in human life.

DR. MILLER.

The Rev. Raphael Harwood Miller, D. D., will be the author of the brochure for Universal Bible Sunday. This observance, which is sponsored annually by the American Bible Society, will be held the second Sunday in December, (December 12th), or if more convenient, the second Sunday in Advent, (December 5th). The theme will be "The Fountain of Life."

Dr. Miller is pastor of the National City Christian Church, Washington, D. C., and has been president of the International Convention of the Disciples of Christ. He made the keynote address at the Second World Convention of the Churches of Christ in Leicester, England, in 1935. Besides other volumes, Dr. Miller is the author of Who Lives in You.

"With so many blessings that the Christian Church and democratic institutions have contributed to modern life, now standing in jeopardy before the onslaughts of European nationalisms and other movements, the American Bible Society is suggesting that Bible Sunday this year be utilized to exalt the Scriptures as the source of our choicest heritage in art, literature, music, personal freedom, social opportunity and political promise, with an urgent appeal to the members of all churches to assume their full responsibility for a wider distribution of the Bible.

In addition to the brochure by Dr. Miller, a colored poster and the customary material, including new features, will be mailed free to pastors throughout the United States in November.

FAMILY ALTAR

Chaplain in the U. S. Navy

MONDAY.

"THE KINGDOM AT HAND."

"From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."—Matt. 4:17.

Two subjects Jesus impressed upon His hearers: Repentance of sin and the kingdom of heaven at hand. If the Kingdom of heaven was already at hand, what use was there to repent? Would it not be too late?

We are reminded that the Kingdom of heaven has nothing to do with repentance. It is the King's love being offered to whosoever will. Christ is always assuring us that He is near and that we may come close enough to Him to feel His touch, and that every day throughout all the years the Kingdom is wide open for whosoever will to come in. The Kingdom of God was at hand to the thief on the cross. The Kingdom of God is at hand in every appeal for righteousness, justice and peace.

Prayer—Dear Father we cannot close our ears to the call of Christ. We must accept Him and follow Him, and help us to do so this day. In His name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

HOW HARD TO WAIT.

"Lo, this is our Lord: we have waited for him and he will save us."—Isa. 25:9.

How hard it is to wait for something. Many are impatient at waiting a few minutes for a meal, or for a belated engagement, or for the train. We cannot do any waiting without complaining. We want the doctor now. We want our pain relieved instantly. And when it is said that a day with the Lord is as a thousand years, how can we put ourselves in step with His leisurely process?

Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ in that patience is one of the graces bestowed for dedicating the life to him. If we can believe that "He doeth all things well to them that love and serve him," we can wait indefinitely; yea, we shall even rejoice in the delay for we shall be sure of the victory.

Prayer—Dear Father, O Lord, Thy waiting we believe is born of Thy love, and our desires can be so far from right. Give us divine patience and full salvation. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

CLEARING OUT THE RUBBISH.

"There is much rubbish, so that we are not able to build the wall."—Neh. 4:10.

The people of Judah could not build the wall because of the rubbish that was in the way. But they cleared out the rubbish and then the walls began to rise.

The rubbish in our lives is a travesty on the life we have to live. Our time is so taken up with so many inconsequential things that there is no room for constructive work. Meetings, calls to make, trivial tasks and innumerable phone calls; callers at the door to sell something that we do not want and would not have; advertising trash left on the front to be taken back to the trash can; dinners and diners; speeches and frivolities in season and out of season.

To clear our lives of this rubbish seems almost impossible. The biggest tasks which we have to perform is to clear it out and let important matters supercede. It requires a dedication to the more important matters. It requires constant watching. It requires constant perseverance. These are also graces which God bestows upon His children.

Prayer—Our Father, in whose life no rubbish is allowed, we turn to Thee for Thy strength that we may daily live for Thee. Amen.

THURSDAY.

HAS IT HAPPENED TO YOU?

"Would that we had died by the hand of the Lord in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the flesh-pots, when we did eat bread to the full."—Exodus 16:3.

The Israelites thought it was bad enough when they suffered under the hand of Pharaoh and they prayed for their freedom. They were given their freedom and sent unto the land of promise. But the way was a difficult and hard way. They actually reached the point where they repented that they had left their country.

You became a Christian and then living the Christian way did you grieve over some lost lust, or pride, or pleasure? Jesus knew the way was hard and He did not fail to prepare His children for it. He said, "Cut off your hand, or pluck out your eye if they should become a stumbling block to you." Have we entered into that stage of Christian experience.

Prayer—O God forbid that we shall ever look back. We know that of we shall we shall be cursed. Amen.

FRIDAY.

KNOW THYSELF.

"How many loaves have you?"—Mark 8:5.

"Study to show thyself approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."—II. Tim. 5:15.

It has been said that when Jesus desired to know how many loaves that the disciples had, He was asking information which would have more far-reaching significance than the mere quantity necessary to feed the crowd. He meant for them to realize their weakness in relation to His power. He meant for them to understand their utter incompetence and His complete competence. In order to do that they must take stock of themselves and they must compare that stock with what the Lord can give them.

How many and what sort of loaves have you? How much do you know about yourself? How much do you know your inadequacy? How much do you know of Him who out of His omnipotence can meet your inadequacy perfectly? How much do you lean on His arms?

Prayer—O Lord, make us humble in Thy sight and in the sight of man that we may not make the mistake of over estimating our competence, and that we may not forget to trust in Thee. Amen.

SATURDAY.

HIS NAME ON OUR FOREHEADS.

"Behold, the lamb standing on the Mount Zion, and with Him a hundred and forty and four thousand, having His Name, and the Name of His Father, written on their foreheads."—Read Revelations 14:1-5.

We can not always recognize those who are Christians on this earth. But there is a land where all who are the Savior's and God's will be clearly known.

"Name," means character, in the Bible. What is the name, the character, of the Father and the Son which will be written on our foreheads, if we are true to them? What is it but the beautiful name of Love?

And so we can see the Name already beginning to shine out on the faces here below. Unfortunate is he who has not already recognized the traces of it more than once. Blessed is the one on whose face the glorious Name has already begun to appear.

Prayer—Thy Name is Wonderful, our Father, our Savior. How won-

LUKE 24:1-35.

Let me pick up the questions on the road to Emmaus and see what we find. The two disciples ask two questions of Jesus who was traveling with them incognito. The two disciples are asked two question by this same Jesus, traveling as he was with them incognito, and then the two disciples asked each other two questions when Jesus is gone, first having revealed Himself unto them.

The "Stranger" is asked two questions!

The "Stranger" asks two questions!

And then the two disciples question each other!

I.

Jesus had been crucified. Three days have passed. The grave is empty. There is front page news indeed! People everywhere are discussing it. Two of the disciples are on the road to Emmaus, and as they walk along, they talk about these strange facts. "And it came to pass while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus Himself drew near, and went with them. But their eyes were holden that they should not know him." And He asked them what it was they were talking about, and why they were so sad. Then came from them the first two of these questions:

"Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem?"

"Hast thou not known the things which are come to pass there in these days?"

Pause and consider that first question: "Art thou a stranger in Jerusalem?" A stranger, indeed! He was brought as an infant child to Jerusalem. Old Simon "took him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word; for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou has prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel." No, He was not a stranger in Jerusalem. When He was twelve years of age His parents took Him to Jerusalem. "And when they found him not (out a day's journey from Jerusalem on their way home), they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him. And it came to pass that after three days, they found him in the temple sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them and asking them questions!" No, Jesus was not a stranger in Jerusalem. Indeed, He was quite at home there, although only a boy and living many miles away from there. He had been taught about Jerusalem. There was a growing love in His heart for Jerusalem. Later as a man and as the Messiah, He would behold that city, and His love for it would burst forth in that anguishing cry: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often I would have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wing, and ye would not!" No, Jesus was not a stranger in Jerusalem.

Then, there is that second question: "Dost thou not know the things which are come to pass there in these days?" Indeed! His visit to the temple—His Father's house. The establishment late at night of the supper with His disciples. The awful night of agony in the garden of Gethsemane. The arrest. The trials. The scourging. The climb to Calvary. The death upon the Cross. "Dost thou not know . . . ?"

II.

Jesus heard the disciples talking about all these things, and He caught a note of real disappointment and deep longing in their souls. He asked them a couple of questions:

"Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, (2) and to have entered into his glory?"

That goes back to the eternal decrees of God, and to things on that side of the curtains. Jesus knew that. And He went back to Moses and all the prophets, and expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself. Yes, said He, it was right that Christ should suffer these things. It would be the supreme showing of God's love for men. It would be the means of bringing the world home to God, the Father. It would speak peace and pardon to innumerable multitudes. It was God going the limit through Jesus Christ His Son to manifest His great love for the world. And there was also the second question: Ought not Christ to have entered into his glory? We know not how great, and how much that is, namely, that Christ should "enter into his glory,"—to come into

His own! To have all that is His due! "Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors, and let the King of glory come in." If we know what it is to be forgiven, if we know what it is to be redeemed, we shall join with the angels in praise of Him!

III.

That is just what these two disciples were doing. Their hearts were exulting in the goodness of Jesus, in the truth of the Scriptures, and in His blessed counsel with them. How holy were the memories stirred in their minds, as Jesus talked to them! A Messiah, a Redeemer, a Savior—these were the pictures painted by Jesus from the Scriptures, and such was the hope of the disciples. I can hear one of them say to the other: "Did not our hearts burn within us while he talked with us? And I can hear the other one reply: "And while he opened to us the Scriptures?"

Is it any wonder the disciples went out and preached the Story that has been the sweetest message of all time? Jesus did not let them down! They were disappointed but He met their disappointment. And so they went with a burning heart. He is no less to us! He is our Lord also, and our Savior. May our hearts burn within us as He, in his own way, shall answer our questions, and at the same time set his searching questions before our own souls!

SUNDAY.

PERFECT THROUGH SUFFERINGS.

"It became Him, for whom are all things . . . to make the author of their salvation perfect through sufferings."—Read Hebrews 2:1-10.

Sufferings, then, were needed to perfect the Author of our salvation; and if He who was tempted in all points as we are, yet was without sin, needed sufferings to complete His character, how much more do we!

Let us not fear sufferings, then, or seek to avoid them when the Lord sends them to us. Let us welcome them as the marble, if it were sentient, would welcome the blows of the chisel that release the lovely statue.

Prayer—So we place ourselves in Thy hands, our Savior. Do with us as Thou seest best.

PERSONAL EVANGELISM.

“We are at the dawning of the day of personal evangelism, and every one is called of God.”—Cortland Meyers.

The churches are to become the centers from which all evangelistic and missionary efforts are to proceed.

The only hope of winning our land to Christ rests upon the individual pastor and the individual church member.

“Personal evangelism is the cry of our age; and if all that ‘love His appearing’ would enter the work with new zest, the world might be brought to Christ in a few decades.”—Green.

“Let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins.” Jas. 5: 20.

“He that winneth souls is wise.”—Prov. 11: 30.

“When I say unto the sinner, ‘Thou shalt surely die’; and thou givest him no warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life, the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thy hand.”—Ezek. 3: 18.

“They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars for ever and ever.”—Dan. 12: 3.

A SINGING CHURCH.

One dark night a missionary was traveling on the outskirts of a territory untouched by Christian influence so far as we know, although looked upon by the young Chilesso church as its responsibility. He heard Christian hymn tunes. Investigating he found a young man from one of the few Christian villages near that section who had carried the Gospel message in song, and a godly group had caught the contagion of the music. The Chilesso church which now has some 2,600 members maintains often that it was first led to allegiance to “The Name” through the influence of Christian hymns. In Mt. Silinda, Rev. and Mrs. John S. Marsh report taking two Christian African women to a conference under another mission where 3000 other native Christian women lived three days in conference on religious matters. They had planned and carried through the entire affair without the help of missionaries.

An aspiration is joy forever, a possession as solid as a landed estate.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

MORGAN.

Whereas it seemed good to an all wise Providence to remove from us on Jan. 20, 1937, Mrs. Eva Holland Morgan of R. F. D. 1, Holland, Va., and whereas she had been a loyal and faithful member of our Woman's Missionary Society of Holy Neck Church, even when shut in for many years by affliction and suffering.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we record our high appreciation of her many virtues as a faithful Christian, devoted wife, mother and friend.

2. That we greatly miss her genial presence, and will ever cherish her memory, while deeply grateful for such a life lived amongst us.

3. That we extend our sympathy to her husband, children, grandchildren, sister and brother in their loss and sorrow.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy placed on the records of the society.

APPLE.

Ida Lon McIntyre Apple was born June 29, 1880, and fell asleep at her home in Greensboro, April 11, 1937, age 57 years, 9 months and 12 days.

In the year of 1898 she was united in marriage to L. M. Apple, and to this union was born 7 children, 4 sons and 3 daughters.

Early in life she united with Apples Chapel and upon moving to Greensboro she transferred her membership to Palm Street Christian Church to which she remained faithful and loyal to the end.

Before going she assured each member of her family of her readiness to go and exhorted them to meet her.

The funeral was conducted from her church by her pastor, the writer, assisted by Revs. L. L. Wyrick, J. L. Neese, B. G. Whitley, and W. F. Ashburn, with interment in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

Our love for her was expressed by the personal interest in her serious illness, display of flowers and attendance at her services.

Mrs. Apple is survived by her husband, 4 sons, 3 daughters, several grand-children, 3 sisters, and 3 brothers. May God comfort the sad.

C. E. GERRINGER.

TOPPING.

We the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Congregational-Christian Church of Newport News, Virginia, wish to pay tribute to the memory of our beloved member, Mr. C. L. Topping, who died March 2., 1937.

MRS. J. A. WILLIAMS.

WINSTON-SALEM.

The woman's association of the United Congregational Christian church at Winston-Salem, North Carolina, observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of missionary work in the Southern Convention on February 26th at the church. The Sunday School room was lovely with its array of spring flowers and on the table with its lace cloth was the beautiful birthday cake with 25 candles.

The anniversary program was used and Mrs. W. M. Jay, the president, was in charge. Mrs. Maymie Neale gave the devotionals and Mrs. J. A. Wester read a letter to the association from Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Scott, organizers of the local society. This letter was much appreciated for it was through their untiring efforts as leaders, that the association has reached the place of help to the church and to the missionary cause that it has attained.

Mrs. W. C. Stout read a splendid history of the society since its organization, November 23, 1933.

Dr. W. M. Jay, the pastor, gave the history of the twenty-five years of growth and service in the Southern Convention.

The unique part of the program followed, when Mrs. J. A. Wester lighted the candles and Mrs. R. V. Haizlip played the wedding music as the bride and bridegroom entered the room with Miss Connie Wester, acting as train-bearer. The bride, Mrs. J. A. May, represented the missionary society, and the bridegroom, Mrs. M. Ivie, represented the church; symbolic of the 25 years union of the two. As they took their places and an explanation made as to the indispensability of bride and bridegroom and also, the missionary society and the church, the entire audience marched around, greeting the happy couple and presented their silver offering.

After a well-planned program of entertainment, the bride cut the cake and dainty refreshments were served. This meeting was guest meeting and each member invited her husband or some friend, and all pronounced this an enjoyable and helpful evening. This society though young in years, is doing a very good work and its members are interested and enthusiastic. They expect to have representatives at Suffolk, May 13th and are looking forward to the meeting.

CHINA LOOKS TOWARD THE CHURCH.

Dr. T. T. Lew who has been appointed a member of the Legislative Yuan, the highest legislative body in the land, is a Christian leader and one of many so honored. Rev. Philip D. Dutton, of Taiku, says China views character as essential to the success of the New China. "There is a new spirit in the air. China expects much of the Church. We pray for faith, courage, wisdom and resources to meet this challenge."

To Help Save Our Natural Resources

By C. B. R.

Ours has been and is a great country of natural resources. With millions of acres in virgin timber we thought the time would never come when it would be necessary to place restrictions on the devastation of our forests. In the South and West we have permitted saw mill operators to cut the choicest of timbers, leaving acres of refuse portions of trees to increase fire hazards. Millions of our acres have been denuded through the ruthless hand of man or the ravages of fire. In many portions of this country, choice timber is no longer to be found because we have given attention only to marketing of timber and not to conservation through selection and re-seeding.

In recent years the number and the extent of floods have increased. It is estimated that due to floods 400,000 tons of soil find their way to the bottom of our rivers every years. Instead of checking this great loss of our soil, we have fought a losing battle trying to make up the deficiency by the use of commercial fertilizers. These practices have been carried on with an increasing loss—a loss so great over our feeble gains that the situation has become appalling.

Our population is rapidly increasing. We no longer have a Far West for the expansion of our people. The rim of our country has been touched. The outflow of population from the East to the West has ceased. The plainsman can no longer move to other untouched lands. The problem now is to conserve what we have.

The day of conservation of our natural resources is not only at hand, but an adequate program must be worked out to prevent further deterioration and destruction of our natural resources—trees and soil. The present generation must look blindly and unselfishly to the fact that possibly it can live its days before our natural resources are depleted. Other generations paved the way for our existence and we as loyal Americans must make possible that future generations shall not be victims of our own shortsighted policies. Patriotism must widen beyond the hoisting of flags, the beating of drums, and the marching away to war with other nations. The challenging army before which we stand today is an army composed of ourselves and our lack of a long-range policy of conservation. We must fight the invincible enemy of ignorance, carelessness and indifference. This is not a battle of guns, but a battle of brains, a battle of thinking, a battle of patriotism in its broadest sense.

Mother's Day

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

Let every day be Mother's Day—
Make roses grow along her way
And beauty everywhere.
Oh, never let her eyes be wet
With tears of sorrow or regret,
And never cease to care.
Come, grownup children, and rejoice
That you can hear your mother's voice.

A day for her? For you she gave Long years of love and service brave.
For you her youth was spent;
There was no weight of hurt or care
Too heavy for her strength to bear,
She followed where you went;
Her courage and her love sublime
You could depend on all the time.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Suffolk is expecting a large delegation at the Silver Anniversary on Thursday of next week. Those who expect to spend the night will do the church a favor by writing Mrs. J. E. Rawles, Suffolk, Virginia.

It is possible for a few more churches in the Southern Convention to get Student Summer Service aid. If you can use one or two young people for a week or two, write to F. C. Lester, Executive Secretary, 514 S. Main St., Norfolk, Virginia, stating how much help you want and at what date.

All subscriptions and material for publication in THE CHRISTIAN SUN should be addressed to 514 South Main St., Norfolk, Virginia, and not to Richmond. It will be a real help if all correspondents will remember this when writing. Mail sent to Richmond is delayed in getting to the editor, for he lives in Norfolk. Please remember, friends.

The Adult Bible Classes of our church in Durham, North Carolina, had Dean J. D. Messick of Elon College as guest speaker in honor of the completion of the thirty-seventh year's perfect attendance at Sunday School of Mr. Jimmie Lee Cash. Thirty-seven years of perfect attendance is an unusual record. Congratulations to the class and to the man.

It was the pleasure of the editor and his party of four others to worship with our Winter Park Church on Sunday after the Southeast Convention. Rev. Victor B. Chicoine, the pastor, preached one of his good sermons, like those he furnishes for this paper occasionally. We also enjoyed hearing Dean Vaughan Dabney in the beautiful chapel at Rollins College. The students do a fine part in planning and executing the chapel services at Rollins. The music was especially fine.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN acknowledges with pleasure the following invitation, and extends congratulations and good wishes to the participants:

Plans are now in the making for a State Preaching Mission that will reach the entire state of Virginia next fall. The National Preaching Mission has been a success. The Bishop's Crusade in the Methodist Church is putting new life into that Church. We are learning anew that preaching has real value. Give us more and better preaching and we will likely have growing churches and better communities.

The Elon Summer School of Leadership Training is now near enough for young people to begin planning to be there. Classes will begin Monday afternoon, June 21st, and will close on Saturday at noon following. Pastors and churches will please arrange their programs so there will be no conflict, for pastors, superintendents, teachers, young people, and missionary leaders are needed at the Summer School so they can do better work through the coming year.

Subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN are now coming in fast enough to make life interesting for the office force. Thanks, friends. Keep the good work going. June will soon be here, and the introductory price of $1.50 will cease. Now is the time to be busy on this phase of church work. A new subscription means that for a year another family in our church will be able to read about what we are doing as a Church, and may bring real help to those who need it.

COMMENCEMENT.

The forty-seventh commencement of Elon College will be held May 22 to May 26 inclusive. The college has had a very successful year from every standpoint, and we anticipate a most successful commencement.

An unusual program has been arranged. The program opens Friday evening with Smith Oratorical Contest. Saturday evening the Dramatic Club presents "The Importance of Being Earnest" by Oscar Wilde. Sunday morning the Baccalaureate Sermon will be delivered by Dr. James H. Lightbourne, pastor of the Burlington Christian Church. The Burlington congregation is invited to attend these services at the college. Dr. Lightbourne holds an honorary degree from the college, is one of our best preachers, and a true friend of Christian education and of Elon College in particular. The Burlington church is loyal to the college and hopes for its continued success.

Reverend George Washington Perry, an alumnus of the college and pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Durham, will speak on Alumni Day, Tuesday, at 11 o'clock. Following this address, the complimentary picnic luncheon will be served on the campus to faculty, students, and friends. Tuesday evening, Superintendent W. F. Warren, of the Durham City Schools, Durham, will deliver the Alumni Address, which will be followed by the Alumni Banquet. Mr. J. O. Atkinson, Jr. is the president of the Alumni Association.

Wednesday, graduation day, Roger Babson, Moderator of the National Council of Congregational and Christian Churches and one of the most widely known men of today, will deliver the Literary Address. Business and professional men will be particularly interested in this announcement.

The college takes pleasure in extending to ministers, officials and members of the church and friends of the college everywhere an invitation to attend these exercises.

A GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Clymer, of Greensboro, N. C., will rejoice with them as they start on the second half-century of married bliss. THE CHRISTIAN SUN joins in the good wishes for many happy years to come. They were charter members of our church in Greensboro and are still faithful. The church Bulletin for April 18th was dedicated to them, and a Greensboro paper gave the following account (in part) of the event:

"Guests will be received informally both afternoon and evening today by Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Clymer in celebration of the 50th anniversary of their wedding. The Clymers were both of Alamance county and were married there at the bride's home, April 20, 1887. Mrs. Clymer was the former Miss Annabel Isley. During their early married life they were residents of Reidsville, going from there to Salem, Va., and thence to Greensboro, where they have lived for 38 years.

"The Clymers have one son, Hugh H. Clymer, three daughters, Mrs. E. N. Z. Ellis, of Winston-Salem; Mrs. Robert Harden, and Mrs. A. E. Pye, and six grand-children, all of whom will be with them for the golden anniversary party. The three sons-in-law and one daughter-in-law will also be here. Mr. Ellis will go to Durham Thursday for the golden wedding anniversary of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sidney Ellis.

"Mr. and Mrs. Harden will welcome guests, who are asked to call from 4 to 6 o'clock and from 8 to 10 o'clock at the Clymer residence, 421 McGhee St. At 7 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Pye are having the family for dinner at their home on South Edgeworth St.

"Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Clymer will be Dr. C. H. Rowland, pastor emeritus of First Congregational-Christian Church, where the Clymers have worshiped since coming to Greensboro, Mrs. Rowland, Mrs. Dora B. Huffines and Mr. and Mrs. Ellis.

"Mr. and Mrs. Pye will receive in the dining room where the four grand daughters will assist in serving. Good-byes will be said by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh H. Clymer."

MIDDLE GEORGIA MEETS.

Christian Life Conference of Middle Georgia came to order Saturday morning under the directorship of the president, Miss Dorothy Grigsby. Throughout the day business sessions, worship programs, panel discussions, and discussion groups were held.

Saturday afternoon the conference was addressed by Rabbi I. E. Marcusson, Macon, Georgia. The group thoroughly enjoyed his speech.

During the remainder of the conference, officers were elected for next year, and final business was completed.

For the entire delegation, I wish to extend our many thanks to the Fredora people for their splendid entertainment. May their showers of blessing never cease.

MY MOTHER.

You painted no Madonnas
On chapel walls in Rome
But with a touch diviner,
You lived one in your home.

You wrote on lofty poems
That critics counted art;
But with a nobler vision,
You lived them in your heart.

You carved no shapeless marble
To some high soul-design;
But with a finer sculpture,
You shaped this soul of mine.

You built no great cathedrals
That centuries applaud;
But with a grace exquisite,
Your life cathedraled God.

Had I left the gift of Raphael Or Michaelangelo
Oh, what a rare Madonna
My mother's life should show!

TO THE WOMEN OF THE DISTRICT —NANSEMOND—FRANKLIN— GATES.

"Our Silver Anniversary."

I am sure every society in every church—women, young people, Juniors, Cradle Roll—is looking forward to May 13th, just ten days off, when it will be their privilege to come to Suffolk Christian Church, there to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of our Missionary organization, (as Mrs. R. T. Bradford puts it) "our organized existence." Come, bring your pages for the record book. Lay your gifts on the altar. Light your candle to the memory of our beloved Dr. W. W. Staley and his unselfish life and labors to build a kingdom whose builder and maker is God. Quoting Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Secretary Missions, "Missionary work and giving puts into life nothing less than the presence and power of our Lord. This is the more abundant life. This is life eternal."

Mrs. John G. Truitt, President of the Southern Convention Women's Missionary Societies has planned a splendid anniversary program. At the banquet hour a play "If I Be His Disciple" will be presented. Come every one who can. Make the attendance from your society and your church help this occasion to be a memorial one. Come, meet, and welcome North Carolina.

MRS. JOHN KING,
District Supl.

ALABAMA MISSIONARY RALLIES.

At four of the East Alabama Association Churches during the month of April, our women have held their spring rallies. Each church of the Association has an opportunity to attend these rallies in its own district. The Forest Home, Caver's Grove, Shady Grove, and Christiana Churches were hosts to their respective district meetings. The attendance was representative at the meetings and the meetings and the interest encouraging to the State Officers and the leaders who attended the rallies.

The following program was rendered at each of the rallies, with different speakers at each rally:

Theme: "Women Crusaders." . . .
Sunday School.
Enrollment of Delegates.
Church Service, conducted by the pastor of host church.
Noon Recess.
Devotions.
Women Crusaders—Where? In Devotions.
How? Program and Program Materials.
Why? Value of Missionary Society to the Women of the Church. Value of Missionary Society to the Church.

Business Session.

I NEVER CAN FORGET.

I never can forget the voice
That always made my heart rejoice;
Tho' I've wandered God knows where,
Still I remember mother's prayer.
Whene'er I think of her so dear,
I feel her angel spirit near;
A voice comes floating on the air,
Reminding me of mother's prayer.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EARTH'S HIGHEST HONOR—MOTHERHOOD.

Through the centuries wise men have spoken and poets have sung the praises of mother. It was only a few years ago that Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia first observed a day in memory of her mother, and by so doing began another sacred observance by the entire country. Mother's Day is now widely observed by the churches, and is commercialized by nearly every form of business. It is now the custom for church people to have special programs on the second Sunday in May, which is next Sunday, in honor of motherhood.

And well may the Church add its blessing to those who give new life to the earth. The highest honor earth has to offer is motherhood. This is God's best gift to human beings. Here is the joy of creation in the realm of life. In her mind and heart lies the destiny of the child she bears. It is her's to make or mar a human soul. An unknown poet has well said:

A partnership with God is motherhood;
What strength, what purity, what self-control,
What love, what wisdom should belong to her
Who helps God fashion an immortal soul.

Napoleon was right when he said: "The future destiny of the child is always the work of the mother," and "France needs nothing so much to promote her regeneration as good mothers." Emerson said: "Men are what their mothers make them," and Lincoln said: "All that I am or hope to be I owe to my mother," and John Quincy Adams said: "All that I am, my mother made me." These great men have put into words that which most others have felt even if they did not speak the words.

This sobering responsibility should not be the cause for fear. The partnership is with God, and that guarantees sufficient aid to all those who seek sincerely to measure up to the holy duties of motherhood. It gives purpose to life, and makes duties that might be hard and meanial seem divine. The mother's smile through tears puts a glow in the soul of the child that will live through the years and will be as a beacon to guide when sacrifice is demanded. The prayer that is lived in the home will be answered when children have homes of their own. This is a joy that may well be sought.

Mother's Day is not for Grandmother alone. It is not enough to sing the praise of those who have lived, loved, and gone awhile. There are living, serving, striving, and bewildered mothers who need the help, guidance, courage, and faith which the church can give. Then there are those who should be trained as the future mothers. People are trained to be mechanics, cooks, beauticians, and a thousand other things, but many mothers have never had training for the partnership with God in developing human life. Mother's Day is not the time for tears. It is the time for appreciation, for thought concerning life at its best, for the development of religion in the hearts of those who move the world forward.

Every son and daughter may well wear a white flower (carnation) for a deceased mother or a red flower for the living mother on this special day dedicated to those who share with God the development of the human race. No honor is too great for her who gave us life and guided us when we could not go alone. The greatest honor we can give is a noble life of Christian service. This, no doubt, is the answer to her prayer.

THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION.

The Union Congregational Church of Jacksonville, Fla. will always have friends in eight southern states because of the very fine way in which they entertained the Florida Conference and the Southeast Convention. Twenty-two of these friends are in Virginia, thirty-five in North Carolina, three in South Carolina, two in Kentucky, twelve in Tennessee, twenty in Alabama, seventy in Florida outside of Jacksonville, thirteen in Georgia, and several others from as far away as Massachusetts. Rev. Mr. Leshner and his fine members greeted in friendly fashion and continued this kind and generous spirit until hotel bills were paid for guests who were there.

Business was dispatched quickly but not too quickly. Most of the time was given to the consideration of religious problems common to all the Southeast. Speakers brought facts as well as philosophy. Southern problems of racial understanding, economic depression of great numbers of people, education, and all the enterprises of the Southeast came in for consideration. Indications were that there is much for the Church yet to do, and that the people in our churches are minded to work. Those sharing in this great meeting surely returned home not only with new information, but also with a greater determination to help make this world, the part in which they live, more Christian than it has yet become.

The Christian Temple of Norfolk, Virginia, invited the Convention to meet there in 1939, and the invitation was accepted. The Youth Fellowship expressed a desire for the meeting to be in June, and the Executive Committee was authorized to designate the time of the meeting.

During the next biennium Rev. John G. Truitt, D. D., of Suffolk, Virginia, will be the president and will have associated with him as vice-president, Rev. Victor B. Chicoine, of Winter Park, Florida. Rev. Alfred W. Hurst, of Chattanooga, Tennessee, will keep the records and handle the funds. The Executive Committee is composed of the officers and Rev. Wiley R. Scott of Atlanta, Georgia, and Professor A. R. Van Cleave of Wadley, Alabama. The Program Committee is composed of the president, the pastor of the entertaining church, and Rev. Carl H. Voss, of Raleigh, N. C. With this fine leadership the Southeast Convention should continue to grow in usefulness.

THE MINISTER'S JOB.

Dean Vaughan Dabney of Andover Newton Theological Seminary at Newton Center, Massachusetts, led a very stimulating discussion group for ministers at the recent Convention. He raised such questions as, Does the minister have a real job in our day? What are his duties? Is he a specialist or a general practitioner? What constitutes the minister's message? What methods should he use in preaching his message?

Ministers present seemed to be unanimous in the opinion there is a real job for the present day minister, that he has many types of work to do in all of which he should be preaching the Gospel of the abundant life as found in Jesus. Not much time was given to the discussion of method other than brief suggestions concerning the use psychiatry. Dean Dabney says that ministers should know something of psychology and psychiatry, but should not undertake to be practitioners.

It is the belief of this writer that the minister's main job is to preach. He may have a thousand other things to do, but there is no substitute for preaching and no excuse for failure along this line. God may call men to run barber shops, wash dishes, go to parties, and speak to Rotary clubs, but these are not the ones who are ordained to the ministry. When Sunday comes and the preacher stands in his pulpit, he is there to speak the message which God has put in his own heart, and unless he can speak it with some assurance of reality, clarity of thought, and earnestness of soul, he will have failed in the job to which the Lord has called him. This writer agrees with Dean Dabney also in the idea that the best sermons grow out of daily study and activity rather than out of seclusion. Formal and beautiful sermons may be written by long hours of tedious study, but if the preacher is constantly on the job ministering to the needs of humanity, reading books and magazines with a mind to the sermons which he is to preach, the chances are that when he stands in the pulpit the Lord will have some message for him to deliver.

To this task he can bring all the native ability and scholarship possible, with the assurance that when he has done his best he is only an unworthy servant.

This is not a plea against pastoral duties or preparation of sermons. It is rather a plea that in all duties which a pastor must perform he will be alert and conscious of the fact that he is to preach to a waiting congregation. Out of his own experience, study, and contact will grow the vital message which living people need. The minister has a tremendous job, the most important of which is to preach the unsearchable riches of God in Christ Jesus.

THE NEW EVANGELISM.

It may be drastic, but it is none the less honest. We the Congregational-Christian people, must evangelize or cease to be. Our work utterly fails unless we get men to God. A direct, fervent, life-challenging Evangelism is the urgent need of our modern world, as it is the hope and need of the Church herself.

For the most of twenty years, there has been a criminal apathy among the churches, generally, in regard to New Testament Evangelism. Perhaps I should correct or modify that by saying, a professional evangelism which depended more on emotion, extravagance, spasmodic efforts, and methods which intelligent and sensitive people very much dislike.

Well! we are all prone to ruts. We get into traditional and supinely accepted ways and we do not wish to give them up. The Church has often sacrificed her power on the altar of precedent. A rut is a grave peril; a little deeper and it becomes a grave. We become the slaves of rules and methods. But why give up the living message for the sake of a dead method?

Evangelism is not a profession; it is a passion. It is not merely the minister's work. It is the business of every Christian. If we are impatient of methods there is an obligation resting upon us to devise new methods. Do not be too respectful of precedent or too reverential toward the usual. Let us break new ground, try new methods, and speak a new vocabulary.

We must seek a wider interpretation of evangelism that will bring people into line with the purpose of our Lord.

Agnosticism has run its way. Many of the philosophic cults of our time are bloodless and lifeless. Men must be saved. Society must be saved. The world has great needs and we have great resources. Evangelism is the key to the problems of youth, the problems of Social Redemption, Economic Reform, Public Morals, International Peace, and Good-Will. What is won by Evangelism is consolidated in reformed Social and national policies and adjusted human relationships.

Salvation may be an out-moded term, but it contains what I believe to be the primary content and abiding dynamic of the Church's ministry in every generation.

This preaching Mission proposes—in our pulpits—our class rooms—our school and college auditoriums—young people's groups—the radio—industrial plants—in hospitals—and by the wayside, and wherever people meet—to bring the needy world, and the Resourceful Saviour together.

I am writing this at the request of the Extension Office in Jacksonville.

THE MOTHER'S HYMN.

"Blessed art thou among women."

Lord who ordainest for mankind
Benignant toils and tender cares,
We thank thee for the ties that bind
The mother to the child she bears.

We thank Thee for the hopes that rise
Within her heart, as, day by day,
The dawning soul, from those young eyes,
Looks like a clearer, steadier ray.

And grateful for the blessing given
With that dear infant on her knee,
She trains the eye to look to heaven,
The voice to lisp a prayer to Thee.

Such thanks the blessed Mary gave
When from her lap the Holy Child,
Sent from on high to seek and save
The lost of earth, looked up and smiled.

All-Gracious! grant to those who bear
A mother's charge, the strength and light
To guide the feet that own their care
In ways of Love and Truth and Right.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

What is man? That is a great question. It cannot be answered in a few sentences. The answer must recognize the origin of the race, and suggest the physical, mental and spiritual capacity of every person, while accounting for the final destiny of human character. A scientific statement is based upon the findings of the laboratory. The laboratory must use the microscope and depend upon chemical reactions. Even the scientist cannot make much advancement if he relies upon his own physical and mental ability. He must use some medium to assist his eyes in his research. His eyes cannot see the hidden mysteries of leaf and flower, without the microscope. And he cannot understand the mystery of his own body without material assistance.

What a blessing ordinary eye glasses, the little microscope and the giant telescope are to man. What would man know about himself, and the world in which he lives, if he did not have access to these valuable aids to study research? How dependent man is! He must bow the knee to mother earth and invoke her help in every field of investigation. Sand must be melted, and moulded into crystal glass and adjusted to the human eyes before man can see the world about him. Nature must teach man to construct delicate instruments to open his deaf ears and bring the harmony of music and the message of human speech to his attention and understanding. The telephone and the radio are regarded as examples of the triumph of man in the field of invention. At the same time they reveal the limitations of the natural man. No man would undertake to pick up the messages sent out from the great broadcasting stations without turning on the radio.

Now this line of observation might be continued indefinitely. But let us pause to observe a more practical lesson pertaining to the spiritual life of man. Man does not hesitate to make use of every available device to assist him in seeing the light of the world and hearing its ceaseless voices. But is he as eager to use available means to hold converse with the spiritual world? What is the key to an understanding of God? What is the secret of contentment for those who rest in him? Is it not faith? Is it not love? Faith looks into the microscope and sees the beauty of creation. Faith lifts the telescope and, through its revealing vision, sweeps the horizon for unexplored realms of spiritual conquest. Love unlocks the secrets of human hearts and rests upon the bosom of a loving Father. If people would study the Bible as intently and conscientiously, as they read science and philosophy, souls would find surcease from sin; and peace, sweet peace, would dispel the clouds of strife and war.

No man can measure man until the rule of love and faith is applied to his spiritual life. Nature has abundant resources to aid man in his scientific discovery. God has provided abundant means for spiritual recovery. The power of consecration has not yet been discovered. Life without love cannot be understood. God is love. Love is within our reach. Divine love is available for those who believe in Jesus Christ. Man is at his worst when hate rules his heart. For hate engenders war. It is the mother of murder and death. Man is at his best when he loves God supremely. The earth becomes his footstool and heaven is his home.

WHAT SHOULD BE DONE.

On Thursday of last week, the biennial session of the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches held in the Congregational Church at Jacksonville, Florida, closed. This was a very interesting gathering. The attendance was certainly commendable. The hospitality of the church at Jacksonville, Florida, was most cordial and gracious.

The program dealt with achievements and problems confronting the United Church in the Southeast. There were many inspiring and helpful addresses. I cannot in this brief article give deserved recognition to the several speakers and the contributions that they made. I want simply to refer to one address delivered by Dr. William F. Frazier, Executive Vice-president of the Home Boards. In discussing the task of the church, Dr. Frazier brought to our attention the constant shifting of our urban population. In the shifting of population in a great city, churches long established and ones influential in the city's life and helpful in denominational enterprises have been almost completely disorganized. Members of such churches move to other cities and into suburban areas, and in many instances, are lost completely to the church, not only to our denomination, but to the church as a whole. These are facts, and they were driven home to every individual by the speaker in his own engaging and forceful way.

These trends must be reckoned with the church. Increased responsibilities are upon our Home Boards. In order to meet the situation, to conserve the strength of the church, and to accomplish the task confronting the church, our Home Boards need increased resources.

The shifting of population, both urban and rural, is more evident in the Southeast perhaps than in any other section. There is a decided trend from the country to the city. City and town population are constantly moving out toward the edges. The Congregational-Christian Church is not a strong denomination numerically in the Southeast, but it does have a great opportunity and a faithful section in which to operate. The Christian Church has considerable strength in North Carolina and Virginia. The Congregational Church has considerable strength in Florida. We have a Congregational Church in Charleston, South Carolina. There is a vast territory comprising great opportunities in the section of country lying between these two extremes. There are a number of cities in South Carolina and Georgia in which we do not have Congregational and Christian Churches. With a small amount of money plus efficient leadership, our church can be established more favorably in this section and in these cities. The way is open and the time is right for the message of Christianity that the Congregational-Christian church has to offer. What are we going to do about it? Will we take advantage of this opportunity and render the service that this great section of our country needs, or will we be content to narrow our vision, lessen our efforts, and minimize our ability. Personally, I feel that God is calling us, our church, to life up our eyes and look on the fields for they are white unto harvest. What are we going to do about it? Will we enter, or will we sit complacently by while the harvest goes to waste, or others go in to reap?

SNOW ON THE MOUNTAIN.

It seems that our hills will never get warm again. Snow still flies in the Blue Ridge breeze and sweet flowering May almost here. But my father remembers when a snow came here about April 29th and was six inches deep in the lane at grand-father's house. I hope it doesn't come that way this time, for the old apple trees are now showing the pink buds and peach trees proudly lift their wealth of bloom above a carpet of green. But the wind—Oh! this mountain breeze is so cold! I am not quite sure that it was ever intended for people to live on these mountains except in the summer months. But what a grand and glorious place this would be for people who are tired of staying in hospitals and are still not well. Just to stay here and see the hills bloom in the summer is truly great.

However, if you don't think it work to get four or five children out to church along the crest of these mountains on a windy day you really should try it. Our folks here truly have faith. When I see a mother bring out her family on a cold day I have to wonder how much it really costs her. And I also wonder how many mothers of the outside world would go to that much trouble to worship God. When folks do well I have to tell 'em so. Someone said that a kite rises against the wind and not with. That sounds good for our church here must rise against the wind too. The odds are always against us but I believe that our people here have too much backbone to give up the ship. Give us a few hundred years here and you can't tell Elk Spur from the Christian Temple at Norfolk.

It does seem at times that our church here is slow moving and cold, and then I look over our group and find that Christian Character is being built here. Take Lannie Meredith, who is married now and not only stays with us at Sunday school, but she brings her young husband and baby. She has had charge of the Primary department at S. S. for some years and has done a fine piece of work. She just happens to be one of our girls who has grown up in our church at Elk Spur, and I feel safe to say that no finner girl nor stronger faith can be found in any church. We have a right to be proud of Lannie. And Gladys Strickland makes a splendid Superintendent for our Sunday school. In fact we have quite a few young people here who are fine and I like to tell about them, for many of you people of the outside world never see our folks here and you have to wonder if we are wild folks up here, or if we are just folks. Just the fact that we need a church here doesn't mean that we are cannibals. But I recall once when I went to school in the flat country, a boy said to me, "Why you look just like our girls out here." I have tried ever since to tell folks just how hills really are for I found that people who learn of hills from books just don't know what to expect to find here. I think our pastor came up here with the idea that some worker had a mule shot from under him up here once. But I must say I can't remember that. I never have patched up any bullet holes in any missionary here yet. It is mostly broken hearts that have to be patched up for the workers who roam these cold and rugged hills. But those who understand that they cannot rush over hill but must take the trail with the slow, even stride of a mountaineer, will come out on the mountain top of vision sooner or later and find the climb was worthwhile.

Our Elmores have too much faith in our hills to fail. Oh, of course, there will be many a beautiful dream that will never come true for them. The cold days must come and snow will cap these peaks, but that blood of those old pioneers who took these hills from the wolves and bears is still here. Someone said to me once, "Why did those folks ever come here and stay?" I still think it was because they were not afraid. And surely there is enough of that fearless power here now to keep a church alive. Any way I think so.

"I have but one boast,

"I never yet lost,

"A battle before it was fought."

And now I hope before this even goes into print that our hills will be warm and sunny and can give you a warm welcome if you come up, instead greeting you with snowy kisses.

May God bless you always.

UNITARIAN—CONGREGATIONAL COOPERATION IN TENNESSEE.

By REV. JOHN CLARENCE PETRIE,
Minister, First Unitarian Church, Memphis, Tennessee.

Today there is just one Unitarian Church in the entire State of Tennessee; there is none in Arkansas, none in Mississippi or Alabama, and only one in Louisiana. I came to Memphis eight years ago. My isolation hurt me. I determined to cooperate with anyone who would cooperate with me. Five blocks away is the First Congregational Church with a liberal minded pastor, the Rev. Robert A. George, now in his eighties. At once a strong friendship sprang up between us that continues to this day. It has been my hope and prayer that eventually First Unitarian and First Congregational would become the United Congregational Church of Memphis. I still hope and pray for this consummation. I have read the Congregational statement of faith and since it is not intended as a test, but rather as a statement of the general principles underlying Congregationalism, I can say I am in agreement with it.

Furthermore, there is a Tennessee-Alabama Conference of Congregational-Christian churches. I began attending its annual gatherings each autumn. I was received at once as a brother. I have read papers twice before the conference, and once addressed the students of the Atlanta Seminary Foundation at Nashville on the subject of Humanism. The Conference has voted to admit me into what is known as associate membership, so that I feel I am a Congregational minister, although my name is not in the Year Book.

Each June this Conference has a splendid young people's Camp. The last two years it has met at Grandview, on Walden Ridge, not far from Chattanooga. A car full of young people attended in 1936 from the Memphis Unitarian Church with such splendid results that we hope to send at least one car again in 1937, and perhaps two.

I may add that in Chattanooga, where the Unitarian church has closed, there is still a Universalist church, which last fall called as its pastor, a Congregational minister. The Unitarian church of Nashville has also closed with what was left of the small group for the most part joining the Collegeside Congregational Church.

Meantime my isolation has broken down in other directions. Last night I took prayer meeting at a Methodist church; a week ago I addressed the Goodwill mission. In summer, I preach in the Methodist Community Church in Daytona Beach, Florida. I find that the formula of cooperating with whomsoever will cooperate with me has uncovered a great deal more actual brotherhood among the various denominations, than I once dreamed possible. Those of us who go about with a chip on our shoulders have only ourselves to thank if we are met with antagonism.

Cheerfulness and content are great beautifiers and are famous preservers of youthful looks.—Charles Dickens.

THE EASTER MISSIONARY OFFERING.

Many churches have sent un their annual or Easter Missionary offerings, but many others have not. It will be appreciated beyond measure if all pastors who have not done so will see to it that their churches send in the offering as soon as possible. Some pastors, like some laymen, are not interested in missions. That is because they put such little into missions. As editor F. C. Lester said in THE SUN recently, "one is not much interested in a bank, or a business, until one puts some money in it." Missions is an investment for Christ in the Salvation of Souls. The more one puts into it, the more one is interested and the more one gets out of it.

THE LAST CALL FOR THE SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

For the past three months the Publicity Committee has been anxiously striving to get before all the people the news of our Silver Anniversary to be held in Suffolk, May 13th, at 2:30 P. M. If we have failed it has not been because THE CHRISTIAN SUN and numbers of friends have not done their part. Before another issue comes to your home, the meeting will be history.

There are a few facts that we wish to emphasize in this our last call to you who are interested. First, our offering is NOT to be used to build a monument to Dr. Staley nor for Suffolk Church. Instead it is to be used in some live, active, service as a memorial to him and in no way affects any particular church.

I hasten to emphasize this as these facts have been mixed in the minds of some people. Service, usefulness, and worthwhileness we think he would delight in, but never a cold shaft.

Second, we desire that our offerings shall be presented in silver, why not? It is our Silver Anniversary and we are thinking in terms of our Twenty-fifth Anniversary, so let us bring silver and pile it around the altar.

Third, arrangements are being made for a record to be kept so every person who brings the offering for their church will be given a card to fill out stating definitely the various amounts from that particular church. The financial statement blanks will be given to you at the Suffolk Church during the intermission and evening service.

Fourth, one person, the president of the Woman's Missionary Society of the local church, should bring the entire offering from her church. When the name of the church is called she will present her gift and light the candle for her church. Only one candle for each church will be lighted, not one for each society. If it is possible for the local president to be present the conference president or some other person designated by the particular church should present the gift.

Fifth, a beautiful program has been prepared, full of devotion and appreciation. It starts promptly at 2:30 P. M. At 6:00 in the Fellowship Hall a birthday supper will be served for 50 cents. At this time an impressive program will be carried out and time will be given for fellowship with the visitors. At the evening service we are to be honored with the presence of our visiting guest speaker, Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury, of the American Board. Miss Seabury will bring the message at that hour and we would like all of our women who can possible be seated in that large auditorium to hear her.

Sixth, we want to extend to the men of our church a most cordial invitation to be present and enjoy this meeting with us. You have always helped us in every undertaking and it will do us good to have you share in our Anniversary. Should you so desire you, too, may bring your offering in silver. Of course all of our ministers know that we not only want them but are anticipating their helpful co-operation, conscious of the fact that our Silver Anniversary would not have been possible without the support they have always given our efforts.

Seventh, come one, come all, come at 2:30 P. M., have supper, and remain for the evening service, and above all remember that it celebrates the small achievement of a band of women and men organized for a purpose that seemed worthy.

OUR GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY.

Mrs. D. E. Mitchell of Reidsville, N. C. is planning to take a car full of young girls to the Silver Anniversary meeting at Suffolk, Va., on May 13th. She feels that it is very important that these young people be present, for they are to be leaders in Reidsville during the next twenty-five years. Who knows but that our president at our Golden Jubilee may be one of these Reidsville young ladies. Would that every church could be represented by a group of young people as well as by a group of women.

I wish that we might think in terms of our Golden Jubilee as well as our Silver Anniversary, for if our Golden Jubilee is to be a success we must begin now. Mrs. Harris is anxious to have the balcony of the Suffolk Church filled with young people at the Silver Anniversary. I am anxious that North Carolina as well as Virginia be well represented in this group. Missions needs the enthusiasm and encouragement of our young people combined with the experience and wisdom of our men and women. Together we can do great things for God.

INGRAM CELEBRATES.

The 25th Anniversary of the Woman's Missionary Society of Ingram Christian Church was held April 15th. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers for the occasion.

A large cake with white candles and silver trimmings was used. In the center of the cake was a large candle which was lighted by Mrs. Minnie Farmer Cook, who organized the society 25 years ago. She lighted this candle, quoting these words, "Let your light so shine."—Matt. 5:16. Each member lighted a candle as they deposited their offering in a silver tray. There were present three persons who were members of the society from the beginning, namely: Mesdames

C. V. Dunn and N. P. Ingram and Miss Pattie Adams. We had as our guests the following Societies: Vernon Hill, Mt. Zion, Mt. Table, Oak Level. Greetings came from Pleasant Grove Society.

After the lighting of the candles and offering, the pastor in behalf of the society presented Mrs. C. V. Dunn a lovely string of pearls in appreciation of her faithful service as president of the society for these 25 years.

Those assisting Mrs. Dunn in the program were Mrs. L. E. Carlton, and Miss Arvis Dunn.

After the benediction we were all invited to the Social Hall where delicious refreshments were served.

Soon we were on our homeward journey thanking God that we had witnessed the celebration of the 25 years of Missionary activity and hoping that if it be in His will, we may be able to enjoy the Golden Anniversary of this Society.

GUILFORD DISTRICT MISSIONARY RALLY.

The annual meeting of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference of the Guilford District convened at Reidsville Congregational Christian Church, April 21st.

A very interesting and instructive program was presented under the capable leadership of Mrs. A. B. McFarland of Guilford College. Several speakers brought inspiring messages throughout the day. Mrs. A. B. McFarland, superintendent, brought an inspiring message to the delegation. Her message was based on "Past Witnessing and Future Witnessing." Mrs. Grace Stewart of Greensboro conducted the worship period, convincingly portraying the fact that "Christ is the Way." Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, of Greensboro First Church spoke on the founding and the purpose of the Council for Social Action of our Church. She emphasized the fact that our nation was founded with high ideals, and that the Council is to aid in every way possible to face and solve problems of the social order of today.

Every member, delegate or visitor was inspired by the presence of Dr. J. O. Atkinson. His address, "The Way of the First Witness" was a challenge to the modern church. The way of Christ was and is the hard way, but Paul, as the first witness, was undaunted, ever pressing onward with Christ as his guide. Could we, as his followers, seek less? Dr. Atkinson's address was a challenge to all Missionary Societies and church mem-

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

A CHANCE TO HELP.

Congratulations to those who had the privilege of attending the Southeast Fellowship and Convention. It was good to see such a fine representation there. When the young people from these eight Southern States get together and work together, a new day will dawn in our churches. It is to this end that some of us earnestly work and fervently pray.

One bit of work which all can unite in is to raise some money with which to send the president of the National Pilgrim Fellowship, A. Lanson Granger, to a dozen Summer Schools in the middle west next summer. The Pilgrim Fellowship is now in the process of being formed. The first president was elected last June. Young people in the Southeast are proud of the fact that he comes from their group, and was their president at the time of the national election. It is expected that they will respond quickly and generously to this fund so he can go as a friendly messenger from young people to young people. It is in this way that we can help to make a friendly world.

The Southeast Fellowship endorsed the raising of such funds. All money raised by local churches should be sent to the Conference Fellowship treasurer, who will in turn send it to the treasurer of the Southeast Fellowship. Let me urgently request that young people in every church and in college groups make their contribution at once and send it in. The amount need not be large, but it should be shared in by as many as possible. Put with it a prayer that out of this summer's work may grow a larger Pilgrim Fellowship and a more Christian world.

F. C. LESTER.

A MESSAGE FROM NEW PRESIDENT.

Progress and accomplishment of service made in the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship since its inception have not due to the efforts of any one person. Nor will that made in the future be. Many have contributed. One of the fine things about serving in the organization is that the person who serves most will as a result be the one to realize the most growth in personality, and character, and lovely spirit; will be among those who find the greatest enjoyment in what is accomplished.

A good executive is one who can delegate authority and fix responsibility. Any organization to be self-governing must have officers to administer the routine work and to fix responsibility. But a mere handful of officers cannot, alone, successfully function for the organization.

My message to the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship is this: Let every one consider himself a partner in the work in the Southeast and endeavor to carry over into his own contacts and into his own local group the program he wants to see enacted in the entire organization. Try to help make your program our program and vice versa. Don't place too much emphasis on the executives; after all it is your own organization!

I think I speak for the executive committee when I say to the body of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship that alone we feel insignificant, but working with the cooperation of the Southeast en masse we feel sure that some really constructive work can be done here toward building a new world.

EARLE G. WARD,
President, Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship.

A MOTHER'S LOVE.

A Mother's love!
If there be one thing pure,
Where all beside is sullied,
That can endure,
When all else passes away;
If there be aught
Surpassing human deed or word, or thought,
It is a mother's love.

SAFEGUARDING THE HOMES OF TOMORROW.

The Needed Guest of Every Home.—
Rev. 3:20.

A Safe Home.—Acts 16:29-34.

If we have discovered what makes happiness in the home, we are prepared to face the topic for this meeting. To have a strong civilization it is necessary to safeguard the homes of tomorrow. We should discover the dangers confronting our homes and find a solution by which these dangers may be avoided.

No doubt one of the greatest dangers threatening the home is the laxity in marriage relations. This is a field wherein sacred relationships should exist. If the best results are to be accomplished, the man and wife even in their thinking, must draw a line of division between their own mates and those outside. This respect toward those outside promises the most secured married happiness and helps to develop a homelife that is satisfying. At the same time we must be able to include others in our vision, and have a concern for the well-being of all families. Someone has said, "Our homes must have windows that look out upon all the world."

The opinion that free love is thrilling and harmless is false. It is only mis-used love for the immoral type. All young people need to know and feel the sanctity of married life.

To Think About—

1. Is there any reason why the present day professional woman may not be just as true to her husband as was her grand-mother who spent practically all of her time at home?

2. Does a wedding in your community have the same dignity and preparation as a funeral?

3. Do the families of your community have family worship? Would this help safeguard the homes of tomorrow?

4. What training do young people get that will aid them in selecting a life-partner and building a new home? What could be done along this line by your church?

5. Does drinking and smoking on the part of young people have any affect on the future home? Ask your doctor.

6. What effect does divorce have on homes?

Suggested Hymns—

"Onward Christian Soldiers."

"Faith of Our Fathers."

"Home, Sweet Home."

The Pleasant Ridge Church, Randolph County, N. C., has improved the looks of the church by planting some shrubbery on the grounds. The young people have reorganized the Christian Endeavor Society, and everyone is invited to attend the services each Sunday night at 7:30.

ABRAHAM, A MAN OF PRAYER

LESSON VI—MAY 9, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: "The supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its working."—James 5: 16.

LESSON: Genesis 18.

A Man of Hospitality.

This man Abraham was a man of hospitality. He was a gracious host. With instinctive courtesy and true Oriental hospitality he invited the three unknown men to be his guests, and he entertained them in a gracious and generous manner. He did not know who they were, or what they were about; it was enough that they were strangers, and that they needed rest and food.

Now to be sure we cannot rush out and entertain every stranger that passes by, even those of us who may live in the country. And certainly this is true of those of us who live in the city. But one has the feeling sometimes that our Western world has lost much of the art of hospitality, which was one of the outstanding virtues, not only in Abraham's times, but also in the early Christian Church. We are too busy, company is too much trouble, entertaining involves too much expense, and we do not have the facilities or the disposition to do it. And yet there is still a place for the fine art of hospitality in modern life, both in country and in city. And there is quite an opportunity for large service through it, if it is done in the right spirit and in the right way. For instance, the writer of these Notes knows of a woman in a university city who wanted to be a missionary, but who was not able to carry out her cherished plan. She uses her Christian home for Christian hospitality. Regularly she invites students from foreign countries into her home for Sunday dinner and for an afternoon or evening of fellowship. The meals are not elaborate. The program is not elaborate. It is simply an opportunity for fellowship and mutual understanding. But a host of young people from other lands have gone into this home for this fellowship, and have gone from it with new inspiration and as friendly ambassadors and interpreters of American life. Even in our complex, impersonal American life, there is a place for genuine hospitality unselfishly extended especially to those who need it.

A Man of Prayer.

Today's lesson shows Abraham as a man of prayer. Two interesting phases of this vital and much misunderstood subject are presented in the lesson: A Revelation from God, and Intercession with God. God made known to Abraham what He was about to do. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him. This does not mean that a good man is a fortune-teller or a worker of magic. It does mean that to the man of sensitive spirit and responsive heart and obedient will, God can make known His will and His way. Jesus Himself said that the Holy Spirit would show His followers "things to come." The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him.

The emphasis in Abraham's prayer is on the element of intercession. Here is a great man pouring out his heart in behalf of others. He had compassion on people, even on those who had sinned away the day of grace. He pours out his heart in their behalf. Several characteristics of that prayer need emphasis in or prayer life.

It was natural. Abraham talked with God as a man talks with his friend. It was a conversation with God. There is nothing stilted or formal about it.

It was humble. There is a note of humility running all through it. In spite of its intimacy there was nothing flippant or irreverent in it. Abraham, like every other sensible man knew that there was a great gulf between the Holy God and himself.

It was trustful. Abraham came believing that God is, and that He is a rewarder of those who diligently see Him. "Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?" He was not trying to change the will of God. He was simply trying to bring into play elements that had not been operative before. It was offered in the spirit of "not my will, but thine be done."

It was intercessory. Abraham prayed for others. He was not asking things for himself. It is an injustice to the man to think that he was praying simply because Lot was involved. He was praying for those men and women who apparently were doomed, in the hope that perhaps even yet the mercy of God could have the ascendancy over the inexorable working out of the consequences of sin.

It was persistent. Again and again he prayed, six times he presented his intercession before Jehovah. Prayer to be effectual must not be spasmodic. We are to pray without ceasing.

It was definite. Abraham prayed specifically. He did not pray simply in general terms. One's prayers should not be narrow but they should be definite and specific.

It was submissive. As has been stated before, it was offered in the spirit of submission to God's will. All true prayer is thus. True prayer is not a matter of changing God's plan, but of preparing men to do God's plan.

MISSIONS.

bers to accept the way of the first witness and adventure for Christ.

The Method Hour was probably one of the most enjoyable features of the entire program. A general discussion on "The Way of Witnessing in the Total Church Program" was led by Mrs. W. E. Wisseman. This proved invaluable because everyone could enter into discussion, impart information desired, and compare ideas exchanged.

The attendance and interest manifested proved the willingness of the women as workers in the church. Seventy-one delegates from nine churches were present. Three ministers, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College; Rev. C. E. Gerringer, Palm St. Church, Greensboro; and Rev S. W. Penn, of High Point added much to the conference.

Special music was rendered by the Reidsville quartette.

The fellowship and hospitality of the Reidsville Church cannot be surpassed. The luncheon, served in the dining hall of the church, was delicious. It might be added that the Reidsville Church now has a new Sunday school annex, which is both beautiful and spacious.

The officers for this year were retained. They are: Superintendent, Mrs. A. B. McFarland, Guilford, N. C.; Assistant, Mrs. W. F. Burton, Brown Summit, N. C.; Secretary, Vera Gerringer, Brown Summit, N. C.; Assistant secretary, Mrs. Dewey Cockman, Greensboro, N. C.

Greetings were extended to the rally from O. H. Paris, Greensboro, State President of the Woman's Missionary Conference by Mrs. W. E. Wisseman. The Rally extended sympathy to and appreciation for everything Mrs. Paris had done to add to the years program. Due to illness in her home, Mrs. Paris was unable to attend the Guilford District Rally.

Upon adjournment, the Rally was invited to convene with the Greensboro Palm St. Church next year. The pastor is Rev. C. E. Gerringer.

MONDAY.

OUR COMMON WAIL.

"Call me not Naomi; for the Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me."—Ruth 1:20.

We are told that the name "Naomi" means pleasantness; and "Mara" means bitterness. Naomi had had a hard time and she did not see a great deal of pleasantness in her life. Therefore she complained to her friends that God had dealt bitterly with her and that she should be called "Mara" hereafter.

This is the way of all flesh. We charge God with our sorrows. Nothing is right with the world; if it were, everything would be right with us. We should know God better than this. We should realize that God can wrong no one. If there is bitterness in our lives, certainly God could have not placed it there. If we charge Him with it, we are maligning His Universal Heart of Love.

Prayer—Dear Lord, Our Father, Thy ways are ways of pleasantness, and all Thy paths are peace. Whatever bitterness sin has placed in our lives, in Thy ways it shall be overcome. Amen.

TUESDAY.

UNRECOGNIZED SANCTUARIES.

"Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not."—Genesis 28:16.

The earth is God's sanctuary and the sanctified heart finds God at every turn of the road. The arbutus by the side of the hill may be an altar where man may worship. The altar of a cathedral has no holiness unless holiness dwells in the soul that worships there.

It is one of the most delightful experiences known to man to recognize God's presence constantly. That recognition banishes care, just like sunshine drives away the shadows, and it lifts the soul unto the blessed vistas of eternity.

Prayer—Our Heavenly Father, give us vision to recognize and know Thee in every place where we are, and in knowing Thee, may we have peace that passeth understanding. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

BLESSED MEMORIES.

"I will remember Thy wonders of old."—Ps. 77:11.

Memory furnishes the entire background of life and constitutes the stuff that the future is made of. That memory may fill us with stinging regrets and make the future a very bitter one, or it may be rich with beautiful things and fill the future with joy. Such a memory is made only by the living of the beautiful things today and by letting every blessing of God's grace rest upon our lives forever.

Prayer—Thou, O God, dost never forget, save in penitence when Thou dost forgive and forget. Endow us with the ability to remember the good things of life and to live by them in Christ Jesus. Amen.

THURSDAY.

AN UNSTABLE SHIP.

"A doubled minded man is unstable in all his ways."—Jas. 1:8.

Life is like a billowy sea. He who travels its courses is buffeted about by its billows and storms. We have been wise enough to invent "stabilizers" and place them in our ships that they may ride the waves without rolling and outride the storm to the haven of rest. In Jesus Christ God has furnished life its stabilizer, but we are still faithless to use Him.

James perceived the magnificent truth that the Messiah had come. He set this fact in the heart of his life and held to it faithfully and bodily. But alas for the one who is double-minded. Like Peter in his months of failure, courageous at one time and walking the waves and, a moment later, a coward and sinking. Christ is life's stabilizer. Keep the eyes fixed on Him. Be firm midst all life's onsets.

Prayer—O God, Thou Rock of Ages, make us staunch in our faith and our service. In Jesus' name we ask it. Amen.

FRIDAY.

THE SOUL'S BULWARK OF STRENGTH.

"I send forth the promise of my Father upon you."—Lk. 24:49.

Life's vicissitudes furnish us with a great many of experiences which make us feel as though God had abandoned us, that Christ has left us lonely, leaderless and defenseless, just as the disciples felt in those days when their Lord had gone from them. But precisely at the time when most needed Christ came to them with His chief blessing. So does he come to us. When life's woes appear the darkest, when our sorrows seem most nearly unsurmountable, then Christ sends forth upon, who look to Him, the promises of the Father.

Prayer—O Lord, Our Redeemer, we lift our hearts unto Thee this day and pray that Thy hands in our lives may be the completion of Thy grace. Amen.

SATURDAY.

THE PROMISE OF THE FATHER.

"I send forth the promise of my Father upon you."—Lk. 24:44-53.

The ascending Christ did not leave His disciples comfortless upon the earth. He left them with promise, the glorious promise of His Father, the promise of the Holy Spirit who should be with them in blessing forever.

And so when God seems to have abandoned us, when Christ appears to be leaving us lonely, leaderless, and defenseless, then is precisely the time when the Lord's chief blessings descend upon us. Then, when we need them most and because we need them most.

"When the tale of brick is doubled, Moses comes." When life's woes appear the darkest, when our sorrows seem most nearly unsupportable, then Christ sends forth upon us the promise of His Father.

Prayer—We claim Thy promise, kindly Redeemer. We lift up to Thee our sore need, and require at Thy hands the completion of all Thy grace. Amen. —Amos R. Wells.

SUNDAY.

SWIFTNESS THAT FAILS.

"Flight shall perish from the swift."—Amos 2:6-16.

Because of the wickedness of the Israelites, thundered Amos, the farmer-prophet, flight should perish from the swift; that is, in the day of attack. They should be defeated, and when it became necessary to flee from before their victorious foes, even those fleet of foot should be unable to do so.

If, after our many sins, we are still able to run away from temptation and escape the wiles of the devil, it is not so bad with us; but a time comes when even that last mournful recourse has left us, when we must stand still and see the swift and fatal punishment descend upon us.

There is only one remedy for that woe, and this is to flee to God while there is time; to give up utterly and at once the sin that so easily besets us, and live the life with God that we know He wants us to live. "Today, if ye will hear His voice, harden not your hearts;" for harden them you can and will, so that they can never be softened, if you keep on in sin.

Prayer—While there is time, O God. While there is time, O Our Savior. While there is time, blessed Spirit. Free us from wickedness while there is time. Amen. —Amos R. Wells.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

TO BRING US IN.

By REV. VICTOR B. CHICOINE, D. D.

"He brought us out to bring us in."—Deut. 6:23.

These words of Moses to the wanderers from Egypt were spoken to them on their approach to the Promised Land, that they might have assurance that their long journey had not been purposeless. These ancient words are still good words for us all to consider—for this text is a summation of God's mind and purpose for His children. God has through the ages been bringing men and women out that they might be brought into friendships, laughter, adventure, and the abundant life.

Of course one can sneer at the idea of an abundant life in our world, and say that blind forces and chemical reactions brought us out, and that is why we are here today and gone tomorrow. And one can add that as far as his will was concerned he had no part in the process, nor any desire to be born. It can then be added that this being a purposeless universe, and each one of us being a separate entity, independent of each other, and the choice of life only one of pain or pleasure, any one has the right to choose pleasure for themselves, and call that choice the abundant life!

Jesus himself might have said the same when the stubborn fact of how much God was expecting from him broke up in his mind. He might have said: "God, you brought me here, therefore I am not responsible. I do choose the abundant life. And I mean to eat, drink, and be merry!" But instead he said: "My Father worketh hitherto and now I work." Jesus might have said when the crowd began to follow him and desired to make him a king: "God I do not need you any more. These multitudes will supply all my needs." But instead He said: "Our Father." Jesus might have said when he saw with perfect certainty the shadow of the cross across his path: "God, I have gone far enough for you. Here and now we part company because I now clearly see that you brought me out, not to an abundant life, but to be crucified." But instead he said: "If any man will come after me let him take up his cross and follow me." And now as we look back over the history of the world, and over the life of Jesus, who will say that he did not find the abundant life to which God brought him?

But this text must be carried still further in its application. For surely God brought us out not only to bring us into abundant life, but that we might also bring others in! For as I read the words of the text I hear God saying: "I brought you out of the infinite into the present to be a dependable guide for the less weary travellers: or to be a good bridge builder for weary wayfarers; or a writer of songs that cheer, inspire; or a home maker that would lift other men and women to higher levels. And now don't you—above all others—disappoint me!"

That day the sinful men were about to stone the sinful woman I cannot help but believe that something passed between Jesus and the woman before he dismissed her. It may not even have been words—but just an expression on the face of the Savior. "O woman, God brought you out and breathed into you the breath of life—but, not, to become this! He brought you out to become a fine, noble, generous woman—and you still can be such a woman. Now go—and sin no more."

And when Jesus was silent before Pilate might not something like this have crossed the mind of the Master? "O Pilate, God brought you out into the world to be a great and sturdy man among men—to help deliver the human race from its own wilful bondage of sin—and you have entered into partnership with that which is cowardly, tracherous, and despicable! God brought you out to eternal—and you will be—eternally infamous!"

It would seem that Admiral Richard E. Byrd caught the great idea of the bounden duty of each man to help bring all others into the abundant life while on that lonely and terrible vigil at the South Pole. For these are his recorded words: "The distance and detachment of this place seem to soften some human follies, others take on an added significance. But from here, the great folly of all follies is the amazing attitudes of civilized nations toward each other. It seems a great madness. If this attitude is not changed, I don't see how our civilization, as we know it, will survive." Now please note these words: "If I survive this ordeal, I shall devote what is left of my life largely to trying to help further the friendship of my country with the other nations of the world."

I know that you who are reading this may be saying that you don't have the qualifications to bring others in—and that I have presented to you a spectacular and an impossible case to emulate. But one does not have to be in high position to bring others into the abundant life. If you will go through life, living from day to day for the one purpose that makes life meaningful, that is to bring others into the abundant life, opportunities will appear that you can match, and you will be doing the divine thing! True, there will be bitter disappointments. But did not our Lord have them? If you open doors for men and women with cheer, honest welcome, without attempting to make them servile to you, you will be doing what God once did through Jesus Christ! And who can do more?

Then finally God brought us out into His own glorious presence. Certainly this belief dominated Jesus. In his mind the fellowship which was begun here was never to be ended, but was to go on in increasing fullness and satisfaction in a grander life that was to be.

And with this thought in mind the Master went about attempting to awaken the slumbering divinity in men so that they might be fit to enter into eternal relationship with God. As Paul says: "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself." Jesus was continually doing just that. He brought men and women out of sin, idleness, selfish luxury, day dreaming, the mere grind of making money, into the kind of a life that would be worthwhile perpetuating!

And not only that but Jesus tried to impress upon the people of his day that they were not brought out to be cold, cheerless, and hungry; or to become madmen and slay one another in war or fratricidal strife; or to be an abscessed, leperous, tubercular, socially diseased portion of life! How he pled with them to believe that it was never intended that they should be that way—and that they could, if they followed him, become even as he, and go with him into the glorious venture of eternal life! Some missed this point. The Rich Young Ruler missed it. The nine healed lepers missed the point. Judas missed the point. With the rest of the men Judas was brought out that he too might be brought in—into the inner circle of God's elect! But he would not!

Let men and women but stay with Jesus Christ and there is nothing in the entire universe that can cheat

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

The writer had a very pleasant trip to Florida to attend the Southeast Convention, held at Jacksonville, on April 20, 21, 22, 1937.

While there we had the pleasure of Visiting St. Augustine and seeing the oldest house in America. To go through this old building and see the old guns, swords, cannon balls, used in the early settlement by the Spanish, carries one back several hundred years.

We wanted to visit the Fountain of Youth and take a dip, but thought that perhaps it might fail to make us young again and we would be disappointed.

The most interesting thing we saw there was the old fort with its dungeons. We cannot help but wonder how much human torture and suffering had been afflicted there during the early days. We were informed that it was built of blocks made of sand and oyster shells, and it has stood the storms of all these years and is still in a fine state of preservation.

We also took a trip to Miami, where the stately Royal Palm tree is so beautiful. One who has never seen it before cannot help but look at this tree with a great deal of admiration. It looks so stately and stands out in a class of its own. On our trip from Jacksonville to Miami we could not help but be amazed at the thousands and thousands of acres of land not in cultivation but covered with a little palmetto plant that seems to be of no use to man. The writer could not help but feel that it surely was made for some use or the good Lord would not have made so much of it.

There was a time when the land in a section of North Carolina (known as the sand hills) sold for 50 cents per acre. People thought it worthless, but some years ago it was found it would grow peach trees and now thousands of acres are covered with peach trees and the peach orchards in the sand hills are known far and wide. The growing of peaches has become a great industry, and hundreds of car loads and truck loads are sold there every year.

The health of the orphanage children has been remarkably good until last week, when one of our larger girls, a member of the graduating class in High School, developed a carbuncle on her lip and is now confined in the hospital critically ill.

In Memoriam

LINCOLN.

In Mercer Hospital, Trenton, New Jersey, on the morning of April 8th, Mrs. Sallie Stuart Sipe Lincoln, widow of the late Professor J. J. Lincoln, passed on to her reward. Mrs. Lincoln was born on 20, 1866, and heard the call to come up higher a little more than a month before she reached her seventy-first birthday. She was the daughter of Colonel Emmanuel and Penelope Jennings Sipe. Surviving her are two sons, Dr. A. Lucius Lincoln, Master in Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, New Jersey, and Dr. Jennings S. Lincoln, a practicing physician of Upper Montclair, New Jersey; a sister, Mrs. E. Beery, Hagerstown, Maryland, one brother, W. H. Sipe, Bridgewater, Virginia, and three grand-children.

For the last twelve years, she has resided with her son, Dr. A. L. Lincoln at Lawrenceville. Though in declining health for the last two years, she kept her interest in the church and its work and attended the services whenever it was possible for her to do so. She had been separated by distance from the Christian Church for a number of years, but she kept her interest in its work and her loyalty to its principles. She visited the sessions of the New Jersey Christian Conference when she could and contributed from time to time to "The Christian Sun."

Mrs. Lincoln will be remembered by many Elon College students as the wife of Professor Lincoln, for several years head of the Preparatory Department of Elon College. The writer remembers her in that capacity with real appreciation. Now she has gone on into a greater life. We sorrow for her going. But we rejoice in that which is gain for her.

Funeral services were conducted in Trenton on April 10th, by the writer assisted by Rev. Park Richards of the Presbyterian Church of Lawrenceville, and in Harrisonburg, Virginia, on April 11th, by Rev. M. L. Weekley assisted by Rev. Mr. Wilson of the First Presbyterian Church, Harrisonburg, Virginia. The earthly remains were laid to rest in the family plot in the village cemetery of Lacy Springs, Virginia.

CALVIN FELTON.

TUCK.

James Charlie Tuck, son of the late Thomas and Kate Tuck, died at his home near Virgilina, Virginia, on April 27, 1937 at the age of thirty-nine years. The deceased was twice married. The first marriage was to Mary Frances Rice in 1920. In 1926 Mary Frances died, leaving four children, Katie, John Thomas, Janet, and James Charlie, Jr. In 1927 Mr. Tuck married Florine Rice, sister of his first wife, and to them were born four children, Emma Frances, Lawrence, Clifton, and Muriel Edith. The latter died in infancy. He is also survived by three brothers and one sister, Edwin, Hosea, and Ira and Mrs. Thomas Powder. Mr. Tuck has been for years in road construction work and was a valuable man to his employers. Several months ago his health began to decline and he was compelled to retire. He suffered much for weeks until death came. The funeral was held at Union Christian Church, the church of the Tuck family for over one hundred years, conducted by the writer and Rev. E. R. Harris. A large gathering of sorrowing relatives and friends were present. The burial was in the Virgilina Cemetery.

JONES.

Otis D. Jones, Jr., the infant son of Brother and Sister Otis Jones of Union Christian Church, was born March 29, 1937, and died on April 6, 1937, at the age of thirteen days. At three days of age Otis, Jr., was taken ill. Everything possible was done for his recovery. A specialist from Danville, Virginia, was summoned for consultation with the family physician and skilled nurses were employed. The parents are sorrowing deeply, but are submissive to the Father's will, for their loved one lives and they shall see him again. There are two daughters in the family, Barbara Ann, age 8, and Jacqueline, age 5. The funeral was held at the home on the morning of April 7th and the burial was in the Virgilina Town Cemetery. The sympathy of the entire town and community are with these parents in their grief, as has been expressed by their great host of friends.

HORSE'S PRAYER.

[April 11th was known as Humane Sunday, and the week following as Be Kind to Animals Week. This article is in keeping that idea, and carries a worthy thought. Ed.]

"To thee, my master, I offer my prayer. Feed me, water and care for me, and when the day's work is done provide me with shelter, a clean, dry bed and stall wide enough for me to lie down in comfort. Talk to me. Your voice often means as much to me as the reins. Pet me sometimes, that I may serve you the more gladly and learn to love you. Do not jerk the reins and do not whip me when going up-hill. Never strike, beat or kick me when I do not understand what you want, but give me a chance to understand you. Watch me, and if I fail to do your bidding see if something is not wrong with my harness or my feet.

"Examine my teeth when I do not eat. I may have an ulcerated tooth, and that, you know, is very painful. Do not tie my head in any unnatural position or take away my best defense against flies or mosquitos by cutting off my tail.

"And finally, oh, my master, when my useful strength is gone do not turn me out to starve or freeze or sell me to some cruel owner to be slowly tortured and starved to death; but do thou, my master, take my life in the kindest way and God will reward you here and hereafter.

"You will not consider me irrelevant if I ask in the name of Him who was born in a stable." Amen.

REPEAL SCARES PROHIBITION FOE.

"Repeal has me all scared," says Courtney Riley Cooper, author of "Here's to Crime." "I put out about $2,000 to help the fight on prohibition and now I go into towns and find about 20 to 30 per cent of high school kids buying liquor. I am worried about repeal because they're selling liquor to minors."

them of a final and glorious relationship with the Father. George McDonald who wrote such telling tales of the Christian life relates a story of a deeply religious mother who was being ridiculed, because in spite of her faith in prayer and God, her sons had been lost at sea. "Well, sir," she said, sighing; "I trust they are none the less safe for that! It would be a strange thing for and old woman like me to suppose that safety lay in not being drowned. What is the bottom of the sea, sir? It is the hollow of his hand!"

"He brought us out," not to fling us idly aside, not to come pitiful and abject creatures, not to be lost in any of the deep seas or chasms of the world but, "to bring us in."

For Mother

By BERNARD C. CLAUSEN.

Bright were your sacred dreams for me,
Mother,

Wistful were your eyes' gleams for me,
Mother.

Into my life you poured your heart,
Fashioned me with your love's best art,
Made me of hopes and joys a part,
Mother.

Clutched was your soul with fears for me,
Mother,

Wet were your cheeks with tears for me,
Mother.

Trembling, you watched me through my shame
Risking the fragrance of your name,
Prayed that the years might bring me fame,
Mother.

Now my heart's love I give for you,
Mother.

Across the years I live for you,
Mother.

Days are made sacred by your prayer;
Courage comes back through toil and care;
Trusted by you, I love and dare,
Mother.

REPRESENTING THE SOUTHEAST CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL AND CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials, Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME LXXXIX.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, MAY 13, 1937.

NUMBER 19.

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

Pastor of Suffolk Christian Church, recently elected Moderator of the Southeast Convention of Congregational and Christian Churches, President of the Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association, member of the Board of Publications of the Southern Convention, member of the Commission of Stewardship of the General Council, and holder of many other offices of trust and leadership. Mr. Truitt received his Master of Arts degree from Elon, graduated from Princeton Theological Seminary with the degree of Bachelor of Theology, and has received from Elon the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. He is a member of a North Carolina family of six children, three of whom are ministers and the other three are educators. As a student pastor he served several churches near Elon, and since graduation has served Pleasant Grove, First Church, Norfolk, one of our churches in Dayton, Ohio, and Suffolk Christian Church.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Dr. James R. Clinton is filling engagements at Sanford, Florida and at LaGrange, Georgia, following a successful engagement at Franklin, Virginia.

The Virginia Valley Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention will meet on June 10th at Mount Olive (Green). A good delegation from the churches is hoped for and expected.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill has visited her home in Henderson, North Carolina, where she attended the wedding of her sister, Miss Mabel Coghill to Marvin Bachelor, of Aberdeen, North Carolina. The wedding took place at the family home in Henderson, on May 7th.

The Elon College Club in the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., is securing subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN with the hope of making enough commission to send one or more persons to the Elon Summer School of Leadership Training beginning June 21st. A fine idea! Send the young people to the Summer School and when they are ready for college they will be eager to enter Elon, or such is the hope of the school leaders.

Ministers will please take note that the program for the Elon Summer school is planned for them to be present. Courses for them will be offered by Rev. J. Lee Johnson, Rev. James R. Clinton, Rev. Carl H. Voss, and Rev. H. S. Harcastle. If these teachers plan their courses for ministers and the ministers are not present, they will have wasted their efforts. Wouldn't it be fine to see all our Southern Convention ministers present for the entire week studying about how they can work together to improve our churches? Just think of how much that could mean even within one year. Brother pastor, will you be there?

Rev. John P. Jockinsen has been called to the permanent pastorate of the church at St. Petersburg, Florida. One year ago he was called as pastor for one year and during that time has developed an aggressive program for the church and has won his way into the good-will and appreciation of the people of the church. He came to the church after having served several years as pastor of the Union Church at Manila. He is a graduate of Lawrence College and Union Theological Seminary. He also studied at the University of Chicago and from Columbia University, from which he received the Masters degree. The St. Petersburg church has adopted a plan for the refunding of the church debt.

The church at Thorsby, Alabama, held the service of rededication on Sunday, May 2nd, with Superintendent Gillette preaching the sermon and Superintendent Ensminger and Miss Marguerite Davison participating in the service. The pastor of the church, Rev. Lawrence L. Stanley, had planned and carried out the extensive alteration and improvements to the church. A Sunday school building has been added with an assembly room and three class rooms and the interior of the auditorium has been greatly modified and improved and has been made churchly in appearance. The pastor himself has done a great deal of work and has shown skill and taste in the work. He and his church are to be congratulated.

At the Franklinton Summer School, Franklinton, N. C., which is to be held June 28th to July 2nd, there is to be quite a variety of help offered by many leaders. Dr. Dudley of India will teach a course on Missions, Rev. Carl R. Key will teach Stewardship, Rev. E. C. Lawrence will discuss the Prophets, Rev. H. S. Barnwell will tell of the Organization of the Church, Miss F. L. Fraser will instruct concerning Children's Work, Mrs. Chas. F. Rush will teach concerning Young People's Work, Rev. R. L. House will talk about Preaching, and Rev. Chas. F. Rush will be the Chaplain. All Negro Churches in this section should plan to have their ministers and leaders present for this week of study and fellowship.

Gerald Smith, a student at Vanderbilt School of Religion, was ordained at the Collegesside Church, Nashville, on Wednesday, April 28th. He was ordained by a council of churches called for that purpose. One of those participating in the service was his father, Rev. Charles W. Smith. Mr. Smith was born in the home of a Home Missionary pastor in Alabama. After deciding to enter the ministry, he and his wife went to Thorsby Institute and he has worked his way through Thorsby, Piedmont and Vanderbilt School of Religion. He has been a Student Summer Service worker several summers and has now been appointed as pastor and superintendent of the West Tampa Mission, with work among the Cubans. He will undertake this work immediately following his graduation at Vanderbilt.

Rev. Carl R. Key, of Holland, Va., and the editor were recent visitors at Bethany Christian Church, one of the two colored Christian Churches in Isle of Wight County, Virginia. Deacon J. R. Edwards had called together the young people to begin a Youth Fellowship. Quite a large crowd gathered, and there was a good program, composed of music and speaking. The choir and pianist were all young men, while the ushers were young women. The church recently bought a new piano, and is getting ready to make some major repairs on the building. The visitors were given a royal welcome, and were feasted at a near-by tourist home. Deacon Edwards is a reader of this paper, and recommends it to both white and colored people. Thanks, Deacon. We appreciate your help, and wish you well in the work you are doing.

In speaking to the North Carolina Minister's Association at Elon, Monday, on the theme: "Thus far in Religious Journalism," the editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN said, among other things, "Editing the Church Paper for ten months has brought both surprises and joy. He has been surprised to find so many ministers, Sunday school superintendents, deacons, teachers, and other leaders do not read the only paper that undertakes to keep them informed about what our Southern Church is trying to do. It has been a joy to discover readers who have cherished the paper from childhood to age and would not be without it. The subscription list is surprisingly small, but the fine way in which many have sought to get new subscribers has been a delight. He has been shocked to find that some are so negligent as to allow their subscriptions to run for years without payment and then when the paper was stopped because of this unpaid debt, become a new subscriber, apparently with a clear conscience. From July 1st to May 1st, there were received 1,111 subscriptions, new and renewal. We are now printing 1,600 copies of the paper, which is just about half the number that should be going into the homes of our people. If all the churches will respond, as many have done, we can double the subscription list. The minister is the man to get this work done, and in doing so, he will be making his own job easier."

THE ALTERNATIVE TO COMMUNISM.

The Christian alternative to communism, fascism, and competitive capitalism is the cooperative movement, declares Dr. M. A. Dawber, of the Methodist Board of Home Missions, in an article in the May issue of the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

"The cooperative point of view means good will to one another, building up ties instead of barriers, acting constructively instead of destructively," Dr. Dawber continues. "Competition is the law of the jungle. Cooperation is the law of life."

The writer finds that "the capitalist is as much the victim of the system under which he works as is the laborer." He, too, needs a better system, according to Dr. Dawber, that will enable him "to free himself from the everlasting struggle and fear that obtain in the present competitive order."

Discussing the relation of the church to the cooperative movement, this Methodist Episcopal minister maintains that "the church itself must be freed from the tyranny and contradiction of the present system." In past he regrets the church has dealt with poverty "on the plane of patronage and charity," doing "little, if anything, to remove the causes of poverty."

The church has too long concerned itself primarily with individual righteousness and personal goodness, Dr. Dawber believes. It has "taken refuge in the hope that this would work itself out in society." The church is now beginning to see, he states, that "the forces of evil inherent in a competitive society are too strong and too well organized to make it possible for individual goodness to succeed."

The cooperative method of building a cooperative commonwealth employs means consonant with the end desired, in the opinion of another contributor to the Annals symposium on "Consumers' Cooperation," Dr. James P. Warbasse, president of the Cooperative League and leader of the American movement for 20 years. All other methods "use a means entirely different from the end," he declares. "The little cooperative society," on the other hand, "is a minute example of cooperative democracy. Cooperation trains as it goes. It builds the more stately chambers upon the foundation of the old. It creates its executives and experts in its daily field of action. The finished building is but a replica of the beginning. There is no revolution or cataclysm. The process is purely evolutionary."

Dr. Warbasse points out that the cash savings return to cooperators in Great Britain alone was $125,000,000 in 1936. Other writers in the current symposium recount the recent growth of various types of cooperatives in the United States. According to the manager of the Indiana Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, nearly one-eighth of the total farm supply bill paid by the American farmers in 1935 was spent for supplies purchased cooperatively. In the field of gasoline and oil cooperatives the president of the leading society distributing these products reports that $50,000,000 worth of oil products were handled in 1936. Roy F. Bengtson, managing director of the Credit Union National Association, notes that 1,504 new cooperative credit societies were formed in 1936 and 106 in the first month of this year.

The May Annals is one of six bi-monthly publications issued by the American Academy of Political and Social Science during the year. Each issue is devoted to analysis of several angles of a specific problem or development by authorities in their respective fields. The preceding number, for instance discussed "Current Developments in Housing" and the July number will be concerned with "The United States and World War."

ITEMS.

Hitler had better take care! He is dealing with fire when he attacks the Roman Catholic Church. His fiery, yes, even vitriolic May Day speech may have contained innuendoes against old Mother Romeo, but if he goes after the clergy and the hierarchy, he will soon find out that he has encountered an opponent just a bit too strong for him. One thing is certain; he will soon alienate the hosts of those who are within the Church and who would bitterly resent any tampering with their traditional pieties. This may prove, ironically enough, that the law of diminishing returns prevails here, for Hitler's power has gone to his head and his rush to "coordinate" everything in the totalitarian state's program, there lies disaster.

His demands that the Church return to the "spiritual realm" betokens the confusion of the modern mind on that subject—or perhaps denotes the sad lack of comprehension in minds that cling to the past and who could never differentiate between the "spiritual" and the "political." Of course, the thinking of Hitler and his hordes of lieutenants has never been distinguished for clarity and coherence, but these men might have asked themselves what they mean here by the "spiritual." Of course, any Church would want to be "spiritual," but it loses its spirituality just as soon as it forgets how spiritual the problems of men are, and how they must be solved by thought and prayer. As soon as a church betakes itself to a far-off realm of contemplation, there to speak of the "spiritual," it ceases to become spiritual, for it has forgotten the mandate: "feed my lambs." The Church has then become irreligious. The German Church is slowly beginning to discover this. Amid the confusion of the German scene it can be discovered that Hitler is committing political suicide, so far as the future is concerned in his efforts to banish the Protestant and Roman Catholic Churches to the "spiritual" realm. The years ahead may find the Church discovering how important it is to include the political in the "spiritual" and then Hitler will discover that his efforts have placed the opening wedge in the dislodging of his puppet empire. He will then speak of the Ides of May.

The most important items on the religious agenda for this coming year are the conferences to be held at Oxford and Edinburgh in July and August by the Universal Council on Life and Work and the Council on Faith and Order. These are not just mere titles, for they entail great pieces of work that have been carried on for more than three years. Great books have been written, great essays pulled out of men's sleeves, and great men snatched away from their desks in quiet studies to discuss church unity, the problems of war and peace, the totalitarian, and a host of kindred problems. England and Scotland will be the Mecca of many a man who concerns himself with the pressing problems of the day as they effect on the Christian Church.

PASSES AT RIPE OLD AGE.

Deacon Samuel W. Pierce, of First Church, Norfolk, was almost 82 years old when he passed away to his reward on Thursday evening of last week. He was the father of Mrs. Jas. Monroe Harris, president of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference, and father-in-law of Rev. John G. Truitt. THE CHRISTIAN SUN "family extend sympathy to the bereaved.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF PROGRESS.

Twenty-five years ago the sage of Suffolk, and President of the Southern Christian Convention, Dr. W. W. Staley appointed a Woman's Board of Missions, and Dr. J. O. Atkinson, the silver-tongued orator of Elon, called those women together to organize for missionary endeavor. At that time there were no local missionary organizations. The churches had not yet dreamed of what could be accomplished by the simple process of collecting pennies, nickels and dimes for the cause of the Kingdom. A little missionary work had been done during the hundred years of our Church history, but the greatest progress has been within the last twenty-five years.

Representatives from the local missionary societies in the Carolinas and Virginia meet Thursday of this week in Suffolk, Virginia, to celebrate their Silver Anniversary. This they will do not only by having a beautiful program, but also by making a silver contribution to the cause of missions in honor of Rev. William Wesley Staley, D. D., a long time pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church and president of the Southern Christian Convention and for eleven years president of Elon College. These women and their co-workers, including men, young people and children, will raise no shaft of stone in memory of the man who began their organization but will establish some living, active memorial so that the work which has been so nobly begun may continue through the years to come.

These women may well recount the steps of progress through these twenty-five years. They can discover not only new organizations in local churches and conferences but also increased activity along all lines of church work since missionary societies have had their place in the churches. They can see young people's organizations, known as Fellowships, growing out of the new sense of responsibility on the part of young people themselves. They can see fine church buildings in and about Norfolk, Richmond, Hopewell, Suffolk, Raleigh, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Reidsville, and many other places which are, in part at least, the result of their efforts. Time would fail us to tell of blessings in Puerto Rico, Japan, the Philippine Islands, China and other corners of the earth which have come from the prayers and consecrated service of these Christian women and young people.

One fine thing about this anniversary program is that the women are thinking in terms of the future rather than of the past. A book of names of contributors is being prepared to be sealed and kept until the Golden Jubilee, when greater rejoicing shall be because of the increased activities through the next twenty-five years. While the pulpit and pews of the main floor of the Suffolk Church will be occupied by the leaders of the past and present, the gallery is to be filled with young people who are to be the leaders of tomorrow. Congratulations and good wishes to the women of the Southern Convention who have led so nobly through twenty-five years in missionary activity. The blessings of high Heaven be upon them as they move out into the expanding, inviting, challenging future. Lead on, good women and the church will follow.

NOW IS THE TIME TO HELP.

Just a few more days and May will turn to June, and the price of new subscriptions to "The Christian Sun" will be two dollars, as it has been for years. The campaign for new subscribers will be over. Church people will want to forget for a while this phase of church work. The next few weeks will have much to do with the number of people that read the Church paper during the next year. Those who read the paper will be the leaders of the Church in the years to come. From those who read will come the preachers and missionaries of tomorrow.

Just today a person twenty-one years old who has been a member of the church for several years said to the writer, "I did not know until last year anything about 'The Christian Sun.' Mr. K. asked mother to subscribe, and she did." Are there hundreds of other young people who know nothing of this paper, and who would gladly read it if they knew about it? Some of them may be your neighbors. Why not tell them of the paper, and give them the joy of being a member of "The Christian Sun Family?" It will be a real blessing to them. You will be a friend and a missionary. Now is the time to help your friends who do not take the paper which you are now reading.

This will help your church, also. It is much easier to build a working church out of people who read of what is being done by other churches in the denomination. It is easier to raise money for the institutions that are known by those who are to give. It is easier to get work done by those who know how other people do church work. A very fine way to help your own church is to get your people to reading "The Christian Sun."

And it will surely help the paper itself, if you will get some new subscriptions. It will put new life into those who must work extra hours in order that there may be a paper. They will be able to give you a better paper because of this new inspiration. And there will be money with which to pay the printer and the postman. This will be a tremendous help. It is a fact that the paper is having a real financial struggle. But do not send in subscriptions, your own, or your neighbor's, just out of sympathy. "The Sun" is not begging. It wants to serve. It wants to be worth the subscription price. It is eager to bless the Church every week. This it can do in a larger and much more effective way when there are more subscribers. You can help the paper by getting new subscriptions, and in so doing will bless your friends and yourself.

If your church has not sent in a list of subscribers recently, or if you know of someone else who should have the paper, please let your conscience be your guide. Now is time to help, for June will soon be here, and then it will cost more money to pay for the subscriptions. The regular price is only two dollars per year, but during May the new subscriber can save one-fourth of the price. Now is the time for all good members to come to the help of their church. Send in a long list of subscribers before the price goes back to normal. Thank you, and God bless you, everyone.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

In THE CHRISTIAN SUN of April 22nd, page no. 10, readers are asked "What Do You Think About the Ten Commandments" as arranged in their order of importance by "one hundred college students."

To be frank, I think we might as well junk the whole Decalogue as to accept the ranking stated by this "one hundred college students." One in a Christian land can but ask what sort of a college were these students attending, and what sort of instructions did they have at home, in Sunday School and in college, about the Commandments. College students only know what they have learned, and evidently the one hundred students to whom attention is directed have not learned the first principle of, or the fundamental fact, about the Ten Commandments. Unless the Ten Commandments are based on God, and come from God, and speak the voice of God and reflect the love of God and the care of God for mankind then they are merely a scrap of paper. The value and power of the Holy Bible consists in the fact that it places God "in the beginning" and keeps God there in all the affairs of Creation and of redemption. How different indeed is this "ranking" of the Ten Commandments by these so called "students" from that laid down in the Bible. As given in the 20th Chapter of Exodus, the first four commandments have to do with God, the goodness of God, the majesty of God, the greatness and glory of God. All of these are relegated to the 6th and 8th places by these so called "students."

Now rate the rank given by our Lord Jesus Christ. Turn to Mark 12: 28-30, "And one of the scribes came and asked him, Which is the first commandment of all?" And Jesus answered him, "The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel; The Lord our God is one Lord, And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength; this is the first commandment." Here our Lord Christ quotes the words of Exodus 20th Chapter saying, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord." Then will the reader turn to Matthew 22: 36-38 in which a Pharisee asks the same question that the scribe in Mark had asked: "Master, which is the great commandment in the law?" Jesus said unto him, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment."

One wonders if these hundred so called "students" are as wise in their day and generation as is our Lord Christ? The Ten Commandments themselves are a building, fitly framed together by Him Who gave them, and God. If we leave God out, or give Him secondary, or sixth, or eighth rating as these so called "students" have done, then we have a house built on sand. These "students" must be from some college in Russia where they have given God such rating as to rule Him out altogether, that toward which we seem to be heading in this country of ours. In the pulpit and in the pew and by the fireside, we are hearing much about "humanity;" do this for "humanity's sake;" do this for the sake of "your fellowmen." Jesus Christ and the word of God do not so teach us. God is the foundation and the Builder and only that love that comes from Him and reaches Him is the sufficient dynamic for the outreach and uplift of the human hand. The deepest tie that binds is not the human, but the Divine tie. Morals and ethics not growing out of religion binding us to God are but an island, and a precarious, one in a great ocean and a very turbulent one. Communists and Humanists would rate the commandments just about as these hundred college students (hie) have done. The Humanists tell us that man is enough and must be given supreme consideration; Communists tell us that the community is enough and that the totalitarian state is supreme. If we are to obey and embrace the other commandments we must realize the fact that they, as well as we ourselves from from God, that we came from God, that we have God to reckon with through life and that someday, somewhere we must appear before Him face to face, and that give an account of the deed done in the body.

Unless we can base our lives, our love, our service, our thinking on God, then ours is a house of sand, which will be swept away by the storm of passion and temptation that is sure to sweep over us on our earthly pilgrimage. Somebody ought to teach those hundred students a little common sense and give them a foundation to stand on, as well as something of the teachings of the word of God, and the word of our Lord Jesus Who said, "I am the Way, the Truth and the Light; no man cometh unto the Father but by me."

AFRICA'S CHRISTIAN WOMEN.

It seemed to me that these first-generation Christian African women read, sang, prayed and spoke as splendidly and effectively as any similar group I had seen in any land. Out under the trees it all seemed glorious. Some of the leaders had attended our girls' schools but many of the middle-aged women had enjoyed only very limited school privileges. But they exhibited the dignity, and grace, and wisdom which God gives to those who consecrate their lives to Him. One, the wife of a minister, and mother of eight, preached as searchingly and eloquently as her fine husband could have done. Another was a pillar of strength in pointing the way of Christian living to these women. Sometimes I fear I have questioned the depth of their experience. But I came away from these meetings with a satisfaction I had really never known in Africa before. These women had obviously spoken out of a rich knowledge of Christ as a personal Savior. They were not dependent upon a missionary or a native minister. Each one was a light and a guide. Each is trying to live the life in a Christian home before a family of children. There were hundreds of them, and at the villages are many, many more like them. The company of men looked upon them with a new respect and reverence. It seems to me that my last fear and doubt has been swept away, and I know that Africa is becoming Christian.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Deacon Samuel W. Pierce passed to his reward Thursday night, May 6, 1937, at the age of 82 years. He was the senior deacon in the First Christian Church, Norfolk, Virginia, and served his church faithfully in that capacity until failing health prevented him from continuing in active service. For about three years he has been unable to work. During this period he was confined to his home, but he enjoyed the visits of his large circle of friends. His memory brought back to him many happy recollections of his younger days. He was able to recall the names of scores of his acquaintances—the friends of his childhood and youth. He and my father were neighbors and playmates in their childhood days. The passing of my father recently made a deep impression upon him.

He was a native of Isle of Wight County, Virginia. He made his home in Berkley (Norfolk) about 52 years ago. He united with the Berkley (now the First) Christian Church. During the years he and his entire family have made a great contribution, not only to the local church, but also to the denomination. His daughters shared in the spirit of consecration, loyalty and devotion to the church. Perhaps Mrs. R. B. Wood, now a member of Christian Temple, Norfolk, and Mrs. J. Monroe Harris, President of the Woman's Missionary Conference of the Christian Churches of Eastern Virginia, are more widely known by the constituency of the Southern Convention, but the other daughters of this good man equal these in consecration and loyalty.

Many ministers have enjoyed and appreciated the Christian spirit of the Pierce home. The father and mother created an atmosphere of clean thinking, refinement, courtesy and kindness. The daughters bestowed upon father and mother a loving tenderness which made declining years a benediction and a blessing. What could be more beautiful than the tender care of a devoted daughter, when father is looking, with dimmed vision, towards the golden sunset! In such a time devoted children are enriched by their faithful service. And when father and mother are laid away in the silent city of the dead, memory dwells upon these experiences and the heart is made better in the days to come. Sorrow may break human hearts, but precious memories are enriched by bereavement. It is inhuman to "go bury thy sorrow." Time will ease the burden and remove the keenness of sorrow. But a Christian should find life richer because of sorrow and bereavement. God is able to deliver his children out of their bereavement. Deliverance brings to the heart a sweet consciousness of peace and spiritual joy.

People who live for the kingdom of God and spend their years of activity in the Church, reflect a blessing upon others in their old age. Deacon Pierce lived such a life and he has been a blessing to many friends and associates. It is glorious to live in touch with God and in fellowship with the saints on earth. Our cares, burdens, sorrows and heart-aches may weigh heavily upon us, but the reward, in this life, is greater than the toil and sacrifice. If so, what must be the reward when we shall see Him face to face? Take your burden to the Lord. Leave it with Him. Believe in Him. Live with Him. Live for Him.

I. W. JOHNSON.

THE UNITED CHURCH OF RALEIGH.

(1882-1927-1937.)

On Sunday, May 2, 1937, the United Church of Raleigh celebrated a two-fold anniversary, the 55th since its founding as the First Christian Church of Raleigh and the 10th since its incorporation as the United Church. Dr. J. Edward Kirby, former pastor from 1927-35, preached the anniversary sermon on the subject: "Our Heritage of Responsibility." The Rev. Carl Herman Voss, present pastor, in introducing Dr. Kirby to his former parishioners paid tribute to the sterling efforts of Dr. Kirby during the difficult years of the depression and the inception of the United Church.

In 1881 services first began to be held, in what later under the leadership of the Rev. E. W. Clements, came to be the First Christian Church of Raleigh. The ministers during the years from 1882 to 1927 included the Rev. John Maple, Rev. E. W. Clements, Rev. James L. Foster, Rev. Murdoch W. Butler, Rev. L. F. Johnson, Rev. Daniel Albright Long, Rev. C. E. Newman, Rev. R. L. Williamson, Rev. George Eastes, Rev. J. Vincent Knight, and Rev. W. D. Parry.

In the spring of 1927 an ecclesiastical council was held in Raleigh at which it was recommended that the First Christian Church become the United Church of Raleigh, retaining its membership in the Eastern N. C. Christian Conference and joining the Congregational Conference of the Carolinas. This presaged the national union of these two denominations by five years, for the nation-wide amalgamation took place in 1931. The friends group did not join until 1929 and with that step the United Church became a unit in the New Garden Quarterly Friends' Meeting of North Carolina, which is now an integral part of the Raleigh Church.

In the autumn of 1927 Dr. J. Edward Kirby was called to the church after a distinguished career in other fields of service. At one time he had been pastor of the Circular Church in Charleston, S. C., then president of Drury College in Springfield, Missouri, later minister of the Congregational Church in Medina, Ohio, and from there he went to the Plymouth Church of Des Moines, Iowa. In 1922 he was regional director of the Near-East Jewish Relief and was stationed in Russia for a year. He resigned from his very successful pastorate in Raleigh in 1935 to accept a position with the Resettlement Administration in Washington, from which he went to the Congregational Building Society last fall.

Rev. Carl Hermann Voss was called to the United Church in the fall of 1935 upon his return from a summer travel and study abroad. Mr. Voss graduated from Union Theological Seminary in New York City the previous spring and before that had studied at the Chicago Theological Seminary. He had graduated from the University of Pittsburg in 1931 and had studied for some time at the International People's College in Elsinore, Denmark, and at the University of Geneva, Switzerland.

The United Church has always maintained an avowedly liberal approach to religion, has tried to carry on a program of social action at all times, and believes in a community church, non-denominational emphasis. The only requirement for church membership is a general agreement with statement of belief, which reads as follows:

"United in our spiritual quest, we of the United Church find inspiration in the heritage of our common faiths. We believe that our lives, both collective and individual must be guided by the law of love as revealed in Jesus Christ and as interpreted in the light of modern knowledge. The inescapable demands of Christianity challenge us to mold our society after the pattern of the Kingdom of God. This means a complete commitment on our part in building a more Christian world wherein the forces of war, radical injustice, and exploitation will be steadily diminished. The religious resources for this task are found in the worship of God and the service of man. We receive an added impetus by coupling the prophetic zeal and apostolic sympathy of the Congregational-Christians with the ethical rigor and the "Inner Light" of the Friends. Anyone sharing these convictions is cordially welcomed to our fellowship, for the simplicity of our credo is matched only by its sincerity."

A HUT UPON THE HILL.

There is a kind of rugged beauty about a log hut among the hills. Most people will look twice at even a picture of a log cabin. However, there is more to log hut than just the novelty of it, or logs and mud either. Those who have been born in such a home will agree with me, while the rest of creation will not know one thing of what I am talking about, but I found in a very old scrap book something that will help you to understand a little about how one feels at times, about one's cabin home. I haven't the nerve, of course, to call this a poem for I was a lot younger than I am now when I spilled this, and I could not write a poem even now. I found this done in the round, rolling handwriting of my childhood days, as it is funny I will pass it on: It is entitled:

MY HERITAGE.

I hear people tell of lots of things
Which they have inherited—
Of gold, of jewels, of land untold,
And some are talented,
Though I claim none of these great things,
I have far more at will,
It fell my lot to just be born
In a hut upon a hill.
Oh weary souls by money oppressed,
There's peace within my hills,
Just put your money in the bank
And come right here to live.
I'll take you to the mountain crest,
To where the blue birds sing,
I'll take you to a valley deep
And find a "grapevine swing."
We'll find a brook that laughs and plays,
We'll find a little pool,
I'll teach you things you never dreamed
Could be taught by a fool.
Oh, poor rich folks, I pity you,
I know your heart must ache,
For just one croon of a tiny frog
Within a mountain lake.
I have a hut where love abides,
Upon a mountain ledge.
I'm free to dream and breathe pure air,
This is my heritage.

Now when you see the picture a mountain cabin you can tell whether it is mine or not. If it is not on the mountain crest I will not claim it. When I was in school I told a man in Newport News once that I was born up in the mountains, where the "coon tops" blossom, and when he took it as a joke I felt fine about it. But now when spring comes to our hills I breathe a prayer of thanksgiving for pure air and all that hills have for us. Some day life may not be so bad here after all.

Our Elmores were up this week end and made some visits down in the mountains. Our people here are so glad to have them visit us. After one has been shut in all winter it seems good to see Mrs. Elmore's bright smile and hear a message like our preacher can bring. Sunday he gave us a stirring message on a "Wonderful Savior." He brought out how wonderful Christ was in everything from the manger to the Cross, and one had to feel that power of so great a Savior. Everyone, no matter whether he was born in a mountain hut or a palace, can feel that God loves him if he will listen to our pastor preach. The Elmores make us feel that there is room at the Fountain for all.

VICTORIA OF THE HILLS.

THE CHILDREN'S PRAYER.

William Lyon Phelps, in one of his recent "Daily Talks," tells an interesting story of a little girl, daughter of a prominent evangelist, who was taken to the hospital for an operation. As they were about to administer the anesthetic she asked the surgeons what they were going to do. They informed her in simple words that they were going to operate so that she could run and play as she used to do. "Well," she asked, "what is going to happen now?" When they told her that they were going to put her to sleep so that she wouldn't feel any pain, the child said, "But before going to sleep, I always say my prayers." Without asking permission, she promptly climbed down from the operating table, and in the presence of physicians, nurses, internes and orderlies, got on her knees and prayed aloud:

Now I lay me down to sleep;
I pray the Lord my soul to keep.
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.

Millions of mothers have taught their children to pray this simple prayer. Many have continued praying the children's prayer all through the years, and until their dying day. It is said of John Quincy Adams that he continued praying this prayer every night of his life, as ambassador to Europe, in the White House as President, and during his long service in Congress.

There is an interesting story to the effect that the prayer of child-like faith with which Jesus closed His earthly career was also a prayer which he had learned in childhood. Tradition has it that it was the custom at the eventide devotions of pious Hebrew homes to read the thirty-first Psalm, and that the fifth verse was repeated by the children in their evening prayer. That very night as Jesus slept in the tomb, the children in Jerusalem were saying in their prayers, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit." It clothes the parting prayer of Jesus with infinite tenderness to remember that it was a prayer that took him back to childhood days; it was as though he bowed his head and folded his hands, and said: "Now I lay me down to sleep; I pray the Lord my soul to keep."

Bishop Fiske, in his Calvary Today, beautifully reminds us of this aspect of Jesus' prayer, and reminds us and that long ago we, too, prayed the children's prayer. The petition with which the bishop closes his book expresses the desire of all true followers of Christ: May God grant, that when the shadows lengthen and the evening comes, and the busy world is hushed, and the fever of life is over, and our work is done, we may have our child faith again. Then may God in His mercy grant us a safe lodging, and an holy rest, and peace at the last forever; through Jesus Christ our Lord.—The United Presbyterian.

A WAR TO OUTLAW GOD.

"The World Congress of the Godless which was scheduled to meet February 7th with some 1,600 participants from 46 different countries is described by the Lutheran News Bulletin as "the greatest and sharpest attack against Christianity in the history of the world." Its chief objective—to initiate a world agitation against religion, mostly Christianity, and to establish an international fund for anti-religious propaganda. In Russia, we are told, there is to be an Atheist Radio station erected and a huge sum raised by leaders for anti-God publications. Without doubt they will get the money! Luke 16: 8."

Pleasure soon exhausts us, and itself also, but endeavor never does.—Jean Paul.

Happiness is neither within; nor without us; it is the union of ourselves with God.—Pascal.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

OUR WOMEN ASK A QUESTION.

[Question No. 4 at the recent Missionary Rallies in North Carolina was: "What can women do to correct the idea that missions is for women and children only?" One of the women at three of these Rallies answered that question as follows:]

I will answer your question by asking another; What can women do to correct the idea that the church is for women only, and the penitentiary is for men only? What can women do to correct the idea that the Sunday School is for women and children only and that the courts and prisons are for men only? What can the women do to correct the idea that the prayer meeting is for women only and "the poorhouses" for men only? I am asking these questions on the basis of majorities, attendance and patronage. It is a notable fact that if you go where you will always find women in the great majority, you must go to church. If you go where you will always find men in the very great majority you must go to the criminal courts, the penitentiaries and the prisons. I think the answer to both questions is about the same. The real friends of the church and of Jesus Christ Himself have ever been the women. In their hearts have been found a responsive cord to the call and voice of our Lord. Jesus Christ while here on earth never once condemned, abused, or spoke evil about a woman. Even when a woman had been accused of a grievous sin, and brought to Jesus, He condemned the men who brough her by sending them away ashamed to themselves, but lovingly said to her, "Neither do I condemn thee, go and sin no more." It was a woman, a hated Samaritan woman, to whom He first announced that He was the Messiah. It was to a woman and not to Peter, James, or John, that He paid the highest tribute of praise He ever paid to anyone on earth. I refer, of course, to His words to the woman who anointed Him with her love offering of precious anointment, for which, of course, the men centured her, but of whom Jesus said, "What this woman hath done shall be told as a memorial of her wheresoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world." He knew then as He knows now that if the church was to be made missionary that if the world was to be saved through love, the women, out of the depths of a love that man cannot fathom, must take the lead in that work. If the church is to be made a missionary church and this world is to be taken for Christ, the women will have to do as they have ever done, act as the leaven in leavening the whole lump for Christ and righteousness. I believe it was Napoleon who said, "He who rules the world is not man who wields the sword, but woman who rocks the cradle." The biggest job on this earth is that of taking the world for Christ. It will never be done by the sword, or by force. It will be done by love, and in that love woman has always shared and, I presume always will share, most deeply. The task of missions, is a man's as well as a woman's job; it is the biggest job ever undertaken on this earth. This is why the women must lead in it till they through love of their Lord shall convince men in the church and in the world of the folly of trying to conquer the world by force, by war and by arms. Love will yet win out and wheresoever in all the world this gospel shall be preached, this that we women have done and are doing through our missionary work shall be told as a memorial of us! And in this faith, hope and love we must keep on till we convince the men that their rightful place is in the church and in the mission work with us, and not in the courts and penitentiaries. To this end may God help us and keep us faithful till the Kingdoms of this earth shall become the Kingdoms of our Lord and our Savior. Then all of us, men, and women and children can and shall sing together, "And Crown Him Lord of All."

AN AMAZING YEAR—AND A REMARKABLE SPIRIT.

In China the past year has been a hectic time. Smuggling, drugs, fiat currency, demilitarized zones, "autonomy," a kidnapped Generalissimo, dismay, defiance, deep courage, increasing unity. So Rev. and Mrs. Robert E. Chandler of Tientsin, soon to come home on furlough, write that the Japanese military seem not to have abandoned their aggressive attitude. But, in spite of all he has seen and heard, Mr. Chandler can differentiate between the Japanese military machine and the Japanese people. He quotes a friend in Tokyo (not a Japanese): "The Japanese are neither so superior as their chauvinists claim, nor so bad as their enemies picture them, but they are a wonderful people. God could never have given them so many noble qualities and remarkable talents without meaning that they should have, in the end, a great and worthy place in His Kingdom." The question all Christians seem to ask is, "Is the outcome for a whole people to be jeopardized by a selfish military party?"

YOUR NOSE KNOWS.

Your nose know whether you are approaching a non-Christian or Christian home through the tall grass of South Rhodesia, we are told. Smoke, mingled with less pleasant odors, drifts across stagnant pools where breed mosquitoes. Rubbish heaps draw flies. Inside a dark hut, smoke filled, windowless, you encounter all kinds of obnoxious things that crawl. "Do you wonder these folks sleep with their heads tightly covered by their blankets?" asks Mrs. Elizabeth W. Curtis of Mt. Silinda. But a Christian home—no pools, no rubbish except in a deep pit behind the house. Raised from the ground to keep out snakes, ants and moisture a simple square home has windows and a chimney. Gates keeps the live stock where it belongs. A little garden flourishes in front. Plain furnishings, clean but simple food. "I will leave it to you to answer the question 'Does it pay?'" says Mrs. Curtis.

THE SHARE-CROPPER IN GEORGIA."And Who Is My Neighbor?"By*MISS EMILY DEXTER, Teacher in Agnes Scott College.

[Note: This illuminating and disturbing article deals with definite problems which our churches must face. It is intended to be used in Woman's Societies, but should be read by men as well as women. Ed.]

DEVOTIONAL EXERCISE.

In the devotional exercise read the story of the Good Samaritan as found in Luke 10:10-37. (It is suggested that the leader call on each one who is to read one of the following paragraphs, announcing the topic of each. They should be read in the order in which they are numbered. At their close opportunity might be given for questions or discussion.)

I. Historical Background.

We know fairly well the historical background of agriculture in the South, but let us remind ourselves of a few things about it, in order that we may better understand the present conditions. The cotton-raising farms of a century ago here in Georgia were large and the new owners were quite well-to-do. Although the only cash crop was cotton, the average plantation had a good garden with all sorts of vegetables with which to feed the family and the slaves. Almost all the cotton was raised by the owners of large farms, the small farmer being unable to compete with the large grower. So on small farms there was no regular cash crop, and the standard of living was lower so far as the comforts and pleasures of life were concerned. The actual labor on the large farms was done by colored people, except for occasional cases in which the overseer was a white man. This man as a rule was of the poorer class, for there really was no "middle class."

II. Period of Changing Conditions.

After the slaves were freed, the situation changed. They had to be provided for, and of course the plantation owner still needed them. But he hadn't enough money to pay his help; nor had the colored people been trained to know what to do with money. They had been fed and cared for, well or poorly, according to the notions of their owners, and had been obliged to accept without question or argument any sort of treatment offered them. After being freed, some of the colored people went to unoccupied areas, built cabins, and settled down on small bits of land. Of course that was also done by white men, and is a form of "homesteading." The land became theirs by right of occupancy. But in far more cases, the plantation owner retained his help, and went on much as before. About the only difference, aside from his being poorer, and the spirit of being more unpleasant, was that from now on the servants were "paid" instead of just being kept. But their pay took the shape of food, clothing, and shelter, in most cases inferior to what they had gotten before as slaves. They still had—and have—no right to question any arrangements made for them by their "boss man." Furthermore, they were now sometimes in debt to their employers, a condition impossible previously. And when in debt, their provisions were even more scanty. Formerly they had been cared for somewhat as a farmer might care for his stock, in order to get better results from them. But now, while colored people had more rights so far as their personal lives and activities went, their living conditions were not improved. When they worked as tenants, rather than as hired hands, their conditions were no better, for in return for what the landlord furnished them, they raised the crop "on shares," and the owner usually contrived to get the entire crop. The system is called share-cropping.

III Present Conditions.

That is still the condition in Georgia on 60% of the cotton growing farms; that is share-cropping is the system followed. The colored people still live in very inferior shacks, have almost no education, and, even worse, have no one to see that they get justice in any emergency. It is a condition we white people are responsible for, and some day we will probably have to answer for it. But what is still more unfortunate, it is not only the negroes who live in that deplorable condition, it is also the condition of an even larger number of white people. Two-thirds of the share-croppers are white, and one-third colored. It is not that it is worse for white people to have to live, or rather exist, that way, but that such great numbers of our people, white or black, are having to go without the things most of us consider essential to life—things some of us would rather die than be without. The thing that leads to man's being a share-cropper—that is, one who pays no cash rent at all, and furnishes nothing or practically nothing, with which to run the place is his very poverty, in the first place. (We are not referring, when the term "share-cropping" is used, to one who is a fairly independent tenant on someone else's farm, but to one who is quite without resources of his own.) So if a man wishes to make his living on the soil and owns no land, he has to work for someone else; and if he is destitute, he has to put up with almost anything. Hence, in vast numbers of cases, the white man, in his desperate need, applies for a job a colored man is holding, and if he gets it, he moves right into the house the negro has been put out of. Then, once in, he lives practically on no higher level than did the former occupants so far as food, shelter, and clothes go. Let us be thinking to ourselves, "But after all, there are not many people, white or black, that have to lead such lives," let us look at the figures. There are 65,104 colored FAMILIES, and 81,753 white FAMILIES, a total of about 750,000 people living as share-croppers just in Georgia alone; and 1,800,000 families in the ten leading cotton-growing states. There are only two states with more share-croppers than we have—Texas and Mississippi. Even Arkansas with all her dreadful publicity on the question, has fewer than we.

IV Effect of Share-Cropping on Standards of Living.

So far only the bare facts stating the condition have been given, so we may find ourselves asking, "Aren't these people used to it by now, so they don't mind it?" Let us thank the good Lord that by his mercy we didn't have to set used to it—I'm afraid some of us would mind it dreadfully. As has been suggested, most of the houses, or rather shacks, in which share-croppers live are utterly unsuitable for any human being, however degraded, to live in. It is unnecessary to describe them, for we have all seen them in their drab, unsightly ugliness. Most of them have either two or three rooms, but some have only one room, and now and then they have four. We think of the city slums as being crowded, but out here in the country the congestion is sometimes worse, there being occasionally as many as 13 persons occupying two room. If we ask, "Why are they so shiftless as to live that way? Why don't they fix up their houses a little? Can't they put on a little addition, or drive in a few nails and mend the porch?" To be sure probably many of them, black or white, are shiftless; but that isn't why they live that way. If they do fix up things a bit, the landlord raises their rent. That makes their conditions worse, of course, immediately. If they can't pay the additional rent—and they can't—he reduces their credit at his store, so they can buy even less than they could before, or he turns them out and they have no shelter at all. They are afraid, and with good reason, to improve their shelters or yards. Of course, children living in that way grow from infancy to maturity, scarcely ever having been really clean once, from head to foot. The only wonder is that they don't look worse than they do. The landowner wants tenants with a large number of children so he won't need to hire extra hands to run the place. If they don't get anything out of life—clean clothes, good food, books, music, or even play, what does he care? However, it is only fair to admit that there are some truly Christian landlords; but they can't afford to be too generous, because of the high competition among landowners. They have to abide by the general rules.

V Health of Croppers.

Fortunately the climate is rather mild most of the year, so they don't suffer much from cold weather. But in spite of the splendid climate for growing all manner of vegetables and fruits, they have poorer food than any other class of people in the United States. They live mostly on the "three M's"—meat, molasses, and meal. By meat is meant fat, salt pork, which constitutes about 40% of the share-croppers' food. They raise none of this on their farms, but get it from the landlord's store on "credit" during the growing season. It is paid for out of the fall crop. But of course no accounts are ever given the colored people, nor the whites either, unless they make a disturbance; the former always have to accept at any price the white man sets on anything he either buys or sells. Consequently he is almost never out of debt, no matter how hard he works. The white man is almost as bad off, but since he is able at times to get some sort of figures at the store indicating his account, he feels at an advantage over the colored man living in the shack next door. Most landlords allow a certain number of pounds of meat a week, as well as the meal and molasses, but others don't. They say the renter can hunt or fish and get his own meat. If you had had nothing to eat for days but corn meal and molasses (no salt, coffee, tea, milk, vegetables, etc.) do you think you would feel "shiftless?" Do you think that instead of plowing, or picking cotton, you'd go hunting or fishing on the chance of bringing home a little something to eat? Do you think you'd get up in the morning, full of life and pep, put on your filthy rags, and go to work singing? I don't know what I'd do. It makes me sick even to think about it. Let us not be harsh in our judgment of these "shiftless, dirty, no-account" people. We couldn't do any better than they. What does this diet do to them—a diet without any fresh meat or fresh vegetables or milk or eggs? It results in a dis-

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

HOW DO YOU CHOOSE YOUR DELEGATES?

There are two general reasons why young people are "sent" by their churches to summer conferences. Some are sent because it is felt that they will be able to bring back to the local group a great deal from such an experience, by reason of their position of leadership in the local group. Others are sent because it is felt that contact with other young people of high ideals and Christian principles will be good for them—their churches send them, hoping to have the summer conference "reform" them. It is hoped that this latter group may develop latent powers of leadership while there.

Certainly, if a young person has the opportunity to attend a summer conference, being sent by this church he should be expected to bring back to his local group new plans and ideas, and a new inspired enthusiasm. If this does not happen, the summer conference has failed. Obviously, the choosing of your representatives is important and should be carefully done.

One group, which we heard about recently, started a "point" system several months ago and the girl and the boy having the highest number of points by the first of June will be sent to the summer conference by the group. They receive points for attending prayer meetings, for singing in the choir, for being punctual, and so on. While this method is not to be recommended to every group, still it has worked well in this case and their society is accomplishing great things during this "contest" period.

This method is not important, but the results are. Therefore, choose with care those young people who represent you.

SUMMER CONFERENCES.

About this time of the year young people are beginning to think of "what to do next summer when school's out." And so it is time to start planning to attend a young people's summer conference. No matter in what section of the Southeast you live, there will be a summer conference for you to attend. During the next few weeks we will tell you about each of them on this page—the important thing now is to begin planning to be "among those present" at one of them.

The financial question is one which should be considered now, if you have not done so before. In the month ahead, your group can find some way to raise money to help send delegates from your church to a summer conference. Do not depend upon the older people in the church to furnish all the money for your delegates—you will all feel that you have a very real part in it, if you help earn some of the money for them to use. And if you are fortunate enough to be one of the delegates, you will appreciate your opportunity all the more if you have contributed something toward raising some of the money you use. It has generally been found true that those young people who will save some of their own money to use for such an occasion, are the ones who will really get the most out of the summer conference. They are not the ones who have to be urged to go, or who go merely for a "good time"—they want to go because they believe that it will be very much worthwhile.

A CHALLENGE TO THE CHRISTIAN MEN AND WOMEN OF THE SOUTHEAST DISTRICT.

My good friends of Eastern North Carolina and of the Southeast, I wish to challenge you once more to measure up to the obligations that are yours.

The time has come that the church should meet its obligations; it must, or the whole earth will tremble with fear for the lack of leadership.

Several years ago the church realized that they were failing to do their part in sending out leaders, as well as the public schools, but they did not realize it to the point of action. They only gave the fact a flying thought. The church as a whole does not realize it now. The church does not face the local and specific fact. Therefore, it closes its first open door to the discovery of leadership.

The office of the church today is to inspire and train for service. It has as yet failed to grasp the full significance and the challenge of its task. To search out youth, to discover its young people with the qualities of leadership and so inspire them that they will accept the opportunity for service that is sane, genuine, and nation-building. Could any organized group ask for more fundamental task?

The young men and women are waiting for the opportunity to serve. We can recall the history of any wars, and there find young men and women, seeking the chance to face cold, hunger, and death—inspired by the great call of the hour.

The youth of the present day, my friends, are awaiting the opportunity for service. They must be trained to serve. Will you give them an opportunity?

Each local church should seek to discover and develop the leadership qualities within the young people that honestly deserve it. The church as a whole, and each individual must accept its challenge and go forward realizing that they are going to win a great victory. If the world cannot depend upon its Churches of God, the Creator of the world, for leaders, on whom shall it depend?

May God help us to realize the necessity of training leaders for this great world in which we live.

NAILS FOR NGULU.

For 37 years Rev. Abraham Ngulu, senior pastor of the Bailundo Church, West Africa, has been a beloved and faithful shepherd of his people. He has seen 37 workers go into Christian service from his home town. Now, reports Rev. William C. Bell, he is helping his fellow Christians build a memorial church. He even shares in the manual labor, making bricks, laying walls, putting on the roof. Into the mail to Africa recently went a check for $10, from Mr. Bell to buy nails for Ngulu's church rafters!

THE FORBEARANCE OF ISAAC.

LESSON VII—MAY 16, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Blessed are the peace-makers; for they shall be called sons of God.—Matthew 5:9.

LESSON: Genesis 21:1 to 25:18; 26:1-33.

Isaac was indeed the "son of promise." Long after the normal years of child-bearing had passed, he came into the home of Abraham and Sarah as a gift from God, taking precedence over Ishmael, the son of the bond woman. Needless to say, he brought immeasurable joy into their home and their hearts, not only because it was a tragedy for a Hebrew father to die without sons, but because he was the heir of the promises, the one through whom the promises of God could be carried out.

Several interesting and significant incidents happened during his early life. There is the beautiful and almost breath-taking incident when Abraham was about to offer him up as a human sacrifice. It is a story of implicit faith on the part of Isaac in his father of implicit faith on the part of Abraham in God. It validated Abraham as a man both of great faith, and of spiritual insight. God established once and for all that He had no pleasure in human sacrifice.

The story of Isaac's marriage to Rebekah is one of the most charming stories in the Bible. In keeping with the custom of that day, the elders "did the courting" or at least they did the selecting of a mate. But there is a religious element in this story that is a rebuke to the hasty and ill-advised marriages of modern life. Here is tenderness, romance, tact, shrewdness, religion, all blended into a real symphony. The story is its own best interpreter. Read it and see in it a message of abiding worth.

A famine drives Isaac and Rebekah into the borders of the land of the Philistines. Like his father before him, he feared that he might become involved in trouble if it was discovered that the fair woman he had with him was his wife so he posed her as his sister. Abimelech discovered his deceit and soundly rebuked him for it.

And then comes the material covered in today's lesson. Isaac was a well-to-do man. Abraham had bequeathed to him even while he lived all his property. As if this were not enough he continued to prosper. His crops increased a hundred fold, and he became "great, very great." It does not always pay in dollars and cents to be righteous—indeed sometimes it costs money to be good—but it pays just the same. It is a common custom, however, in the Old Testament to associate goodness with success, unrighteousness with failure. Bountiful crops were considered evidence of God's favor. It is not always thus, however, for the wicked may flourish for the time being.

The Philistines envied him. Quite so. Envy and jealousy are twins, twins born of the spirit of the devil himself. It is hard to rejoice in another's success, especially if he is doing well the thing one has tried to do, or has failed to do. Those who have, are envied by those who have not. Envy and greed and jealousy still cause a great deal of the world's woe.

Isaac had a peaceful and peace loving disposition. When his servants digged wells and found water—that was an important factor in the economic life of that time—and the Philistines took occasion to quarrel about them, Isaac simply moved on. He felt that there was too much room and life was too big to become involved in strife and trouble. It was the spirit of the peacemaker. But one has to face the fact that in our modern ruthless industrial and economic life, Isaac might have had a hard time of it. He would undoubtedly be exploited, and he might be put out of business. And yet this way is the right way. Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the sons of God. Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth. History, as well as religion, confirms this truth. The world will be won, not by the mighty but by the meek. Isaac's type is coming in to possession of the earth; the Philistine type is doomed. That is a strange paradox, but it is true. The future does not belong to Mussolini or Hitler but to the Prince of Peace.

Isaac, like his father, builded an altar. There was a spirit of reverence, of dependence in the man. The altar stood for the presence of God in the land and the spirit of God in his heart. He was in a so-called heathen land, be it remembered. It took courage for him to build an altar to his God in that atmosphere. Thus he bore silent, but eloquent witness to his faith in God. Because he confessed God, God bore witness in turn to his favor for Isaac.

"And Jehovah appeared unto him the same night, and said, I am the God of Abraham thy father; fear not, for I am with thee, and will bless thee, and multiply thy seed for my servant Abraham's sake." The God of thy father—what meaning would that convey to your son or your daughter. Is there anything about your religion that would commend it to your children? Is the God who you embody in your character and express in your conduct, attractive to your children. How much of God can your children see in your attitudes and actions. Thrice happy and thrice blessed are those children who came from homes in which their parents put meaning into the world God, not simply by precept, but especially by attitude and example. How often parents are concerned about leaving material things to their children, and so little concerned about the goodly heritage of a knowledge of God and sound interpretations and conceptions of God. "The God of thy father"—what meaning and content are you putting into the word God for your children?

GENERAL LEE'S LOVE FOR CHILDREN.

Was there ever a great man who did not love children? It was a high compliment his nephew, Fitzhugh Lee, paid General Lee when he said, "Children always held the key which would unlock the heart of Lee." Another biographer argues that this is an evidence of character, and puts it thus: "He loved children and children loved him, which is surely the most flattering and conclusive evidence as to character."

One of his officers who served with him in Texas said: "The little children always hailed his approach with glee—his sincerity, kindness of nature, and cordial manners attracted their unreserved confidence." On one occasion he visited his friend, Colonel Preston, and learned that two little boys in the family were ill with croup. The next day he trudged back in the midst of a storm with a basket of peacans and a toy for his two, little friends.

When he retired and made his home at Lexington, it was said of him: "He knew all the children in Lexington, and along the roads and by-paths of his daily rides, and it was pleasing to witness their delight when they met him. He could be seen at any time stopping on the street to kiss some bright-eyed little girl, or pass a joke with some sprightly boy. . . . To the day of his death the entrance of a child was a signal for the dignified soldier to unbend, and among his most cherished companions in his retirement, when he was, perhaps, the most noted captain in the world, were the little sun-bonnetted daughters of the professors of the college of which he was president."

SACRIFICE OR SERVICE.

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your spiritual service."—(R. V.)—Rom. 12:1.

The essential meaning of "sacrifice" is not that of "giving up," but of dedication; so that when God asks us to sacrifice something, He is only asking that we use it for His service. After all, the greatest good of this world and the greatest happiness one ever has, come from giving and not from the things we possess. Therefore, when we dedicate our time, our money, or our personal service, we have not only the joy of doing so, but we have the joy of expressing our love. Such an expression brings the greatest joy known to life.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, help us to walk humbly with Thee this day that we may make the whole day blessed to us and to Thee. Amen.

TUESDAY.

A SWEET EXHORTATION.

"Let us draw near with boldness unto the throne of grace."—Heb. 4:16.

This is a sweet irresistible invitation to come into the presence of God and talk to Him. Come "boldly." That is to say, with "frank confidence speaking everything." Cast all thy cares upon Him, for He careth for you." Just as we might speak with a dear friend and empty the heart's deepest secrets unto Him, so we are invited to come into the presence of the Lord, and on these intimate terms unload our cares upon Him.

Prayer—Dear Father, it is deeply satisfying to know that Thou hast a fellow feeling for us and Thou dost understand. Hear Thou our prayer, forgive our foolish ways, heal our backslidings, and lead us in the way of life everlasting. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

ONE OF OUR GREATEST STRUGGLES

"He sent two of his disciples, saying, go your way into the village over against you; . . . ye shall find a colt tied, loose him, and bring him to me."—Lk. 19:29-30.

He might have had a chariot glittering with gold, and horses in ornamental array. He might have turned out the army in full regalia and paraded before the throngs in dazzling display. But no, simply transportation was sufficient. And the throng consisted of those who occupied positions of honor in the country, but of the simple people, the blind to whom he had given vision, the dead whom He had raised to life, humble souls whom He had nourished and fed and helped along the way.

Human nature loves pomp and applause. The temptation to like this is ever present with us. To lose sight of this glamor and live on the level with everyday folks like Christ did takes Christ within.

Prayer—O Lord, help us to make Christ's way our own way through life. May the doing of good be our supreme objective. May the blessing of others be our chief aim. Amen.

THURSDAY.

NOTHING BUT LEAVES.

"And when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves," . . . and he said to it, no man can eat fruit from thee henceforth forever."—Mk. 11:13.

It is reported of a Bishop presiding over the Annual Conference of the Methodist Church that he said, "Brethren tell me! Has anybody been saved under your ministry during the year that has passed?"

After every thing has been said about the Church, its organization, its doctrines, its activities and all the consecrated work which its members contribute to its life, the fact remains that the reason for Christ's coming into the world was to seek and save the lost. A barren fig tree may be a pretty thing but it is an abortion of the earth which its uses when it produces nothing but leaves. A ministry that does not save souls is a useless service.

Prayer—O God, save me, search me and know me, see if there be any wicked thing on me, and lead me in the way of everlasting life, then by thy grace will I lead sinners to repentance and cause souls to follow after Thee. Amen.

FRIDAY.

PROUD TO BE SLANDERED.

"Blessed are ye when men shall reproach you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake."—Matt. 5:11.

Slander is despicable and outrageous. We take the slanderer to the courts and "soak" him. It is the most contemptible of attacks, and is treason to the God of truth and love. How can we be proud when slandered.

First of all, the Lord has bade the slandered to rejoice in slander. He has promised compensatory rewards in heaven to those who are slandered in His name. To remember how He was slandered and basely maligned midst all His loving service, He who surrendered all to His foes, makes it easier for us to endure for His sake, for we join with Him in the bonds of a common suffering, and that makes us glad.

Prayer—Dear Heavenly Father, show us how to meet evil with a forgiving spirit. Show us how to conquer enemies with a heart of love. Unite us this day with Thy great spirit. Amen.

SATURDAY.

UNNECESSARY IGNORANCE.

"They were afraid to ask Him about this saying."—Lk. 9:37-45.

More than once the disciples of Christ must have hesitated to inquire from Him what His meaning was. He uttered many difficult sayings, many commands hard to understand, much instruction which need very deep thought. He spoke in parables which called for interpretations.

But He always told them enough for them to understand. They realized that the lack of their comprehension was not in the Teacher, but in them, the pupils. They knew that if they had more faith, if they lived more closely with Him, they would be in closer touch with His teachings.

Yet Christ delighted in their questions, as any true teacher rejoices that his pupils are sufficiently interested to propound difficulties. He was always ready to answer questions, and glad to do so. The disciples' ignorance was always unnecessary.

Prayer—It is so with us, dear Lord. May we bring our doubts freely to Thee. May we rely on the instructions of Thy Holy Spirit. Amen.

THE INVISIBLE KING.

"Now unto the King Eternal, immortal, invisible, the only God, be honor and glory for ever and ever." I Timothy 1: 12-17.

Earthly monarchs often shroud themselves in mystery. They drink to enhance their authority and majesty by secrecy. Familiarity, they believe, would render them commonplace, perhaps even contemptible.

But not for that reason is the King of Kings invisible. He is hidden by His dazzling light. He is shielded by His resplendent glory. We cannot imagine the power of the Omnipotent. We cannot conceive the personality of the Omnipresent. What can He be like who is in all corners of His uni-

FELLOWSHIP WITH THE FATHER.

By REV. JOHN G. TRUITT.

"Our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ."—

1 John 1:3.

The daring of this text is beyond me. It overwhelms me. I turned to Webster's New Dictionary for the definition of "fellowship!" "Companionship of persons on equal and friendly terms; familiar intercourse; hence, friendliness, comradeship." It was as I thought, but my problem was only made the more difficult. I looked up the word "fellow." "One associated with another as a sharer; partner; colleague; accomplice; a companion; comrade; associate; a fellow creature; neighbor; contemporary; member." With that in mind let us look again at our text: "Our fellowship is with the Father, and His Son Jesus Christ." That makes us "sharers, partners, colleagues, comrades," with God! Of course we cannot hope to have our definite hold in all these places—nor to fully define in any places when it turns toward God—that is impossible—"the highest cannot be spoken;" but it speaks more than we have ever dreamed when it says "Our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ!"

As we sit about this Communion Table today, neighbors, kinsfolk, friends, let us think about the fact that "our fellowship is with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ." If we can only grasp this truth this will be glorious service. If we are bowed with sorrow, or broken with sin, if we can only think of God as our Fellow, our Partner, our Comrade, our Friend, and come close to Him, if but to touch the hem of his seamless garments, we shall be saved, and satisfied.

This truth should slough off of our lives much of our fear and anxiety; and even more of our sin, and littleness of soul. They tell us that there is in one of the great ship-building yards on the west coast a mammoth reservoir into which runs the clear, fresh water of the western mountains. Ships come in for repair, heavy laden with barnacles, and they are lifted lock by lock into this reservoir. There the fresh clear water of the high hills causes everyone of the barnacles to drop off. That should be a parable of what happens to much of the worry, infidelity, and sin of our lives as we come into fellowship with the Father, and with Jesus Christ about this table here in our sacred place of worship.

"Our fellowship is with the Father." We feel like it is with one another. But the persons in this room are stepping stones to Jesus. As we came into the church today we might have been thinking about many outside things, but when we came in we heard sweet melody from our organ. As the strains of music came upon our ears, we reacted to it in different ways—some thought of the fact that this is a church, it reminded others of a dear one whom they honored and loved; it reminded still others of their desire to overcome some feeling within their own lives; it suggested a prayer to some, and perhaps to all it brought reverence, and a spirit of rich expectancy. If so, happy may be the organist who thus served you in bringing you a bit nearer God. Then the choir sang, the minister read a scripture lesson, there were prayers and responses, offering was made and by it a suggestion of reconsecrating ourselves to God, the ushers moved with kindly appreciation of your presence, and with desire to make you comfortable and happy in God's house, neighbors greeted you quietly, and you felt a fellowship which all told was exalting and helpful. These many persons were stepping stones to God.

This table reminds us of Jesus. We see again in our minds eye the upper room, and there filing in one by one are the twelve followers of the Christ. They are reclining at the table as their custom was, and eating the pass-over meal. We see Jesus talking with them, and telling them of His approaching departure, and asking them to remember Him in the breaking of bread, and the supping of the cup. All the details of that evening together flash in a moment before our minds. And somehow we are there. We feel a fellowship with Jesus. God is there! He is with Jesus His Son. They are there together. They are one in spirit, in purpose, and in desire to give everlasting life to all mankind. God sees and knows the better hours ahead, and He feels every inch of the way through Gethsemane and up to Calvary. There is a fellowship between Jesus and the Father.

I have been reading to you the words of one who sat next to Jesus at that table, and who says: "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you."

He tells you why he declares it, "In order that ye also may have fellowship with us." Then he adds: "And truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ."

My friends, there is no greater blessing! Let us not forget it when the fresh air of the outside world beats upon our faces. And when the adversities, tests, and the trials of life come upon us let us remember that we have a fellowship with the unseen, but ever-present, infinite, and eternal God. I cannot believe it was imagination only that caused me to think that there was an expression of that fellowship upon the face of my friend, writer of "Since Jesus Came Into My Heart," as I used to hear him sing, "I am possessed of a hope that is steadfast and sure, since Jesus came into my heart." "Our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ."

He says: "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light" that is, if we accept this fellowship with the Father, and His Son Jesus Christ, if we practice it, cultivate it, know it, "We have fellowship with one another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." The two are inseparably tied together! Right with the neighbor, right with God! In good fellowship with one another, in sweet communion with God! Serving one another, serving God! Loving and honoring one another, honoring and loving God.

"If we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive us for our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Like the barnacled ships of the salt sea we are made clean in the fresh fountain of his everlasting mercy and love!

verse at the same time? What can He be like whose wisdom controls the courses of the stars and the destinies of each tiny creature dwelling on this tiny earth?

Yet we can see God, if we are pure in heart. For the seeing of God does not depend on earthly vision and is not comparable to material eyesight. We see Him most truly when we realize His love and submit ourselves to His guidance.

Prayer—Thus may we see Thee, O King, eternal, immortal, invisible, more and more clearly until the perfect day. Amen.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

We sometimes receive letters from children who have been reared in the Christian Orphanage, filled with expressions of gratitude that make the writer happy.

We received such a letter a few days ago, from one of our boys who graduated from high school several years ago, stating that he wanted to do something to show his appreciation for what the Christian Orphanage had meant to him. He said that he wanted to show his appreciation by paying the college expenses for a member of our graduating class to go to Elon College to take the commercial course.

This young man spent a number of years here and knows what the orphanage meant to him when he needed a home here. The writer knows of no finer way for this young man to show his appreciation than by helping a child in this institution further their education and place them in a position to be of greater service to society.

The writer welcomes letters of this kind of appreciation and hopes to receive many more like it.

We are very happy to say that the girl we reported ill in our recent letter has greatly improved and we hope will be able to leave the hospital within the next few days.

These are busy times at the Christian Orphanage. The weather has been clear and pretty for nearly a week. We have kept two tractors running early and late, sometimes as long as we could see the furrow. With the two mule teams we have made a big show on our farm. We now have nearly 100 acres ready to plant in corn or sow in beans to make hay. We are putting in the largest crop this year that we have ever planted in any previous year.

Our wheat and oat crops are looking fine at this writing and we have good prospects for a good crop if nothing happens to it.

We do lots of work on our farm here and when we have seasons we make lots of stuff, but as every farmer knows it takes money to farm. Seed and fertilizer both have been high this season and our income from our churches and Sunday schools has fallen far below normal—and it hurts.

May the kind Master put it into the hearts of our people to remember others who are less fortunate and are not so richly blessed.

Superintendent.

"SHARE-CROPPERS."

ease called pelegra. At first the doctors thought it was due to eating spoiled meat or meal, but soon it was proved to be due to a deficiency in the diet. In the early stages its victim shows red blotches on the skin, as in scurvy and leprosy. Then weakness and nervous disability follows, and finally a depression and melancholia to the point of insanity. The disease and deaths due to it are increasing constantly, but the South dislikes to admit it. A sure preventive of it is the addition to the diet of fresh vegetables and fruits, fresh meats, milk, and eggs; it is not necessary to add all of these things; adding one of them in fair amounts will prevent it.

VI Effect on Church and School.

Since the possibility of church attendance depends to a certain degree on clothes, in plenty of cases the share-cropper feels it quite out of the question to go to church, ever. Hence, church attendance is very small. Besides who would pay the minister? Perhaps we had better not go into that. But we had better not forget about it, nor overlook our share in the matter. In the matter of schools, we do our first differentiating between the whites and the blacks. It is probably due to the fact that the whites get more or less "white" treatment in education that they can continue to live as they do—that, plus the fact that they get fairer dealings in case of conflicts with the law. They would otherwise be no different from their colored neighbors. However, it is not to our credit that this difference exists. The negro is entitled to as good country schools and as fair justice as the white person. But in any case, the state provides schools for the white children, and very good schools now, on the whole. It also furnishes free transportation by bus, if the school is a consolidated one, and some distance from the child's home. However, a very great number of these children are unable to take advantage of the opportunity, either because of lack of clothes, or books, or poor health, or home duties. On the other hand, the state furnishes almost nothing to the colored children in the name of schooling. In one locality, not far from Atlanta, is a typical "colored" country school. It has no glass in the windows, so on a cold stormy day, when the shutters are partly closed, one entering from the outside could scarcely see whether or not anyone was in the room. But after a moment one gets used to the semi-darkness, and discovers there are 112 children to the one teacher. There are no desks—only benches made of rough slabs. The teacher is paid $19 a month for six months. In that county they pay more merely to carry the 510 white children to and from school than they pay all told for ALL educational purposes for the 5,200 colored children in that county and another not far from these. We rejoice that the poor white children have educational advantages, but we cannot continue to neglect the colored children. We cannot argue that the colored man pays less taxes than the white; two-thirds of these share-croppers are white, and pay no taxes at all, just as the other one-third do not. In any case, there are many illiterates, both black and white. That is a condition we must rapidly begin to remedy.

VII. Race Relations.

What is the effect on race relations? Do the whites and blacks get on happily as neighbors? As has been said, the only thing that saves the self-respect of the white share-cropper is that he does have one or two privileges denied the colored man. Also he clings to the fact that after all, he is white. So he looks down on the negro. But the negro does not look up to him—he may pretend to, when he has to; but he finds it for his own good to be submissive to white people. If the colored man were not so submissive—well, we'd better not go into that either. The thing that careful students of the whole problem are advising on that question is that where business matters are involved, the whites and blacks overlook the color issue, and organize as a class, that is, as renters, and try to get fair treatment from the landlords. Neither colored nor whites by themselves work it out, especially if they are not on very friendly terms with each other. But if they could get together on some cooperative basis, following advice and suggestions from leaders on Southern rural economic problems, it is entirely likely that the landowners would be obliged to do something toward improving the conditions. There are commissions made up of influential men, colored and white, who gladly offer their services.

VIII. Suggested Solutions: As Voters.

What else can be done? What would Christ do if He were visibly living here in the red hills of Georgia? If all who professed His name were doing their best, we shouldn't be having the problem, but we do have it, and want practical suggestions for solving it. What, specifically, can the Christian women of Georgia do, either as individuals or groups? First, as voters, we can promote the candidacy of men who want to see that everyone, black or white, rich or poor, gets a fair deal. The incoming governor of Georgia broadcast the fact that, among other things, he wants to see that a full term of school is provided "for every white child in Georgia." Of course he should do that, but why not leave out the word "white?" Let us hope he merely mis-spoke himself. Then, having tried to get honorable and capable men to run for office, let us vote for, and elect them; and then support their activities by word and deed. As organized groups we can send in petitions to the proper authorities, protesting certain situations, calling attention to need reforms, and suggesting remedies or investigations leading to our remedies. Our local congressmen in many cases would take helpful action if they knew the voters really wanted it. Lets ask for it.

IX. Suggested Solutions: As Individuals.

As individuals we may know landowners who don't seem to treat their renters fairly. Possibly a tactful approach to them could be made, and the competition between neighboring landlords be lessened, so each could afford to be more lenient with croppers. If even a few families could be helped, it would be worth doing. We must not think only of the millions of suffering people, but also of this family and that. We might use influence in our local communities to provide vegetable seeds for families if the owner would allow them to start a little garden. A small amount of money if wisely expended, would provide a large amount of seed, and might be a blessing to some destitute families. If we know some of the tenant families we might encourage them a little in a neighborly way, and assist them a bit in their gardening.

X. Federal Solutions.

The Federal Government offers certain suggestions that may be worked out in time, but that possibly we women can do little about, by way of assistance. However, it may encourage us to know what some of them are. One is that the government buy up from insurance companies and other large investment agencies, huge areas of land, and distribute it in plots to families, either on the basis of long-term leases, or of easy-payment sales. If the farmer feels he owns the land, his self-respect and his interest just naturally lead him to improve its appearance.

Along with this distribution would go service agencies to aid those new home-steaders in every possible way—to advise them, provide fertilizer, seed, and other needed supplies in order to give them a start, and even lend them small sums of cash to buy a cow or other farm stock. If the farmer's debt is small he will not feel it as a discouraging and hopeless burden, but as an incentive to "make good."

Also cooperative farm communities might be worked out with federal aid, similar to those in Europe; Denmark, for example, where the group is largely self-supporting, have their own stores, hospitals, etc. In some cases the houses are in the villages, and the farms around the outskirts of the town, but easily accessible. There are many ways of working such a plan, varying with the type of crop, or of drainage, etc. The main thing to notice, for our encouragement, is that at last the authorities with power to act are really at work in a constructive way on the problem. But in the meantime, and while that is all being slowly worked out, let us talk about it where it will do some good, and let us inform ourselves on any progress being made; and, above all, let us each in some way do something to brighten the lives of our country neighbors, even if it costs us money, as it did the Good Samaritan.

WHO'S WHO

By REV. CLARENCE A. VINCENT, D. D.

"Who's Who In America" and "Who's Who In the Clergy" are supposed to gather into a volume the leaders in America and in the ministry. In the Eighteenth Edition of the former series 31,081 names are included and in the latter volume 7,000 clergymen are given places. While many leaders are not mentioned in either book, still it is, I presume, a fairly accurate list of worthy men and women of achievement. The question presses into my mind "How many of us included in these volumes would be included if the spirit and principles of Jesus were determining standards?"

Many leaders in the Jewish Church were condemned by the Master for hypocrisy and oppression. In every generation there have been too many unworthy leaders in the ministry, clergy, and priesthood. In one generation there were priests that "cracked filthy jokes from their pulpits." Samuel Wesley warned his children of the low standards of the church of his day and to share in the work and to live the principle of Jesus that would help to bring a better condition. As a lad I heard a leader state from the pulpit that he had no assurance that anyone would be saved who had not been baptized in a certain way. The morals and spirit of fraternity have grown since those days. How many ministers and laymen today place as the test of membership in a church loyalty to Jesus as Saviour and Master and to the doing of His will? Interpretations and theories that change through the years have divided the Church of Christ into divisions. Even today, in the South one of the great denominations will not issue church letters to any church outside their fellowship. In Jesus' Book of Life, I wonder if the great leaders of His Church are not those who in simple faith in Jesus Christ and in all inclusive love that has no boundaries live and cooperate?

We are to "love our neighbor as ourself." How many of us do? Think how "Christian America" has treated the Indian. Hang our heads in shame when we think how far we are from treating the Negroes as we treat the Whites. They are compelled to live in many communities in shacks without glass in the windows and with no sanitary arrangements. One-tenth, or often even less money is spent for their education than we spend for our children. An ignorant, dissipated white can vote while in some parts of our country an educated, clean-minded negro cannot. A libertine, well-dressed, affable, can sit without protest at our table in a hotel, but Booker Washington is forbidden. Because some Jews are impossible, do we criticize and shun the good ones? Have not the persecutions in other lands made in part the Jew what he is? Thank God the Federal Council of Churches is sympathetic with all races and have protested the persecutions and worked for real Brotherhood.

The true leaders are those who stand for justice and fair treatment to all men and classes. To oppress labor, to create hatred among classes, to withhold from any group or individual except the criminal the fair products of his work, is a crime against humankind. To covet and attempt to despoil the property of others, if unchecked leads to anarchy. Men like Washington Gladden, Josiah Strong, Professor Ely, and many others whose voices were lifted for social justice and who at first were criticized by many and hated by others are, I am sure, in the list of names in Christ's "Who's Who."

There are many followers of Jesus in Europe who are mistreated and even slain because they believe in world peace and dare to stand against a mad nationalism. There are many in the United States who are Pacifists and a larger number who are against all wars except it be for self-protection. Wars accomplish little. They burden nations with crushing debts, untrue suspicions, and bitter hatreds. If continued, civilization will be destroyed. If world peace can be won, blessings will follow.

Let every follower of Jesus be enrolled in His "Who's Who."

Lord God of Hosts, whom we so soon forget—
Lead us to different wars,
Not bitter wars against the foes
Which national pride selects,
But wars against the evils of our hearts.
Those sins of hate and sham
Which stop the fount of love
Are worse by far
Than deeds of battle fierce
That snuff out lives;
For gun and gas and hand grenade
In swift flown hours
Exterminate men's lives.
But greed and avarice so grim,
Which profit breeds and spawns,
Make life one long and lingering death!
Lord God of Hosts, give us Thy Grace
Of loving help and sacrifice.
All hate and fear we would overcome,
That kingdom just may rule at last!

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

For Children's Day literature, Bibles and New Testaments write to the Board of Christian Education. The service this Board can render depends largely upon the calls you make upon it.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is eager to print news of your church and will gladly do so if you will send that information to the editor at 514 S. Main St., Norfolk, Virginia. Forget your modesty and send the news.

There are ten more days in which to secure new subscriptions for THE CHRISTIAN SUN at $1.50 each. Many churches have sent fine lists, and it is sincerely hoped that all will do so. This special offer ends with May. "What thou doest, do quickly."

Mr. Roy A. Larrick, president of the Valley Virginia Central Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, wishes the people of that section to take note of the meeting which will be held at Mt. Olivet (G) Church, on Thursday, June 10th.

Dr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Vincent, pastor of the Miami Shores Community Church, were invited back to Galesburg, Illinois, to share in the One-hundredth Anniversary Service. Dr. Vincent gave an address at the Anniversary Dinner and preached the sermon on Sunday, April 18th.

June and July are the months for training our leaders. During that time we have conventions and training schools within reach of all. Speakers come from far and near to bring messages of wisdom to pastors, teachers, missionary workers and young people. Watch for the date of your convention and training school.

The missionary women of the Southern Convention are delighted to know that Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury, promotional secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions (our denominational Board), will teach the study book for the conferences of the Carolinas and Eastern Virginia next fall.

Rev. A. R. Flowers has been doing some very good work in some of the Sunday schools of Wilson County during the last few weeks. Some of the young men from this section who are expecting to graduate from Wake Forest College at the end of this scholastic year speak of him as one of the most interesting Sunday school teachers of their knowledge.

Beginning on page seven of this issue will be found a most interesting article on personal evangelism. This paper was read before the laymen's group at the recent session of the Southeast Convention which was held in Jacksonville, Florida, and is printed by request. Mr. Chas. S. Bates, who is the author of the paper is a man who has done much for the cause or personal evangelism.

The Fourth Anniversary of the Miami Shores Community Church, Miami Shores, was recently observed. The congregations since December have filled the auditorium, and members were received in April and May. Every department of the church has grown steadily during the present pastorate. Dr. and Mrs. Vincent will spend July and August on their farm in Henniker, N. H.

The late Dr. Bloom started work on the idea of putting college students into church service during the summer. He called them Student Summer Service workers. This gives the students a chance to do constructive work during vacation and gives the churches a chance to get new life into their program. Plans are under way for ten such students to render service in the Southern Convention during the coming summer. If you want some of them to help your church, write to the Board of Christian Education, 514 S. Main St., Norfolk, Virginia, at once.

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

Dover, Del., May 13, 1937.

Most impressive was the memorial service held in the People's Congregational-Christian Church last evening in memory of the late Rev. D. M. Helfenstein, D. D., father of Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D., pastor of the Dover Peoples' Congregational-Christian Church and where the deceased had frequently visited and preached during the past ten or twelve years.

The memorial services were in charge of the Deacons of the Church with Mr. James B. Keith, chairman of the Board of Deacons, presiding.

Mr. Keith read an eulogy in which the life of Dr. D. M. Helfenstein from his birth to his death was given in detail, showing his activities, not only as a minister, but as president of Palmer College for several years, and also his long career as a minister, his last ministry being at Lewisburg, Pa., for ten years where he served as pastor of the Christian Church in that City. He frequently addressed the student body of Bucknell University, located in Lewisburg.

A prayer delivered by Dr. Helfenstein at the dedication of the enlargement of Peoples' Church over ten years ago, was read by Deacon W. P. Satterfield.

Deacon John B. Hutton read several extracts of letters and telegrams received by the family of the deceased at his death among whom were included one from Dean Charles R. Brown, of Yale University; one from L. E. Smith, president of Elon College, North Carolina; one from Rev. James H. Lightbourne, and one from Rev. Elwood Jones, of our Southern Churches; several from ministers and churches in Iowa and Ohio where Rev. Helfenstein had served.

Deacon H. C. Taylor read two letters, one from Rev. S. Q. Helfenstein, D. D., a brother of the deceased, and Miss Annie Helfenstein, a daughter of the deceased, both of Colfax, Iowa, where Dr. Helfenstein died on April 12, both addressed to the Peoples Church, expressing their sincere appreciation of the thought of a memorial service to their brother and father. Mr. Taylor also read an abstract of the funeral address made by Rev. F. M. Strange of Colfax, Iowa, where the services were held in which the traits of character and as minister of the Gospel were emulated.

Mr. Taylor also sang a sacred song written by the deceased Dr. Helfenstein, some months back, and dedicated to his son, Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, entitled "Don't Leave Jesus."

Mr. Keith also read several poems written by the deceased which he had sent to Mr. Keith.

Rev. Wilson C. Moore, a close friend of the deceased, pronounced the benediction.

HERMAN C. TAYLOR.

NOTICE.

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference will hold its annual session at Bethlehem Church, Altamahaw, N. C., Thursday and Friday—June 10th and 11th. The Departmental Secretaries are urged to get their reports to the President (707 Gales Ave., Winston-Salem, N. C.) by May 20th in order that they may be mimeographed for Convention use. Schools are urged to send funds to the Convention on the basis of five cents per member.

W. M. JAY.

ROGER BABSON.

Elon College is exceedingly fortunate in securing Mr. Roger Babson as one of its commencement speakers. Mr. Babson is to deliver the literary address on Commencement Day, May 26th, at 10:30 A. M. We are anticipating a very large attendance. Already several requests for the privilege of hearing Mr. Babson have been received at the college. Invitations are being sent to churchmen, alumni, business and professional men and women to attend. Special reservations will be made in the auditorium until 10:30. At 10:30 all seats unoccupied will be open to the public. We are anxious to accommodate all who may wish to hear Mr. Babson. In case there should be an overflowing attendance, loud speakers will be installed so that Mr. Babson's address may be heard anywhere on the campus. It is hoped that no one will stay away feeling that he could not hear the address.

Mr. Babson is a man of unusual ability. He is a statistician and a financial advisor by profession. Among his clients are numbered some of the most prominent bankers, manufacturers, merchants, and investors throughout the world. Beginning this work in a very small way, it has become the largest of its kind in America with wide-world connections. He was instrumental in starting and developing such statistical projects as the United Business Service, Poor's Manual Company, the National Quotation Bureau, and the Standard Statistics Bureau. He is the founder and chairman of the Board of Babson's Statistical Organization, Incorporated. He is widely connected with financial and banking interests throughout the country. During the war he served as Director-General of Information and Education by appointment of the United States Government. He is a fellow of the Royal Statistical Society (London), and a member of the leading statistical and economic associations in the United States. He is widely known as a writer on business and economic problems. He is the founder of Babson's Institute for the training of young men in business and finance. Mr. Babson is not only interested in financial, economic, and social questions, but he is keenly interested in the Church and religious problems. For a number of years he headed the Commission on church attendance for the United Church, and in this connection rendered a most significant service. He is now deeply interested in the culture and development of the spiritual life of the individual and of the church as a whole. He is Moderator of the National Council of Congregational and Christian Churches, the highest position in the gift of his Church. He well deserves this honor and is giving himself without cost to his Church in the hope and with the prayer of seeing our Church become more definitely a force of righteousness.

With pleasure I take this privilege of extending an invitation to our Church in the Southeast to attend our commencement exercises, particularly on Wednesday when Mr. Babson will speak.

ROGER W. BABSON.

A CHINESE TEACHER IS DEAD.

Chuan Yueh-tung, whose most distinguished American pupils were the former President and Mrs. Herbert C. Hoover, is dead in Peiping, North China, at the venerable age of 82 years.

Because he spoke flawlessly the beautiful Peking dialect many missionaries, Government officials and business men today owe the proficiency of their Chinese to this enthusiastic teacher.

But Chuan Yueh-tung was much more than a fine language teacher, writes Harry S. Martin, special representative under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Boston, of the Broadway Tabernacle, New York City. "He was a stalwart among pioneer Christians; one of the grand old men of North China Congregationalism."

The big Central Congregational Church in Peiping was packed for the simple service conducted by Dr. Cheng Ching-yi, internationally known Christian Chinese leader and General Secretary of the Church of Christ in China, assisted by Dr. Howard Spelman Galt of Shenandoah, Iowa, professor under the American Board at Yenching University, Peiping. Honorary scrolls, two and three layers deep, hung around the walls; flowers banked the platform; the approach to the building was lined with wreaths.

Mr. Chuan was a poor boy and one of the first pupils in a school started 75 years ago by the American Board. Today Yu Ying Academy with over 1,800 students is known throughout China for its high character and work. He was also a graduate of Jefferson Academy and on the 60th anniversary of his graduation his friends raised a fund to give scholarships to poor students.

The Chuan's Christian family life was a constant example to those about them. Mr. Chuan is survived by three sons, one daughter and twenty-two grandchildren. His eldest son died while in medical school. His sons are: Dr. John Chuan, now a surgeon-general under the Government, trained at Johns Hopkins and Harvard Medical Schools; James ('Jimmie') Chuan, popular head of Chinese YMCA work during the war, now holding an important position in one of China's largest banks; Peter Chuan, graduate of Hartford Theological Seminary and now in student Christian work. His daughter, Mrs. Yen, Oberlin graduate, is the wife of a prominent Peiping business man.

Mr. Martin is from Spring Valley, Wisconsin, and a graduate of Carleton College. He went to China in 1909, but prior to that time took work at Yale and served Congregational parishes in Danbury, Brookfield and Newton, all in Connecticut. After college he was principal for three years of Windom Institute, Montevideo, Minnesota. He is the brother of Charles R. Martin, Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin, and the father of Lyman S. Martin, Carleton College graduate, now studying interior decorating in New York, and Miss Gertrude Martin, studying nursing in New York City.

Dr. Galt is the brother of Mrs. Julia Galt Skiles, Lincoln Avenue, Shenandoah, Iowa; Allan A. Galt, Hughson, California and the father of Mrs. Robert Baible, 156 Crescent Street, Greenfield, Massachusetts, Mrs. Roger MacArthur, 714 Springfield Avenue, Wyoming, Ohio; and Lawrence L. Galt, 7618 Hollywood, California.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

PLANNING FOR THE SUMMER.

Plans are now well under way for the work of our churches during the summer months. Most of the city churches will slow down a bit. Their pastors will be given a vacation, many of the members will go away, union services may be held with other churches in the community, and in other ways the programs will not be pushed as it has been through the winter and spring. But in the rural churches the summer is the time of greatest effort. It is then that more people can attend church, and that revivals are held. In either case plans should be definite, well chosen, and executed in such fashion as to bring best results.

A vacation can have real value. But not all will be away at any one time. Church doors may well be open at all times for those who wish to worship. Picnics, outings, camps, etc., give a fine chance for leaders and others to get better acquainted and to find fine fellowship that may be missing at other times when work is for your soul and your church.

Vacation schools will do much to keep idle children out of mischief and to train them in things of religion. If you need help in conducting such a school, the Board of Christian Education at 514 S. Main St., Norfolk, or the Extension Workers in your territory will be delighted to see that you get the needed help. Do not give up without a try. Much more can be done than we ever dream.

Summer time seems to be the time for living in the opening. All nature invites one to come out where there is freedom, peace, and life. Isn't there a way for the Church to respond to this call and become a bit more friendly, open-hearted? Visitors go to almost every community. Why not let them find new friendships and joy in our churches? Do not be selfish with your guests and keep them at home. Take them to church with you. Share the greatest joy, the joy of worship, with them. Make the summer season a growing time being pressed harder. Pastors, teachers, and leaders may well consider taking those with them for an outing that they want to know better. Just a bit of living together may develop a friendship that will mean years of comradeship and cooperative work in the Church.

WELL DONE, GOOD WOMEN.

Facts and figures concerning the Silver Anniversary at Suffolk last Thursday will be given by others, but the editor wishes to commend those who were responsible for the program and the good women in the missionary societies of the Southern Convention for that very successful and enjoyable occasion. Twenty-five years of missionary service came to a happy climax when some $2,000 was laid on the altar in the church where the Woman's Organization began. It was a thrilling experience to be one of the group that filled that fine church auditorium on this historic occasion when the roll of the churches was called and representatives went forward with their silver to make an extra offering in memory of the well-beloved late Dr. W. W. Staley and for the glory of God. The candles lighted then were symbolic of the light radiated from churches all over the Convention which goes out to all the dark corners of the earth. A well planned program was skillfully executed, and it takes no prophet to say that the next twenty-five years will mean much more for the progress of our Church than has the past twenty-five, and that the women and children will turn into the missionary treasury not $2,000 but many hundreds of thousands of dollars. May God speed them on their way and give them joy as they work.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

Forty-seven years ago this May the Christian Church in the South held its first college commencement and gave its first college degree. Since then it has given a degree to many more than a thousand people. Today this Church of ours has an excellent school plant and is doing a high grade piece of college work. This writer delights in taking to the college members of the Church who have not seen the institution. They are always delightfully surprised at what they see. Our Church is offering education to our people.

It is to be hoped that many will accept the invitation of President L. E. Smith to attend the commencement exercises and share in the happiness of those, who this year are receiving degrees from our institution. Graduates and former students will find their friends on the campus and will be delighted to think again of the olden days when they were there as students. Commencement offers a good opportunity for those who can go to learn more of our institution of higher learning, to share in scholarly attainments, and to renew old friendships and make new ones. The college is calling to the people of the Church to attend its commencement.

Make no little plans, they have no magic to stir men's blood and probably themselves will not be realized. Make big plans; aim high in hope and work, remembering that a noble, logical diagram once recorded will never die, but long after we are gone will be a living thing, asserting itself with ever-growing insistency. Remember that our sons and grandsons are going to do things that would stagger us. Let your watchword be order and your beacon beauty.—Daniel H. Burnham.

"Words are the swords we use in our battle for success and happiness. How others react toward us depends in a large measure upon the words we speak to them. Life is a great whispering gallery that sends echoes of the words we send out. Our words are immortal, too. They go marching through the years in the lives of all those with whom we come in contact."

"A WAYSIDE SACRAMENT."

"Beauty is God's handwriting, a wayside sacrament." How beautiful and how sacred are the hill-tops of the Spirit world! Once more the "veil has been swirled aside" and we have lifted our eyes to "far off horizons." April 20-22 were gloriously beautiful days for our Church; they were the days of the Southeast Convention—days which have been a Grail, a Wayside Sacrament, a Hill of Far Vision, an Alabaster Box, something of an Upper Room to about 200 people of our Church. Truly they were days of the "Handwriting of God," days when the Holy Spirit spoke powerfully to the hearts of those present.

One of the most stirring, one of the most spiritually uplifting addresses of the Convention was brought to us by a mystic, the Rev. Trevor Mordecai, D. D., of New Smyrna, Florida. Due to the expressions of regret, on the part of some engaged in a joint meeting of Youth Fellowship, that they could not be present during Dr. Mordecai's address, the rest of this article is an attempt to bring to you, verbatim, something of the heart of Dr. Mordecai's message.

"No man," said Dr. Mordecai, "can look out across the horizon today without feeling the menace that is there. It is a day of convulsive unrest. It is a day of change. There is a changing mood, there is a changing outlook, there is a changing attitude, there is a changing objective, there is a changing philosophy, there is a changing temper of the people. Men everywhere are throwing off old civilities and are preparing to denounce, once and for all, all these traces of a lingering surfdom. Humanity, like some great lumbering beast, is awakening from its long sleep. Frankenstein, in the guise of a Totalitarian state, is abroad in the world. We can hear the bubble of the witches' cauldron; we can hear the rattle of accoutrements as the Four Horsemen prepare to ride again. There is a Spirit abroad that is vile, that is wicked, that is unclean. One can feel the creep of the Specter fingers of One who walks in a world that is pagan-drunk, a world that is lust-drunk, a world that is sex-drunk, a world that is filled with hot blasphemies, a world that is filled with vicious blood-lusts; all that is the 'kick-back' of a living Universe that resents its exploitations by human greed.

"Humanity is headed for its A-celdamas—its fields of Blood. Is it the hour of the Beast, or the hour of fear? It presages a testing time of men and things, and it has brought on the economic condition of the Christian Church. We are witnessing the dawn of a new day—the day of the Proletariat. The Church is in the Valley of Decision again, as to its attitude toward capital, as to its attitude toward sobriety, as to its attitude toward human structure. We hope she will not betray the 'inefficiencies of her correspondencies.'

"The Church must address herself to the task of witnessing to a Living Christ. To no other institution is this expected, yet. The One to whom it is the business of the Church to witness needs no defense. Like a star-lit sky, like a flushing sunset, like a tremulous dawn, like a majestic ocean, like a stately tree, He needs no defending. In the last analysis all we can do with truth, all we can do with beauty, all we can do with goodness, is to witness them; define them, we cannot; explain them, we cannot; witness to them we can, and that's all we can do, all we are expected to do. Witnessing presupposes an experience. 'One thing I do know,' said Paul. And John said, 'But I heard and I saw a great white throne . . . that which we have seen and heard declare we unto you.' It is because we as individuals haven't seen and heard that we don't know, and we don't care. There is a deity abroad in the world today; it is the deity of Totalitarianism. The time is not far distant when your well-being and mine will depend upon our willingness to burn just a little incense to this Totalitarian deity . . . a god who will be perfectly capable of saying 'thumbs down' unless we burn our little incense; but the man who has seen the incomparable Galilean will never be able to give the lie to that which is in his deepest soul. Perhaps those who abide in Him are far fewer than we dream of. What Tennyson Browning and the poets thought about Christ is one thing, but what Christ means to you and me is another thing. There need not be any part in all the wide reaches of our experiences where Christ is bound to be irrelevant. It's not that the Church is wrong, but that the Church is irrelevant to their needs, that people do not go to Church as the should. Why can't the Church reach young people? Because we don't speak their language, because we don't relate our religion to their problems, because we don't say to them 'Jesus Christ is perfectly capable of helping you to solve that problem.'

"Has our witnessing been at fault? That is for us to answer for ourselves. Link didn't return to religion because of having witnessed someone's radiant, God-like life, but because he felt a necessity of spirit for something he did not have. In religion everyone must speak two languages—the language of speech and the language of action. The language of speech is more popular, easier; the language of action is more eloquent, more powerful and more adequate. In the task of witnessing, the vehicle of words breaks down. The word is capable of carrying the truth. But, says Father Ryan:

'But far, far on the deep there are billows
That never shall break on the beach;
And I have heard songs in the silence
That never shall float into speech
And I have had dreams in the valley
Too lofty for language to reach;
And I have seen thoughts in the valley - -
Ah, me! how my spirit was stirred!
And they wear holy veils on their faces,
Their footsteps can scarcely be heard;
They pass through the valley like virgins
Too pure for the touch of a word.'

Goethe says, 'The highest cannot be spoken.' It only seems so, 'for,' continues Goethe, 'though the highest cannot be spoken, it can be acted.' It was by something done, not said, that Jesus asserted His authority, His Messiahship at Jerusalem; the cleansing of the temple, the incarnation, the resurrection, these were each of them an act. The old rugged cross that stands alone in the shadow tells us something! God has a marvelous language. The great drama of salvation was acted out. First, after the action came speech, interpretative, explanatory. 'Go ye, and do,' said Jesus after that. Our actions are not what they should be; we're not the men we ought to be, but thank God we're not the men we used to be. God loves faith, God loves freedom, God loves brotherhood. These are active words; act them first, and then they'll have meaning. The habit of arguing, of talking about things, may become the substitute for doing them. That would bring upon us an incident which we cannot afford to risk on the brink of a great catastrophe. 'What we need in our preaching, is an audacious note in our preaching.' We also need the audacious life in our living! Shall it be Christ, or Carl Marx? Shall it be Christianity or Communism? Why can't we win twenty-five men for Christ.

"Matter is the index of the presence of something else. The moment matter comes into contact with an electrical field, something happens! And a real Christian should be the index of the presence of Something, or Someone Else. That would bring about a changed behaviour."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Silver Anniversary of the Woman's Missionary Convention was held in the Suffolk Christian Church, Thursday, May 13, 1937. The meeting was called to order at 2:30 P. M. by Mrs. John G. Truitt, president. About four hundred delegates and visitors were in attendance. From the opening hymn to the benediction at 10:00 P. M. the program was filled with interesting numbers. The program was carried out in detail as printed in THE SUN.

This meeting was held in pursuance of a resolution adopted at the last session of the Southern Convention. There were three objectives in the minds of those who prepared the program: First, a commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Woman's Missionary Work in the Southern Convention; Second, a recognition of the life and work of the late Dr. W. W. Staley, who was president of the Convention twenty-five years ago; Third, raising a special offering for missions to be called "Staley Memorial Fund."

The program was planned with care and every speaker appeared to measure up to the theme and the occasion. A historical address prepared by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, and read by his secretary, reviewed the history of the mission work in the Convention for the past twenty-five years. Col. J. E. West also spoke on the History of Missions in the Christian Church. In the background of this history it should be stated that there were a number of missionary societies in the Eastern Virginia Conference previous to the organization of the special work for women. Antioch, Berea, (Nans.), Holland, Holy Neck, Suffolk, Mt. Carmel, Spring Hill, and probably other churches had active missionary societies which included men, women and children, for fifteen or more years before 1912. These societies in Eastern Virginia were organized under the leadership and influence of the late Dr. J. Pressly Barrett and Dr. W. W. Staley. They did much to lay the foundation for some of the most active Societies in that Conference. The same is probably true of the other Conferences. Like all other great movements it is difficult to find the source of the work. After all, this is not a matter of great importance.

Dr. L. E. Smith spoke on the theme: "Personality in Missions." Miss Ruth Seabury of Boston, Mass., spoke on: "Out of Yesterday Into Tomorrow." These addresses were well received by the Convention, and added much to the occasion.

Supper was served at 6:00 P. M. in Fellowship Hall. During the supper hour Mr. George E. Rogers of Suffolk, Va., rendered several violin selections and was accompanied by Mrs. I. W. Johnson. After supper an impressive play: "If I Be A Disciple," was presented by members of the Suffolk Church. The play presented a striking missionary lesson. Missionary Societies would do well to use this, where possible, to promote the teaching of missions.

The Candle Lighting service was the closing feature of the Convention. A tribute was submitted, by the writer calling attention to the life and labors of the late Dr. W. W. Staley. After this the roll of churches was called and the chosen representatives presented the special gifts and laid them upon the altar. As each gift was presented, a candle was lighted. It was an impressive service. This seemed to be a fitting climax for the occasion. Under the glow of the lighted candles and the silence of thoughtful minds and worshipping hearts, one felt the spiritual influence of the sainted ministers who prayed and preached near that altar for so many years. The offering amounted to $1,973.87.

WHITHER THE CHURCH?

At a critical moment Christ assured His disciples that the gates of Hell would not prevail against His Church. Since that assurance was first given, the Church has encountered many storms—storms within and storms without. It has weathered them all to this day and still is the greatest force in human society and the greatest factor in human development. It is the body of Christ, the witness of His suffering, His death, and His glorious triumph in the world. The Church, divine though it be, is committed to human hands and human hearts. It constitutes a refuge for weary souls and is the source of comfort and strength to troubled hearts. To the ones who receive such high privileges and such blessings come great responsibilities. The only way to keep religion is to use it. The only way to keep Christ is to give Him way. The only way to strengthen the Church is to scatter it abroad.

The responsibilities upon the ones of us constituting the Congregational-Christian Church in the South were never greater. Programs for the work of our Church must be carefully and prayerfully made. Unselfish hearts and sacrificial hands must be had to execute these programs. The vision of the ones who lead in the work of the kingdom must not be dimmed by the shadow of selfishness. They must be all things to all peoples, that the strength of the Church may be conceived and the mission of the Church may be fulfilled. At this particular moment we need a unifying force, that there be no falling away but that all may be united for the great task that is ours.

There is an organization within our Church that reaches the very heart of our work. The Woman's Missionary Society is a potent factor in our church life and occupies a commanding position in our fellowship. For 25 years in an unpretentious way it has been telling the old, old story of God's love for a lost world. It has sought to tell that story at home and abroad.

The Silver Anniversary of this organization of our church was observed on Thursday, May 13th, in the Suffolk Christian Church, which was host for the occasion. It was a beautiful program, inspiringly presented. The occasion was to honor the late Dr. W. W. Staley, who had much to do with the early beginnings of the society and to give recognition to the ones who played a part in the forward steps of the church through the missionary society and to count the achievements that the Lord has given us through these years of service. Our past is inspiring; our future is challenging. Great responsibilities rest upon this organization of our church. It occupies a commanding position. It has the opportunity not only to hold the church together, but to chart its paths through the years to come. New fields should be entered; present church organizations need to be encouraged; the young people of our day need to be challenged to give of themselves, of what they are, that the story of the Gospel may go to the ends of the earth. The needs at home multiply, but these needs will never be met until we have met the needs abroad. The Kingdom is universal. We do not worship God in this mountain or in that, but we worship Him in spirit and in truth—in an ever-widening truth—until we ourselves shall see that truth covers the earth.

THE CHURCH AND THE LAYMEN.(A Layman to Laymen.)

My dear Fellow Laymen:

I was invited by Dr. Gillette to come up here and tell you about my Missionary work—How I got into it, and its significance.

I became a motherless boy the day I was four years and four months old. Thirteen or fourteen years later, a very dear cousin of my mother became a personal witness for Christ by word to me. From that day I began to read the Bible and pray that I might come to know Jesus as my Lord and Saviour. At nineteen years of age, I went to Cleveland, East Tenn., opened Retail Shoe Store. Remained there a year and moved to Bristol, Tenn and Goodson, Va. Kept on reading the Bible and praying, and one night in my room over the shoe store, my prayers were answered. My soul was flooded with such light and joy and peace, as passeth all understanding. Surely that night to me, "old things passed away and all things became new." Joined the Presbyterian Church in Bristol.

After a year in Bristol, moved to Winston-Salem, N. C. Helped organize a Y. M. C. A. there. Was there a year, sold out my business and returned to Boston, Mass.

Took my church membership to Park Street Church, Boston, and from there to Braintree Congregational-Christian, called the Storrs Church; Dr. Storrs, father of the famous Richard Saltu Storrs of Brooklyn, N. Y., preached there sixty-two years.

My home is with my daughter in Exeter, N. H. Briefly, this brings me to around thirty years ago. Ever since that memorable evening when Jesus came into my life I have tried—as the Chinese say—to live the Jesus way of life; serving the Church in official position—as assessor many years as deacon, around 30 years, as Sunday School Superintendent, around 25 years, and as regular attendant on preaching, prayer-meeting, and Sunday School services, a year also serving in a little larger way as treasurer of the Mass. Sunday School Association for 10 years and on the Presidential Committee of the American Board for 9 years. For many years I gave a certain per cent of my income. I have a note in my personal ledger dated Dec. 30, 1890, expressing a desire that when I shall, if ever, become worth a certain amount, to largely increase my per cent of giving to the Lord's work. On the opposite page of the same letter, under date of Nov. 1, 1910, is written (notice 20 years later) that the time mentioned on the other side of the note has arrived. On Nov. 10, 1910, I started giving in a much larger way, and for the definite objective of Native Evangelism through "The American Board."

Having looked into matters closely, especially the American Board work, going into the conditions with the Home Society, Dr. Cornelius H. Patton, I found that in some of our missions there were native graduates of our schools who were amply fitted to be evangelists, and wanted to put their lives into this service, but had no means of support.

From the beginning, I planned to support only those evangelists who, but for my support, would have to take up other than Christian work. Several missions were written to along this line, asking if they had young men of this description and localities where they could carry the Gospel message. We received a most enthusiastic reply from Rev. Watts O. Pye, of Feuchow, Shansi, China, and his great work in Shansi grew out of the connection made with him then.

At that time the Northern part of Shensi Province had an estimated population of 8 million—not a missionary in the field. The China Continuation Committee—a federation of all Protestant Societies—asked the American Board to take full responsibility for the Evangelization of these 8 million souls. I put my first thousand dollars there with Mr. Pye. He took six months to survey the field, traveling mule back. He mapped out the river, located coal and iron deposits, and found walled cities and villages by the scores. Mr. Pye came home for the last time in 1924. I met him at Los Angeles, December 18, 1924. Mr. Pye brought to me a beautiful silk banner, something like 6 feet long and 3 feet wide, sent to me by 153 evangelistic-preachers, representing their churches with the names of preachers and places worked on the banner. It was so large and beautiful that the American Board framed it and had it on exhibition at their annual meeting in Washington, D. C. Mr. Watts O. Pye was a great man of God, humble, deeply spiritual, lovable, a courageous Christian optimist. He died soon after returning to China.

By the grace of God, I was able to extend the native evangelist support into a number of American Board Missions in China, Japan, and India, and Africa. The work has been carried on by myself through direct correspondence with the missionaries of the American Board on the field who were superintendents of the Bates workers. Annual report cards from the superintendents are sent to me showing results of the work.

All money is given to the American Board, and is forwarded by them in such amounts and to such missions, in care of such superintendents.

Just here I want to introduce you to a very dear friend, who wholeheartedly believes in Christian evangelism, John W. Talcott, of Talcottville, Conn., who in 1931 took on his shoulders the financial burden of this work, and carried it about three years, since which time we have been sharing it equally.

Brother Laymen, before I give you the results in converts, of this 26 years of Personal Evangelism of making Jesus Christ known to thousands of souls who had never known Him before, I ask you to be mindful of fact that though this plan of evangelism was original with me, and I have supported it prayerfully and financially, and have kept in personal touch with it by correspondence, yet there are probably, nearly fifty missionaries of the American Board of the finest evangelistic and spirit-filled characters who have borne the burden—as superintendents over the native evangelists, selecting them, directing their efforts, seeing that they received their compensation, kept the accounts, made out reports, etc. And there are the native evangelists, hundreds of them, who having found the Jesus way of life, having prepared themselves as best they could to witness for their Saviour, and teach and preach His blessed Gospel, to their own people, and are putting their lives into that service—with little thought of money compensation other than just enough to feed and clothe them in a most simple way.

Can you visualize that group? Missionaries and evangelists—all with one spirit, working for that one great objective, the winning of souls to Jesus Christ. It is written, "The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life, and he that winneth souls is wise." "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." The result of their faith and obedience, consecration and labors in God's service, enables me to present to you, surrounding them, many larger groups numbering thousands out of different kindreds and tongues, peoples and nations, who, because of their preaching, teaching, and witnessing for Christ, have, through repentance and witnessing in Christ by the Grace of God come into that know-

SPIRITUAL HILLTOPS.

Here is regret, and shall I say pity also, for any and all who could not, or did not, attend the Silver Anniversary of the Women's Missionary Convention at the Christian Church in Suffolk, May 13th. It was an event and an experience that can never pass out of the lives of those who were privileged to attend. From the beginning of the program at 2:30 till its end at 10:00 P. M., it was a feast to the soul, a joy to the heart, and a spiritual uplift. Count on the good women always to show us how to have a program, whose object it is to reveal life and boundless love of our Lord. Somehow the heart of a woman is the soil and source of the very best and holiest that our Lord has to reveal to the world. If one wishes to experience to the full beauty, the bounty and the blessings of a real spiritual uplift, one needs to attend a Convention of women held for missionary promotion and inspiration, that in such a Convention they themselves may give fresh expression of their love for their Lord and a fresh revelation of what their Lord means to them.

I know others will write in detail of this Anniversary and these lines are only to bear witness that here, indeed, was a hilltop experience in the Christian pilgrimage of those who were present.

Possibly the high note of the Convention was given voice through the appealing and inspiring address of Miss Ruth I. Seabury, Promotional Secretary of our American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions, 14 Beacon St., Boston. In this address Miss Seabury related much of her experience in a recent trip around the world, during which she met and mingled with our missionaries on the foreign field. From these missionaries she brought us a message that none who heard it can ever forget. "They," declared Miss Seabury, "are teaching us the great need, a more intimate knowledge, and the deeper experience of God, and the power of His Son, Jesus Christ to save souls and redeem society. We, in America, are so absorbed in things and so interested in trifles, that we are forgetting God and drifting away from Him and from life, the abundant life, given only through Him as revealed in His Son, the world's sufficient Saviour. We have sent out missionaries to save others. It really seems now that the deepest religious experiences in the world are being enjoyed by those in China, India, Japan and Africa, who have been given the Bible and who have learned of Christ as Saviour and Redeemer. It appears that those whom we sought to reach will have to reach us that we may attain to something of the blessedness and benefits and the glories of Christian living and sharing, which they, themselves have and reveal. Miss Seabury told of visiting, only a few days ago, the greatest woman and the noblest soul she had ever met in all her travels and her experiences. This woman went out as a missionary to Japan in the early years of her life and sought not an easy place, but the most filthy, most needy, the poorest slums in a great city of Japan. And in those slums she gave her life to the service of her Lord, so devotedly and so humbly, that the whole city and the whole province was attracted by her work. Then when retiring at the age of 80, too feeble to work any longer, she was constrained to return to her native land, but as she left the Governor of the Province begged the honor of furnishing his carriage of State and with his wife the privilege of taking her through the streets that the whole population might turn out, as they did in tens of thousands, to give her flowers and their tears as they sought only, hundreds of them, to touch her hand, or to see for the last time her face, and to express the gratitude of their souls for her, who had showed so many how to live. On this ride to the place of her departure, just before parting, the Governor's lady said, "I have one request for a gift. Just one more gift. You have given us your life, now just one more gift." "What is that gift?" Miss Adams, the missionary inquired. And then leaning close to her, the first lady of the land said, "Please give me your Bible. I want the Book that has taught you what you have revealed to us."

And so her last gift in departing was her Bible.

In all her travels with the millions of people, with the good and the great, both in our country and others whom she has met, Miss Seabury rates this returned missionary, who past 80 years old breathed her last and went home to her Lord just a few days ago. We little realize what the real ambassadors of Christ, who have denied all that to reveal to others the life of Him who gave Himself to bring to the world the abundant life, are doing abroad to build the Kingdom of Heaven here on earth. How any preachers of the Gospel anywhere, or any man, or woman, who pretends to be a Christian can lift his, or her voice against what these saints are doing, or be indifferent to their sacrifices and achievements is more than this writer can understand. Such conduct on the part of anyone, preacher or layman, grows out of pure, pitiable ignorance of what is taking place in the world, and what the Gospel can do and is doing for millions who need individual salvation, and a social order that must be permeated and penetrated by the power and life of our Lord and His Christ.

ledge of God and Christ which is eternal life. That new life in Christ which makes them free from the law of sin or death.

Up to January 1, 1937, the Superintendents of Evangelists have reported to me the total of converts through the 26 years, as follows: from China, 27,994; from Africa, 16,170; from India, 9,433; from Japan, 6,000, making a total of 59,597—and I have never seen the face, nor heard the voice, nor clasped the hand of even one of them.

But in addition to the big banner I have mentioned, I have a smaller one, brought by Mr. Pye from his first 680 converts, with their names on it, and a message to me as follows, "You, Sir, have God's heart," Chinese way of saying, "You are a good man, we owe it to you that the grace of God has come to us in Shensi. How can we thank you? We are utterly unable to do so." And I have the comfort of the full assurance that prayers are being made for me daily, in tongues unknown to me by Christians across the seas.

How did I get into this Missionary Evangelistic work? In the brief sketch of my life you will see that the first tiny spark of a new light flashed in my heart when that blessed messenger of Christ bore her witness for Him by word of me. Only one messenger, just once, the paths of our lives seldom crossed, but the Bible reading and prayer brought increasing light until the glorious result flooded my heart and soul on that memorable night in my room over the little shoe store, in Virginia.

I went into this supporting of native evangelists with an unalterable conviction that this personal native evangelism was the greatest need for the adequate carrying of the Gospel message, and of making Christ known to the native people of these countries, where millions of souls have never even heard of Him. I went into this deliberately in obedience to Jesus' command with a will to do His will, and faith and trust in the promise of His presence and power. "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." But how shall they call on, or believe, in Him of Whom they have never even heard? A question every Christian must answer out of his own personal responsibility to God.

As the significance of this evangelistic missionary work, each one who knows of it will draw his own conclusion. When we consider the value Jesus puts on the soul of man, of greater worth than the possession of all the world, creating joy in the presence of the angels of God, when converted, there are no words in any language to adequately express the full significance and importance of this soul-saving service.

Out of my experience, one significance of this service, since I knew of the failure of over 40 per cent of our churches in the United States to win even one new member on confession in the year 1934, has been growing on me, that the personal witnessing for Christ by word to individuals is one of the greatest needs of our churches today. I mean, groups of earnest Christians in a simple fellowship, organization, who will take up this vital Christ-witnessing service.

I have had experience in unofficial service in all work of the churches for many years. I offer no criticism of any part, we are always trying to improve them, and yet with all, we seem to be slipping. We need this additional witnessing group in every church, those church members who believe that the main work of the church is to win souls to Christ, and that Jesus spoke the truth when He said He came to seek and to save the lost.

The pastor should be the leader. Illustration—Pastor and nine members seated in a group, who have met with the purpose of putting this service into action, going out in couples. This seems to be the best way, so let's couple up—Who will go with whom? Now select five men who are not Christians, that most of the group are acquainted with. Now what couple will see this man? and this man? When the couple will see him and where, and all other details each couple may decide. Mostly, I think visits are made in the evening. Some groups meet at a simple supper, a certain evening each week, and all go out from that meeting to make visits. Some groups go out Sunday afternoons. Size of church, locality, and personality must largely mould the working plan of each group. It's God's work, carried on under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, by personal witnesses for Christ, by word to individuals. Nothing spectacular about it. Just fellow Christians witnessing, quietly and prayerfully, of their experiences and knowledge of Christ to those who, having souls of infinite worth, are exchanging them for the worthless and sinful attractions of the world, the flesh and the devil, representative of those of whom it is written, "If the Gospel is hid, it is hid to them that are lost, in whom the God of this world has blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ should shine unto them." Having, by the grace of God, through faith, accepted Jesus Christ, as our Lord and Saviour, our main fight now is for the salvation of others who are not saved.

We have between five and six thousand pastors, and around nine hundred thousand members, or about 150 members to one minister. Is there any good reason why a minister should get the idea he is the only one, who can lead a soul to Christ, and for that reason not try to train the church members to do that work also? And why should church members get the same idea, and think it is the minister's job, only, and shirk their own personal responsibility? Every true disciple of Christ is His witness. Look at our average church picture, Sunday school teachers, mostly women, present at prayer meeting, with Y. P. S. C. E. mostly girls. Where are the men and older boys? This group of personal witnesses we are talking about can find them, and will, if properly conducted. I haven't a doubt but an average of nine laymen to one minister could be grouped in each of our churches, in which case there would be 6,000 personal witnesses for Christ by word to individuals, working for the upbuilding of God's Kingdom on earth, instead of possibly one or two thousand ministers now working along that line, occasionally.

Of the hundreds of native evangelists I have supported abroad, I doubt if there are even ten ordained preachers. The personal appeal from one who cares, to the individual, has more potency to move the human heart than the most brilliant theological sermons by silver-tongued orators. Therein lies some of the potential power of the personal witnessing group.

When the man out of whom Jesus cast the devils that ran the herd of swine into the sea asked Jesus to let them go with Him, Jesus said, "No," and told him to go home and tell what great things God had done for him. When one tells what God has done for him to a fellow being, out of a heart felt interest and prayerful desire to win him for Christ, he joins a group of "Personal Witnesses for Christ by word to individuals."

"Were there not ten cleansed?" But one returned to give thanks. We were all infested with leprosy of sin. Jesus cleansed and redeemed us. He can do the same for all others who are thus afflicted. He is the only one that can cure them, but they don't know it. We know from our exper-

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

FLORIDA SUMMER CONFERENCE.

For the first time in several years, the Florida young people's conference is to be held at Camp Immokalee. This "camp" consists of a group of cabins on the shore of a lake in north central Florida—right out in the "wilds" away from civilization!

This conference will open with registration on Saturday afternoon, June 19th. The total cost will be ten dollars.

The Dean of the conference will be Rev. V. B. Chicoine of Winter Park; the Registrar, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill. Rev. Raymond Dudley from India will be the guest missionary this year.

One innovation will be special courses for an older group, and an effort is being made to have leaders from that age group present. The Rev. Everett Leshner of Jacksonville, will have charge of this older group.

A FRANK APPRAISAL.

A tall Chinese lad rose in oral composition class at Fukien Christian University, Foochow, China. Again it was near Christmas. He addressed his teacher, Miss Eunice T. Thomas and classmates. "It is too near Christmas to speak of anything else," he said slowly. "But no one who is not a Christian is qualified to talk about it. I am not a Christian. I have never come in contact with Christianity before coming to Fukien Christian University. I am much impressed with the importance of religion and I hope I may soon learn to be a Christian." Such was the sincerity of the speaker, backed up by regular attendance at voluntary chapel, that his fellow students listened to this unusual speech "without batting an eye," according to Miss Thomas.

WHAT DID JESUS MEAN BY "GOING THE SECOND MILE?"

Meditation—

Gladness in Service—Psa. 95:2; Eph. 6:7; Psa. 147:7.

Encouragement in Service—II Chron. 35:2. Consecration in Service—I Chron. 25:9.

No doubt Jesus' words are misunderstood by many today. "If a man compel thee to go with him one mile, go with him two." Suppose we think of this statement in this light. To do Christian service, a person must always do more than is expected. At least there must be a willingness to go the limit of our strength.

Jesus made some remarkable statements about one's attitude to others. "Forgive, not seven times, but seven times seventy." "Love your enemies." "Pray for them that despitefully use you." These are merely sign posts on the second mile of the way.

Prof. William James in giving his maxims for habit formation says: "Keep the faculty of effort alive in you by a little gratuitous exercise every day. That is, be systematically ascetic or heroic in little unnecessary points, so that when the hour of dire need draws nigh, it may find you not unnerved and untrained to stand the test."

BECAUSE OF SOME GOOD ACT.

"Let me today do something that shall take A little sadness from the world's vast store, And may I be so favored as to make Of joy's too scanty sum a little more.

"Let me tonight look back across the span 'Twixt dawn and dark, and to my conscience say,

"Because of some good act to beast or man— The world is better that I loved today."

To think about—

1. Can a Christian justify his good deeds by simply limiting them in number and time?

2. Is there any schedule for doing good?

3. Is it Christ's plan to aid another for the purpose of reaping a conscious reward?

4. What are some of the ways in which we can help the world?

Suggested hymns—

"Help Somebody Today."

"Ready to Go, Ready to Stay."

"Open My Eyes."

WHITHER THE CHURCH?

It is the opportunity of the Woman's Missionary Society to take the eyes of the church off contentions and dissatisfactions and put them on the great task that challenged the heart of Christ and with which he challenges us today—to carry the Gospel wherever men are found. In His strength and by His grace we may; with oneness of fellowship, oneness of purpose, and oneness of service, we can and will send out His light to the ends of the earth.

May grace, strength and vision be given to the President, Mrs. John G. Truitt, of our Woman's Missionary Society, and may we, all of us, be given grace to follow the leadership of the Spirit wherever that Spirit may lead.

THE WEAKNESS OF ESAU.

LESSON VIII—MAY 23, 1937.

GOLDEN TEXT: Every man that striveth in the games, exerciseth self-control in all things.—I Cor. 9:25.

LESSON: Genesis 25:19,34; 26:34,35; 27:1-46.

There was a tragedy in the home of Isaac and Rebekah—there were no children to bless the home. And then what was worse, there were no sons, which was a tragedy in the life of an earnest Hebrew father and mother. Thus it was that Isaac asked God to bless his home with children. In answer to his prayer, his wife conceived and bore him, not one, but two sons. Even before they were born, they dramatized the struggle which later took place between the nations of which these two sons were the leaders—they struggled together within her. And when they were born, Jacob, the younger, had hold of the heel of Esau the older—a grim prophecy of the grasping and supplanting nature of Jacob. The boys were totally unlike in appearance and in temperament. Esau was red and hairy, a cunning hunter, and a man of the field, Jacob was a plain man, dwelling in tents. In one passage of scripture he is referred to as a "smooth man," and he was just that. Perhaps "oily" would be a better word. In modern slang, he was "a slick baby."

There was tragedy in the home after the children came, for Isaac loved Esau and Rebekah loved Jacob. Alas for that family in which there is favoritism! A household divided against itself shall fall. It is not difficult to account for the later friction and open break in the home of this family when one understands the divided loyalties and the short-sided favoritism in the early days. Out of such a home of jealousy and intrigue and deceit there could come only friction and factions and fights.

The story of how Esau sold his birthright for a mess of pottage is familiar to the average reader of the Bible. It is the story of a man who lived for the pleasures of sense, who thought only of the immediate present who did not learn the meaning of discipline, who did not guard against the moment of weakness, who was determined to gratify the senses even at the expense of the soul. There is significance in the fact that it was while he was utterly weary that he made his sorry bargain. Many a tragedy has been written in the life of those who were at a low point of physical well-being. One must guard carefully against the temptations that come in the time of weakness and weariness.

In fairness to Esau, although not to condone his weakness, it must be said that Jacob appears in a very ugly light. He took advantage of his brother's weakness, he drove a sharp bargain because he knew he could do it, he catered to the powerful appeal of the senses. Both of these men have their types in our modern world, in those who live for the flesh, and in those who exploit the weakness of their fellowmen. Many a man today sells his birthright for a mess of pottage. And when a man is guilty of doing exactly what Jacob did, in that he traffics in the things which appeal to the worst in human life, and takes advantage of men and women who cannot help themselves.

Another index to Esau's character is to be found in his marriage to the daughters of the Hittites. It was not only a mixed marriage, it was the union of a man who was supposed to know the true God with those who worshipped heathen gods. It is a dangerous thing to flaunt religious idealism in the face. Men and women ought to have great ideals and religious beliefs in common. Community of interests and of ideals is a very vital factor in happy marriages.

Sin, when it hath run its course, brings its curse. And in what might have been a happy, wholesome home life, there appear ugly shadows on the picture. The biblical writer recounts with disarming simplicity and frankness the closing scene in the tragedy in this home. And again, Rebekah and Jacob appear in an ugly light.

Isaac, the father, was an old man. Furthermore he was blind. And with that craving for some particular tid-bit which is characteristic at times of all of us, he asked Esau to kill some venison and to prepare it in savoury form for him. Rebekah overheard the conversation and immediately her crafty mind set about to steal the blessing for her favored son. Calling him to her she unfolded her subtle scheme. Jacob was to prepare two kids from the flock which she was to prepare in such a way that the old man would think it was venison. When Jacob remonstrated on the grounds that he might be caught in this deceit, his unscrupulous mother quickly told him that she would fix that all right—he was to put on one of Esau's garments which she had at hand, and he was to wrap the skins of the animals around his hands and upon the smooth of his neck, so that he would smell and feel like Esau. Jacob was not deterred by any moral scruples, and when he made sure that there was no danger of being discovered he readily acquiesced in the clever, but conscienceless scheme. With brazen effrontery he carried out his part, presenting the savoury dish, lying glibly to his blind and credulous father, and stealing the blessing. He goes from his father's presence with his father's irrevocable blessing upon him.

Later Esau comes in with his savoury dish, only to find that his brother had come before him and had supplanted him. In agony of spirit he beseeches his father to give him forthwith a blessing. His aged father cannot revoke the blessing which he has already given Jacob, but he does speak a blessing upon his beloved son, giving him promise of a fertile land, but warning him that his life would be one of warfare, and indeed of partial bondage, until a day in the far future when, following rebellion he should shake the yoke of the descendants of Jacob off his neck.

If all this seems unjust and unfair, let it be said that is the law of life. Esau had sown to the flesh and of the flesh had he reaped. Like many a sinner he wanted to eat his cake and have it. He wanted two irreconcilable things—the red pottage and the birthright. He wanted to live a life of folly in youth and then expected to find as much in manhood and mature years as if he had lived a careful and God-fearing youth. Esau had irrevocably lost that which now he would have given all he had to possess. In this he was like perhaps half of all the men who pass through the world.

"Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our instruction." Take heed unto thyself. Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation.

Ethical sense is awareness of beauty, economy, fitness, and proportion in conduct. Ethical discrimination, a sense of obligation, and disciplined willpower make character. Keen ethical sense requires intelligence and experience. Lacking these, conduct must rest on codes, presumably formulated by those with greater ethical sense for guidance of those with less. In ethics, as in every field, genius sets standards which become authority to those who recognize excellence, even where they cannot create it.—Antioch News.

MONDAY.

A READINESS THAT GETS RESULTS.

"Here am I, send me."—Isa. 6:8.

This readiness of Isaiah to do what the Lord wanted him to do was characteristic of his life and was the center of his greatness. He was endowed with a message of humanity that has rung throughout the centuries, inspiring and strengthening the nations.

Readiness always reaps. It reaps the confidence of those who would impose responsibility. It reaps the advantage of action first and on the "ground floor." It reaps an enlarged influence. It reaps satisfaction. It reaps progress. It gets results.

Not only does this readiness reap results in the life that now is, but also does it reap mental and spiritual power and the riches of eternal life. The opposite of readiness is procrastination. A ready soul has never been acquired by waiting. Now is the time, now is the day of salvation.

Prayer—O Lord, our God, we humble ourselves before Thee to make our wills thine own. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

TUESDAY.

PRAYING TILL HEARD.

"Go thy way, thy faith hath made thee whole."—Mk. 10:52.

Blind Bartimaeus is one of those inspiring examples in the incidents of our Lord during His sojourn on earth, that represents persistent pleading at the throne of grace until prayer is answered. He was sure that Christ could give Him light, therefore he persisted in his plea, and he got the answer. The man who went to his neighbor at midnight to beg a piece of bread was sure of his need and also sure that his neighbors could help him. Therefore he persisted till his neighbor arose from his bed and ministered to him.

However, the lesson of this text is not that of persistency. Jesus specified that it was faith that brought the answer. If he had had no faith, he might have been praying till now, still there would be no answer. The great Healer is powerless to help except through the medium of faith.

Prayer—O Lord, we humble before Thee and confess that we are poor specimens of faith. We are so weak that we can hardly discover our faith of times. Increase our faith and save us, we pray. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE LIVING DEAD.

"I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and thou art dead."—Rev. 3:1.

How well we know that it is possible to have a reputation on earth which receives the applause of men and at the same time have a very poor reputation in heaven. Men may call us good, charitable and religious, but what avails it if God sees that we are proud, selfish, ambitious and mean spirited?

Prayer—O Lord, God, Great Judge of the Universe, help us to cultivate in our lives spiritual values that record with the angels of heaven, and help us to strive to avoid being dead to God. Amen.

THURSDAY.

TO WHOM DO WE APPEAL?

"I appeal unto Caesar."—Acts 25.

Paul's enemies were bent on killing him even as they had killed Jesus, and the judge's decision before this court was serious to him. His only remaining recourse was to appeal to Caesar, and this he did.

But we must not forget that Paul stood constantly before the King of Kings before whom he had already been heard favorably. It was this decision of heaven's court he would bring to Caesar and thus leave no earthly court without the trace of Jesus on it. This he did and though ultimately led outside of the city gate and beheaded, he left behind the light of Christ that shone on to a more perfect day, and shines still as your hope, and my hope, and the hope of the world.

In all of our experiences and in whatever earthly foes may assail us, and though earth's courts combine against us, let us never forget to make our appeal to Him.

Prayer—O God, it is easy for us to depend upon ourselves. It is so easy, when all goes well, to forget Thee. God forbid. We humble ourselves before Thee and pray for unfailing wisdom to meet every emergency and stand every test before the great judge of earth and heaven. Amen.

FRIDAY.

FAITHFUL TO THE CHURCH CALL.

"And when they shall blow them, (the horns) all the congregation shall gather themselves unto thee at the door of the tent of meeting."—Numbers 16:10.

It was the church call of the Israelites. The silver trumpets were sounded, and the people gathered for worship.

We do not have the silver trumpets today, but we have the church bells and chimes. And we always feel that the church that has not one or the other of these is lacking a little something in the ring of the church day and the church hour that finds its response in the hearts of the parish life. As we listen to the chimes every Sunday morning announcing "come to church," to the people of our fair city, we feel that it is a sweet summons of God over vale and hill that seeks echo in countless hearts. And then as we wend our way to the church entrance and approach the altar of worship, there we lay aside our heavy cares, there we feel the spirit of the Comforter, there, in thought and prayer, we soar to the realms of the blessed. The summons has brought us into the presence of a reality and from Him we gather strength and courage to bear the toils of the day's work.

Prayer—We bless Thee, our heavenly Father, for the house of God, and all that it means to us. We pray to Thee for the power ever to be loyal and faithful. Amen.

SATURDAY.

STEADY SOWING.

"In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand; for Thou knowest not which shall prosper, whether this or that, or whether both shall be alike good."—Ecclesiastes 11:1-8.

A farmer's work is at haphazard. He can never be sure of a good crop. Rains may fail or floods may come. It may be too hot or it may be too cold. There are grasshoppers and locusts to eat up his harvests, and innumerable insect pests to destroy his handiwork.

So the farmer's only course is to diversify his crops and put an abundance of seed in the ground at the different times for sowing. Then one or the other planting will be quite certain to prove successful.

Nor is it otherwise with our spiritual seed-sowing. Our life-conditions vary and our tempers vary. Sometimes a single Bible verse or a sentence of prayer will bring us greater blessing than many chapters or long petitions. But the steady sowing counts in the end.

Prayer—Grant us, then, persistence and fidelity in our religion. May we ever wait upon Thee, O God. May we be constantly faithful in tending the soil of our soul. For the Saviour's sake. Amen.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN'S PULPIT

REV. JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D., Pastor.

HE GAVE THANKS.

By JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"And he took the seven loaves and fishes, and gave thanks."—Matt. 11:20.

I.

It would not have been enough in this materialistic age. In fact it was not enough in that day to feed the five thousand but, with God's help it was enough. But the point I wish to emphasize in our today's meditation is Jesus took what he had and gave thanks. We are too prone to think we haven't enough to be thankful for. We have had so much we do not know when to be satisfied. We are missing one of the greatest blessings of life by not cultivating the grace of gratitude. From the child in the nursery in the home to the man in the stock markets of the world there is not enough. Of course there are exceptions, many of them, and those exceptions help to sweeten life and save our day from crass materialism.

Although there were thousands gathered about Jesus, and all away from home and near nightfall, although he had been busy speaking to them and teaching them all day; although he had been meeting them and answering their questions; giving out of his strength and the energy of both mind and body; although at the close of the day his disciples come to him with the demand of the crowd for bread and meat, Jesus is patient, and thankful. His poise is perfect. He did not begin to upbraid them for their lack of foresight, nor for troubling him with such material matters. He simply began, through his helpers, to collect the food in preparation to disburse it to all. A miserably scant supply was collected—"seven loaves and a few small fishes." But, mark you, he took what there was, much or little, and gave thanks! And there was enough! When do we give thanks? When there is bounty? When there are pleasing gifts, or good prosperity? We should. But gratitude should become a constant factor in our lives, whether there be much, or little.

II.

It was mighty fine to have the co-operation of great crowds, to feel the power of their faith and understanding, so that men could be forgiven of their sins, bodies could be healed of their diseases, and minds could be set right again. In many places Jesus found his work pleasant, in our earthly way of speaking of pleasure, and there was some sympathetic understanding. But another day dawns. He cannot always have the sun shining. Chorazin mocked his manifestations of the Father, exalted Capernaum laughed him out of their city. He had done enough mighty works within their gates to have saved even wicked Sodom until this day! He went out empty-handed. You or I would have been terribly discouraged. It would not have been our day for thanksgiving. But Jesus said, "I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight."

To me that is simply inspiring. It is divine. It is like Jesus. It is so different from Elijah, under his juniper tree. There is no pouting at God. There is no complaining. No show of any sign of nervously saying, "I might as well give up." But the contrary exactly. It is a prayer of thanksgiving! Even pagans are thankful for prosperity. Christians should never be swept from their mooring even in adversity. It is easy to say. It is divine to do. God give us strength to catch the grateful spirit of our Lord Jesus.

III.

"Our Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread, and when he had given thanks, he brake it." He broke it with the full understanding of what it signified. He broke it with the full knowledge of his betrayal even at that hour by a member of his own group. In that empty hour he gave thanks! "And he took the cup and gave thanks." It is easy enough to give thanks when the sack is full, but the Kingdom of God moves forward at the behest of those who, like Jesus, can give glory and praise and thanksgiving to God when the sack is empty. Such is not foolhardiness. It is faith that reaches across the passing moment, faith that God loves his own, faith that his promises will be verified, yea, faith that God is a Father, and that he will not forsake his own. Underlying most of our emptiness is either our own hand, or God's. If we are submitted to God's will, he will guide our own hands as well as his own, and eventually we shall learn how to thank him in hours of adversity as well as prosperity.

IV.

Sometimes God's blessings are immediate, as in the case of Jesus standing almost empty-handed before the milling multitudes with the proposition to give them food. It took a faith which can not be conjured up by pious talk, not public profession alone; but rather a faith that came as a close walk with God, to look up and say: "Father, we are grateful for Thy bounties, food enough to feed all these thousands, and to spare." But Jesus had that faith. And Jesus gave the thanks.

Sometimes there is no remedying the matter in sight, as it was in the case of the retreating congregations of Capernaum and Chorazin, for as long as Jesus lived they never came back. It took a deep, abiding, faith to thank the Father in that hour. And even more so when he held the broken bread—grain ground, mangled, fired—and knowing that it signified his own broken body and then give thanks. Or to take the cup—crushed grapes put through the cruel press—and to give thanks. He could, humanly speaking, say his life was a failure. It had ended in most tragic manner. Slain between society's greatest sinners, and himself slain as a malefactor. What good could come of it? What providence could transform this tragedy into triumph of the ages? God could! Jesus knew that! He gave thanks.

Our lesson then, as we gather about this communion table in memory of Jesus, is to learn to be thankful. Life will have its sorrows, its disappointments, but as sure as the sun rises and sets, it will hold ultimate triumph for all who love God and do his will. There is simply no blocking that. And so: "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful . . . And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus giving thanks to God and the Father by him . . . Knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance; for ye serve the Lord Christ."

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

"I will and bequeath to the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, N. C., the sum of _____ Dollars for its uses and purposes." The writer wonders how many of the friends of the Christian Orphanage have put a clause in their will reading something like the above?

If God in His loving kindness has been good to you and blessed you with plenty and to spare while here on earth, and as you are going to leave it here when you take your departure to the next place of abode, do you know of any better cause you could leave it to than to help little helpless children who are helpless.

If you have not put a clause in your will to this effect or if you have overlooked it, it would be real good of you to add it before it is too late.

Or if you want to designate it for a special purpose you can do that.

We have five bright girls and one boy graduating from high school on May 19th. What a blessing it would be to them if we had money to lend to them to further their education, and let them pay it back after they finished school and get a position. If we had ample funds we could do lots of things—we could give more children a home, we could help these six graduates further their education so they could do greater things in life, and be able to be of greater service to humanity.

HE IS ABLE.

"In that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted."—Heb. 2: 9-18.

Herein is the reason for Christ's temptations and trials; this is why our Lord was allowed to suffer; this is the reason for His submission to the outrages of wicked men: He did all this and bore all this that He might place Himself close by the side of all who suffer; all who are tempted and tried.

He is able! Glorious certainty! What confidence it gives weak mortals, tossed by doubts, assailed by the insidious craft of the devil, beaten about by the the tempests of worldly ambition, worldly failures, worldly fears!

We are not able, not one of us able. Conquest is far from us. Firmness and certainty are beyond our reach. Wavering and instability are our portion. But He is our unfailing strength, and there is no uncertainty with our Christ.

Prayer—Be our ability, dear Lord. We rest in Thee, O Rock of our salvation. Amen.

NOTE the bold-faced type, pronouncing text, center column references with chapter numbers in heavy type—unusual in Bibles, but a great aid to quick reference.

The figures to the left of Chapter Head indicate the total number of chapters from the beginning of the Bible.

The headlines also are in bold type in keeping with the text.

The name of the book, on outside corner, makes the Bible practically self-indexed.

THE HELPS in the Teachers' edition are most important for consultation when reading the Bible, for in them one finds the explanation of much that otherwise would be obscure in the statements in the Bible text.

In Memoriam

HUFFMAN.

Miss Camilla Roxie Huffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. T. Huffman, of New Market, Va., was born February 22, 1921, near Timberville, Va. She died May 3, 1937, making her age sixteen years, two months, eleven days. Besides her parents, she is survived by one sister, Mrs. Cora Huffman.

Until her parents moved out of the community, she was a faithful member of the Concord Church near Timberville. For the last three years she was confined to her bed with a severe illness. Although sick, she was patient, kind, and joyful. She seemed to have reckoned her sufferings not worthy to be compared with the glory of God.

Rev. D. R. Coulter assisted the writer at Concord.

W. J. ANDES.

DAUGHTREY.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has removed from our midst our beloved teacher and friend, William Edney Daughtrey, and

Whereas, as a teacher in the Intermediate Department he served capably and had the respect and affectionate cooperation of his pupils and fellow workers, and

Whereas, as a man he was upright, modest, unselfish, obliging, kindhearted and true;

Therefore, be it resolved by the Intermediate Department of the Suffolk Church,

1. That in Mr. Daughtrey's untimely death this Department has lost an efficient, conscientious and loyal teacher, and the community a useful citizen who, by his uniform geniality and courtesy, won and retained the friendship of his fellow citizens.

2. That we extend our sympathy to his family in their great sorrow and commend them unto God, who alone can console them in their time of trouble and give them comfort and courage.

3. That this resolution be spread upon the records of this Department, a copy sent to the family and a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

GLADYS H. YATES, Supt.
MARGARET JONES, Sec'y.

JOHNSON.

Mr. Julius C. Johnson, aged 85 years, two months, and 29 days, after a short illness, passed away April 13, 1937, at his late residence in Isle of Wight County. He was a son the late Jessie B. and Mrs. Mary Cotton Johnson.

Mr. Johnson was united in marriage to Miss Georgianna Rhodes on April 23, 1873. He is survived by two sons: Dr. I. W. Johnson of Suffolk, Va., Professor O. W. Johnson of Elon College, N. C., and one daughter, Miss Essie C. Johnson, of Carrsville, Va.; four grandchildren: Ryland E. Johnson, Greensboro, N. C., David Rhodes Johnson, Burlington, N. C., and Misses Virginia and Sarah Johnson, Elon College, N. C.

In early manhood, Mr. Johnson professed faith in Christ and united with Antioch Christian Church. He was one of the committee which selected the site and founded Mt. Carmel Christian Church, to which he transferred his membership and served with distinction as deacon, Sunday school Superintendent, Choir Director, and Sunday school teacher. He gave up his office as teacher in the Sunday school in June, 1936, when he was in his eighty-fourth year. He was noted for his honesty and integrity of character. He was a man of deep religious convictions and unflinching loyalty to his church.

Services were conducted by the writer, Drs. N. G. Newman, Elwood W. Jones, J. G. Truitt, and the Rev. Elisha Bradshaw. J. F. Morgan and O. D. Poythress sang a duet, "The Beautiful Land." Interment was in Mt. Carmel Cemetery. May the Holy Comforter abide with those who mourn.

THE CHURCH AND LAYMEN.

ience with Him. Are we telling them of Him? About our experience with Him? Are we?

"Because of our new birthright in Jesus Christ, may we not also say God has not given unto us a spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and a sound mind." That we may live and serve within this great mystery of godliness, with the absolute assurance that Jesus, the central figure, is with us in our warfare "against principalities and powers, spiritual wickedness in high places, and the prince of this world's darkness." However, as this warfare is mostly for our own protection, spiritual growth, and overcoming power, may we not feel that Jesus' presence with power is more intimately with us as we follow Him more closely in His missionary work of seeking and saving the lost, as we personally bear witness to others individually of our experience and knowledge of Him, and what He means to us, as Lord and Saviour. It is written that "He that converteth a sinner from error of his ways shall save a soul from death."

Can you and I save a soul from death? Yes, a living soul of infinite value to its possessor, and precious in the sight of God. Personal witnesses have been the means of turning sinners from the error of their ways, through the centuries.

What has been done is a "tale that is told." The records of the yesterday's are irrevocably closed. Today is ours, and the tomorrow's until the "Sunset and evening star and that last clear call." Prompt and decisive action is needed now. "Time and tide wait for no man." As we meditate on the great things God has done and is doing for us, let us select some relative, friend, or acquaintance, who has missed the "Way, the Truth and the Life" in Jesus, and earnestly and prayerfully go and tell them what great things Jesus is doing for us, and wants to do for them. "Herein is my Father Glorified, that ye bear much fruit, so shall be my disciples."

CHAS. H. BATES.

"What helped you over the obstacles of life?" was asked a successful man. "The other obstacles," he replied.

"The world is looking for the man who can do something, not for the man who can 'explain' why he didn't do it."

True Tolerance

There is unfortunately, a kind of easy-going spineless indifference, bereft of any positive conviction, which sometimes passes as tolerance, but which is worse even than intolerance. An absence of clear-cut opinions or irresoluteness in standing for what one believes to be the truth is an even greater evil of our day than lack of tolerance.

But true tolerance is an utterly different thing from this. What it involves is no complacent shilly-shallying about my views of the truth, but a recognition of the other man's right to do his own thinking as I do mine, to reach his own conclusion, and then to hold his own honest convictions as frankly as I hold mine. It means that I have so much confidence in the truth that I can trust it to win its way without any other compulsion than that of its own intrinsic worth. I shall reason with the man who differs from me and seek to persuade him by showing him why I believe as I do—but try to coerce him never.

True tolerance means earnestness of conviction combined with respect for the conviction of others. It is, as Phillips Brooks once pointed out, a fusion of love of truth with love of men. Strong love of truth without love of one's fellows makes the bigot. It is this which has lighted the fires of persecution in every age. Love of one's fellows, on the other hand, without devotion to the truth makes the sloppy sentimentalist. The blending of the two makes the ardent and, at the same time, tolerant spirit.—Samuel McGree Cavert, in old issue of The Herald of Gospel Liberty.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL OF LEADERSHIP TRAINING.

This picture of a Leadership Training School at Elon College, N. C., is representative of the hundreds of such schools and conferences held each summer all over our country. Young people and their leaders meet to study, play, and pray together. For many of them it is the first experience on a college campus or in a church-conducted camp. It is a new and thrilling experience.

Elon is this week offering the blessing of our Church to its 47th graduating class of fine young people who will go out into the world to be a blessing. To this same campus will come in June another group of young people and adults who will seek to learn how they, also, may help to build a Christian world.

You are invited to join with those who seek the "better way" in our summer schools and conferences.

LET THERE BE LIGHT

PERSONALS

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

Dr. and Mrs. W. D. Harward have moved from Dendron, Virginia, and are now making their permanent home in Wakefield, Virginia.

Information concerning the Summer Conferences in the Southeast is given with the hope that some who had not planned to do so will see what good may be accomplished by attending and be among those present. The Church is working at the task of educating its leaders.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN extends sincere sympathy to Dr. Edwin C. Gillette, whose only brother, Frank Gillette, died at Granby, Connecticut, on Tuesday, May 11th, and was buried on Thursday following. Dr. Gillette is the efficient and much-beloved Superintendent of the Southeast, as well as the associate editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Rev. J. L. Neese and his good people in Reidsville, N. C., are rejoicing about the fine meeting recently closed in which there were 137 conversions and rededications, and 41 new members added to the church. The church was filled and the new auditorium was needed to seat the crowds that attended. A trio from Greensboro led the singing and the pastor did the preaching.

PLEASE NOTE that with May the special offer for new subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN will cease. All reports should be mailed not later than June 1st in order to be counted. After June 1st the price for both new and renewal subscriptions will be $2.00 per year. The Business Manager and all connected with the paper appreciated greatly the fine cooperation of so many who have shared in this campaign. A report will be made in the paper as soon as possible.

Pastors of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference have been requested to send the name of a co-operative young person, who will act as key-worker for the Youth Fellowship, to the new president, Mr. Walter Cooper, 110 Ruffin St., Burlington, N. C. It will be a fine thing for all pastors in the Southeast to check up on this matter and see if the Fellowship officials in their conference have the name of such a person from every church. This will be a real help to the young people.

NEWS OF EASTERN VIRGINIA.

The First Congregational Christian Church of Newport News has installed a Hearing Aid System which renders perfect service to those hard of hearing.

Rev. J. E. McCauley, of Richmond, was with Rev. T. N. Lowe in a meeting at Hopewell the week following the second Sunday. The meeting was continued the following week under the care of the pastor.

Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, pastor of the Windsor field, reports special acts of kindness to himself and family from all the churches. He is also delighted with increased attendance at the services and interest in the work.

Rev. H. C. Hilliard had his suit case stolen while en route from his recent Florida trip. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good." He smiles and is happy in a new suit of clothes, thanks to the kindness of his good people.

Dr. I. W. Johnson reports largely attended and interesting memorial services at Oakland and Liberty Spring Sunday, 16th. Dr. Johnson spoke at Oakland at 11:00 A. M., and Rev. R. L. House at Liberty Spring at 3:00 P. M.

Barretts Church, Southampton County, Virginia, will have a "home coming day" on the fifth Sunday. The pastor, Rev. B. H. Watkins, will speak at the morning service and Dr. N. G. Newman, pastor forty-five years ago, will speak in the afternoon.

The Committee on arrangements for the Leadership Training School to be held in Suffolk in October met on the 17th, inst., and outlined the work. Courses were decided upon and teachers selected. More definite announcements will be made later by the dean, Rev. Carl R. Key.

The Christian, Methodist and Baptist Churches of Waverly will conduct a union revival service beginning the first Sunday in June and closing the second Sunday night. The preaching will be done by the following pastors: Rev. T. Fred Wright, Christian Church; Rev. A. B. Harrell, Baptist; and Rev. L. C. Vaughan, Methodist.

Rev. J. S. Johnson, formerly of Niagara, N. C., now of Dendron, Virginia, was received into the fellowship of the Eastern Virginia Ministers Association at the regular meeting, Monday, the 17th. Mr. Johnson is now in charge of the Dendron field. He is a graduate of Davidson College and has had ten years of experience in the ministry.

At the meeting of the Eastern Virginia Ministers Association Monday, the 16th, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Rev. J. F. Morgan, president; Rev. J. H. Dollar, vice-president; Rev. T. F. Wright, secretary; and Rev. Joe E. French, treasurer. Arrangements were made to hold the annual picnic for the ministers and their families at the City Park, Norfolk, Monday following the second Sunday in June.

ALAMANCE CHURCHES TO MEET.

The twelve churches in Alamance County, North Carolina, will meet for their second quarterly fellowship get-together at Long's Chapel Church, near Haw River, at 2 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, May 30, 1937. The call is for pastors, deacons, Sunday school superintendents, members of missionary societies, young people and all interested in the growth of the Church. The theme is: "Evangelism in the Local Church."

Ten-minute addresses are to be made on: "The Pastor's Part in the Evangelism of the Local Church," "The Laymen's Part in the Evangelism of the Local Church," and "The Sunday School Teacher's Part in the Evangelism of the Local Church." This is to be followed by a discussion. The business session will be held at 3:30 and the closing devotional will be at 4:15.

Churches in this group are Burlington, Elon College, Berea, Bethlehem, Carolina, Haw River, Hopedale, Long's Chapel, Union, Shallow Ford, Graham and Providence. Rev. Milard Stevens, pastor of Providence and Union Churches, is president.

CONFERENCE SCHOLARSHIP.

Priscilla Webster of St. Petersburg, will have her way paid to the Florida Summer Conference this year. She wrote the prize-winning book report on "Twelve Negro Americans" and thus is to receive this award. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williams of Lake Worth gave this scholarship in memory of Rev. W. Knighton Bloom, who was Superintendent of the Southeast for the Congregational Church, preceding Dr. Gillette. What a fitting way to honor the memory of a religious leader like Dr. Bloom.

THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of Church membership.
5. The right of private judgement and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

TRAINING CHURCH LEADERS.

In these days of rapidly increasing learning it is not necessary to argue that church leaders must be trained. Learning is all about us. By travel, radio and movies even the illiterate are becoming educated. Leaders of thought today must think because others are thinking. They must be skilled artists in the work they are to do. Only so can they be leaders of progress. Otherwise they will be "blind leaders of the blind." What we need to know is, how can these leaders get training?

The answer is simple enough; accept that which is offered. The International Council of Religious Education is the cooperative work of more than forty Protestant denominations, with a program of leadership training that covers North America and reaches from the best skilled people to the humblest leaders in the smallest churches. With week-day education in many public schools during the winter and summer training schools, camps and conferences this educational work goes on as cooperative and denominational programs.

Our denomination is sharing largely in this training of leaders. We are part of the International Council and also promote our own program. Our training schools, conferences and camps are within reach of the leaders of all our people. Some of them are for a day or two only, but others lengthen out into weeks. Our Church is making a desperate attempt to train its leaders for today and tomorrow. The success of this program depends quite largely on the number and quality of the people who seek this training. This responsibility rests on the local churches. If pastors and local leaders will attend themselves and see that prospective leaders attend, there is a chance for this training to transform our churches and for our future to be assured.

In this issue we are giving much information concerning our schools, conferences and camps in the Southeast. Other such training groups are scattered from Maine to California and from Canada to Mexico. The summer months begin a busy season among the young people and leaders in our churches. It is a time for study and friendships, for renewal and for spiritual insight that will give one courage to carry on through the years to come. Out of these schools, conferences and camps will go a stream of purifying and ennobled lives consecrated to the task of building the Kingdom of God on earth. It is not too much to ask, therefore, that pastors and local leaders busy them selves about attending and getting others to attend these summer conferences. "The Christian Sun" makes this a sincere appeal, for it believes that our present and future leaders need the help, the training and the inspiration which can come only from this type of leadership training.

CONGRATULATIONS TO GRADUATES.

High schools and colleges are giving their graduates diplomas these days and sending them out with blessings and good wishes of those who have taught them and those who have loved them. Fortunate, indeed, are these youthful Americans who have both the training and the blessing of high schools or college. They are ready for further training, unless necessity demands an immediate plunge into the struggle for a living, in which case the preparation will be more difficult, but none the less certain.

The world is waiting for the gift which these young people can make. It is greatly in need of the courage, hope, faith, and consecrated service which youth can give in abundance. It is a weary world into which you come. You can give it new vigor. It is a perplexed world. You can give it clearer thoughts. It is a nervous world, dying from heart failure. You can give it faith, courage, and rest. It is a sinful world filled with doubt and despair. You can bring hope, purity, cleansing. Your young life can put a new throb in the pulse-beat of humanity.

You can, if you will. If you have learned the fine art of living well, of living happily, of living at your best. If you have been preparing only to make a living, rather than to live a wholesome, happy life, then your contribution to the world into which you go will be on the wrong side of the ledger. Thousands have broken under the strain of making a living, but millions are eager to be taught to live happily.

Congratulations on being permitted to step out on the stage of life just as the curtain rises on its greatest progress. Your initial bow will test the quality of your soul. The direction in which you travel will determine your destiny. The language you speak will bring success or failure to that part of the play in which you take a leading role. The attitude of your mind and loyalties of your soul will determine your worth to the world. Your Church Paper joins with your friends in wishing you well as you pass from where you are to what you want to become.

CONGRATULATIONS, DR. HARDCASTLE.

This week Mother Elon called home one of her beloved sons and bestowed upon him the honor of Doctor of Divinity. The recipient of this degree was Rev. Howard S. Hardcastle, pastor of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Virginia. "Christian Sun" readers will know him as the writer of the Sunday School Notes.

Dr. Hardcastle received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Elon, and the degree of Bachelor of Divinity from Yale University. For ten years he was pastor of the Suffolk, Virginia, Christian Church. While there he led the church in building a modern religious education plant, perhaps the best we have in the south. For four years he has been doing constructive work in Norfolk and is becoming one of the leaders of the city.

Congratulations, Dr. Hardcastle! "The Christian Sun" is sure that you will wear this honor with distinction and give your Alma Mater just cause to be proud of you in the future as she has been in the past.

TRAINING MISSIONARY LEADERS.

Grandview, Tennessee,

JUNE 22-29, 1937.

Leadership Training School for Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and West Florida.

"I Will Lift Up My Eyes Unto the Hills."

Camp Grandview, situated on Walden's Ridge, three miles west of Spring City, the railway point, and sixty miles north of Chattanooga, U. S. Highway 27, is well named. Through the freshness of the mountain top and the scenic daily ride to the foot of the ridge where the cool waters of the mountain stream invite swimmers, nature brings her rich gifts to all.

"How Good and How Pleasant it is for Brethren to Dwell Together in Unity."

Here you find fellowship with Christian people. Living, working, playing, studying, and worshipping together; sharing thoughts and experiences, learning from one another; we try to approach the ideal of those early Christians who "... were of one heart and soul."

"Study to Show Thyself Approved Unto God, a Workman that Needeth not to be Ashamed, Rightly Dividing the Word of Truth!"

Christian workers realize their need for new and better methods of carrying on the program of their church, and of practicing the principles for which it stands in the community. Capable leaders of helpful classes will do much to give new confidence and zest for the tasks confronting pastors, women's groups, and the young people of our churches.

"Oh Come, Let Us Worship and Bow Down; Let Us Kneel Before the Lord, Our Maker!"

We invite you to join us in this week of seeking together for a closer walk with God and a clearer vision of His will for us.

The Camp opens Tuesday afternoon, June 22, with supper the first meal. It closes Tuesday morning, June 29, with breakfast the last meal.

Each camper must bring his bedding, sheets, or quilts, pillow and case, folding cot (if possible), towels, napkins, eating utensils (paper plates preferred), Bible, note book, pencils, pen. Suggested equipment: flash light, tennis racket, musical instruments, bathing suit, camp clothing, camera. Remember! Grandview is a "camp."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There appeared in the issue of THE SUN, dated May 13th, an article entitled "The Share-Cropper in Georgia," by Miss Emily Dexter. It was stated that this article was intended to be used by the Woman's Societies. This article attempts to set forth certain conditions existing among the "share-croppers" in Georgia—and intimates that similar conditions are general wherever farming is done by the "share-cropping" method.

Here is the definition of "share-cropping" as stated in said paper: "In return for what the landlord furnished them, they raised the crop 'on shares,' and the owner usually contrived to get the entire crop. The system is called 'share-cropping.'" In parenthesis this statement is made: "(We are not referring, when the term 'share-cropper' is used, to one who is a fairly independent tenant on someone else's farm, but to one who is quite without resources of his own)" "The thing that leads to man's being a 'share-cropper'—is his very poverty."

In the first place it is not the purpose of this writer to question the statistical statements made in this article. It is presumed that Miss Dexter is well informed about the general conditions among the farmers of Georgia. But she has given us only a part of the facts. If this matter is to be studied carefully she should tell us something about the financial, social and educational conditions existing among the landowners of this great state. She intimates that landowners are unscrupulous and dishonest. Is this intimation fair and just? Do landlords "usually contrive to get the entire crop?" If this is true, why not approach this problem from the standpoint of the landlord? If the landlord is the only offender why not deal directly with him? Is it not possible that tenants should bear a part of the blame for this condition?

Frankly it is the opinion of this writer that such an article has no place in a church paper. And this type of pamphlet has no religious value for a Woman's Society, especially a Missionary Society. It breathes the air of class prejudice. It has the spirit of hatred and bitterness. It states half-truths and draws hasty and unwarranted conclusions. It is steeped in the present day effort to create a spirit of war against the owners of property and a maudlin sympathy for the working class. It counsels renters "to organize as a class and try to get fair treatment from the landlords." And the writer of that article would use the churches as a medium of carrying out this purpose.

Now it is against the use of the church that protest should be made. The church includes every class in its program of service and salvation. God forbid that the church should be called upon to choose between the rich and the poor, the landlord or the tenant. In the church "the rich and the poor meet together, the Lord is the maker of them all." The church has a great field of service. But it should discriminate between fair and impartial attitudes in contrast with hatred and prejudice. There are scores of clubs and other forms of organizations created to study social and economic problems, which might well take such a study under consideration, where it is needed. But do not take this type of investigation into our churches. If the church is left free from such class bitterness and remains loyal to the standards of spiritual life set up by Jesus Christ it will be in a position to render efficient service by religious and moral uplift. The church should be broad in its program, sincere in its approach to any problem and fair in its dealings with every class. The landlord and tenant, the rich and poor, the capitalist and the laborer, the landowner and the "share-cropper"—all these, and all others, should know that the church offers salvation to all, without bias and without prejudice. The church cannot undertake to run every thing, and it cannot correct all the evils of human society by any legal processes. Its hope lies in the process of regeneration, and that is a slow method, but it is the way for the church.

I. W. JOHNSON.

LOOK AROUND.

Shakespeare refers to human beings as "creatures that look before and after." Thomas Carlyle, commenting on Shakespeare's observation, suggested that being such creatures, it is "the more surprising that we do not look around a little, and see what is passing under our very eyes."

If Carlyle's observation was in point when he made it, how much more is it in point today. Although the man of today lives longer and faster and observes more than the man of yesterday did, the man of today probably observes less proportionately of what there is to observe, than the typical man in any period of history.

Take for example the world of crime. How much does the man of average intelligence today, know about what is going on in that realm? If you were to test it out you would probably be amazed at the ignorance upon a question which necessity has such important relations to the whole realm of human welfare, as does that of crime.

How many of your friends and acquaintances would know, for instance, that the criminals operating in the nation today are such desperate characters, that during the years 1934, 1935 and 1936, more than 1,200 such desperadoes had to be shot down by government officers because they resisted arrest?

How many would even guess that a major felony is committed every 20 seconds in the United States and a murder every 45 minutes; that there are 3,500,000 persons making up the underworld of crime, and that 800,000 of these are boys and girls; that according to the present average there are 200,000 persons now living, who before they die will murder 300,000 persons; and that there is a larger jail population in the nation than at any time since the nation was created?

J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Bureau of Investigation of the United States Department of Justice, refers to the last three years as the "most terrible period of criminal history in the life of America."

Is it merely a coincidence or is it a matter of serious significance that the three years referred to, happen to be the same three years in which the United States consumption of legal beer increased about 700 per cent, that of distilled liquors 1,500 per cent, and that of vinous liquors 2,500 per cent?

EARNEST H. CHERRINGTON, in American Issue.

We never seem to know what anything means until we have lost it. The full significance of these words, property, ease, health—the wealth of meaning that lies in epithets, parent, child, friend, we never know until they are taken away; till in place of the bright, visible being, comes the awful and desolate shadow where nothing is—where we stretch out our hands in vain, and strain our eyes upon dark and dismal vacancy.

—O. Dewey.

"BUSH AGLOW."

A book that every member of the Congregational-Christian Church should own.

The life story of Dwight L. Moody, a layman of the Congregational Church, and a peer among the religious leaders of his day, is of special interest to the laity as well as the clergy of the Congregational-Christian Fellowship. The most recent volume written in connection with the centennial of Mr. Moody's birth, portraying the life of this great evangelist leader is entitled "Bush Aglow," and was written by Dr. Richard Ellsworth Day, and published by "The Judson Press" of Philadelphia, selling for $2.00 a copy. It can be secured from almost any book store.

Dr. Day has in this volume made one of the greatest contributions in this generation to the proper understanding of the religious life of the past generation. The splendidly written and finely bound volume reads like a thrilling romance of a man in love with God and with the souls of men. The volume is filled with valuable illustrations for pulpit or church-school work.

I have read numerous biographies of Dwight L. Moody, but this unique and authoritative volume, written by so able a writer as Dr. Day, who spent months in research work and in personal contacts with people who knew Mr. Moody personally, is to my mind the best of them all.

I heartily commend it to laymen and clergymen alike.

MISSIONS

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Secretary.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF MISSIONS IN THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

The first meeting of the General Convention of the Christian Church was held in 1808 at Portsmouth, N. H.

In 1847 the Southern Christian Association was organized at Good Hope, Granville County, N. C., being the first general meeting of the Southern Church, and the delegates from the South attended the General Convention until 1854, when the Southern Church withdrew from the General Convention and was not reunited until 1890, or some say 1894, when the plans of uniting were fully completed. Therefore, it is necessary to discuss Missions in the North and South separately, which, so far as I know, nobody has even done.

In 1908 the late Rev. J. G. Bishop, D. D., Mission Treasurer of the American Christian Convention, wrote for the Centennial of Religious Journalism (Dr. J. P. Barrett) a six page article on "The Origin and Growth of Our Missionary Interests," to which I am largely indebted for facts about our Mission work outside of the South. For nearly one hundred years our ministers were nearly all home missionaries, without any appointment by any Mission Board or Society. Conferences were organized in the early part of the 19th century (Eastern Virginia in 1818) but there was little missionary work done in the general or organized form until nearly the close of the 19th century. We learn from this article that while "The Ohio Christian Home Missionary Society" was organized in 1844 and the Home and Foreign Missionary Society of New England in November, 1845, and later a more general Missionary Organization was effected, called "American Christian Church Extension Society," with a Secretary at its head, practically nothing was done by this General Society until 1878, when the American Christian Convention elected Rev. J. P. Watson, Missionary Secretary, and he inaugurated "Children's Missions" by receiving dime contributions and from 1878 to 1886, raised $17,034.34 for Home Mission Work. In 1886 the American Christian Convention created a "Missionary and Church Extension Department" with a Mission Board of five persons: J. P. Watson, N. Summerbelle, D. D., J. G. Bishop, N. A. Devore, and W. R. Warbinton. The same convention authorized the Mission Board to commence Foreign Mission work in Japan, although the total Foreign Mission fund was $1,281.69, a good part of which amount came from the South, which has always sent its entire foreign missions fund to the Mission Board of the American Christian Convention. On January, 1887, Rev. D. F. Jones and wife, from North Carolina, the Christians' first foreign missionaries, sailed for Japan. While there are records of scattered Woman's Missionary Societies in Michigan as early as 1850, whose work was limited to their own Conference or State; in July, 1885, the first Woman's Missionary Society was organized by Mrs. Ellen G. Gustin, a Conference Foreign Missionary Secretary at Westfield, Mass. In 1886 the American Christian Convention elected the Woman's Board for Foreign Missions and in 1890 a Woman's Board for Home Missions was organized by the women of the Convention and made auxiliary to the Home Mission Department of the Convention.

Allowing full credit for all that was done in the way of missionary work by attempts at organization of Societies or boards and the organization of many churches by evangelists and local ministers, there was nothing of any consequence done for Home Missions within the bounds of the Southern Convention or the former bounds of the American Convention until 1876. Spring Hill Church, Sussex County, Virginia, of which Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., was pastor, took the lead in Home Mission work and requested the Eastern Virginia Conference to request the Convention to make Home Missions the centennial effort of the denomination. The Convention was timid as usual about Home Missions as a Convention project, but Mission work was started immediately in the Conferences. From this effort originated in Eastern Virginia and other Conferences the taking of 10 year bonds for Home Missions on which 6% interest was paid annually, but the principal was never to be paid. This was followed by the apportionment system in the Conferences, with the addition of other calls from time to time, but the Convention committee on Home Missions did not raise any funds until after the 1904 Convention. Thus Home Mission work was begun constructively in the South before Dr. J. P. Watson, Mission Secretary of the A. C. C. began "Child Missions" by dime collections. Foreign Missions also began first in the South. The first time the subject was ever considered publicly by us as a people was at Poplar Branch Church of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference in November, 1883. In 1884, the North Carolina and Virginia Conference authorized raising funds for Foreign Missions, appointed committee on Foreign Missions, requesting them to "correspond with the Secretary of Missions in the Christian Church North, with the view of uniting our efforts and sending out one or two Missionaries as soon as possible."

In 1886 the Southern Convention, at the request of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, appointed Foreign Mission Board: Revs. P. T. Klapp, W. G. Clements, W. T. Hernndon, and layman A. Moring and J. W. White (father of one of the Missionaries of the Congregational and Christian Churches). This quickened the interest in Foreign Missions which was developed by individuals, churches, and other conferences which included a Foreign Mission column in the church letter, so that receipts from all sources for Foreign Missions from 1882 to 1886 was $452.40 and from 1886 to 1889, $627.40. The interest grew, until in 1901 Memorial Temple of Norfolk (Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., pastor) became the great Foreign Mission Church of the denomination, raised $1,303.67, and through the Mission Board of the A. C. C. sent Rev. and Mrs. D. P. Barrett, two of its members, as missionaries to Porto Rico, the second Foreign Missionary field of the Christian Church.

With Foreign Missions and Elon College established as Convention projects, in 1891 the Convention organized the Christian Missionary Association with fees of ten dollars for individuals, Sunday Schools, Societies and Churches, but this was never considered by the brotherhood as a general call for Home Missions. This association accomplished good results, but failed in its purpose and later became Conference Associations which have done splendid work.

The Convention of 1904, held at Berea, Nansemond County, Virginia, finally adopted Convention Missions on motion of Dr. J. W. Harrell, same having been recommended by the Home Mission Committee, consisting of Rev. J. W. Holt, J. L. Foster, and J. E. West, and rejected by the Convention after one half day's discussion.

So far as mission work in the Southern Convention is concerned, the Convention of 1904 was one of the most memorable in all our history.

In 1906 the Home Mission Committee became a Board and was incorporated September 28, 1912, with the following incorporators: J. O. Atkinson, J. W. Holt, K. B. Johnson, H. W. Elder, and J. E. West. The charter was amended on April 30, 1918 so as to include both Home and Foreign Missions under the name of Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, Incorporated. In 1904 and 1906, Rev. J. W. Holt was Chairman. In 1908 J. E. West was made Chairman and has continued as such to date. In 1909 Dr. J. O. Atkinson was elected Secretary, without salary, and was elected by the Convention as Mission Field Secretary with salary from September 1, 1917, thirteen years after the Berea Convention of 1904, and has continued in these offices till now.

In September, 1917, the Board authorized Dr. Atkinson to raise $100,000 for missions in five-year subscriptions, one-half to Home, and one-half to Foreign Missions, in which campaign he received one $5,000 cash subscriptions. This campaign was later merged into the Men and Millions Campaign in 1919, in which all enterprises of the Church shared. Since the 1904 Convention the Mission Board has raised over one-half million dollars and the Woman's Board from 1912 to date has raised $195,850.

While the women of the Southern Convention date their permanent organization in 1912, it seems that the Eastern Virginia and some other Conferences authorized Conference organizations in 1911. 1912 will always be a memorable year in the history of Missions, but this does not mean that the women of the South had not been missionary before that time.

In the eighties Missionary Societies were formed in many local churches in which women took the lead, although men and children were members. These societies studied and taught missions, raised money for missions, and were important factors in the development of the local church. Antioch, Eastern Virginia Conference, had such a society in 1888 and Suffolk organized one in 1889.

The Mission Board feels very grateful for the cooperation of the Woman's Board from its organization. At the Southern Convention in April, 1914, upon the recommendation of the Home Mission Board (now Mission Board) Mrs. C. H. Rowland, first President of the Woman's Board, was elected a member of the Mission Board and succeeding presidents have become members for various periods. Our present board is composed of ten members, which include Mrs. J. G. Truitt, Mrs. W. R. Sellars and Mrs. F. W. Boshart.

TRAINING FOR MISSIONARY LEADERS.

A wonderful opportunity is afforded every Missionary leader in a course offered at the Elon Leadership training School June 21-26. "Education for World Friendship" will be taught by Rev. Raymond Dudley, Missionary to India. Similar courses will be offered in the other training schools.

You, who are presidents or superintendents of Missionary Societies and Missionary Chairmen of Young People or Christian Endeavor Societies, do you need help in getting your group interested in Missions, interested in the study classes? Do you want to know how to make your programs more attractive and effective? Do you want to know how to get your young people to contribute to Missions? Then plan now to attend the Elon Leadership Training School and take this course under Rev. Raymond Dudley.

Or, perhaps the young people of some churches are doing nothing about Missions because of the lack of a leader. Pastors, why not see that someone goes to Elon and takes the course offered? The pastor of the Dendron circuit, Rev. J. H. Johnson, has already arranged to take a carload of young people to Elon, at least one from each of his churches. He has also helped to arrange it so that these churches will pay one-half of the expenses of these young people. If every pastor in the Southern Convention would do this, the Kingdom's work through our church would go forward in a mighty way next year.

The cost will be $8.50 and a book, which will probably cost less than a dollar. Young People, send in your registration blank to me at Dendron, Virginia, before June 10, and join with me in preparing for Missionary leadership.

Sup't. of Missions,

WORD OF THANKS.

I cannot let this opportunity pass without giving an expression of thanks to each one who had any part, in any place, and in any way for the success of the Twenty-fifth Anniversary service so recently held here in Suffolk. I am so happy that everyone did their part in their home communities weeks and months leading up to the celebration, and that each one did their part on May 13th. I cannot thank you all personally for what you have done, but that only makes me feel the more indebted to you.

Just as soon as full tabulation can be made we shall publish in THE CHRISTIAN SUN complete reports of the meeting. At present it is known that $1,973.87 has been received in the offering, and that others are yet to be heard from. More than 450 attended the afternoon session; 400 were served at the Supper session, including those who prepared and served the supper; and more than 600 attended the evening session. I was so happy to see the fine representation from each of the Conferences.

MRS. JOHN G. TRUITT.

In the Chinese Catholic Directory for 1937 statistics show three million Catholics in China. The significant thing is that during the year 1936 when Protestant missions were frantically slashing their staff and budget our sister church increased 115,336 members and added 243 priests (new recruits) with 88 of them Chinese. Several Chinese bishops were created and educational institutions, hospitals and dispensaries augmented. The Catholic Church is taking an increased interest in social work in China.

ADVENTURES IN YOUTH FELLOWSHIP

"Youth at Work in the Church"

MISS EMILY CARLETON, Editor, 541 Osceola Ave., Winter Park, Fla.

MISSIONARY ACTION.

From "Christian Youth in Missionary Action," published by the Department of World Fellowship, Boston, we read: "The program of the Pilgrim Fellowship includes World Service. It could not be true to its purpose without this concern for others. Its statement of purpose includes the aim 'to secure equal rights and opportunities for all classes and races as equally the children of God.' It declares its readiness to work for a united church 'definitely promoting the program of Jesus' and of course the program of Jesus is world-wide. The Pilgrim Fellowship has a sense of common concern for others. It believes in world fellowship. It is engaged in missionary action."

With the above in mind and at heart, Missionary leaders of the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship met in conference with Mrs. W. E. Wiseman in Suffolk on Thursday, May 13. The following goals were discussed and adopted by this group of leaders.

1. That an effort be made to have at least one young person in each church trained for Missionary leadership, this to be accomplished by getting one young person from each church to take a Missionary course at the Leadership Training Schools this summer, or in the schools to be held this fall.
2. That each Conference Fellowship that does not already have one be requested to elect a Superintendent of Missions to work with the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship Superintendent.
3. That the Conference Superintendents of Missions meet with the Southeast Pilgrim Fellowship Superintendent at the Elon Leadership Training School in June to make plans for the carrying out of these goals.
4. That the executive committee of each Conference Fellowship be requested to have some special Missionary feature at the meetings of the Fellowship and that the Superintendents of Missions assist in arranging for this item of the program.
5. That a survey be made of the Missionary education and giving of the young people of the Southeast.
6. That World Service Programs published by the Department of World Fellowship, Boston, be furnished the young people of every church in the Southeast.
7. That the Missionary leaders of the Fellowship assist local groups wherever needed in study classes. (The leaders hope to work out a plan by which teachers can be furnished a study group of young people from five or six churches who will come together for an afternoon and evening.)
8. That the young people of every church contribute to Missions next year.

GEORGIA SUMMER CONFERENCE.

The young people's summer conference for north and also Middle Georgia will be held at Camp Viola, near LaGrange, July 3-10. It is hoped that many churches will send delegates—the number from each church is limited so that the representation will be from as widespread an area as possible.

Rev. Wiley Scott, of Atlanta, will serve as Dean. Rev. Raymond Dudley, of India, will be the guest missionary. Rev. Alan T. Jones, Braselton will be the Business Manager.

To give you an idea of the way in which the cost is being taken care of, we quote Mr. Jones: "You may print that the cost for the Conference—$5.00 per delegate (except for the $1.50 cash which each delegate will be required to bring) may be paid either in cash or in home grown produce, for which the Conference will give retail prices. Such produce as the following is desired: fresh eggs, fryers, fresh butter, canned fruit and vegetables, jellies, fruit juice, fruits and vegetables, including Irish potatoes, string beans, roasting ears, tomatoes, etc. We would like each delegate bringing produce to bring as great a variety as possible, and to bring at least $1.50 worth of his produce in eggs and frying size chickens."

LEADERSHIP.

(From Pilgrim Fellowship Flashes.)

"A true leader knows where he is going, knows how to get there, and how to get others to go with him."

* * *

"His unique work as a leader was in organizing vast enterprises that in them other men could express their highest possible capacities. He did not give others orders. He rather provide them with opportunities."

* * *

"Material for leadership we have in abundance. The day when we should bend every energy to develop it is here. The first sketch on the great highway of leadership by which we may hope to achieve success is so plain that no individual or organization should fail to discover it. It is made up of three qualities without which leadership is impossible—some knowledge and hunger for more, an abandon of self-effacing consecration to the purpose, and a real passion for the goal." (Margaret Slattery.)

"No wonder you young people are restless. You are 'Raring to go'—but where? To Build a New World" (Continued on page 11.)

WHAT DID JESUS MEAN BY "SAVING YOUR LIFE BY LOSING IT?"

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC
FOR JUNE 6, 1937.

Scripture—Matt. 16:24-28; John 12:24-26.

God expects man to glorify Him and to lift up to the Christ. Jesus taught that the humble life is the one that shall be exalted, and "he that exalteth himself shall be abased."

There is one outstanding principle involved in the Christian life and that is the seeking of God's kingdom and His righteousness. The lower life of earthly relationships and activities must be submerged for the higher and spiritual. These interests may be desirable and enjoyable, but he who clings to these and makes them supreme is in danger of losing the higher.

Self must be forgotten and all selfish desires banished if one is to find the life which is spiritual. The life must be surrendered completely to Christ for service. The conditions of Jesus for entering into Life are faith in Himself as the one Mediator and the following of Him in a life of obedience.

It is not the number of years one lives that count, it is the manner in which one lives. How true the adage: "It is better to wear out than to rust out." Very often we hear church members say, "I will teach the Sunday school class if you cannot get any one else." We should not try to shirk a Christian duty.

For discussion—

1. Are we justified in risking our lives for fame, wealth, or power?
2. How early in life can we begin to live useful lives?
3. In what ways do we err in presenting our bodies a "living sacrifice" for Christ?
4. If we should lead a full surrendered life, do we have promise of any source of power?

Suggested Hymns—

"More Like the Master."
"Take My Life and Let It Be."
"Give of Your Best to the Master."

THE REMAKING OF JACOB.

GOLDEN TEXT: Be not fashioned according to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind.—Romans 12: 2.

LESSON: Genesis 28: 1-33: 20.

God doesn't always have the best of material to work with. Take for instance this fellow Jacob. He was a shrewd, scheming, unscrupulous self-sufficient fellow. Perhaps the best adjective to describe him would be "oily." He was a "slick bird" as we would say in the modern slang. Not very promising material to say the least. But God is patient and persuasive, and He works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform. By a long process, and by vital experiences he made Jacob over again. Jacob became Israel, the father of the twelve tribes, and the connecting link between Abraham and Isaac and the chosen people through whom, in Christ, all the nations of the earth are blessed. Let no man wait for perfection until he gives himself to God or puts himself at God's disposal. God can make all things new.

Jacob at Bethel.

Things did not go so well with Jacob after he stole Essau's birthright, and Jacob and his mother thought that "a change of climate" would do Jacob good. Accordingly on a mere pretext she sends her beloved son away from home, until Essau should forget his grievance and allow his wrath to cool.

Man's extremity is often God's opportunity. Alone, weary, humbled, Jacob gathered a few stones together for a pillow and lay down to sleep. And perchance he dreamed—he dreamed that he saw a ladder reaching from earth to heaven and up and down that ladder there passed angels, and at the head of the ladder there was the Lord himself. It was the God of his father and his grandfather. And this God renewed with Jacob the covenant that he had made with his father and grandfather, and promised to bring to pass without fail, all that he had promised these men. Awakening with a start, Jacob realized that although he had gone beyond the borders of the family estate, he had not gone beyond the boundaries of God's love and purpose. Quickly converting the stones which had been his pillow, into an altar, he then and there made a covenant with God and promised him that if God would be with him and protect him, he would worship him and pay him tithes. The bargaining spirit is still active, but Jacob was making some growth in grace. Like many a man, too, he had found in a stony experience a new revelation of God's mercy and grace. The stones at Bethel had a significance. Every time Jacob saw them he would be reminded of his vow. It is good for a man to have some visible evidence of the vows he has made to man and to God. It is good, too, for a man to set aside the separated portion, as a means of sanctifying the whole. One of the most vital factors in the change that took place in Jacob's life was the fact that he became a tither. Setting aside his means made it easier later to give himself.

Jacob at Jabbock.

Time marches on! Jacob had been places and seen things. He had spent twenty years in Haran and life had been good to him. But it would seem that he had not grown much in grace. Indeed, like so many who have become materially prosperous, he seems to have become poorer in spirit. But God was not done with him yet. An experience awaited him that would reveal to him poverty of his own inner life, and the resources of God, and that would exert a transforming influence upon him. It all came about in a seemingly indirect way, but God was in it all.

Leaving Laban—by stealth it needs to be noticed—Jacob and his wives and children and flocks started back to his native land. When Laban discovered the flight he quickly started out after the party and eventually overtook Jacob. But at Mizpah at covenant was made between the two men and Jacob went on his way. But it was a case of out of the frying pan into the fire, for no sooner had he got rid of Laban from whom he had expected violence, than he got word that Esau, his aggrieved brother, was coming to meet him. And Esau had done some prospering too. In fact he had an armed band of four hundred men and it looked as if he meant business. Things did not look so good for Jacob.

Still exercising the shrewdness which was characteristic of him he sent large presents on ahead to Esau. He would try bribery and flattery. Furthermore, he divided his flocks and followers into several groups, sending them out in the order of least nearness to him. Finally, he sent even his wives and his children across the brook Jabbock, and as the account reads, "and Jacob was left alone." Perhaps it was his feeling of utter loneliness, his realization that everything that he had, and nothing that he had was of any avail under the circumstances, in any event he felt that he had come at last to face his past, and is always the case he had to face it alone. There wrestled with him, even until the breaking of the day, an opponent, an unnamed opponent. It was a struggle to the bitter end. The dormant good in this shrewd, selfish man became dominant. He refused to let his opponent go until he had wrung from him a blessing. His persistence won him the victory, even if at great cost—he limped because of a wound inflicted by his opponent. But he came out of that experience a new man. No more was he Jacob; he was henceforth Israel. As a "Prince" he had power with God and with man, because he had prevailed. His change of name was a symbol of his change of character and conduct. Because he had seen God face to face, he had new insight and foresight, new peace and patience, new calmness and courage. He did not have to depend any longer upon subterfuges, natural craft, and clever resourcefulness. He had new power because he had new weapons. Old things had passed away, all things had become new.

A word needs to be said in behalf of Esau. Like so many men of primitive passions and appetites, he had his good qualities. And this rough and ready son of the desert would shame many a more cultured son of our modern culture in his readiness to forgive a wrong. There is something tremendously appealing in Esau's magnanimous spirit in forgiving Jacob, and in taking the initiative. There is so much good in the worst of us, and so much bad in the best of us, that it does not behoove any of us to talk about the rest of us.

LEADERSHIP.

—but how? We cannot tell you just where and how, but we can assure you of two things. We have faith in the continued leadership of Jesus for the day of hard transition as well as for the day of easy stability. We have faith, also, in you, that in your generation God will find a new expression of His will and His love for mankind. You will not fail us!" (Dr. E. L. Shaver, Sec'y. of Dept. of Leadership Education.)

If there is any person to whom you feel a dislike, that is the person of whom you ought never to speak.—Richard Cecil.

THE FIRST LESSON OF THE RESURRECTION.

"We were buried therefore with him through baptism unto death; that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we might also walk in newness of life."—Romans 6:4.

This text is the answer to our question. There must be death to sin in the life. There must be acceptance of His kingdom by our union with the risen Lord. We must reorganize our lives upon His plan. This is the most practical, real and blessed thing in the world, as proved by the experience of millions of Christian believers.

Prayer—Dear Father, cleanse Thou our lives by the baptism of Jesus in our lives? Make us new through and through according to the pattern of Him. Amen.

TUESDAY.

PROFITABLE UNTO GOD.

"Can a man be profitable unto God?"—Job. 22:2.

The word "profit" is a big word and it reflects what we ordinarily think of as the biggest business in the world. But a recent writer raised the question as to the biggest business in the world. He says that the biggest business in the world is the making of souls. And since Christ asked the question, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul," we are inclined to believe that that which is profitable unto God is the biggest business in the world, and that is goodness in the human soul. This involves all business enterprises, because when a human soul becomes Christian for time and eternity, business and profits in business have been won.

Prayer—Our Father, we are thankful that Thou dost need us, and we thank Thee that Thou dost need the most unworthy. Make us profitable to Thee and help us to take Christ to sinners and win them to Thee. In His name we ask it. Amen.

WEDNESDAY.

THE PLACE OF DILIGENCE IN SALVATION.

"Take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life."—Deut. 4:9.

It is believed that most souls are lost by laziness or neglect, just as most business failures are caused by lack of diligence. To succeed in making the something like unto God is a strenuous business. It is constantly by the opposition of evil. It calls for the most constant strivings against evil and for holiness. It requires a ceaseless effort to do the Father's will. The watchword of our Lord Jesus Christ was, "watch and pray."

Unaided, we poor weak mortals cannot keep our souls in such diligence. We fall asleep on the job like the disciples in the garden of Gethsemane. It takes the power of the Holy Spirit. And that power comes to us only by orienting ourselves with Him.

Prayer—O Lord, we realize that we can do nothing without Thee. Quick-en our lives, our souls, our purposes and the outgoings of our whole life. Strengthen our intentions and uphold us when we falter. Amen.

THURSDAY.

GASHMU SAID IT.

"It is reported among the nations; and Gashmu saith it, that thou and the Jews think to rebel."—Neh. 6:6.

An unholy gossip was Gashmu. Who he was is not known, but his name has become the epitome for "Madame Gossip," or "Dame Rumor."

We often hear it said "They say," "They think," "They have discovered." That is Gashmu. He is lurking around every corner, creeping into every conversation, damaging human souls, and damaging the history of the world. Do not let him influence you. Run him down. Find out what credence you must give to what he says. Drag him out in the open and let him see himself.

Prayer—O God, grant unto us the most discerning spirit. Forbid that we shall reply upon rumors. Instead, in Christ's name, hold us fast to the realities. Amen.

FRIDAY.

BLESSED CONFUSION.

"Fill their faces with confusion, (shame) that they may seek thy name, O Lord."

Ordinarily in praying for others we expect one to pray that their faces might be graced with peace. It is unusual to hear one pray that one may be confounded.

But often confusion is a way to peace. The Psalmists pray this way, "that they might seek His name." Any disturbance, calamity or fear, is a rich experience, if it leads to the Lord. For when one finds the Lord, he is released from confusions and he finds a way to transcend fear.

It is great to transform trials into triumphs. Christ gives us the power to do it. Let us walk in His way that we may reach our goal.

Prayer—Our Father, give us the courage to pray for the confusion that might be necessary that we may find Thy face in its fullness. Give us the courage to appreciate distresses that lead us in Thy way. Amen.

SATURDAY.

OUR BREATH IN HIS HAND.

"The God in whose hand thy breath is, and whose are all thy ways, hast Thou not glorified."—Dan. 5:17-24.

Belshazzar had many gods, but he had forgotten the one true God. His gods could not prolong his breath a single hour; but Jehovah had placed breath in his nostrils and maintained him in life. His gods took no account of his manner of life, but Jehovah knew all his acts and his thoughts. Yet he glorified the no-gods and gave no glory to the true God.

Let us be heedful or we shall be Belshazzars. It is very easy to make Gods of clay, gods of wood and stone, of satin and gems, of gold and silver and bank accounts; very easy to forget the one God in whose hand is our breath.

Let our thoughts be of Him continually. Let our breath praise Him continually. Let us glorify Him continually, even as He continually blesses us.

Prayer—To Thy name. O Lord Christ, be all glory, and in Thee be all our hope, world without end. Amen.

SUNDAY.

POWER FROM THE SPIRIT.

"As for me, I am full of power by the spirit of Jehovah, and of judgment, and of might."—Micah 3:5-8.

The false prophets were weak and frail, but Micah felt himself crowded full of power. The false prophets were unwise and foolish, but Micah knew that the true wisdom spoke through him. The false prophets inefficient, incompetent, but Micah was sure of bringing things to pass.

Micah was a great prophet, but what was true of him may be true of every Christian. For Micah's power came from the spirit of Jehovah, and that same Holy Spirit is given to all that ask for Him.

Prayer—May He come to us. May His might be our might, His blessedness our blessedness. Through Jesus Christ, who promised to send Him to live with all His followers forever. Amen.

SEEING GOOD DAYS.

By JOHN G. TRUITT, D. D.

"He that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile; let him eschew evil and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it."—I Peter 3: 10-11.

Here we have the sermon of a trained preacher. He was trained under the highest tutelage this old earth has ever known. He sat at the feet of Jesus. His teacher not only taught how to live, but he carried his class with him day and night and showed them how. His method was supremely advanced. In his class the whole of living was a part of the learning process. There was no time under his tutelage when the class was dismissed. There was a lesson between every lesson, a lesson before every lesson, and a lesson after every lesson. Life was a lesson. Peter was trained in that school.

He had been especially prayed for by his teacher; he had been especially honored by his teacher; and he had been especially commissioned to preach by his teacher. He had been taught how, shown how, and commissioned to do it. He had been given the mind, heart, and spirit; the character and the courage; and the lesson itself. His hearer could ask him for nothing better than to do: Tell us about your teacher! And he did that. John Mark followed him about and heard him tell his hearers about his teacher. And John Mark put it on parchment and the world has an unforgettable Gospel.

Now we are looking today at one of Peter's written-out sermons. We cannot imagine Peter taking much time to write out his sermons, and we are glad for the notes that John Mark made from his talks. But Peter did write some, and his writing is like his speaking—direct, brief and comprehensive.

My! what a scheme he has chosen: Loving life and seeing good days! This is up-to-date enough for the most advanced of us. What a perfectly wonderful subject! If he will only tell us how! All of us want to love life. We do already. All of us want to see good days! It is a universal cry. Oh! if I could only see some good days.

Jesus, Peter's teacher, believed in loving life. Jesus came to give life, and to give it abundantly full. The joy Jesus talked about was increasing and eternal. Here this old seaman, with the salt tan still in his magnificent face, and his hands still unused to the finer labors of life, takes a theme the very mention of which is in itself a refreshing thought: Loving life, and seeing good days.

Neither from the teacher nor the pupil can we expect that there is anything shallow meant by the life mentioned, not anything soft about the good days. Life was a real song, and days with a real service must be meant. Nothing less. For when we hear that teacher saying: "Whosoever shall lose his life for my sake shall find it," we cannot think he was talking "soda-water," nor sweetened crackers. We can but believe he is seeing a world in need; a world waiting for courage, and character: and a world that can, and will respond to loving service. And when we see that teacher standing under the very shadow of Calvary, and hear Him talking about the fullness of His joy, we cannot believe He is thinking about "joy-rides," or "just-another-it-won't-matter" frivolities of life.

Neither could Peter have meant anything less than giving oneself in service to the fullest extent of one's capacities; for this old soldier of the cross had come to take life seriously. Visions of the Christ, such as only very few mortals ever had, had been his; and lessons which Jesus himself said had been given Him from the Father had been by him learned. Peter was already moving towards martyrdom—and yet he was talking of loving life and seeing good days. Which simply goes to show that there is something very deep, and abiding about life, which all too few are willing to pay the price to learn. But that life, for those who dare it, is a life full of a deep and abiding joy; and its days are days that are good—satisfying to the soul.

Now Peter is saying, I shall give you a few simple rules for sustaining that supreme love of living, and coming upon such goodness of days. He had seen the truths he would teach in Jesus—both lived and taught, both practiced and preached. And the rules are very simple. We hear people sometimes say the preacher talks above our heads; or of another preacher they say, even a child could understand every word he said. You knew what he was talking about, because he knew what he was talking about. Well, you can surely say that of Peter in what he is now about to say on his theme of loving life and seeing good days. And the things he suggests are something we can all do.

Hold your tongue, avoid evil, do good, seek peace. And then he adds "The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and His ears are open unto their prayers." Seems a bit odd to hear Peter saying, "Hold your tongue." He was out-spoken. But he remembers he spoke out too much. His tongue brought him a broken heart, and a Saviour's penetrating look. He could never forget that. What beautiful temples of life tongues have torn down? What friendships they have wrecked, what lives they have hurt, what unspeakable damage they have done. Peter says, "If you will love life, and see good days, hold your tongue." James, the brother of Our Lord, says: "The tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity . . . it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell." If you would love life, and see good days, hold your tongue.

Eschew evil. Run from it. Never run toward it. Run from evil as you would run after a lovely life and good days. It seems like some people are just looking for evil. They cannot be satisfied this side of a fuss. If you see evil brewing, take to cover, says Peter, i. e., if you would love life and see good days. If you run into trouble you run into disaster. Now no one could ever think Peter meant to be a coward, and run from duty. Running from duty, and running from trouble are quite two different things. Peter would not advise being afraid of duty. But Peter had learned many lessons, and although he was heading straight toward an untimely end, he was not running out of the way to look for evil. Had he not been taught by the Lord to pray: "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil?" And you, my friends, will be a great deal happier out of trouble than you will in it. You are commissioned to hazard your lives if necessary, but not to hunt evil.

But Peter is not content with this negative requirement. He goes on to the affirmative side of the question: Do good. A boy about twelve years of age lives near a poor widow, who is so crippled that she can only push herself about her room with a chair before her, and much of the time she is all alone. This boy's mother tells how the boy went daily, of his own accord to do such errands as bring-

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Dear Friends:

We have more than 225 churches in the Southern Convention. When the Christian Orphanage was established each church and Sunday school was asked and expected to support it. It was expected that to care for a large number of children would cost money—the Church would get no joy out of it if it didn't cost money.

The Orphanage was expected to serve all the Conferences. It has through the years tried to do this and all the Conferences have been represented in our large family. We have taken children from all the Conferences. But the thought I want to get across in this letter is the fact we have nearly one hundred churches that have not sent us a penny this year. Do these churches think we can run the Orphanage without other help? It cannot be done. Or are these churches to make up the amount by the time Conference meets and pay it then?

When the Convention placed the Orphanage in the Conference apportionments, it was expected that the amount apportioned would be raised by Sunday School Monthly Offerings and Special Thanksgiving as heretofore and mailed direct to the Orphanage as it has always been done. We would prefer the continuance of this method as it gives us money to pay our bills at the end of each month which has always been our policy. We are appealing to all the churches not on our list of Monthly Contributors to remember us.

We are swamped with applications from every side. We should take a number of them in and would if we had the funds. The church is appealed to visit the fatherless and the widow in distress. Will it answer the appeal?

ing coal and wood, and water for the poor, crippled widow. Peter says,

Keep it up my boy, you will love life, and see good days! Do good. A kind heart, a willing spirit, a thinking mind will make it possible for you to find the meaning of, and the way to do good.

Peter has four points to his sermon, and yet it is ten times shorter than mine. His fourth, and final point is: Seek peace. And he adds, "And ensue it." I wondered a bit about "ensue." I knew pursue, but what could he mean by "ensue?" I looked it up. Let peace follow what you do. What a bit of instruction. Seek peace. Strive for it. Look for it. And also let peace follow upon your works, and words, and acts.

This is not a sermon that needs talking about, it only needs doing. Let us, everyone, go out and try doing it: "For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and His ears are open unto their prayers." Amen.

NOTE the bold-faced type, pronouncing text, center column references with chapter numbers in heavy type—unusual in Bibles, but a great aid to quick reference.

Synopses at head of chapters—quite full—some Bibles have none.

The figures to the left of Chapter Head indicate the total number of chapters from the beginning of the Bible.

The headlines also are in bold type in keeping with the text.

The name of the book, on outside corner, makes the Bible practically self-indexed.

THE HELPS in the Teachers' edition are most important for consultation when reading the Bible, for in them are found the explanation of much that otherwise would be obscure in the statements in the Bible text.

PRICE.

On April 30, at Stuart Circle Hospital, Richmond, Virginia, Mrs. Nolie A. Price passed away quietly into her future life. She underwent a major operation on April 20th from which she contracted pneumonia, thereby causing her death.

In her going the First Congregational Christian Church of Richmond has lost one of its devoted, faithful liberal, and lovable members. Her disposition was of quiet unassuming nature; but her presence was always commanding and inspiring. Her outward smile and inner Christian character inspired those who associated with her to a loyalty and devotion to the higher assets of life.

Mrs. Price was known and loved by a large circle of friends but the two institutions that claimed her major interests were the divinely ordained institutions—the home, and the church. She succeeded in making her home attractive for her family and their friends. It was a delightful place to visit. Her church and all its auxiliaries were dear to her heart and received her support by her prayers, her presence, and her finance. It was a real benediction to her pastor to visit her home. For her faith in her Christ, His word, and her optimism for her church always sent him away with renewed courage to fight harder to carry on the work for Christ.

During her last illness she suffered intensely, but her consciousness remained until a short while before she passed into her heavenly reward. Her testimonies concerning the Word and her faith in her Christ and the future were beautiful. Her body has passed, but her beautiful spirit lives with her friends, her church and her home.

She was preceeded to the land beyond by her husband, Brother J. W. Price, almost three years ago. She leaves a host of friends, many relatives, and four children: Mrs. Claude Woodward, Messers Conrad, Purnell, and Rufus, all of Richmond.

It is the prayer of her pastor that the Lord will comfort her children, relatives and friends.

JOSEPH E. McCAULEY.

LINCOLN.

April 8, 1937, God, in His infinite wisdom called home Mrs. Sallie Stuart Sipe Lincoln, who was a member of the Wakefield Christian Church and charter member of the Missionary Society of our Church. We, the members of the Church and Missionary Society, wish to express our appreciation of her in the following resolutions:

1. That we bow in humble submission to His will, for we know our Heavenly Father doeth all things according to His love and mercy.
2. That in her death we have lost a capable woman, a fine Christian character; one who was always interested in the work of the Kingdom.
3. That we hold in loving remembrance her service and strive to emulate her noble personality.
4. That we extend to her family our heartfelt sympathy and commend them to God, whose grace is sufficient in the hour of trouble.
5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy be entered on the records of our Church and Society.
